DATE LABEL

*Call No.*_____ *Date*_____

*Acc. No.*_____

K. UNIVERSITY LIBRARY

This book should be returned on or before the last date stamped above. An over-due charge of .06 P. will be levied for each day if the book is kept beyond that day.

1166

DONATED By
PANDIT SHAMBOO NATH DAR.
(1901 — 1969)
ADVOCATE, and former President
SRINAGAR MUNICIPAL COUNCIL

[redacted] Acc. No. [redacted]

Class No. [redacted] Book No. [redacted]

Author [redacted]

Title [redacted]

[redacted]

Borrower's No.	Issue Date	Borrower's No.	Issue Date

INDIAN CASES

CONTAINING

FULL REPORTS OF DECISIONS

OF

The Privy Council, the High Courts of Allahabad, Bombay, Calcutta, Lahore, Madras and Patna, the Chief Court of Lower Burma, the Courts of the Judicial Commissioners of Central Provinces, Oudh, Sind and Upper Burma

REPORTED IN

The following 26 Legal Periodicals:

Allahabad (1) Indian Law Reports, (2) Law Journal, (3) U. P. Law Reporter; Bombay (1) Indian Law Reports, (2) Law Reporter; Burma (1) Law Times, (2) Lower Burma Rulings, (3) Upper Burma Rulings; Calcutta (1) Indian Law Reports, (2) Law Journal, (3) Weekly Notes; Lahore (1) Indian Law Reports, (2) Punjab Law Reporter, (3) Punjab Weekly Reporter; Madras (1) Indian Law Reports, (2) Law Journal, (3) Law Times, (4) Law Weekly, (5) Weekly Notes; Nagpur Law Reports; Oudh (1) Cases, (2) Law Journal; Patna (1) Cases, (2) Law Journal, (3) Law Times; Sind Law Reporter

WITH

A large number of extra Rulings not reported elsewhere.

Books Checked

Dun Court Jammu & Kashmir Srinagar.

VOLUME LVI, 1920.

EDITOR:

S. D. CHAUDHRI, B.A., LL. B.,

VAKIL, HIGH COURT, LAHORE.

PRINTED AND PUBLISHED BY THE MANAGER, AT THE "LAW PUBLISHING PRESS," LAHORE.

[redacted]

Acc. No. [redacted]

Class No. [redacted] Book No. [redacted]

Author [redacted]

Title [redacted]

Borrower's No.	Issue Date	Borrower's No.	Issue Date

K UNIVERSITY LIB.
K. DIVISION
Acc No 75425
Date 16-12-1969

CONSOLIDATED

Comparative Tables showing seriatim the Volumes and Pages of all Indian Law Journals and Reports for the period specified at the top of each table, with the corresponding Volumes and Pages of Indian Cases.

42 I. L. R., ALLAHABAD SERIES, FOR MAY-JUNE, 1920.

Page.	Names of Parties.	Corresponding Vol. and page of Ind. Cas.		Page.	Names of Parties.	Corresponding Vol. and page of Ind. Cas.
207	Makhan Lal v. Municipal Board of Agra ...	54	459	264	Pratap Narain Singh v. Shiam Lal	55	37
214	Mahadei v. Beni Prasad ...	55	194	266	Lachhmi Prasad v. Parbati ...	54	910
222	Raghunath v. Ganesh ...	54	381	268	Bihari Lal v. Mohan Singh ...	55	71
227	Muhammad Askari v. Nisar Husain ...	54	520	272	Emperor v. P. U. DeSouza ...	55	735
230	Bhagwan Bakhsh Singh v. Joshi Damodarji ...	59	20	275	Farhat-un-Nissa Bibi v. Sundari Prasad ...	54	801
233	Sundar Lal, In the matter of the petition of ...	55	110	277	Shiam Lal v. Parshottam Das ...	58	585
257	Emperor v Ganga Sahai ...	54	890	290	Wahid-un-Nissa Bibi v. Zamin Ali Shah ...	55	89
260	Mulraj v. Niadar Mal ...	55	315	294	Emperor v. Mannu ...	58	153
262	Abdul Wahid v. Halima Khatun	59	188	302	Emperor v. Rama Singh ...	58	463
				305	Azmat Ali v. Qurban Ahmad ...	58	542

18 ALLAHABAD LAW JOURNAL, FOR MAY-JUNE, 1920.

431	Saltanat Jahan Begam v. Sundar Lal ...	58	90	503	Lalta Prasad v. Sri Mahadeo Ji Birajman Temple ...	58	667
434	Ram Saran Das v. Hari Kishen Koeri ...	58	511	513	Chhanga Mal v. Sheo Prasad ...	55	965
435	Mojiz Fatima v. Ali Akbar ...	56	112	514	Jawad Ali v. Kamlapat Rai ...	56	611
440	Muhammad Mushtaq Ali Khan v. Bankey Lal ...	55	991	515	Rahim Baksh v Emperor ...	56	435
442	Jagdeo Prasad v. Emperor ...	56	58	518	Mathura Prasad v. Hardeo Bakhsh Singh ...	56	174
445	Ram Kumar v. Muhammad Yakub	55	976	521	Trustees for the Improvement of Calcutta v. Chandra Kanta Ghosh ...	56	32
447	Kampa Devi v. Kishori Lal ...	55	981			56	306
449	Sheonath Singh v. Munshi Ram ...	55	941	532	Nageshar Baksh Singh v. Ganesha
454	Samher Singh v. Sher Singh ...	56	183	545	Girdhar Das v. Raja Sri Krishna Datt Dube ...	56	293
455	Bugga v. Emperor ...	56	440	555	Ganpat Lal v. Bindbasini Prashad Narayan Singh ...	56	274
466	Sajjad Ali Khan v. Municipal Committee of Karnal City ...	56	1			55	950
473	Prem Devi v. Shambhu Nath ...	Not reportable.		561	Bhoj Raj v Ram Chandra ...	56	230
				562	Bhaggi Lal v. Emperor ...
476	Sham Lal v. Tehariya Lakhmi Chand ...	58	278	566	Abdur Rashid v. Sizing Materials Company Ltd ...	56	193
478	Muhammad Hamid-ud-Din v. Lala Fakir Chand ...	58	717	569	Radha Kishan v. Gulzari Lal ...	56	73
486	Murtaza Khan v. Lalta Singh ...	58	729	570	Bhagwan Din v Peare Lal ...	58	620
489	Krishna Ayyangar v. Nallaperumal Pillai ...	56	163	572	Municipal Board, Etawah v. Debi Prasad ...	58	146
499	Sakinabai v. Shirinibai ...	55	943	574	Rambaran Singh v. Emperor ...	56	239
501	Azizur Rahman Khan v. Abdul Hai Khan ...	55	963	577	Muhammad Yakub v. Nazir Ahmad ...	58	617

18 ALLAHABAD LAW JOURNAL, FOR MAY-JUNE, 1920—concld.

581	Muhammad Ismail Khan v. Hamidah Khatoon ...	To be printed.		601	Adusumilli Kristnayya v. Adusumilli Lakshmipathi ...	56	391
584	Ramathai Vadivelu Mudaliar v. Peria Manicka Mudaliar ...	56	395	609	Radhe Lal v. Bindo ...	56	181
591	Firm of Ramchand Manjimal v. Firm of Goverdhandas Vishindas Ratanchand ...	56	302	611	Jagmohan Narain v. Grish Babu	58	557
594	Ambalavana Pandara Sannidhi Avergal v. Sri Meenakshi Sundareswaral Devastanam of Madura ...	56	730	613	Muhammad Junaid v. Aulia Bibi	To be printed.
				620	Mewa Lal v. Emperor ...	56	64
				622	Syed Shah Mehdi Hasan v. Syed Israil Hasan ...	56	172
				624	Muhammad Anwar Ali Khan v. Dara Shah Khan ...	56	208

44 I. L. R., BOMBAY SERIES, FOR MAY-JUNE, 1920.

272	Desai Venechand Rajpal v. Lakhmichand Manekchand ...	53	395	352	Ramchandra Vithal Bhat v. Gajanan Narayan Deshmukh ...	56	349
283	Mulchand Raichand v. Gill & Co.	53	518	366	Ibrahim walad Goolam Husenbux v. Nihalchand Waghmul ...	55	536
297	Mallappa v. Hanmappa ...	55	814	372	Mahamad Ebrahim v. Shaikh Mahomad ...	55	557
304	Rukminibai v. Laxmibai ...	56	761	377	Darbar Shri Dolatsingji Surajmali v. Desai Bavabhai Damubhai ...	55	585
321	Bai Nathi v. Narsi Dullabh ...	55	322	385	Jesa Bhatha, In re ...	55	857
327	Murgeppa v. Kalawa ...	55	361	392	Sakharam Manchand Gujar v. Keval Padamsi Gujar ...	56	429
331	Balakrishna Narayan Samant v. Jankibai ...	56	340
341	Pandurang Narayan Samant v. Bhagwandas Atmaramishet ...	55	541
346	Martand Trimbak Gadre v. Daya bin Abaji Phatak ...	55	527

22 BOMBAY LAW REPORTER, FOR MAY JUNE, 1920.

385	Krishnaji Sakharam Deshpande v. Kashim Mohiddinsaheb Havaldar ...	57	76	538	Poosathurai v. Kannappa Chettiar	55	447
390	Dnyanu Pandu v. Tanu Balaram	57	113	541	Chintamanibhatla Venkata Reddi v. Her Highness Sri Maharani Sri Sitaba Garu ...	55	538
396	Mina Winsor v. E. Winsor ...	57	116	545	Haridas Ranchordas v. Mercantile Bank of India, Ltd. ...	55	522
399	Laxminarayan Sheshgiri v. Parvatibai Parmeshvar ...	57	79	550	Hardit Singh v Gurmukh Singh...	59	7
403	Swamirao v. Valentine ...	57	125	552	Sakinabai v. Shirinibai ...	55	943
406	Motichand Magandas v. Keshav Appaji Kulkarni ...	57	129	553	Lala Mathu Mal v. Durga Kunwar	55	969
410	Bhagoji Ganu Raut v. Babu Balu Kadam ...	57	135	557	Radha Kishun v. Khurshed Hossein	55	959
415	Ananta Murarrao Nalavde v. Ganu Vithu Surulkar ...	57	143	563	Nawab Bahadur Muhammad Rustom Ali Khan v. Municipal Committee of Karnal City ...	56	1
420	Pestonji Jehangirji v. Jaisingdas Hansraj ...	Not reportable.		568	Krishna Ayyangar v. Nallaperumal Pillai ...	56	163
429	Texas Comany v. Bombay Banking Company Ltd. ...	54	121	578	Seturatnam Aiyer v. Venkatachala Gounden ..	56	117
437	Port Canning and Land Improvement Co. Ltd. v. Srimati Katyayani Debi	53	522	586	Trustees for the Improvement of Calcutta v. Chandra Kanta Ghosh ...	56	32
444	Varada Pillai v. Jeevarathnammal	53	901	596	Nageshar Baksh Singh v. Ganesha	56	306
451	Chaudhri Satgur Prasad v. Kishore Lal ...	55	486	606	Ramchand Manjimal v. Goverdhan das Vishindas Ratanchand ...	56	302
457	Arunachellam Chetty v. Venkatachalapathi Gurusvamigal ...	53	288	609	Bugga v. Emperor ...	56	410
477	Bhagwat Koer v. Dhanukdari Prasad Singh ...	53	347	619	Hargovind Fulchand Doshi v. Bai Hirbai ...	58	205
488	Rani Hemanta Kumari Debi v. The Midnapur Zeminadri Co. Ltd....	53	534	633	Narayan Balaji Nagarkar v. Kashibai Keshav Dand Naik ...	58	213
498	Secretary of State v. Maharaja of Bobbili ...	54	154	640	Vaikunt Shridhar Bhatta v. Manjunath Madhav Bhandari ...	58	217
507	Rao Kishore Singh v Gahenabai	53	630	648	Gol Daji Hathi v. Dod Laxman Kursan ...	58	226
521	Raj Raghubar Singh v Thakur Jai Indra Bahadur Singh ...	55	550	654	Kuverji Kavasji Shet v. Municipality of Lonavala ...	58	403
531	Ma Hnit v. Hashim Ebrahim Meter	55	723	659	Chitguppi & Co v. Vinayak Kashinath Khudilkar ...	58	184

47 I. L. R., CALCUTTA SERIES, FOR MAY-JUNE, 1920.

377	Uttam Chandra Daw v. Rajkrishna Dalal ...	55	157
415	Gopal Chandra Chaudhuri v. Rajanikanta Ghosh ...	Not reportable.
418	Rameshwar Singh v. Chuni Lal Shaha ...	56	839
426	Nagendra Lal Das v. Chairman, Chittagong Municipality ...	59	340
438	Mariam Bewa v. Merjan Sardar...	54	169
416	Kalidas Chaudhuri v. Prasanna Kumar Das ...	55	189
458	Mulchand Chandolia v. Kundan-Mull ...	57	140
466	Bhagwat Koer v. Dhanukdhari Prashad Singh ...	53	347
485	Hemanta Kumari Debi v. Midnapur Zamindari Co. ...	53	534
500	Trustees for the Improvement of Calcutta v. Chandra Kanta Ghosh ...	56	32
515	Noor Mahemed Dawood v. Bilasiram Thakursidass ...	59	458
524	Shyam Chand Basak v. Chairman, Dacca Municipality ...	53	741
537	Nurannessa Khanum v. Khaje Mahomed Sakroo ...	56	8
547	Prabodh Chandra Bose v. Corporation of Calcutta ...	54	781
555	Ladharam Nathmal v. Nandalal Karuri ...	55	747

31 CALCUTTA LAW JOURNAL, FOR MAY-JUNE, 1920.

369	Siv Narayan Mukherji v. Satish Chandra Ghosal ...	57	161
371	Srimati Dasya v. Nibaran Chandra Ghose ...	56	240
372	Bijoy Lal Seal v. Nayan Monjori Dasi ...	55	639
375	Bhoirab Chandra Bose v. Anath Nath De ...	57	686
379	Chuni Lal Haldar v. Mokshada Debi ...	52	309
382	Ilim Molla v. Manindara Mohan Poddar ...	56	801
385	Maharaja Sir Rameshwar Singh Bahadur v. Chuni Lal Shaha ...	56	839
389	Aftabuddin Ahmed v. Jogendra Narain Tewari ...	55	231
391	Balmukund Rina v. Gopiram Bhotica ...	56	828
402	Emperor v. Panchu Das ...	58	929
435	Constance Catherine Moreno v. Henry William Bunn Moreno	57	216
447	Gopeswar Pyne v. Hem Chandra Bose ...	57	226
463	Promotha Nath Pal Chowdhury v. Mohini Mohan Pal Chowdhury	58	327
471	Chandi Charan Mitra v. King-Emperor ...	57	931
476	Ramsahay Ram v. King-Emperor	57	278
482	Hridoy Nath Ray v. Ram Chandra Barna Sarma ...	58	806
495	Norendra Nath Keer v. Bhusan Chandra Pal ...	57	375
501	Kasi Nath Bhattacharjee v. Murari Chandra Pal ...	57	350
507	Indubala Debi v. Atul Chandra Ghose ...	57	314
510	Chandra Benode Kundu v. Shaikh Ala Bux ...	58	353

24 CALCUTTA WEEKLY NOTES, FROM APRIL 12TH* TO JUNE 21ST, 1920.

494	Syed Amatul Fatema Bibi v. Dewan Abdul Alim Saheb ...	59	1
501	Emperor v. Panchu Das ...	58	929
527	Foizuddin v. Emperor ..	58	922
529	Lal Jagdish Bahadur Singh v. Mahabir Prasad Singh ...	58	845
536	Surendra Kristo Roy v. Guru Pada Ghosh ...	59	432
538	Sachindra Narain Saha v. Hiron Moyee Dassi ...	59	435
541	Radhashyam Dass v. Ranga Sundari Dassi ...	To be printed.
545	Surendra Nath Banerjee v. Secretary of State ...	57	643
549	Emperor v. Nasiram Mistri ...	Not reportable.
553	Gopal Chandra Chaudhuri v. Rajanikanta Ghosh ...	Not reportable.
567	Alibhoy Mahomed v. Baijnath Kalooram ...	59	439
571	Sheikh Dastur Ali v. Ram Kumar Gope ...	50	378
573	Sailesh Chandra Bose v. Umesh Chandra Rudra ...	57	574
575	Uzir Biswas v. Haradeb Das Agarwala ...	57	249
577	Lachmandas Khandelwal v. Raghumull ...	58	851
582	Moharaja Monindra Chandra Nundy Bahadur v. Chundy Churn Banerjee ...	57	211
592	Panchu Gopal Mukerjee v. Kalidas Mukerjee ...	54	140
599	Bhairab Chandra Bose v. Anath Nath De ...	57	683
601	Rao Kishore Singh v. Gahena Bibi	53	630
612	Joylal & Co. v. Gopiram Bhotica...	58	755
617	Bejoy Chand Mahtab v. Tinkari Banerjee ...	58	741
619	Hathem Mondal v. Emperor ...	56	849
621	Sib Narayan Mukerjee v. Satish Chandra Ghoshal ...	57	161
624	Hasan Ali Bepari v. Emperor ...	57	101

*There was no issue between 29th March and 12th April—Ed.

24 CALCUTTA WEEKLY NOTES, FROM APRIL 12TH TO JUNE 21ST, 1920—concld.

626	Bankim Bihari Maiti v. Srimati Matangini Dasi ...	Not reportable.		711	Fanny Emeline Peterson v. Earnest Henry Shave ...	56	242
633	Krishna Kishore De v. Amarnath Kshettry ...	56	532	716	Mahananda Pal v. Secretary of State ...	58	631
639	Prafulla Nath Tagore v. Secretary of State ...	57	29	717	Goher Sheikh v. Alifuddin Sheikh	51	356
645	Khandkar Hedayatulla v. Emperor ...	58	338	721	Ramchand Manjimal v. Goverdhandas Vishindas Patanchand ...	56	302
650	Bugga v. Emperor ...	56	440	723	Hriday Nath Roy v. Ram Chandra Barna Sarma ...	58	806
657	Gopinath Biswas v. Radhashyam Poddar ...	58	671	735	Ticumchand Sautokechand v. Sautokechand Singhee ...	59	218
659	Easin v. Intijennessa Bibi ...	58	745	737	Secretary of State v. Jatindra Nath Choudhury ...	58	778
662	Kumar Satish Kanta Roi v. Satish Chandra Chottopadhya ...	55	689	743	Makhan Lal Saha v. Sarojendra Nath Saha Choudhuri ...	58	831
672	Nafar Chandra Pal v. Sidharatha Krishna Mazumdar ...	58	255	744	Howrah Municipality v. Lewis & Co. ...	58	924
674	Bindeshri Prasad v. Baisakha Bibi	To be printed.		746	Debendra Nath Ghosh v. New Tetturya Coal Company Limited	Not reportable.
685	Kamini Sundari Dasi v. Prosonno Kumar Sil ...	58	662	749	Rebati Raman Basak v. Harish Chandra Basak ...	59	665
690	Narain Das v. Kazi Abdur Rahim	58	705	752	Dhanpat Singh Khettry v. Mohesh Nath Tewari ...	57	805
699	Ramathai Vadivelu Mudaliar v. Peria Manicka Mudaliar ...	56	395	755	Chandi Charan Mitter, In the matter of ...	57	931
703	Kunjilal Monohardas v. Durgaprosad Debiprosad ...	58	781	763	Ram Sahay Ram v. Emperor ...	57	278
708	Prosanno Ch. Chattopadhya v. Baidya Nath Mistry ...	56	516	767	Emperor v. Sashi Bhusan Maity ...	58	817

1 I. L. R., LAHORE SERIES, FOR MAY JUNE, 1920.

220	Satto v. Amar Singh ...	54	400	262	Ram Singh v. Gulab Rai-Mehr Chand ...	55	610
223	Gela Ram v. Ganga Ram ...	54	913	276	Haji Ali Jan v. Abdul Jalil Khan	55	324
225	Sardari Lal v. Ram Lal ...	57	199	284	Ghulam Muhammad v. Gauhar Bibi ...	54	419
229	Ibrahim Ali Khan v. Mubarak Begam ...	56	923	292	Gordhan Das v. Rukman ...	58	11
234	Lekh Ram v. Ramji Das ...	57	215	295	Ralia Ram v. Mulk Raj ...	54	512
237	Rup Ram v. Fazal Din ...	57	224	298	Ghulam Haidar v. Amir Haidar ...	53	19
241	Parbhu Ram v. Tek Chand ...	53	865	302	Nasir Ali Shah v. Sughra Bibi ...	54	853
245	Alam Bi v. Lattu ...	57	204	307	Data Ram v. Deoki Nandan ...	58	6
249	Manji v. Ghulam Muhammad ...	57	207	310	Sital v. Emperor ...	57	942
259	Ramji Das v. Emperor ...	57	176	317	Maula Bakhsh v. Amir-ud-din ...	57	1000
260	Crown v Rahman ...	57	285

21 PUNJAB LAW REPORTER, FROM MAY 21ST TO JUNE 7TH, 1920.

No.				No.
122	Sunder Singh v. Phuman Singh...	56	591	130	Gujar Shah v. Barkat Ali Shah ...	56	744
123	Shib Dayal v. Hans Raj ...	55	1007	131	Ghansham Das v. Public Banking and Insurance Co. in Liquidation	56	251
124	Anandi Pershad v. Emperor ...	55	1002	132	Brij Lal v. Durga ...	56	254
125	Emperor v. Turezi ...	55	685	133	Hira v. Buta ...	56	256
126	Idris v. Jane Skinner ...	56	723	134	Inder Singh v. Munshi ...	56	272
127	Bindra Ban v. Emperor ...	54	1007	135	Vir Singh v. Harnam Singh ...	56	191
128	Emperor v. Multan Singh ...	54	994	136	Hem Raj v. Dost Muhammad ...	57	153
129	Ram Chand v. Kishan Chand ...	53	531

14 PUNJAB WEEKLY REPORTER, FOR OCTOBER 1919.

No.	Civil.			No.	Civil.
89	Jawand Singh v Muhammad Din	51	728	94	Khuda Yar v. Ahmad ...	51	298
90	Moti Ram v. Sant Ram ...	51	979		Criminal.
91	Ralla Ram v. Amritsar Mutual Relief Fund, Ltd. ...	51	723	16	Mangal Singh v. Crown ...	59	551
92	Maula Bakhsh v. Dasondhi ...	51	853	17	Crown v. Munshi Ram ...	51	155
93	Municipal Committee of Ludhiana v. Ahad Shah ...	51	831	18	Harnam Singh v. Crown ...	52	395

43 I. L. R., MADRAS SERIES, FOR MAY-JUNE, 1920.

Page.
309	Sabapathi Pillay v. Thandavaroya Odayar ...	54	515
313	Seshagiri Rao v. Srinivasa Rao..	56	260
316	Angappa Mudali v. Ramapuram Perumal Chetty ...	53	489
319	Nemanna Kudre v. Achmu Hengau ...	53	855
325	Ramanathan Pillai v. Doraiswami Aiyangar ...	55	363
330	Gandi Appa Razu v. Emperor ...	54	491
333	The Tanjore Life Assurance Company Limited v. S. Kuppanna Rau ...	55	660
344	Kandaswamy Mudaliar v. Emperor ..	53	689
348	Bheemanna v. Emperor ...	54	414
351	Agnihotram Jagannadha Charyulu v. Sri Raja Bommadevra Satyanarayana Varaprasada Rao Bahadur ...	54	508
357	Idumba Parayan v. Pethi Reddi...	54	451
361	Venkatagiri Ayyar v. N. M. Firm ...	54	172
363	Amirthammal v. Maddalakarun...	57	184
365	Secretary to the Commissioner of Salt Abkari and Separate Revenue, Madras, In re ...	56	154
372	Ponnambala Pillai v. Annamalai Chettiar ...	55	666
381	Venkatarama Aiyar v. South Indian Bank Limited ...	55	452
393	Ottapurakkal Tazhatha Soopi v. Charichil Pallikkal Mariyoma...	55	760
396	Gill, R. P. v. Varadaraghavayya...	55	517
398	Balakrishnayya v. V. Venkata Triambakam ...	55	371
405	Chekkur Puthaluth Poothati Edathil Kunhi Sankaran Nambiar v. Pooniath Akathoothu Narayanan Tirumunpu ...	55	86
410	Veeramachaneni Ramaswamy v. Soma Pitchayya ...	58	585
411	Lockley, W. H. v. Emperor ...	55	345
421	Kandasami Goundan v. Kuppu Mooppan ...	55	320
424	Hari Krishnamurti v. Akella Suryanarayanamurti ...	57	753
429	Ramanathan Chettiar v. Muthiah Chetty ...	56	358
433	Kadir Mastan Rowther v. Sengammal ...	55	655
436	Gokarakonda Narasimha Rao v. Gokarakonda Papunna ...	56	519
438	Velayuda Mudali v. Emperor ...	To be printed.
443	Hussaina Beari v. Emperor ...	59	45

11 LAW WEEKLY, FOR MAY 7TH, 1920.

574	Municipal Council of Conjeevaram v. Kumara Venkatachariar ...	57	718
579	Muhammad Rustam Ali Khan v Municipal Committee of Karnal City ...	56	1
584	Tanjore Life Assurance Co. Ltd. v. Kuppanna Rao ...	55	660
593	Naina Maracayar v. Somasundaram Chettiar ...	56	604
596	Jambagathachi v. Rajamannarswami Nadalwar ...	57	678
600	Bayya Sahu v. Krishnachandra Gajapati ...	56	598
602	Ponnuswami Asari v. Palaniandi Mudali ...	56	612
606	Srinivasa Aiyangar v. Narayana Aiyangar ...	56	608
609	Venkatachalam Chetty v. Pichai Ammal ...	57	742
611	Vemi Reddi Seshu Reddi v. Nallappa Reddi Raghava Reddi ...	57	800
620	Mardala Samigudu v. Paida Srinivasulu Reddi ...	57	708

16 NAGPUR LAW REPORTS, FOR MAY-JUNE, 1920.

76	Ramchandrarao v. Venkatrao ...	54	936
84	Baldeoprasad v. Seth Ghasiram...	56	360
87	Laxman v. Govind ...	55	499
89	Amolaksao v. Eknath ...	55	481
91	Sukhdeo v. Bhulai ...	42	657
94	B. L. Rai v. Bhaiyalal ...	58	13
103	Baldeo v. Kanhaiyalal ...	58	21
106	Nathuram v. Jagannath ...	55	426

23 OUDH CASES, FROM MAY TO JULY, 1920.

136	Emperor v. Kunwar Bahadur ...	57	934
138	Emperor v. Kunwar Bahadur ...	57	936
140	Suraj Bakhsh Singh v. Brijraj-Kunwar ...	57	415
145	Brij Behari Lal v. Indarpal Singh	57	967
150	Mohammad Ali v. Ramzan Ali ...	58	891
156	Ramadhin v. Ram Dayal ...	57	973
163	Khuda Bakhsh v. Gauri Shankar	57	476
166	Narindra Bahadur Rai v. Ganga Sagar ...	57	509
171	Kamla Lachhmi v. Basdeo Prosad	58	900
176	Jageshar Singh v. Bir Ram ...	To be printed.
184	Sheo Dayal v. Lalta Prasad ...	58	608
204	Ram Dei v. Suraj Bakhsh ...	To be printed.
214	Wahid Ali v. Nusrat Ali ...	58	629
216	Zuool Qadar Jang Bahadur v. T. B. W. Bishop for Nanpara Estate ...	58	667
218	Masuman v. Gulzari Lal ..	58	549
222	Mohammad Yusuf Ali v. Mohammad Yakoob Ali ...	57	658
229	Ashiq Ali v. Emperor ...	58	682

7 OUDH LAW JOURNAL, FOR MAY-JUNE, 1920.

227	Gur Din v. Durga Din ...	54	19	291	Raja Suraj Bakhsh Singh v. Birjraj Kuar ...	57	415
231	Narain Das v. Baij Nath Sahai ...	56	692
234	Tika v. Ram Kuar ...	56	696	296	Mahmud-ul-Hasan Kirmani v. Sheoparsan Singh ...	57	419
237	Baij Nath Singh v. Arjun Singh	55	412
240	Bakhtawar Ram v. Naushad Ali...	55	659	301	Khuda Bakhsh v. Gauri Shankar	57	476
242	Hafizuddin v. Mubarak Ali ...	56	699	304	Jagmohan Singh v. Raghu Ram...	55	638
246	Saiyed Tahawwar Husain v. Lala Lachhman Das ...	56	707	307	Kaniz Fizzah Bibi v. Tirloki Nath	57	480
				308	Ram Lal v. Makhan Lal ...	55	710
250	Secretary of State v. Saiyed Afzal Husain ...	56	714	310	Maiku Lal v. Nazir Ahmad ...	55	657
				312	Fatch Chand v. Lachhmi Narain	57	481
258	Janki Saran v. Widow of Mohammad Sadiq ...	56	720	319	Mahbub Ali v. Muhammad Husain	57	497
263	Bibi Jai Kishori v. Afzal Khanam	54	541	330	Jai Narain v. Bajrang Bahadur Singh ...	56	826
268	Lachhmi Narayan v. Ganga Bakhsh Singh ...	59	364	336	Hanuman Singh v. Ratan Singh...	57	448
				337	Narindra Bahadur v. Ganga Sagar	57	509
271	Athar Husain v. Idu Shah ...	56	691	342	Bisram Singh v. Sanwal Singh ...	57	541
273	Pudai Ram v. Baijnath Lal ...	56	745	348	Rameshar Bakhsh Singh v. Prabhu Dayal ...	57	583
278	Raghunath Singh v. Har Dayal Singh ...	56	751	350	Mohammad Ali v. Ramzan Ali ...	58	891
279	Ratipali v. Bhagwan Din ...	56	755	356	Mahadeo Bakhsh Singh v. Sant Bakhsh Singh ...	57	513
282	Nadir Singh v. Anpurna Kunwar	56	759	362	Jadu Nath Singh v. Afzal Khanam	57	526
286	Muhammad Abul Hasan Khan v. Ram Nath ..	55	641	371	Muhammad Yusuf Ali v. Muhammad Yakub Ali ...	57	658
289	Mumtaz Ali v. Dullah ...	55	634	378	Janga Singh v. Lachhmi Narain...	57	488

(1920) PATNA CASES, FOR MAY-JUNE.

146	Kumar Promatha Nath Mallia v. A. J. Miek ...	56	184	184	Raja Wazir Narain Singh v. Rani Jagadamba Kuer ...	52	407
155	Sheotahal Singh v. Arjun Das ...	56	879	187	Babui Bhagwati Kuer v. Bahuria Ram Sakhi Kuer ...	57	583
161	Official Trustee of Bengal v. Charles Joseph Smith ...	56	262	193	Allan Mathewson v. Chairman of the District Board of Manbhum	58	749
168	John Pierpont Morgan v. Babu Ramjee Ram ...	56	366	200	Narpat Singh v. Domi Lal Chowdhury ...	57	511
177	Maharani Janki Koer v. Saudagar Ram ...	56	417	203	Ram Charitar Ram v. Hashim Khan ...	56	810
179	Chanderbati Kuer v. Gorey Lal Singh ...	52	508	205	Biran Rai v. Emperor ...	56	853
181	Braja Sundar Das v. Jagarnath Dhal ...	56	678

5 PATNA LAW JOURNAL, FOR MAY JUNE, 1920.

302	John Pierpont Morgan v. Ramjee Ram ...	56	366	379	Ram Gulam Sahu v. Sham Sahai Das	Not reportable.
314	Deonandan Prasad v. Janki Singh	56	322	383	Lachmi Narain Marwari v. Balmukund Marwari ...	57	245
321	Secretary of State v. Lown Karan Marwari ...	56	507	387	Punia Mahto v. Shaik Bundey Ali	Not reportable.
328	Official Trustee of Bengal v. Charles Joseph Smith ...	56	262	390	Maharaja Sir Rameshwar Singh v. Harihar Jha ...	57	250
339	Ugramohan Chaudhry v. Lachmi Prasad Choudhry ...	56	422	394	Shama Pershad Sahi v. Sheopersan Singh ...	41	95
342	Kumar Ganganand Singh v. Rai Pirthi Chand Bahadur ...	Not reportable		397	Mohini Mohan Misser v. Gour Chandra Rai ...	56	762
344	Kamla Prasad Choudhry v. Kunj Behari Mander ...	57	11	400	Lachmibati Kumari v. Nand Kumar Singh ...	56	649
347	Bhagwati Kuer v. Bahuria Ramsakhi Kuer ...	57	583	402	Rameshwar Singh Bahadur v. Subu Lal Jha ...	59	25
357	Balmakund Kanangoe v. Mritunjoy Paharaj ...	57	7	406	Dayal Kundu v. Malhu Pathak...	57	553
359	Allan Mathewson v. Chairman of the District Board of Manbhum	58	749	410	Sumitra Kuer v. Ram Kair Chowbey ...	57	561
371	Suraj Prasad Pandey v. W. W. Boucke ...	56	379	415	Hurmoozi Begum v. Aysha ...	57	421
373	Harayan Patnaik v. Raghunath Patnaik ...	57	225	417	Dedhraj v. Mahabir Prasad ...	57	303
376	Abbas Ali v. Misri Lall ...	56	403	420	Shyam Lal Sahai v. Ram Narain Lal Seth ...	57	300
				423	Ram Narain Pattack v. Surathnath Pandapadhya ...	57	337

Alphabetical List of Cases reported in Volume LVI of Indian Cases with references to the Volumes and Pages of other Law Journals and Reports.

An asterisk (*) denotes cases not reported yet elsewhere.

Names of cases reported.	Where reported.	Page.
A Vakil, In the matter of ...	18 A L J 419; 2 U P L R (A.) 130; 21 Cr L J 469; 42 A 450 ...	501
Abbas v. Misri Lal ...	5 P L J 376; 1 P L T 339 ...	403
Abdul Baqi v Kunja Behari ...	*Patna High Court ...	818
Abdul Karim v. Emperor ...	103 P L R 1920; 21 Cr L J 511 ...	671
Abdul Rashid v. Sizing Material Co. Ltd. ...	2 U P L R (A.) 126; 18 A L J 566; 42 A 480 ...	192
Abdul Sheikh v. Mahamad Ayab ...	24 C W N 880; 31 C L J 197 ...	551
Abdullah Haroon v. Sassoon and Co. ...	13 S L R 201 ...	76
Adhikari Kuer v. Lokenath Rai ...	2 U P L R (Pat.) 93; 1 P L T 335 ...	426
Adusumilli Kristnayya v. Adusumilli Lakshmipathi	18 A L J 601; (1920) M W N 385; 24 C W N 905; 39 M L J 70; 28 M L T 70; 43 M 650 P.C.	391
Adya Singh v. Nasib Singh ...	1 P L T 227 ...	495
Ah Choy v. Trading Company ...	*Lower Burma Chief Court ...	978
Ahmad Yar v. Saadullah ...	*Lahore High Court ...	11
Aidal Singh v. Pearey Lal ...	2 U P L R (A.) 157 ...	248
Ajodhi v. Emperor ..	16 N L R 30; 21 Cr L J 486 ...	582
Ambalavana Pandara Sannidhi Avergal v. Meenakshi Sundareswaral Devastanam of Madura ...	18 A L J 594; 2 U P L R (P. C.) 95; 39 M L J 50; 28 M L T 83: 12 L W 212; 43 M 665 P. C.	730
Ambica Charan Kheskel v. Esmail ...	*Calcutta High Court ...	981
Aminudeen Sahib v. Pyari Bi ...	11 L W 370; 38 M L J 340; (1920) M W N 246; 43 M 633 ...	73
Amjad Hussain v. Shyam Lal ...	*Patna High Court ...	1004
Amrit Vaman v. Hari Govind ...	22 Bom L R 275; 44 B 237 ...	411
Anant Ram v. Bharat National Bank, Ltd. Delhi ...	*Lahore High Court ...	638
Annada Mohan Roy v. Atul Chandra Chakrabarti ...	24 C W N 465 ...	753
Anup Singh v. Fateh Chand ...	2 U P L R (A.) 187 & 258; 18 A L J 789 F. B.	986
Anwar Bewa v Surendra Nath ...	*Calcutta High Court ...	844
Arumugam Pillay v Krishnasawami Naidu ...	12 L W 41; 39 M L J 222; 43 M 725 ...	976
Arunachellam Chettiar v. Madaswami ...	11 L W 238 ...	146
Asa Debi v. Bashi Ram ...	2 U P L R (L.) 98 ...	193
Aso v. Harnami ...	2 U P L R (L.) 114 ...	944
Athar Husain v. Idu Shah ...	7 O L J 271; 23 O C 85; 2 U P L R (J. C.) 105 ...	691
Badami v. Karori ...	2 U P L R (B. R.) 43 ...	801
Bal Kaur v. Shib Das ...	1 L 151 ...	207
Balak Ram v. Kaura ...	2 U P L R (L.) 94 ...	169
Baldeo Koeri v. Lakshmi Narayan Kuer ...	1 P L T 627; 21 Cr L J 479 ...	511
Baldeo Singh v Sheoraj Kueri ...	2 U P L R (Pat.) 135 ...	807
Baldeoprasad v. Ghasiram ...	16 N L R 84 ...	360
Balkrishna Narayan Sawant v. Jankibai Sitaram Sanzgiri ...	22 Bom L R 289; 44 B 331 ...	340
Balkrishna Sahai v. Sham Sundar Sahay ...	*Patna High Court ...	962
Balmukund Rina v. Gopiram Bhotica ...	31 C L J 391 ...	828
Balwant Singh v. Budh Singh ...	18 A L J 642 ...	1006
Banamali Paul v. Satis Chandra Dutt ...	*Calcutta High Court ...	138
Banke Lal v. Swami Dayal ...	7 O L J 207; 2 U P L R (J. C.) 82; 23 O C 72 ...	328
Basti Ram v. Rustam Singh ...	2 U P L R (A.) 146 ...	518
Bayya Sahu v. Krishnachandra Gajapathy ...	11 L W 600 ...	598
Bejoy Kumar v. Satish Chandra ...	24 C W N 444 ...	1007
Bejoy Singh v Mathuriya Debya ...	*Calcutta High Court ...	97
Benares Hindu University v. Kishen Das ...	7 O L J 203; 2 U P L R (J. C.) 81 ...	335

Bhaggi Lal v. Emperor	...	2 U P L R (A.) 119; 18 A L J 562; 21 Cr L J 438; 42 A 470	... 230
Bhagwan Das v. Tej Ram	...	*Allahabad High Court	... 148
Bhagwati Prasad v. Mukand Sarup	...	2 U P L R (A.) 147	... 523
Bharath Singh v Munnu Singh	...	7 O L J 151; 2 U P L R (J. C.) 83	... 291
Bhawal Khan v. Emperor	...	13 S L R 215; 21 Cr L J 513	... 769
Bhikhan v. Mardan Ali	...	*Patna High Court	... 40
Bhola Nath v. Emperor	...	21 Cr L J 442	... 234
Bhupati Charan Nandi v. Golam Ehihar Choudhury		24 C W N 368	... 539
Bhuramull Banka v. Official Assignee of Bengal	...	47 C 56	... 337
Biran Rai v. Emperor	...	(1920) Pat 205; 1 P L T 331; 21 Cr L J 549	... 853
Bisheshar Lal v. Bhuri	...	*Lahore High Court	... 595
Bishun Dutta v. Ramji Prosad	...	2 U P L R (Pat.) 136	... 834
Bisudhanand v. Isri Singh	...	*Patna High Court	... 593
Brahmanand Singh v. Dund Bahadur Singh	...	1 P L T 229; (1920) Pat 245; 2 U P L R Pat.) 111	... 344
Braja Sundar Das v. Jagannath Dhal	...	1 P L T 258; (1920) Pat 181	... 678
Brij Krishna Das v. Murli Rai	...	1 P L J 703	... 316
Brij Lal v. Durga	...	1 L 134	... 254
Brij Narain Rai v. Mangla Prasad Rai	...	2 U P L R (A.) 149	... 526
Brindaban Chander Choubey v. Gour Chandra Ray		(1920) Pat 56; 1 P L T 467	... 155
Bugga v. Emperor	...	(1920) M W N 326; 2 U P L R (P. C.) 50; 24 C W N 650; 18 A L J 455; 22 Bom L R 609; 39 M L J 1; 12 L W 296; 1 L 326; 21 Cr L J 456 P. C.	... 440
Chakarpan v. Nathua	...	2 U P L R (B. R.) 22	... 287
Chanan Singh v. Emperor	..	1 L 218; 21 Cr L J 518; 108 P L R 1920	... 774
Chandan Singh v. Bhora Lal	...	2 U P L R (B. R.) 53	... 549
Chandmull Goneshmull v. Dhanraj Ganpatroy	...	24 C W N 302	... 457
Chandra Mohon Singh v. Emperor	..	1 P L T 623; 21 Cr L J 480	... 512
Chatter Singh Damai v. Emperor	...	3 U B R (1919) 194; 21 Cr L J 435	... 227
Chauras Kunwar v. Jagannath Singh	...	7 O L J 147; 2 U P L R (J. C.) 89	... 287
Chetty Firm, S. V. S. T. v. Po Mya	...	12 Bur L T 261	... 945
Chetty, M. M. P. L. K. v. Supaya Maistry	...	12 Bur L T 239	... 960
Chhogalal Meghraj v. Kanhayalal Tarachand	...	*Nagpur Judicial Commissioner's Court	... 740
Chiranjilal Ramlal v. Tulsiram Jankidass	...	31 C L J 134; 47 C 568	... 734
Damu Diga v. Vakrya Nathu	...	22 Bom L R 328; 44 B. 767	... 455
Darbari Lal v. Wasu Malik	...	*Lahore High Court	... 115
Darbari Mal v. Moola Singh	...	2 U P L R (A.) 160; 18 A L J 628	... 139
Darsan Singh v. Sheoraj Singh	...	2 U P L R (B. R.) 22	... 286
Dassya v. Nibaran Chandra Ghosh	...	31 C L J 371; 21 Cr L J 545; 24 C W N 928	... 240
Datar Kaur v. Ram Rattan	...	2 U P L R (L.) 96; 115 P L R 1920	... 173
Deb Lal Jha v. Baldeo Jha	...	2 U P L R (Pat.) 100; 1 P L T 354	... 277
Deonandan Prasad Singh v. Janki Singh	...	5 P L J 314; 1 P L T 325; 2 U P L R (Pat.) 108; (1920) Pat 266	... 322
Devi Ditta Mal v. Official Liquidator of the Amritsar Bank, Ltd.	...	*Lahore High Court	... 69
Dholan Das, In the matter of	...	13 S L R 187	... 158
Dip Chand Rai v. Chhetru Lal	...	1 P L T 529	... 570
Diwan v. Jagta	...	1 L 206; 113 P L R 1920	... 728
Donopudi Subramanyan v. Nune Narasimham	...	11 L W 483; (1920) M W N 293; 38 M L J 465; 43 M 644	... 67
Drigpal Singh v. Nakchhed Singh	...	7 O L J 171; 2 U P L R (J. C.) 99	... 320
Drigpal Singh v. Sukhnandan Lal	...	7 O L J 164; 2 U P L R (J. C.) 96	... 299
Emperor v. Akub Ali	...	31 C L J 122; 21 Cr L J 547	... 851
——— v. Bhagelu Dom	...	21 Cr L J 434	... 226
——— v. Deva Kanta Jha	...	5 P L J 267; 1 P L T 297; (1920) Pat 224; 21 Cr L J 468	... 500
——— v. Jagat Singh	...	21 Cr L J 557	... 861
——— v. Sundar	...	2 U P L R (A.) 115; 21 Cr L J 515	... 771
Fakhrunnessa Begam v. District Judge of the 24-Parganas	...	24 C W N 339; 47 C 592	... 475
Faqir Chand v. Dullah	...	*Lahore High Court	... 848
Fatta v. Sikandar	...	2 U P L R (L.) 112	... 927
Firm Debi Din-Bhagwan Din v. Firm Sarkar and Co.		2 U P L R (A.) 143	... 513

Firm Katasi Singh-Kahan Singh v. Firm Daulat Ram-Kirpa Ram	...	*Lahore High Court	... 936
Firm of Pokerdas Kishindas v. Firm of Vishinji Gordhandas	...	14 S L R 18	... 514
Firm of Ramchand Manjimal v. Firm of Goverdhandas Vishindas Ratanchand	..	24 C W N 721; 18 A L J 591; 22 Bom L R 606; 39 M L J 27; 12 L W 15; 2 U P L R (P. C.) 94; (1920) M W N 407; 28 M L T 87 P. C.	... 302
Fitha v. Devkee	...	*Lahore High Court	... 651
Gadadharadoss v Suryanarayana Patnaik	...	38 M L J 342; (1920) M W N 303; 12 L W 77	... 92
Gajadhar v. Beni Prasad	...	2 U P L R (B. R.) 44	... 819
Gajibai v. Nilkanth	...	*Nagpur Judicial Commissioner's Court	... 929
Ganapathiya Pillai v. Gopala Aiyer	...	*Madras High Court	... 563
Ganesh Devi v Darshan Singh	...	2 U P L R (L.) 100	... 478
Ganesh Prasad v. Bishwa Nath	...	7 O L J 188; 23 O C 30	... 354
Ganpat v. Bani	...	21 Cr L J 414	... 62
Ganpat v. Lalamiya	...	16 N L R 59 P. C.	... 673
Ganpat Lal v. Bindbasini Prashad	...	18 A L J 555; (1920) M W N 382; 12 L W 59; 39 M L J 108; 2 U P L R (P. C.) 103; 24 C W N 954 P. C.	... 274
Gauri Shankar v. Mewa	...	2 U P L R (B. R.) 69	... 977
Gaya Singh v. Name Singh	...	5 P L J 263	... 983
Ghanisham Das v Mubarik	...	*Lahore High Court	... 576
Ghansham Das v. Public Banking and Insurance Co		1 L 154	... 251
Girdhar Das v. Raja Sri Krishna Datt	...	18 A L J 545; 39 M L J 18 P. C.	... 293
Girindra Chandra Sen v. Mahesh Ram Deb	...	*Calcutta High Court	... 170
Gobind Sahai v. Ram Chand	...	*Lahore High Court	... 971
Gobindram v. Khushaldas	...	13 S L R 100	... 885
Gokal Chand v. Emperor	...	1 L 163; 21 Cr L J 462	... 446
Gokarakonda Narasimha Rao v. Gokarakonda Papanna	...	11 L W 394; 38 M L J 327; 43 M 436	... 519
Gokul Prasad v. Sitla Prasad	...	7 O L J 184	... 348
Govind v. Dheklu	...	*Nagpur Judicial Commissioner's Court	... 550
Govinda Chandra v. Dina Nath	...	23 C W N 977; 30 C L J 512; 47 C 274	... 141
Gowkaran Lal v. Sarju Saw	...	1 P L T 200; 21 Cr L J 519	... 775
Grande Venkatta v. Corporation of Calcutta	...	24 C W N 388; 47 C 633; 21 Cr L J 490	... 586
Gujar Shah v. Barkat Ali Shah	...	1 L 213	... 744
Gul Mahomed v. Faiz Mahomed	...	13 S L R 210	... 69
Gul Muhammad v. Bandu	...	*Lahore High Court	... 461
Gulabdas v. Dharmin Bai	...	*Nagpur Judicial Commissioner's Court	... 996
Gurbachan Singh v. Ralla Ram	...	*Lahore High Court	... 947
Hafizuddin v. Mubarak Ali	...	7 O L J 242	... 699
Hanif-un-nessa v Ram Dayal	...	2 U P L R (B. R.) 36	... 46
Hardutt Singh v. Jaikaran Singh	...	2 U P L R (B. R.) 13	... 656
Hari Raghunath v. Antaji Bhikaji	...	22 Bom L R 334; 44 B 466	... 459
Hari Singh v. Fazal	...	*Lahore High Court	... 117
Haricharan Mandal v. Bighore Gain	...	*Calcutta High Court	... 127
Haridas Chatterji v. Gahenabai	...	*Nagpur Judicial Commissioner's Court	... 761
Harnam Singh v. Bhola Singh	...	2 U P L R (L.) 108	... 966
Harnaman v. Dasondhi	...	1 L 210; 112 P L R 1920	... 733
Harsalsa v. Bapu	...	*Nagpur Judicial Commissioner's Court	... 382
Hathim Mondal v. Emperor	...	31 C L J 310; 24 C W N 619; 21 Cr L J 545	... 849
Hem Chandra v. Secretary of State for India	...	31 C L J 204	... 758
Hem Kuar v. Sewa Ram	...	2 U P L R (B. R.) 15	... 645
Hira v. Buta	...	1 L 128; 49 P W R 192	... 256
Hurnandrai Fulchand v. Pragdas Budhsen	...	22 Bom L R 343	... 632
Ibrahim Ali Khan v. Mubarak Begam	...	20 P W R 1920; 1 L 229; 82 P L R 1920	... 923
Idris v. Mrs Jane Skinner	...	82 P R 1919; 45 P W R 1919 P. C.	... 723
Ila-ud-din v. Amir Ullah	...	2 U P L R (L.) 105	... 874
Ilim Molla v. Manindra Mohan Poddar	...	31 C L J 382	... 801
Indar Singh v. Munshi	...	1 L 124	... 272
Inder Sain v. Emperor	...	21 Cr L J 418	... 210
Ismail v. Ezekiel	...	12 Bur L T 249	... 930
Jag Sahu v. Radha Kishun	...	1 P L T 209; 5 P L J 287; (1920) Pat 211; 2 U P L R (Pat.) 127	... 867
Jagamohini Dasi v. Shiba Gopal Banerjee	...	*Calcutta High Court	... 610
Jagdeo Parshad v. Emperor	...	18 A L J 442; 21 Cr L J 410	... 58

Jaharmal-Debi Dutta v. Birinchi Bhusan	...	*Calcutta High Court	... 941
Jai Narain v. Bajrang Bahadur Singh	...	7 O L J 330; 2 U P L R (J. C.) 115	... 826
Jainab Bibi v. Hyderally Saheb	...	38 M L J 532; 28 M L T 23; (1920) M W N 360; 12 L W 64; 43 M 609 F. B.	... 957
Jainarain Dhusar v. Ram Kishore	...	*Nagpur Judicial Commissioner's Court	... 822
Jakkamreddi Seshadri Reddy v. Subramania Iyer	...	11 L W 536; (1920) M W N 337; 38 M L J 504; 43 M 720	... 450
Jamsedji v. Husseinbhai Ahmedbhai	...	22 Bom L R 319	... 424
Jamunabai v. Juharmal	...	*Nagpur Judicial Commissioner's Court	... 81
Janaki Nagasawmi Iyer v. Ramasawmi Aiyengar	...	11 L W 6; (1920) M W N 264	... 267
Janki Kuer v. Saudagar Ram	...	1 P L T 221; (1920) Pat 177	... 417
Janki Saran v. Widow of Mohammad Sadiq	...	7 O L J 258; 2 U P L R (J. C.) 106	... 720
Jasir Khan v. Emperor	...	21 Cr L J 413	... 61
Jawad Ali Shah v. Kamlapat Rai	...	18 A L J 514	... 641
Jhanda Singh v. Lachhmi	...	22 P W R 1920; 68 P L R 1920; 1 L 344	... 878
Jhari Singh v. Emperor	...	21 Cr L J 443	... 235
Jhiblia v. Dawlatya	...	*Nagpur Judicial Commissioner's Court	... 749
Jitendra Kumar Pal v. Mukshoda Charan Das	...	*Calcutta High Court	... 1001
Jiwraj v. Sheokuwarbai	...	*Nagpur Judicial Commissioner's Court	... 65
Jnardan Missir v. Brijnandan Singh	...	*Patna High Court	... 982
Jogesh Chandra v. Emperor	...	24 C W N 343; 21 Cr L J 497	... 657
Kachu Ravji Mindhe Vanjari v. Trimbak Khemchand Gujarathi	...	22 Bom L R 383; 44 B 472	... 597
Kaladan Suratee Bazar Co. Ltd., In re	...	*Lower Burma Chief Court	... 914
Kalyan Singh v. Ramgolam Singh	..	31 C L J 48	... 4
Kamalambal v. Dorasami Chettiar	...	11 L W 179	... 26
Kamaleshwari Prosad Singh v. Jagar Nath Sahai	...	*Patna High Court	... 949
Kanatala Venkata Krishnama Charlu v. Kandala Pernndevamma	...	*Madras High Court	... 593
Kannan Narayanan v. Muthalpuredath Ramunni	...	11 L W 328	... 241
Kanshi Ram v. Lal Chand	...	2 U P L R (L.) 93	... 182
Karam Dad v. Hussain Bakhsh	...	*Lahore High Court	... 458
Karm Ilahi v. Hakim Shah	...	*Lahore High Court	... 865
Kashi Rao v. Mohamad Alli	...	*Nagpur Judicial Commissioner's Court	... 8 9
Kasidanbi v. Gangulal	...	*Nagpur Judicial Commissioner's Court	... 247
Kasturi v. Lote Major	...	*Nagpur Judicial Commissioner's Court	... 952
Kaung Ki v. Emperor	...	3 U B R (1919) 197; 21 Cr L J 452	... 436
Kesari Sahai Singh v. Hitnarayan Singh	...	1 P L T 507	... 149
Khushal Singh v. Kanda	...	2 U P L R (L.) 110	... 931
Kisanlal v. Nathu	...	16 N L R 131	... 44
Kishori Saran v. Rameshwar	...	2 U P L R (B. R.) 67	... 980
Ko Pu v. Ma Thein Yin	...	12 Bur L T 225	... 969
Kolangoreth Raman Nair v. Kolimatamullathil Mariyomma	...	(1920) M W N 332; 11 L W 513; 43 M 480	... 13
Kripa Sindhu Panigrahi v. Nanda Charan Panipatu		(1920) Pat 209	... 615
Kripasindhu v. Nandu Charan	...	1 P L T 206	... 606
Krishna Ayyangar v. Nallaperumal Pillai	...	38 M L J 444; 18 A L J 489; 22 Bom L R 568; 28 M L T 28; 12 L W 92; (1920) M W N 419; 43 M 550; 2 U P L R (P. C.) 118 P. C.	... 193
Krishna Dayal Gir v. Lakshmi Narain	...	1 P L T 486	... 270
Krishna Kishore De v. Amar Nath Khettry	...	31 C L J 272; 24 C W N 633	... 532
Kumar Prematha Nath Malia v. Meik	...	(1920) Pat 146; 5 P L J 273; 1 P L T 360	... 184
Lachman Chamar v. Emperor	...	18 A L J 311; 21 Cr L J 417	... 209
Lachmibati Kumari v. Nandkumar Singh	...	1 P L T 268; 5 P L J 400	... 649
Lalta Prasad v. Nasir Khan	...	*Allahabad High Court	... 179
Le Maung v. Ma Kwe	...	10 L B R 107; 13 Bur L T 8	... 681
Louis Dreyfus & Co v. Purusottum Das Narain Das		47 C 29	... 325
Lucas, J. M. v. Official Assignee of Bengal	...	24 C W N 418; 21 Cr L J 481	... 577
Luchhman Dass v. Devi Dial	...	19 P W R 1920; 100 P L R 1920	... 884
Ma Dwe v. Ma Tin Lun	...	12 Bur L T 228	... 972
Ma On Me v. Ma Pya Gyi	...	3 U B R (1919) 198	... 255
Ma Thu Daw v. Ma Ngwe Nu	...	*Lower Burma Chief Court	... 764
Ma Ye Baw v. Maung Shwe Hman	...	3 U B R (1919) 192	... 253
Macintyre, In the goods of	...	17 A L J 247; 41 A 248	... 683
Madhabi Sundari Dasya v. Syama Charan Biswas	...	31 C L J 202	... 748
Madho Rao v. Ghulam Mohiuddin	...	15 N L R 134 P. C.	... 717
Madhorao v. Kesheorao	...	*Nagpur Judicial Commissioner's Court	... 175

Madhusudan Koer v. Badridas	...	31 C L J 93	... 693
Mahabir Prasad Singh v. Manki	...	2 U P L R (B. R) 14	... 677
Mahboob v. Emperor	...	2 U P L R (A.) 113; 21 Cr L J 552	... 856
Mahomed Hosain v. Ma Pwa Hnit	...	10 L B R 104; 13 Bur L T 43; 21 Cr L J 503	... 663
Majaraddin Kabiraj v. Majibar Rahman	...	*Calcutta High Court	... 248
Manghirmal v. Jethanand	...	13 S L R 56	... 683
Manki Koer v. Manrakhan Kuer	...	2 U P L R (Pat.) 116	... 841
Manna Lal v. Karu Singh	...	1 P L T 6 P. C.	... 766
Manna Singh v. Emperor	...	18 A L J 375; 21 Cr L J 401	... 49
Manulla Kolu v. Prasanna Kumar Sarkar	...	*Calcutta High Court	... 811
Mata Din v. Madho Charan	...	*Oudh Judicial Commissioner's Court	... 877
Mathura Prasad v. Hardeo Bakhsh Singh	...	18 A L J 518; 42 A 477	... 174
Mathura Rai v. Mandal Das	...	1 P L T 392	... 805
Maula Bakhsh v. Ram Das	...	*Lahore High Court	... 25
Maung Saw v. Ingraswamy	...	3 U B R (1919) 200	... 259
Maung Sein v. U Po Ko	...	12 Bur L T 236	... 954
Mewa Lal v. Emperor	...	18 A L J 620; 21 Cr L J 416; 2 U P L R (A.) 213	... 64
Mir Mouze Ali v Emperor	...	31 C L J 305; 21 Cr L J 554	... 858
Mohamed Kalimuddin v. Stewart	...	31 C L J 247; 47 C 623	... 556
Mohamed Yusuf v. Emperor	...	21 Cr L J 465	... 497
Mohammad Ahmad v. Ansar Mohammad	...	7 O L J 158; 23 O C 62	... 304
Mohan v. Emperor	...	21 Cr L J 560	... 864
Mohini Mohan Misser v. Gour Chandra Rai	...	5 P L J 397; 1 P L T 390; 2 U P L R (Pat.) 123	... 762
Mojiz Fatima v. Ali Akbar	...	18 A L J 435; 42 A 414	... 112
Moula v. Emperor	...	104 P L R 1920; 21 Cr L J 512	... 672
Muhammad Ali v. Chairman, Municipality of Behar		1 P L T 591	... 821
Muhammad Anwar Ali Khan v. Dara Shah Khan	...	18 A L J 624; 2 U P L R (A.) 217	... 208
Muhammad Rustam Ali Khan v. Municipal Committee of Karnal City	...	1 P W R 1920; 13 P L R 1920; 38 M L J 455; 1 L 117; 11 L W 579; 18 A L J 468; 22 Bom L R 563; 2 U P L R (P. C.) 87; 28 M L T 1 P. C.	... 1
Muhammad Shah v Abdullah Shah	...	*Lahore High Court	... 918
Mulchand, In re	...	13 S L R 212; 21 Cr. L J 449	... 433
Munwarali v. Taiyabali	...	*Nagpur Judicial Commissioner's Court	... 806
Muthia Chetty v. Thevar	..	12 Bur L T 234	... 951
Muthusami Iyer v. Varada Vyroyan	...	(1920) M W N 239; 11 L W 352	... 476
Nabi Bakhsh v. Emperor	...	1 L 216; 21 Cr L J 521; 109 P L R 1920	... 777
Nabin Chandra Nath v. Tirthabasi Bhowmik	...	*Calcutta High Court	... 180
Nadir Singh v. Anpurna Kunwar	...	7 O L J 282; 2 U P L R (J. C.) 113	... 759
Nagappa Chetty v. Ah Foke	...	12 Bur L T 241	... 963
Nageshar Bakhsh Singh v. Ganesha	...	7 O L J 48; 2 U P L R (P. C.) 37; 38 M L J 521; 23 O C. 1; 18 A L J 532; 22 Bom L R 596; 28 M L T 5; 42 A 368 P. C.	... 306
Nagindas Bhukhandas v. Ghelabhai Gulabdas	...	22 Bom L R 322; 44 B 673	... 449
Nagindas Bhukhandas v. Ghelabhai Gulabdas	...	22 Bom L R 322; 44 B 673	... 450
Naina Marakayer v. Somasundaram Chettiar	...	11 L W 593	... 604
Nakul Chandra Barua v. Sasti Charan Biswas	...	24 C W N 399	... 390
Nalinakshya Dutta v. Dhan Krishna Mondal	...	*Calcutta High Court	... 282
Nanak Chand v Tek Chand	...	*Lahore High Court	... 17
Nando Lal Guha v. Corporation of Calcutta	...	24 C W N 467; 31 C L J 342; 21 Cr L J 558	... 862
Narain Das v. Baij Nath Sahai	...	7 O L J 221	... 692
Narhar v. Narain	...	*Nagpur Judicial Commissioner's Court	... 386
Nazir Hasan v. Bakhtawar	...	2 U P L R (A.) 127	... 161
Nilkanta Ghose v. Swarnamoyee	...	31 C L J 130	... 726
Nirghin Mahton v Emperor	...	21 Cr L J 500	... 660
Nitya Gopal v. Provas Chandra Mukherji	...	31 C L J 37: 24 C W N 309	... 19
Nur Muhammad v. Gauri Shankar	...	2 U P L R (L.) 116	... 1003
Nurul Hassan v. Emperor	...	21 Cr L J 509	... 669
Nurunnessa Khanum v. Muhammad Sakru	...	31 C L J 14; 24 C W N 335; 47 C 537	... 8
Official Trustee of Bengal v. Smith	...	(1920) Pat 161; 5 P L J 328; 1 P L T 434	... 262
Onkar Mal Marwari v. Secretary of State for India		2 U P L R (Pat.) 124	... 818
Packianathan, In re	...	11 L W 368; 21 Cr L J 478	... 510
Packiriya Pillay v. Muthukrishna Iyer	...	21 Cr L J 450	... 434
Pudai Ram v. Baijnath Lal	...	7 O L J 273; 23 O C 264	... 745

Padamraj v. Gopikisan	...	*Nagpur Judicial Commissioner's Court	... 129
Padmabuti Dassi v. Bonomali Seal	...	24 C W N 378	... 566
Pasupathi Mukherjee, In the goods of	...	24 C W N 326	... 431
Pentaya v. Kesheorao	...	16 N L R 68	... 249
Perry v. Official Assignee of Calcutta	...	31 C L J 209; 24 C W N 425; 47 C 254; 21 Cr L J 522	... 778
Pertap Rai v. Emperor	...	21 Cr L J 439	... 231
Peterson v. Shave	...	24 C W N 711	... 242
Pierpont Morgan v. Ramjee Ram	...	(1920) Pat 168; 5 P L J 302; 1 P L T 310	... 366
Pir Ali Kasab v. Emperor	...	21 Cr L J 453	... 437
Ponnambala Mudali v. Vasudeva Pillai	...	*Madras High Court	... 616
Ponnuswami Asari v. Palaniandi Mudali	...	11 L W 602	... 612
Ponnuswami Chetty v. Vellore Commercial Bank Ltd.	...	11 L W 28; 38 M L J 70; (1920) M W N 75; 27 M L T 81	... 384
Promotha Bhusan Deb Roy v. Narendra Bhusan Roy		*Calcutta High Court	... 932
Prosunna Chandra v. Boidya Nath	...	31 C L J 360; 24 C W N 705	... 516
Pyarelal v. Pannalal	...	*Nagpur Judicial Commissioner's Court	... 193
Radha Kishen v. Gulzari Lal	...	2 U P L R (A.) 156; 18 A L J 569	... 73
Radha Kishen v. Rattan Lal	...	*Lahore High Court	... 7
Radha Kissen Khetry v. Lukhmi Chand Jhawar	...	31 C L J 282; 24 C W N 454	... 541
Radharaman Chowdhuri v. Gopal Chandra	...	31 C L J 81; 24 C W N 316	... 122
Radhe Lal v. Bindo	...	18 A L J 609; 2 U P L R (A.) 215	... 181
Radhe Mander v. Fakir Mander	...	*Patna High Court	... 970
Raghu Singh v. Emperor	...	1 P L T 221; 21 Cr L J 496	... 592
Raghunath Chatterji v. Juthu Chattar	...	2 U P L R (Pat.) 97	... 466
Raghunath Singh v. Har Dayal Singh	...	7 O L J 278	... 751
Rahim Bakhsh v. Emperor	...	2 U P L R (A.) 124; 18 A L J 515; 21 Cr L J 451	435
Raj Mohon Dhupi v. Harendra Chandra	...	*Calcutta High Court	... 816
Raj Rani v. Ram Kishore	...	2 U P L R (B. R.) 26	... 386
Rajlakhi Debya v. Sarola Sundari Debya	...	*Calcutta High Court	... 803
Ram Baran Singh v. Emperor	...	2 U P L R (A) 140; 18 A L J 574; 21 Cr L J 447; 42 A 474	... 239
Ram Charitar Ram v. Hashim Khan	...	(1920) Pat 203; 1 P L T 323	... 810
Ram Das v. Abbas	...	*Lahore High Court	... 74
Ram Karu v. Raghbir Singh	...	*Lahore High Court	... 631
Ram Kishen v Emperor	...	1 L 169; 21 Cr L J 437; 121 P L R 1920	... 229
Ram Kissen Joydoyal v. Pooran Mull	...	31 C L J 259	... 571
Ram Kumar Sheo Chand v. Tula Ram Nathu Ram		1 P L T 277; (1920) Pat 235	... 920
Ram Lal Sen v. Bidhumukhi Dasi	...	47 C 76	... 373
Ram Suchit v. Sheo Sewak Singh	...	23 O C 50	... 629
Rama Singh v. Janak Singh	...	1 P L T 300; (1920) Pat 232; 2 U P L R (Pat.) 121	... 697
Ramachandra Deo Garu v. Chaitana Sahu	...	18 A L J 625; (1920) M W N 366; 39 M L J 68; 28 M L T 97; 12 L W 260; 44 C W N 1055; 2 U P L R (P. C.) 122 P. C.	... 559
Ramakrishna Rao v. Balakrishna Rao	...	(1920) M W N 261; 43 M 476	... 289
Ramanathan Chettiar v. Muthiah Chetty	...	38 M L J 247; 11 L W 405; 43 M 429; (1920) M W N 270	... 858
Ramathai Vadivelu Mudaliar v. Peria Manicka Mudaliar	...	24 C W N 699; 18 A L J 584; 28 M L T 3; 39 M L J 11; 12 L W 1; (1920) M W N 389; 2 U P L R (P. C.) 90; 43 M 643 P. C.	... 395
Ramchand Gurdasmal v. Gobindram	...	13 S L R 193	... 160
Ramchandra Vithal Bhat v. Gajanan Narayan Deshmukh	...	22 Bom L R 296; 44 B 352	... 349
Rameswar Singh v. Chuni Lal Shaha	...	31 C L J 385; 47 C 418	... 839
Ramhit Sahu v. Mahadeo Chaudhuri	...	1 P L T 143; 2 U P L R (Pat.) 43; (1920) Pat 129	126
Ramkrishna v. Narain	...	*Nagpur Judicial Commissioner's Court	... 845
Ramnandan Ram Kandu v. Harnandan Prasad	..	*Patna High Court	... 463
Ramyad Pande v. Genda Tewari	...	*Patna High Court	... 993
Ratipali v. Bhagwan Din	...	7 O L J 279; 2 U P L R (J. C.) 102	... 755
Rekha Ahir v. Emperor	...	1 P L T 494; 21 Cr L J 604	... 664
Rukminibai Krishnarao v. Laxmibai Narayan	...	22 Bom L R 254; 44 B 804	... 361
S. B. Das v. Muthia Chetty	...	12 Bur L T 247	... 948
Sadak Ali v Safar Ali	...	*Calcutta High Court	... 984
Sadashiv Ramchandra Datar v. Trimbak Keshav Vaze	...	22 Bom L R 266; 44 B 202	... 939

Sakharam Manchand Gujar v. Keval Padamsi Gujar	...	22 Bom L R 313; 44 B 392	... 429
Samher Singh v. Sher Singh	...	18 A L J 454; 2 U P L R (A) 158	... 183
Sandhi v. Khem Chand	...	21 Cr L J 546	... 850
Sangayya Tevan v. Pethamall	...	11 L W 377	... 513
Sant Pathak v. Partab Bahadur	...	2 U P L R (B. R) 70	... 966
Sant Ram v. Kidar Nath	...	*Lahore High Court	... 469
Sardha v. Lakhu	...	*Lahore High Court	.. 465
Sasibala Dasi v. Chandra Mohan Dutta	...	*Patna High Court	... 937
Saurendra Nath Mitra v. Mritunjay Banarji	...	5 P L J 270; (1920) Pat 227; 1 P L T 645	... 452
Sawaya Ram v. Fattu Ram	...	*Lahore High Court	... 489
Secretary of State for India v. Afzal Husain	...	7 O L J 250; 23 O C 96; 2 U P L R (J. C.) 109	714
——— v. Lown Karan Marwari	...	5 P L J 321; (1920) Pat 253; 1 P L T 451; 21 Cr L J 475	... 507
Secretary to the Commissioner of Salt and Abkari, In re	...	(1920) M W N 247; 43 M 365; 38 M L J 506	... 154
Seshagiri Rao v. Sreenivasa Rao	...	38 M L J 62; (1920) M W N 127; 43 M 313	... 260
Seturatnam Aiyar v. Venkatachala Gounden	...	(1920) M W N 61; 27 M L T 102; 11 L W 399 38 M L J 476; 22 Bom L R 578; 18 A L J 707 43 M 567 P. C.	... 117
Shah Mahdi Hasan v. Ismail Hasan	...	18 A L J 622; 2 U P L R (A.) 213	... 172
Shah Muhammad v. Fazl Ilahi	...	2 U P L R (L.) 103	... 913
Shahab-ud-din v. Vohidbux	...	14 S L R 12	... 492
Shamanandan Prasad v. Mulchand Ram	...	1 P L T 292	... 286
Shambhu Dayal v. Durga Prasad	...	23 O C 67	... 647
Sharif-un-nissa v. Masoom Ali	...	2 U P L R (A.) 57; 18 A L J 314; 42 A 347	... 380
Sheikh Azmat v. Bibi Tamzan	...	5 P L J 83; 1 P L T 108	... 490
Sheikh Mohammad v. Janki	...	2 U P L R (B. R.) 55	... 529
Sheo Ram v. Dhapan	...	*Lahore High Court	... 454
Sheoghulam Koeri v. Permeshri Lal	...	2 U P L R (B. R.) 10	... 649
Sheolal v. Chindhu	...	*Nagpur Judicial Commissioner's Court	... 962
Sheopujan Rai v. Manog Gir	...	2 U P L R (B. R.) 12	... 652
Sheotahal Singh v. Arjun Das	...	1 P L T 136; (1920) Pat 155	.. 879
Sher Mahomad v. Jethomal	...	14 S L R 1	... 484
Shwe Hman v. Ma E Mya	...	10 L B R 11'; 12 Bur L T 251	... 653
Shwe Hpan v. Ma Chit Nyein	...	10 L B R 106; 13 Bur L T 34	... 677
Singaraju Venkatasubbaramaniam v. Rajah of Venkatagiri	...	11 L W 523	... 552
Sitaram Maharaj v. Narayan	...	*Nagpur Judicial Commissioner's Court	... 268
Sohan Singh v. Muhammad Din	...	*Lahore High Court	... 162
Solai Ammal v. Jogi Chetty	...	10 L W 637; 27 M L T 53	... 675
Sonibai v. Dhanraj	...	*Nagpur Judicial Commissioner's Court	... 620
Sri Niwas v. Emperor	...	102 P L R 1920; 21 Cr L J 511	... 671
Srikishna Rai v. Ramsaran Rai	...	1 P L T 267	... 646
Srinivasa Aiyangar v. Narayana Aiyangar	...	11 L W 606; (1920) M W N 364	... 608
Sripal Singh v. Jagdish Narayan	...	7 O L J 219; 2 U P L R (J. C.) 77	... 313
Subbiah Thevan, In re	...	11 L W 561; (1920) M W N 347; 39 M L J 65; 43 M 744; 21 Cr L J 466	... 498
Suggi Lal Durji v. Mohammad Wali Ullah	...	1 P L T 299	... 756
Sukhan Rai v. Chakowri Singh	...	2 U P L R (Pat.) 119	... 752
Sundar Singh v. Emperor	...	105 P L R 1920; 21 Cr L J 507	... 667
Sundar Singh v. Phuman Singh	...	*Lahore High Court	... 591
Suraj Pal v. Utim Pandey	...	2 U P L R (Pat.) 45	... 47
Suraj Prasad Pandey v. Boucke	...	1 P L T 190; 5 P L J 371; 2 U P L R (Pat.) 105	... 379
Surat Narain Singh v. Nathuni Rai	...	*Patna High Court	... 538
Suryanarayana Rao Naidu v. Balasubramania Mudali	...	11 L W 409; 38 M L J 433; (1920) M W N 267; 43 M 635	... 524
Tahawwar Husain v. Lachhman Das	...	7 O L J 246	... 707
Tajammal Hussain v. Ali Bahadur Khan	...	*Allahabad High Court	... 946
Tani v. Rikhi Ram	...	114 P L R 1920	... 742
Tekchand v. Patto	...	*Nagpur Judicial Commissioner's Court	... 926
Thakar Das v. Narain	...	*Lahore High Court	... 644
Thakur Das v. Gowardhan	...	*Lahore High Court	... 940
Tika v. Ram Kuar	...	7 O L J 234; 23 O C 106	... 696
Tokhan Pandey v. Sivakanta Prosad Singh	...	*Patna High Court	... 743

Tralokhya Nath v. Sarat Kumar Singh	...	1 P L T 526	... 283
Trustees for the Improvement of Calcutta v. Chandra Kanta Ghosh	...	11 L W 566; 38 M L J 511; 18 A L J 521; 22 Bom L R 586; 47 C 500; 32 C L J 65; 24 C W N 851; 2 U P L R (P. C.) 98 P. C.	... 32
Tun Aung v. Ma Htee	...	12 Bur L T 263	... 935
U Pyinnya Thiba v. Po Thin	...	12 Bur L T 264	... 939
Uberoi Limited v. Kirpal Singh	...	*Lahore High Court	... 709
Ugra Mohan v. Lachhmi Prasad Chaudhuri	...	5 P L J 339	... 422
Ulfat v. Barkat-un-nisa	...	2 U P L R (B. R.) 66	... 983
Umed Ali v. Habibulla	...	31 C L J 68; 47 C 266	... 38
Umed Ali v. Municipal Committee, Jhang-Maghiana	...	*Lahore High Court	... 143
Umesh Chandra Dutt v. Bibhuti Bhushan Pal	...	47 C 67	... 334
Velu Padayachi v. Arumugam Pillai	...	38 M L J 397; 11 L W 343	... 481
Venganat Raja Vasudeva v. Naithilath Matathil	...	27 M L T 54	... 199
Vir Singh v. Harnam Singh	...	1 L 137	... 191
Virji v. Karachi Municipality	...	14 S L R 46	... 527
Vyravan Chetti v. Subramanian Chetti	...	(1920) M W N 388; 18 A L J 723; 39 M L J 37; 12 L W 143; 24 C W N 1053; 43 M 660 P. C.	642
Waman Balvant Kashikar v. Harshet Shete	...	22 Bom L R 307; 44 B 410	... 419
Widhya Ram v. Sobha Ram	...	2 U P L R (B. R.) 43	... 764
Yella Krishnamma v. Kotipalle Mali	...	38 M L J 467; 11 L W 563; (1920) M W N 380; 28 M L T 88; 43 M 712	... 530
Yeluchuri Venkatachennaya v. Emperor	...	11 L W 435; (1920) M W N 280; 38 M L J 370; 21 Cr L J 402; 43 M 511	... 50
Zia-ul-Haq v. Muhammad Ibrahim	...	*Lahore High Court	... 701

Table showing seriatim the pages of Volume LVI of Indian Cases and the corresponding pages of other Law Journals and Reports.

An asterisk (*) denotes cases not reported yet elsewhere.

Page.	Names of cases reported.	Where reported.
1	Muhammad Rustam Ali Khan v. Municipal Committee of Karnal City ...	1 P W R 1920; 13 P L R 1920; 38 M L J 455; 1 L 117; 11 L W 579; 18 A L J 46[illegible]; 22 Bom L R 563; 2 U P L R (P. C.) 87; 28 M L T 1 P. C.
4	Kalyan Singh v. Ramgolam Singh ...	31 C L J 48.
7	Radha Kishen v. Rattan Lal ...	*Lahore High Court.
8	Nurunnessa Khanum v. Muhammad Sakru ...	31 C L J 14; 24 C W N 335; 47 C [illegible]37.
11	Ahmad Yar v. Saadullah ...	*Lahore High Court.
13	Kolangereth Raman Nair v. Kolimatamullathil Mariyomma ...	(1920) M W N 332; 11 L W 513; 43 M 480.
17	Nanak Chand v. Tek Chand ...	*Lahore High Court.
19	Nitya Gopal v. Provas Chandra Mukherji ...	31 C L J 37: 24 C W N 309.
25	Maula Bakhsh v. Ram Das ...	*Lahore High Court.
26	Kamalambal v. Dorasami Chettiar ...	11 L W 179.
32	Trustees for the Improvement of Calcutta v. Chandra Kanta Ghosh ...	11 L W 566; 38 M L J 511; 18 A L J 521; 22 Bom L R 586; 47 C 500; 32 C L J 65; 24 C W N 881; 2 U P L R (P. C.) 98 P. C.
38	Umed Ali v Habibulla ...	31 C L J 69; 47 C 266.
40	Bhikhan v. Mardan Ali ...	*Patna High Court.
44	Kisanlal v. Nathu ...	16 N L R 131.
46	Hanif-un-nessa v Ram Dayal ...	2 U P L R (B. R.) 36.
47	Suraj Pal v. Utim Pandey ...	2 U P L R (Pat.) 45.
49	Manna Singh v. Emperor ...	18 A L J 375; 21 Cr L J 401.
50	Yeluchuri Venkatachennaya v. Emperor ...	11 L W 435; (1920) M W N 280; 38 M L J 370; 21 Cr L J 402; 43 M 511.
58	Jagdeo Parshad v. Emperor ...	18 A L J 442; 21 Cr L J 410.
61	Jasir Khan v. Emperor ...	21 Cr L J 413.
62	Ganpat v. Bani ...	21 Cr L J 414.
64	Mewa Lal v. Emperor ...	18 A L J 620; 21 Cr L J 416; 2 U P L R (A.) 213.
65	Jiwraj v. Sheokuwarbai ...	*Nagpur Judicial Commissioner's Court.
67	Donopudi Subramanyan v. Nune Narasimham ...	11 L W 483; (1920) M W N 293; 38 M L J 465; 43 M 644.
69	Gul Mahomed v. Faiz Mahomed ...	13 S L R 210.
69	Devi Ditta Mal v. Official Liquidator of the Amritsar Bank, Ltd. ...	*Lahore High Court.
73	Radha Kishen v. Gulzari Lal ...	2 U P L R (A.) 156; 18 A L J 569.
73	Aminudeen Sahib v. Pyari Bi ...	11 L W 370; 38 M L J 340; (1920) M W N 246; 43 M 633.
74	Ram Das v. Abbas ...	*Lahore High Court.
76	Abdullah Haroon v. Sassoon and Co. ...	13 S L R 201.
81	Jamunabai v. Juharmal ...	*Nagpur Judicial Commissioner's Court.
92	Gadadharadoss v. Suryanarayana Patnaik ...	38 M L J 342; (1920 M W N 307; 12 L W 77.
97	Bejoy Singh v. Mathuriya Debya ...	*Calcutta High Court.
112	Mojiz Fatima v. Ali Akbar ...	18 A L J 435; 42 A 414.
116	Darbari Lal v. Wasu Malik ...	*Lahore High Court.
117	Hari Singh v. Fazal ...	*Lahore High Court.
117	Seturatnam Aiyar v. Venkatachala Gounden ...	(1920) M W N 61; 27 M L T 102; 11 L W 399; 38 M L J 476; 22 Bom L R 578; 18 A L J 707; 43 M 567 P. C.

122	Radharaman Chowdhuri v. Gopal Chandra	...	31 C L J 81; 24 C W N 316.
126	Ramhit Sahu v. hadeo Chaudhuri	...	1 P L T 143; 2 U P L R (Pat.) 43; (1920) Pat 129.
127	Haricharan Mandal v Bighore Gain	...	*Calcutta High Court.
129	Padamraj v Gopikisan	...	*Nagpur Judicial Commissioner's Court.
138	Banamali Paul v Satis handra Dutt	...	*Calcutta High Court.
139	Darbari Mal v Moola Singh	...	2 U P L R (A.) 160; 18 A L J 628.
141	Govinda Chandra v Dina Nath	...	23 C W N 977; 30 C L J 512; 47 C 274.
143	Umed Ali v. Municipal Committee, Jhang-Maghiana		*Lahore High Court.
146	Arunachellam Chettiar v Madaswami	...	11 L W 238.
148	Bhagwan Das v. Tej Ram	...	*Allahabad High Court.
149	Kesari Sahai Singh v. Hitnarayan Singh	...	1 P L T 507.
150	Ramchand Gurdasmal v Gobindram	...	13 S L R 193.
154	Secretary to the Commissioner of Salt and Abkari, In re	...	(1920) M W N 247; 43 M 365; 38 M L J 506.
155	Brindaban Chander Choubey v. Gour Chandra Ray		(1920) Pat 56; 1 P L T 467.
158	Dholan Das, In the matter of	...	13 S L R 187.
161	Nazir Hasan v. Bakhtawar	...	2 U P L R (A.) 127.
162	Sohan Singh v. Muhammad Din	...	*Lahore High Court.
163	Krishna Ayyangar v. Nallaperumal Pillai	...	38 M L J 444; 18 A L J 489; 22 Bom L R 568; 28 M L T 23; 12 L W 92; (1920) M W N 419; 43 M 550; 2 U P L R (P. C.) 118 P. C.
169	Balak Ram v Kaura	...	2 U P L R (L.) 94.
170	Girindra Chandra Sen v Mahesh Ram Deb	...	*Calcutta High Court.
172	Shah Mahdi Hasan v. Ismail Hasan	..	8 A L J 622; 2 U P L R (A.) 213.
173	Datar Kaur v Ram Rattan	...	2 U P L R (L.) 96; 115 P L R 1920.
174	Mathura Prasad v. Hardeo Bakhsh Singh	...	18 A L J 518; 42 A 477.
175	Madhorao v Kesheorao	...	*Nagpur Judicial Commissioner's Court.
179	Lalta Prasad v Nasir Khan	...	*Allahabad High Court.
180	Nabin Chandra Nath v. Tirthabasi Bhowmik	...	*Calcutta High Court.
181	Radhe Lal v. Bindo	...	18 A L J 609; 2 U P L R (A.) 215.
182	Kanshi Ram v. Lal Chand	...	2 U P L R (L.) 93.
183	Samher Singh v. Sher Singh	...	18 A L J 454; 2 U P L R (A) 158.
184	Kumar Prematha Nath Malia v. Meik	...	(1920) Pat 146; 5 P L J 273; 1 P L T 760.
191	Vir Singh v. Harnam Singh	...	1 L 137.
192	Abdul Rashid v. Sizing Material Co. Ltd	...	2 U P L R (A.) 126; 18 A L J 536; 42 A 480.
193	Pyarelal v. Pannalal	...	*Nagpur Judicial Commissioner's Court.
194	Asa Debi v. Bashi Ram	...	2 U P L R (L.) 98.
199	Venganat Raja Vasudeva v. Naithilath Matathil	...	27 M L T 54.
207	Bal Kaur v Shib Das	...	1 L 151.
208	Muhammad Anwar Ali Khan v. Dara Shah Khan	..	18 A L J 624; 2 U P L R (A.) 217.
209	Lachman Chamar v. Emperor	...	18 A L J 311; 21 Cr L J 417.
210	Inder Sain v. Emperor	...	21 Cr L J 418.
226	Emperor v. Bhagelu Dom	...	21 Cr L J 434.
227	Chatter Singh Damai v. Emperor	...	3 U B R (1919) 194; 21 Cr L J 435.
229	Ram Kishen v Emperor	...	1 L 169; 21 Cr L J 437; 121 P L R 1920.
230	Bhaggi Lal v. Emperor	...	2 U P L R (A) 119; 18 A L J 512; 21 Cr L J 438; 42 A 470.
231	Pertap Rai v. Emperor	...	21 Cr L J 439.
234	Bhola Nath v. Emperor	...	21 Cr L J 442.
235	Jhari Singh v. Emperor	...	21 Cr L J 443.
239	Ram Baran Singh v. Emperor	...	2 U P L R (A) 140; 18 A L J 574; 21 Cr L J 447; 42 A 474.
240	Dassya v. Nibaran Chandra Ghosh	...	31 C L J 371; 21 Cr L J 448; 24 C W N 928.
241	Kannan Narayanan v. Muthalpuredath Ramunni	...	11 L W 328.
242	Peterson v. Shave	...	24 C W N 711.
247	Kasidanbi v. Gangulal	...	*Nagpur Judicial Commissioner's Court.
248	Aidal Singh v. Pearey Lal	...	2 U P L R (A) 157.
248	Majaraddin Kabiraj v. Majibar Rahman	...	*Calcutta High Court.
249	Pentaya v. Kesheorao	...	16 N L R 68.
251	Ghansham Das v. Public Banking and Insurance Co		1 L 154.
253	Ma Ye Baw v. Maung Shwe Hman	...	3 U B R (1919) 192.
254	Prij Lal v. Durga	...	1 L 134.
255	Ma On Me v. Ma Pya Gyi	...	3 U B R (1919) 198.
256	Hira v. Buta	...	1 L 128; 49 P W R 1920.
259	Maung Saw v. Ingraswamy	...	3 U B R (1919) 200.
260	Seshagiri Rao v. Sreenivasa Rao	...	38 M L J 62; (1920) M W N 127; 43 M 313.
262	Official Trustee of Bengal v. Smith	...	(1920) Pat 161; 5 P L J 328; 1 P L T 434.

267	Janaki Nagasawmi Iyer v. Ramasawmi Aiyengar	...	11 L W 6; (1920) M W N 264.
268	Sitaram Maharaj v. Narayan	...	*Nagpur Judicial Commissioner's Court.
270	Krishna Dayal Gir v. Lakshmi Narain	...	1 P L T 486.
272	Indar Singh v. Munshi	...	1 L 124.
274	Ganpat Lal v. Bindbasini Prashad	...	18 A L J 555; (1920) M W N 382; 12 L W 59; 39 M L J 108; 2 U P L R (P. C.) 10?; 24 C W N 954 P. C.
277	Deb Lal Jha v. Baldeo Jha	...	2 U P L R (Pat.) 100; 1 P L T 354.
282	Nalinakshya Dutta v. Dhan Krishna Mondal	...	*Calcutta High Court.
283	Tralokhya Nath v. Sarat Kumar Singh	...	1 P L T 526.
286	Darsan Singh v. Sheoraj Singh	...	2 U P L R (B. R.) 22.
286	Shamanandan Prasad v. Mulchand Ram	...	1 P L T 292.
287	Chakarpan v. Nathua	...	2 U P L R (B. R.) 22.
287	Chauras Kunwar v. Jagannath Singh	...	7 O L J 147; 2 U P L R (J. C.) 89.
289	Ramakrishna Rao v. Balakrishna Rao	...	(1920) M W N 261; 43 M 476.
291	Bharath Singh v Munnu Singh	...	7 O L J 151; 2 U P L R (J. C.) 83.
293	Girdhar Das v. Raja Sri Krishna Datt	...	18 A L J 545; 39 M L J 18 P. C.
299	Drigpal Singh v. Sukhnandan Lal	...	7 O L J 164; 2 U P L R (J. C.) 96.
302	Firm of Ramchand Manjimal v. Firm of Goverdhandas Vishindas Ratanchand	..	24 C W N 721; 18 A L J 591; 22 Bom L R 606; 39 M L J 27; 12 L W 15; 2 U P L R (P. C.) 94; (1920) M W N 407; 28 M L T 87 P. C.
304	Mohammad Ahmad v. Ansar Mohammad	...	7 O L J 158; 23 O C 62.
306	Nageshar Bakhsh Singh v. Ganesha	...	7 O L J 48; 2 U P L R (P. C.) 37; 38 M L J 521; 23 O C. 1; 18 A L J 532; 22 Bom L R 596; 28 M L T 5; 42 A 368 P. C.
313	Sripal Singh v. Jagdish Narayan	...	7 O L J 219; 2 U P L R (J. C.) 77.
316	Brij Krishna Das v. Murli Rai	...	4 P L J 703.
320	Drigpal Singh v Nakchhed Singh	...	7 O L J 171; 2 U P L R (J. C.) 99.
322	Deonandan Prasad Singh v. Janki Singh	...	5 P L J 314; 1 P L T 325; 2 U P L R (Pat.) 108; (1920) Pat 266.
325	Louis Dreyfus & Co. v. Purusottum Das Narain Das		47 C 29.
328	Banke Lal v. Swami Dayal	...	7 O L J 207; 2 U P L R (J. C.) 82; 23 O C 72.
334	Umesh Chandra Dutt v. Bibhuti Bhushan Pal	...	47 C 67.
335	Benares Hindu University v. Kishen Das	...	7 O L J 203; 2 U P L R (J. C.) 81
337	Bhuramull Banka v. Official Assignee of Bengal	...	47 C 56.
340	Balkrishna Narayan Sawant v. Jankibai Sitaram Sanzgiri	...	22 Bom L R 289; 44 B 331.
344	Brahmanand Singh v. Dund Bahadur Singh	...	1 P L T 229; (1920) Pat 245; 2 U P L R Pat.) 111.
348	Gokul Prasad v. Sitla Prasad	...	7 O L J 184.
349	Ramchandra Vithal Bhat v. Gajanan Narayan Deshmukh	...	22 Bom L R 296; 44 B 352.
354	Ganesh Prasad v. Bishwa Nath	...	7 O L J 188; 23 O C 30.
358	Ramanathan Chettiar v. Muthiah Chetty	...	38 M L J 247; 11 L W 405; 43 M 429; (1920) M W N 270.
360	Baldeoprasad v. Ghasiram	...	16 N L R 84.
361	Rukminibai Krishnarao v. Laxmibai Narayan	...	22 Bom L R 254; 44 B 304.
366	Pierpont Morgan v. Ramjee Ram	...	(1920) Pat 169; 5 P L J 302; 1 P L T 310.
373	Ram Lal Sen v. Bidhumukhi Dasi	...	47 C 76.
370	Suraj Prasad Pandey v. Boucke	...	1 P L T 190; 5 P L J 371; 2 U P L R (Pat.) 105.
380	Sharif-un-nissa v. Masoom Ali	...	2 U P L R (A.) 57; 18 A L J 314; 42 A 347.
382	Harsalsa v. Bapu	...	*Nagpur Judicial Commissioner's Court.
384	Ponnuswami Chetty v. Vellore Commercial Bank Ltd.		11 L W 28; 38 M L J 70; (1920) M W N 75; 27 M L T 81.
386	Raj Rani v. Ram Kishore	...	2 U P L R (B. R.) 26.
386	Narhar v. Narain	...	*Nagpur Judicial Commissioner's Court.
390	Nakul Chandra Barua v. Sasti Charan Biswas	...	24 C W N 399.
391	Adusumilli Kristnayya v. Adusumilli Lakshmipathi		18 A L J 601; (1920) M W N 385; 24 C W N 905; 39 M L J 7· ; 28 M L T 70; 43 M 670 P. C.
395	Ramathai Vadivelu Mudaliar v. Peria Manicka Mudaliar	...	24 C W N 699; 18 A L J 584; 28 M L T ?; 39 M L J 11; 12 L W ?; (92) M W N 38?; 2 U P L R (P. C. 80; 4 M 643 P. C.

399	Sadashiv Ramchandra Datar v. Trimbak Keshav Vaze	...	22 Bom L R 266; 44 B 202.
403	Abbas v. Misri Lal	...	5 P L J 376; 1 P L T 339.
411	Amrit Vaman v Hari Govind	...	22 Bom L R 275; 44 B 237.
417	Janki Kuer v Saudagar Ram	...	1 P L T 221; (1920) Pat 177.
419	Waman Balvant Kashikar v. Harshet Shete	...	22 Bom L R 307; 44 B 410.
422	Ugra Mohan v. Lachhmi Prasad Chaudhuri	...	5 P L J 339.
424	Jamsedji v. Husseinbhai Ahmedbhai	...	22 Bom L R 319.
426	Adhikari Kuer v. Lokenath Rai	...	2 U P L R (Pat.) 93; 1 P L T 335.
429	Sakharam Manchand Gujar v. Keval Padamsi Gujar		22 Bom L R 313; 44 B 392.
431	Pasupathi Mukherjee, In the goods of	...	24 C W N 326.
433	Mulchand, In re	...	18 S L R 212; 21 Cr. L J 449.
434	Packiriya Pillay v. Muthukrishna Iyer	...	21 Cr L J 450.
435	Rahim Bakhsh v. Emperor	...	2 U P L R (A.) 124; 18 A L J 515; 21 Cr L J 451.
436	Kaung Ki v. Emperor	...	3 U B R (1919) 197; 21 Cr L J 452.
437	Pir Ali Kasab v. Emperor	...	21 Cr L J 453.
440	Bugga v. Emperor	...	(1920) M W N 329; 2 U P L R (P. C.) 50; 24 C W N 650; 18 A L J 456; 22 Bom L R 609; 39 M L J 1; 12 L W 296; 1 L 326; 21 Cr L J 456 P. C.
446	Gokal Chand v. Emperor	...	1 L 163; 21 Cr L J 462.
449	Nagindas Bhukhandas v. Ghelabhai Gulabdas	...	22 Bom L R 322; 44 B 673.
450	Jakkamreddi Seshadri Reddy v. Subramania Iyer	...	11 L W 536; (1920) M W N 337; 38 M L J 504; 43 M 720.
450	Nagindas Bhukhandas v. Ghelabhai Gulabdas	...	22 Bom L R 322; 44 B 673.
452	Saurendra Nath Mitra v. Mritunjay Banarji	...	5 P L J 270; (1920) Pat 227; 1 P L T 645.
454	Sheo Ram v. Dhapan	...	*Lahore High Court.
455	Damu Diga v. Vakrya Nathu	...	22 Bom L R 328; 44 B. 767.
457	Chandmull Goneshmull v. Dhanraj Ganpatroy	...	24 C W N 309.
458	Karam Dad v. Hussain Bakhsh	...	*Lahore High Court.
459	Hari Raghunath v. Antaji Bhikaji	...	22 Bom L R 334; 44 B 406.
461	Gul Muhammad v. Bandu	...	*Lahore High Court.
463	Ramnandan Ram Kandu v. Harnandan Prasad	..	*Patna High Court.
465	Sardha v. Lakhu	...	*Lahore High Court
466	Raghunath Chatterji v. Juthu Chattar	...	2 U P L R (Pat.) 97.
469	Sant Ram v. Kidar Nath	...	*Lahore High Court.
475	Fakhrunnessa Begam v. District Judge of the 24-Parganas	...	24 C W N 339; 47 C 592.
476	Muthusami Iyer v Varada Vyroyan	...	(1920) M W N 289; 11 L W 352.
478	Ganesh Devi v. Darshan Singh	...	2 U P L R (L.) 100
481	Velu Padayachi v. Arumugam Pillai	...	38 M L J 397; 11 L W 343.
484	Sher Mahomad v Jethomal	...	14 S L R 1.
489	Sawaya Ram v Fattu Ram	...	*Lahore High Court.
490	Sheikh Azmat v Bibi Tamzan	...	5 P L J 83; 1 P L T 108.
492	Shahab-ud-din v Vohidbux	...	14 S L R 12.
495	Adya Singh v. Nasib Singh	...	1 P L T 227.
497	Mohamed Yusuf v. Emperor	...	21 Cr L J 463.
498	Subbiah Thevan, In re	...	11 L W 561; (1920) M W N 347; 39 M L J 65; 43 M 744; 21 Cr L J 466
500	Emperor v. Deva Kanta Jha	..	5 P L J 267; 1 P L T 297; (1920) Pat 224; 21 Cr L J 468.
501	A Vakil, In the matter of	...	18 A L J 419; 2 U P L R (A.) 130; 21 Cr L J 469; 42 A 450.
507	Secretary of State for India in Council v. Lown Karan Marwari	...	5 P L J 321; (1920) Pat 252; 1 P L T 451; 21 Cr L J 475.
510	Packianathan, In re	...	11 L W 368; 21 Cr L J 473.
511	Baldeo Koeri v. Lakshmi Narayan Kuer	...	1 P L T 627; 21 Cr L J 479.
512	Chandra Mohon Singh v Emperor	..	1 P L T 628; 21 Cr L J 480.
513	Firm Debi Din-Bhagwan Din v. Firm Sarkar and Co		2 U P L R (A.) 143.
513	Sangayya Tevan v. Pethamall	..	11 L W 377.
514	Firm of Pokerdas Kishindas v. Firm of Vishinji Gordhandas	...	14 S L R 18.
516	Prosunna Chandra v. Boidya Nath	...	31 C L J 360; 24 C W N 706.
518	Basti Ram v. Rustam Singh	...	2 U P L R (A.) 146.
519	Gokarakonda Narasimha Rao v. Gokarakonda Papanna	...	11 L W 394; 38 M L J 327; 43 M 436.

518	Bhagwati Prasad v. Mukand Sarup ...	2 U P L R (A.) 147.
524	Suryanarayana Rao Naidu v. Balasubramania Mudali ...	11 L W 409; 38 M L J 433; (1920) M W N 267; 43 M 635.
526	Brij Narain Rai v Mangla Prasad Rai ...	2 U P L R (A.) 149.
527	Virji v. Karachi Municipality ...	14 S L R 46.
529	Sheikh Mohammad v Janki ...	2 U P L R (B. R.) 55.
530	Yella Krishnamma v Kotipalle Mali ...	38 M L J 467; 11 L W 563; (1920) M W N 380; 28 M L T 88; 43 M 712.
532	Krishna Kishore De v Amar Nath Khettry ...	31 C L J 272; 24 C W N 633.
538	Surat Narain Singh v. Nathuni Rai ...	*Patna High Court.
539	Bhupati Charan Nandi v Golam Ehihar Choudhury	24 C W N 368.
549	Ramachandra Deo Garu v Chaitana Sahu ...	18 A L J 625; (1920) M W N 366; 39 M L J 68; 28 M L T 97; 12 L W 260; 44 C W N 1055; 2 U P L R (P. C.) 122 P. C.
541	Radha Kissen Khetry v Lukhmi Chand Jhawar ...	31 C L J 282; 24 C W N 454.
549	Chandan Singh v. Bhora Lal ...	2 U P L R (B. R.) 58.
550	Govind v. Dheklu ...	*Nagpur Judicial Commissioner's Court.
551	Abdul Sheikh v. Mahamad Ayab ...	24 C W N 380; 31 C L J 197.
552	Singaraju Venkatasubbaramaniam v. Rajah of Venkatagiri ...	11 L W 523.
556	Mohamed Kalimuddin v. Stewart ...	31 C L J 247; 47 C 623.
563	Ganapathiya Pillai v. Gopala Aiyer ...	*Madras High Court.
568	Padmabuti Dassi v. Bonomali Seal ...	24 C W N 378.
570	Dip Chand Rai v. Chhetru Lal ...	1 P L T 529.
571	Ram Kissen Joydoyal v. Pooran Mull ...	31 C L J 259.
576	Ghanisham Das v Mubarik ...	*Lahore High Court.
577	Lucas, J. M. v. Official Assignee of Bengal ...	24 C W N 418; 21 Cr L J 481.
582	Ajodhi v. Emperor ..	16 N L R 70; 21 Cr L J 486
586	Grande Venkatta v. Corporation of Calcutta ...	24 C W N 388; 47 C 633; 21 Cr L J 490.
591	Sundar Singh v. Phuman Singh ...	*Lahore High Court.
592	Raghu Singh v. Emperor ...	1 P L T 221; 21 Cr L J 496.
593	Kanatala Venkata Krishnama Charlu v. Kandala Perundevamma ...	*Madras High Court.
595	Bisheshar Lal v Bhuri ...	*Lahore High Court.
597	Kachu Ravji Mindhe Vanjari v. Trimbak Khemchand Gujarathi ...	22 Bom L R 383; 44 B 472.
598	Bayya Sahu v. Krishnachandra Gajapathy ...	11 L W 600.
599	Bisudhanand v. Isri Singh ...	*Patna High Court.
604	Naina Marakayer v. Somasundaram Chettiar ...	11 L W 593.
606	Kripasindhu v Nandu Charan ...	1 P L T 206.
608	Srinivasa Aiyangar v. Narayana Aiyangar ...	11 L W 606; (1920) M W N 364.
610	Jagamohini Dasi v Shiba Gopal Banerjee ...	*Calcutta High Court.
612	Ponnuswami Asari v. Palaniandi Mudali ...	11 L W 602.
615	Kripa Sindhu Panigrahi v Nanda Charan Panipatu	(1920) Pat 209.
616	Ponnambala Mudali v. Vasudeva Pillai ...	*Madras High Court.
620	Sonibai v Dhanraj ...	*Nagpur Judicial Commissioner's Court.
629	Ram Suchit v. Sheo Sewak Singh ...	23 O C 50.
631	Ram Karu v. Raghbir Singh ...	*Lahore High Court.
632	Hurnandrai Fulchand v. Pragdas Budhsen ...	22 Bom L R 343.
638	Anant Ram v Bharat National Bank, Ltd., Delhi ...	*Lahore High Court.
641	Jawad Ali Shah v. Kamlapat Rai ...	18 A L J 514.
642	Vyravan Chetti v. Subramanian Chetti ...	(1920) M W N 388; 18 A L J 728; 39 M L J 37; 12 L W 143; 24 C W N 1053; 43 M 660 P. C.
644	Thakar Das v Narain ...	*Lahore High Court.
645	Hem Kuar v Sewa Ram ...	2 U P L R (B. R.) 15.
646	Srikishna Rai v. Ramsaran Rai ...	1 P L T 267.
647	Shambhu Dayal v. Durga Prasad ...	23 O C 67.
649	Lachmibati Kumari v. Nandkumar Singh ...	1 P L T 269; 5 P L J 400.
649	Sheoghulam Koeri v. Permeshri Lal ...	2 U P L R (B. R.) 10.
651	Fitha v Devkee ...	*Lahore High Court.
652	Sheopujan Rai v Manog Gir ...	2 U P L R (B. R.) 12.
653	Shwe Hman v. Ma E Mya ...	10 L B R 111; 12 Bur L T 251
656	Hardutt Singh v. Jaikaran Singh ...	2 U P L R (B. R.) 13.
657	Jogesh Chandra v. Emperor ...	24 C W N 343; 21 Cr L J 497.
660	Nirghin Mahton v Emperor ...	21 Cr L J 500.

663	Mahomed Hosain v. Ma Pwa Hnit	...	10 L B R 104; 13 Bur L T 43; 21 Cr L J 503.
664	Rekha Ahir v. Emperor	...	1 P L T 494; 21 Cr L J 504.
667	Sundar Singh v. Emperor	...	105 P L R 1920; 21 Cr L J 507.
669	Nurul Hassan v. Emperor	...	21 Cr L J 509.
671	Sri Niwas v. Emperor	...	102 P L R 1920; 21 Cr L J 511.
671	Abdul Karim v. Emperor	...	103 P L R 1920; 21 Cr L J 511.
672	Moula v. Emperor	...	104 P L R 1920; 21 Cr L J 512.
673	Ganpat v. Lalamiya	...	16 N L R 59 P. C.
675	Solai Ammal v. Jogi Chetty	...	10 L W 637; 27 M L T 53.
677	Mahabir Prasad Singh v. Manki	...	2 U P L R (B. R.) 14.
677	Shwe Hpan v. Ma Chit Nyein	...	10 L B R 106; 13 Bur L T 34.
678	Braja Sundar Das v. Jagannath Dhal	...	1 P L T 256; (1920) Pat 181.
681	Le Maung v. Ma Kwe	...	10 L B R 107; 13 Bur L T 3.
683	Macintyre, In the goods of	...	17 A L J 247; 41 A 248.
683	Manghirmal v Jethanand	...	13 S L R 56.
691	Athar Husain v. Idu Shah	...	7 O L J 271; 23 O C 85; 2 U P L R (J. C.) 105.
692	Narain Das v. Baij Nath Sahai	...	7 O L J 231.
693	Madhusudan Koer v. Badridas	...	31 C L J 93.
696	Tika v Ram Kuar	...	7 O L J 234; 23 O C 106.
697	Rama Singh v. Janak Singh	...	1 P L T 300; (1920) Pat 232; 2 U P L R (Pat.) 121.
699	Hafizuddin v. Mubarak Ali	...	7 O L J 242.
701	Zia-ul-Haq v. Muhammad Ibrahim	...	*Lahore High Court.
707	Tahawwar Husain v. Lachhman Das	...	7 O L J 246.
709	Uberoi Limited v Kirpal Singh	...	*Lahore High Court.
714	Secretary of State for India v. Afzal Husain	...	7 O L J 250; 23 O C 96; 2 U P L R (J. C.) 109.
717	Madho Rao v Ghulam Mohiuddin	...	15 N L R 134 P. C.
720	Janki Saran v. Widow of Mohammad Sadiq	...	7 O L J 258; 2 U P L R (J. C.) 106.
723	Idris v. Mrs Jane Skinner	...	82 P R 1919; 45 P W R 1919 P. C.
726	Nilkanta Ghose v. Swarnamoyee	...	31 C L J 130.
728	Diwan v Jagta	...	1 L 206; 113 P L R 1920.
730	Ambalavana Pandara Sannidhi Avergal v. Meenakshi Sundareswaral Devastanam of Madura	...	18 A L J 594; 2 U P L R (P. C.) 95; 37 M L J 50; 28 M L T 82; 12 L W 212; 43 M 665 P. C.
733	Harnaman v Dasondhi	...	1 L 210; 112 P L R 1920.
734	Chiranjilal Ramlal v Tulsiram Jankidass	...	31 C L J 134; 47 C 568.
740	Chhogalal Meghraj v. Kanhayalal Tarachand	...	*Nagpur Judicial Commissioner's Court.
742	Tani v Rikhi Ram	...	114 P L R 1920.
743	Tokhan Pandey v. Sivakanta Prosad Singh	...	*Patna High Court.
744	Gujar Shah v. Barkat Ali Shah	...	1 L 213.
745	Pudai Ram v. Baijnath Lal	...	7 O L J 273; 23 O C 264.
748	Madhabi Sundari Dasya v. Syama Charan Biswas	...	31 C L J 202.
749	Jhiblia v Dawlatya	...	*Nagpur Judicial Commissioner's Court.
751	Raghunath Singh v Har Dayal Singh	...	7 O L J 278.
752	Sukhan Rai v Chakowri Singh	...	2 U P L R (Pat.) 119.
753	Annada Mohan Roy v Atul Chandra Chakrabarti	...	24 C W N 465.
755	Ratipali v. Bhagwan Din	...	7 O L J 279; 2 U P L R (J. C.) 102.
756	Suggi Lal Durji v Mohammad Wali Ullah	...	1 P L T 299.
758	Hem Chandra v. Secretary of State for India	...	31 C L J 204.
759	Nadir Singh v Anpurna Kunwar	...	7 O L J 282; 2 U P L R (J. C.) 113.
761	Haridas Chatterji v. Gahenabai	...	*Nagpur Judicial Commissioner's Court.
762	Mohini Mohan Misser v. Gour Chandra Rai	...	5 P L J 397; 1 P L T 390; 2 U P L R (Pat.) 123.
764	Ma Thu Daw v. Ma Ngwe Nu	...	*Lower Burma Chief Court.
764	Widhya Ram v. Sobha Ram	...	2 U P L R (B. R.) 43.
766	Manna Lal v. Karu Singh	...	1 P L T 6 P. C.
769	Bhawal Khan v. Emperor	...	13 S L R 215; 21 Cr L J 513.
771	Emperor v. Sundar	...	2 U P L R (A.) 115; 21 Cr L J 515.
774	Chanan Singh v. Emperor	..	1 L 218; 21 Cr L J 518; 108 P L R 1920.
775	Gowkaran Lal v. Sarju Saw	...	1 P L T 200; 21 Cr L J 519.
777	Nabi Bakhsh v. Emperor	...	1 L 216; 21 Cr L J 521; 109 P L R 1920.
778	Perry v. Official Assignee of Calcutta	...	31 C L J 209; 24 C W N 425; 47 C 254; 21 Cr L J 522.
801	Badami v. Karori	...	2 U P L R (B. R.) 48.
801	Ilim Molla v. Manindra Mohan Poddar	...	31 C L J 382.
803	Rajlakhi Debya v. Sarola Sundari Debya	...	*Calcutta High Court.

805	Mathura Rai v. Mandal Das	...	1 P L T 392.
806	Munwarali v. Taiyabali	...	*Nagpur Judicial Commissioner's Court.
807	Baldeo Singh v Sheoraj Kueri	...	2 U P L R (Pat.) 135.
8 9	Kashi Rao v Mohamad Alli	...	*Nagpur Judicial Commissioner's Court.
810	Ram Charitar Ram v Hashim Khan	...	1920) Pat 203: 1 P L T 323.
811	Manulla Kolu v. Prasanna Kumar Sarkar	...	*Calcutta High Court.
813	Onkar Mal Marwari v Secretary of State for India		2 U P L R (Pat.) 124.
816	Raj Mohon Dhupi v. Harendra Chandra	...	*Calcutta High Court.
818	Abdul Baqi v Kunja Behari	...	*Patna High Court.
819	Gajadhar v Beni Prasad	...	2 U P L R (B. R) 44.
821	Muhammad Ali v. Chairman, Municipality of Behar		1 P L T 591.
822	Jainarain Dhusar v. Ram Kishore	...	*Nagpur Judicial Commissioner's Court.
825	Jai Narain v. Bajrang Bahadur Singh	...	7 O L J 350; 2 U P L R (J. C.) 115.
828	Balmukund Rina v. Gopiram Bhotica	...	31 C L J 341.
834	Bishun Dutta v Ramji Prosad	...	2 U P L R (Pat.) 136.
839	Rameswar Singh v. Chuni Lal Shaha	...	31 C L J 385; 47 C 418.
841	Manki Koer v. Manrakhan Kuer	...	2 U P L R (Pat.) 116.
844	Anwar Bewa v Surendra Nath	...	*Calcutta High Court.
845	Ramkrishna v. Narain	...	*Nagpur Judicial Commissioner's Court.
848	Faqir Chand v. Dullah	...	*Lahore High Court.
849	Hathim Mondal v. Emperor	...	31 C L J 310; 24 C W N 619, 21 Cr L J 545.
850	Sandhi v. Khem Chand	...	21 Cr L J 546
851	Emperor v. Akub Ali	...	31 C L J 122 21 Cr L J 547.
853	Biran Rai v. Emperor	...	(1920 Pat 205; 1 P L T 337; 21 Cr L J 549.
856	Mahboob v. Emperor	...	2 U P L R (A) 113; 21 Cr L J 552.
858	Mir Mouze Ali v Emperor	...	31 C L J 305; 21 Cr L J 554.
861	Emperor v. Jagat Singh	...	21 Cr L J 557.
862	Nando Lal Guha v. Corporation of Calcutta	...	24 C W N 437; 31 C L J 347; 21 Cr L J 558.
864	Mohan v Emperor	...	21 Cr L J 560.
865	Karm Ilahi v. Hakim Shah	...	*Lahore High Court.
867	Jag Sahu v. Radha Kishun	...	1 P L T 209; 5 P L J 287; (1920) Pat 211; 2 U P L R Pat) 127.
874	Ila-ud-din v. Amir Ullah	...	2 U P L R (L.) 105.
877	Mata Din v. Madho Charan	...	*Oudh Judicial Commissioner's Court.
878	Jhanda Singh v. Lachhmi	...	22 P W R 1920; 68 P L R 1920; 1 L 344.
879	Sheotahal Singh v Arjun Das	...	1 P L T 136; (1920) Pat 155.
884	Luchhman Dass v. Devi Dial	...	19 P W R 1920; 100 P L R 1920.
885	Gobindram v. Khushaldas	...	13 S L R 100.
913	Shah Muhammad v. Fazl Ilahi	...	2 U P L R (L.) 103.
914	Kaladan Suratee Bazar Co. Ltd, In re	...	*Lower Burma Chief Court.
918	Muhammad Shah v. Abdullah Shah	...	*Lahore High Court.
920	Ram Kumar Sheo Chand v. Tula Ram Nathu Ram		1 P L T 277; (1920) Pat 235.
923	Ibrahim Ali Khan v. Mubarak Begam	...	20 P W R 1920; 1 L 229; 82 P L R 1920.
926	Tekchand v. Patto	...	*Nagpur Judicial Commissioner's Court.
927	Fatta v Sikandar	...	2 U P L R (L.) 112.
929	Gajibai v. Nilkanth	...	*Nagpur Judicial Commissioner's Court.
930	Ismail v. Ezekiel	...	12 Bur L T 249.
931	Khushal Singh v. Kanda	...	2 U P L R (L) 110.
932	Promotha Bhusan Deb Roy v. Narendra Bhusan Roy		*Calcutta High Court.
935	Tun Aung v. Ma Htee	...	12 Bur L T 263.
936	Firm Katasi Singh-Kahan Singh v. Firm Daulat Ram-Kirpa Ram	...	*Lahore High Court.
937	Sasibala Dasi v. Chandra Mohan Dutta	...	*Patna High Court.
939	U Pyinnya Thiha v. Po Thin	...	12 Bur L T 264.
940	Thakur Das v. Gowardhan	...	*Lahore High Court.
941	Jaharmal-Debi Dutta v. Birinchi Bhusan	...	*Calcutta High Court.
944	Aso v. Harnami	...	2 U P L R (L.) 114.
945	Chetty Firm S. V. S. T. v. Po Mya	...	12 Bur L T 261.
946	Tajammal Hussain v. Ali Bahadur Khan	...	*Allahabad High Court.
947	Gurbachan Singh v. Ralla Ram	...	*Lahore High Court.
948	S. B. Das v. Muthia Chetty	...	12 Bur L T 247.
949	Kamaleshwari Prosad Singh v. Jagar Nath Sahai	...	*Patna High Court.
951	Muthia Chetty v. Thevar	..	12 Bur L T 234.
952	Kasturi v. Lote Major	...	*Nagpur Judicial Commissioner's Court
954	Maung Sein v. U Po Ko	...	12 Bur L T 236.

957	Jainab Bibi v. Hyderally Saheb	...	38 M L J 532; 28 M L T 23; (1920) M W N 360; 12 L W 64; 43 M 609 F. B.
960	Chetty M. M. P L. K v. Supaya Maistry	...	12 Bur L T 239.
962	Balkrishna Sahai v. Sham Sundar Sahay	...	*Patna High Court.
962	Sheolal v. Chindhu	...	*Nagpur Judicial Commissioner's Court.
963	Nagappa Chetty v. Ah Foke	...	12 Bur L T 241.
966	Sant Pathak v. Partab Bahadur	...	2 U P L R (B. R) 70.
966	Harnam Singh v. Bhola Singh	...	2 U P L R (L.) 108.
968	Ko Pu v. Ma Thein Yin	...	12 Bur L T 225.
970	Radhe Mander v. Fakir Mander	...	*Patna High Court.
971	Gobind Sahai v. Ram Chand	...	*Lahore High Court.
972	Ma Dwe v. Ma Tin Lun	...	12 Bur L T 228.
976	Arumugam Pillay v. Krishnasawami Naidu	...	12 L W 41; 39 M L J 222; 43 M 725.
977	Gauri Shankar v. Mewa	...	2 U P L R (B. R.) 69.
978	Ah Choy v. Trading Company	...	*Lower Burma Chief Court.
980	Kishori Saran v. Rameshwar	...	2 U P L R B. R.) 67.
981	Ambica Charan Kheskel v. Esmail	...	*Calcutta High Court.
982	Jnardan Missir v. Brijnandan Singh	...	*Patna High Court.
983	Ulfat v. Barkat-un-nisa	...	2 U P L R (B. R.) 66.
983	Gaya Singh v. Name Singh	...	5 P L J 263.
984	Sadak Ali v Safar Ali	...	*Calcutta High Court.
986	Anup Singh v. Fateh Chand	...	2 U P L R (A.) 187 & 258; 18 A L J 789 F. B.
993	Ramyad Pande v. Genda Tewari	...	*Patna High Court.
996	Gulabdas v. Dharmin Bai	...	*Nagpur Judicial Commissioner's Court.
1001	Jitendra Kumar Pal v. Mukshoda Charan Das	...	*Calcutta High Court.
1003	Nur Muhammad v. Gauri Shankar	...	2 U P L R (L.) 116.
1004	Amjad Hussain v. Shyam Lal	...	*Patna High Court.
1006	Balwant Singh v. Budh Singh	...	18 A L J 642.
1007	Bejoy Kumar v. Satish Chandra	...	24 C W N 444.

TABLE

OF

Cases Cited in Volume LVI of Indian Cases, 1920.

Page.

A

Abaji v. Laxman, 30 B 426; 8 Bom L R 553 ... 476
Abdul Goffar v. Sona Bibi, 14 Ind Cas 95 ... 462
Abdul Hakim v. Muhammad Kamil, 2 S D 599 at p 612 ... 494
Abdul Karim Abu Ahmed Khan Ghazanavi v. Allahabad Bank, Limited, 41 Ind Cas 598; 21 C W N 877; 26 C L J 49; 44 C 929 256 837
Abdul Latif Sahib v. Bathula Bibi Ammal, 23 Ind Cas 530; 15 M L T 338; (1914) M W N 346 ... 289
Abdul Majid v. Jawahir Lal, 23 Ind Cas 649; 36 A 350; 12 A L J 624; 16 Bom L R 395; 18 C W N 963; 19 C L J 626; 27 M L J 17; (1914) M W N 485; 16 M L T 44; 1 L W 483 (P. C.) 565
Abdul Majid v. Ksherode Chandra Pal, 29 Ind Cas 843; 19 C W N 809; 42 C 690 ... 1007
Abdul Wahid v. Manager, Encumbered Estates, 19 Ind Cas 838; 6 S L R 250 ... 527
Abhiram Goswami v. Shyama Charan Nandi, 4 Ind Cas 449, 36 C 1003; 10 C L J 281; 6 A L J 857; 11 Bom L R 1234; 19 M L J 530; 14 C W N 1 36 I A 148 (P. C.) ... 15
Abhoya Charan Ghosh v. Raj Kumar Ghosh, 42 Ind Cas 506 ... 603
Abi Dhunimsa Bibi Ammal v Muhammad Fathiudini, 44 Ind Cas 293; 41 M 1076; 23 M L T 78; (1918) M W M 246; 35 M L J 468 ... 10
Abouloff v. Oppenheimer & Co, (1882) 10 Q B D 295; 52 L J Q B 1; 47 L T 325; 31 W R 57 607, 616
Abu Bakar Abdul Rahiman & Co. v. Rambux, 40 Ind Cas 393; 13 N L R 81 ... 922
Achutaramaraju v. Subbaraju, 25 M 7; 11 M L J 370 ... 476
Administrator-General of Bengal v. Premlal Mullick, 22 I A 107; 22 C 788 (P. C.); 6 Sar P C J 603; 11 Ind Dec (N. s.) 522 ... 165
Adur Desikachari v. Emperor, 28 Ind Cas 527; 28 M L J 307; (1915) M W N 224; 16 Cr L J 308; 39 M 539 ... 54
Afzal-un-nisa v. Abdul Karim, 50 Ind Cas 749; 46 I A 131; 17 A L J 603; 36 M L J 580; 26 P W R 1919; 1 U P L R (P. C.) 47 & 71; 26 M L T 55; 81 P R 1919; 23 C W N 966; (1919) M W N 494; 30 C L J 152; 21 Bom L R 891; 65 P L R 1919; 47 C 1; 11 L W 176 (P. C.) ... 119
Agar Ellis, In re; Agar Ellis v. Lascelles, (1883) 24 Ch D 317; 53 L J Ch 10; 50 L T 161; 32 W R 1 ... 243
Ahed Khondkar v. Mohendra Lal De, 29 Ind Cas 282; 42 C 830; 19 C W N 804 ... 736

Page.

A—contd.

Ahilyabai v. Kashinath, 5 Bom L R 802 ... 295
Ahmad Ali Shah v. Mir Shah, 35 P R 1898 ... 462
Ahmad Wali Khan v. Shamsh-ul-Jahan Begam, 28 A 482 at p 496; 10 C W N 626; 3 S L J 260; 3 C L J 481; 1 M L T 143; 8 Bom L R 397; 16 M L J 269; 33 I A 81; 8 Sar P C J 918 ... 685
Ahmad-ud-Din Tamizuddin v. Amiruddin, 44 Ind Cas 216 ... 170
Ahmed Moola Dawood v. Fatima Beebee, 26 Ind Cas 505; 8 Bur L T 59; 8 L B R 99 ... 969
Akshay Chandra Bhattacharya v. Hari Das Goswami, 35 C 721; 12 C W N 511 ... 125
Aktowli v. Tarak Nath Ghose, 17 Ind Cas 266; 16 C L J 328; 17 C W N 774 ... 38
Ali Asghar v. Collector of Bulandshahr, 40 Ind Cas 753; 15 A L J 597; 39 A 574 ... 825
Alimahmad v. Vadilal Devchand, 53 Ind Cas 197; 21 Bom L R 849; 43 B 890 ... 451
Amarendra Nath Bose v. Shuradhany Dasi, 5 Ind Cas 73; 14 C W N 458 ... 171
Ambabai v. Govind, 23 B 257; 12 Ind Dec (N s) 171 ... 81
Ambalavana Pandara Sannadhi v. Advocate-General of Madras, 55 Ind Cas 546; 36 M L J 201; 11 L W 219; 27 M L T 100 ... 450
Ambika Prasad Singh v. Whitwell, 6 C L J 111 ... 965
Ameer Khan, In the matter of, 6 B L R 392 and 459 at p 477 ... 445
Amir Hassan Khan v. Sheo Bakhsh Singh, 11 C 6; 11 I A 237; 4 Sar P C J 559; Rafique & Jackson's P C No. 83; 5 Ind Dec (N. s) 710 ... 848
Amolak Ram v. Lachmi Narain, 19 A 174; A W N (1897) 9; 9 Ind Dec (N. s.) 115 ... 285
Amrit Mondal v. Emperor, 37 Ind Cas 159; 1 P L J 399; 18 Cr L J 95; (1917) Pat 30; 3 P L W 70 ... 665
Amrit Narayan Singh v. Gaya Singh, 44 Ind Cas 409; 45 C 590; 23 M L T 142; 22 C W N 409; 27 C L J 296; 34 M L J 298; 4 P L W 221; 16 A L J 265; (1918) M W N 506; 7 L W 581; 20 Bom L R 546; 45 I A 35 (P. C.) ... 595
Amrito Lal Dutt v. Surnomoye Dasi, 27 C 996; 27 I A 128; 4 C W N 549; 2 Bom L R 446; 7 Sar P C J 633; 14 Ind Dec (N. s.) 652 ... 377
Amrito Lall Dutt v. Surnomoni Dasi, 25 C 662; 2 C W N 389 13 Ind Dec (N s.) 435 ... 378
Amrutam Venkatappa v. Vaivilala Jallaya, 51 Ind Cas 11; 42 M 615; 9 L W 598; 26 M L T 46; (1919) M W N 355; 37 M L J 98 (F. B.) ... 396

Page.

A—contd.

Anand Ram Marwari v. Dhanpat Singh, 38 Ind Cas 37; 1 P L J 563; 2 P L W 341 ... 43, 805
Ananda Chandra Roy v. Abdullah Hossein Chowdhury, 20 Ind Cas 679; 41 C 148 ... 270
Anant Ram v. Collector of Etah, 44 Ind Cas 290; 16 A L J 245 34 M L J 291; 7 L W 323; 4 P L W 226; 23 M L T 228; 22 C W N 484; 27 C L J 363; 20 Bom L R 524; 40 A 171; (1918) M W N 446 (P. C.) ... 928
Anant Ram v. Takat Singh, 4 C P L R 57 ... 197
Anant Ram Chandra Lotlikar, In re, 11 B 438; 6 Ind Dec (N. s) 288 ... 591
Anant Ramrav v. Gopal Balwant, 19 B 269; 10 Ind Dec N. s.) 182 ... 609
Anantha Tirtha Chariar v. Nagamuthu Ambalagaren, 4 M 200; 1 Ind Dec (N s.) 974 ... 364
Anderson v Juggodumba Dabi, 6 C L R 282 ... 2
Andrews v. Mitchell, (1905) A C 78; 74 L J K B 333; 91 L T 537 ... 563
Angammal v. Aslami Sahib, 21 Ind Cas 583; 38 M 710 at p 721; 14 M L T 418; (1913) M W N 974; 25 M L J 625 ... 960
Angulia & Co. v. Sassoon & Co., 13 Ind Cas 705; 39 C 565 at p 580; 16 C W N 593 ... 648
Anivilla Sundaramayya v. Cherla Sitamma, 10 Ind Cas 56; 21 M L J 695; 9 M L T 469; (1911) 1 M W N 422; 35 M 628 ... 998
Annamalai Chetty v. Velyuddu Nadar, 32 Ind Cas 869; 39 M 129; 3 L W 34; 19 M L T 62; 30 M L J 51; (1916) 1 M W N 93 ... 385
Annie Besant v. Advocate General of Madras, 52 Ind Cas 209 45 I A 176; 37 M L J 139; 20 Cr L J 593; 17 A L J 925; 23 C W N 956; 21 Bom L R 867; (1919) M W N 555 10 L W 451; 26 M L T 409; 1 U P L R (P. C.) 74; (1919) 35 T L R 500; 20 Cr L J 593; 43 M 146 (P C.) ... 445
Annie Besant v. Narayaniah, 24 Ind Cas 290; 41 I A 3 4 at p 320; 27 M L J 30; 18 C W N 1089; 1 L W 520; (1914) M W N 585; 16 M L T 165; 20 C L J 253; 16 Bom L R 625; 12 A L J 1155; 38 M 807 (A. C) ... 243
Anu Sheikh v. Jitu Sheikh, 7 Ind Cas 54; 37 C 812; 11 Cr L J 440 ... 53
Appan Patrachariar v. Srinivasachariar, 40 Ind Cas 118; 40 M 1122; 32 M L J 364; 5 L W 544; (1917) M W N 355; 21 M L T 408 ... 998
Appavu Rowther v. Seeni Rowther, 42 Ind Cas 514; 41 M 115; 33 M L J 177; 6 L W 243 ... 152
Appleby v. Johnson, (1874) 9 C P 158 ... 30
Ardesir Bejonji Surti v. Syed Sirdar Ali Khan, 4 Ind Cas 804; 33 B 610; 10 Bom L R 1146 ... 147
Arkwright v. Gell; (1839) 5 M & W 203; 2 H & H 17; 8 L J Ex 201; 151 E R 87; 52 R R 671 ... 971
Arnhold Karberg & Co v. Blythe Green Jourdain & Co., (1916) 21 Com Cas 174; 1 K B 495; 114 L T 152; 13 Asp M C 235; 60 S J 156; 32 T L R 186 ... 979
Arpasi Bapuji v. Keshav Shamrav, 15 B 13; 8 Ind Dec (N. s.) 9 ... 414
Arumugham Chetty v. Muthu Koundan, 52 Ind Cas 525; 42 M 711; 9 L W 565; (1919) M W N 409; 37 M L J 166; 26 M L T 96 ... 526

Page.

A—concld.

Arunachalam Chetty v. Rangaswamy Pillai, 28 Ind Cas 79; 38 M 922; 28 M L J 118; 17 M L T 154; (1915) M W N 118 ... 361, 551
Arunagiri Mudali v. Ranganayaki Ammal, 21 M 40; 7 Ind Dec (N. s.) 384 ... 953 Asharfi Kunwar v. Rup Chand, 20 A 197; 5 A L J 200; A W N 1908) 79 ... 83
Ashton v. Stock, (1877) 6 Ch D 719; 25 W R 862 ... 189
Askaran Baid v. Bhola Nath, 48 Ind Cas 105; 21 O C 217 ... 922
Aslatt v. Corporation of Southampton, (1881) 16 Ch D 143; 50 L J Ch 31; 43 L T 464; 29 W R 117; 45 J P 111 ... 576
Att. Gen. v. Ellis, (1895) 2 Q B 466; 64 L J Q B 813; 15 R 584; 73 L T 190 & 350; 44 W R 13; 59 J P 774 ... 10
Atul Chandra Sen v. Raja Peary Mohan Mookerjee, 33 Ind Cas 842; 20 C W N 669 ... 208
Aulia Khan v. Kanshi Ram, 17 Ind Cas 677; 45 P R 1913; 25 P W R 1913; 145 P L R 1913 ... 576
Awadh Behari Lal v. Emperor, 50 Ind Cas 162; 20 Cr L J 274 ... 855
Ayennennessa Bibi v Sheikh Isuf, 14 Ind Cas 722; 16 C W N 849 ... 142
Ayya Pattar v. Attupurath Manakkal, 52 Ind Cas 948; 1919) M W N 805 ... 481
Aziz Khan v. Duni Chand, 48 Ind Cas 933; 23 C W N 130; 101 P R 1918; 165 P W R 1918 (P. C.) ... 1018
Azmat Ali v. Sitla Bux Pal, 16 Ind Cas 108; 9 A L J 766 ... 521

B

Babu Ram Roy v. Mahendra Nath Samanta, 8 C W N 454 ... 128
Babu Raman Das v. Purshottam Singh, S D No. 14 of 1912 ... 981
Bachoo v. Mankorebai, 23 B 51; 6 Bom L R 268 ... 998
Badi Bibi Sahibal v. Sami Pillai, 18 M 257 at p 261; 5 Ind Dec (N. s.) 519 ... 655
Badri Das v. Inayat Khan, 22 A 401; A W N (1900) 132; 9 Ind Dec N s.) 1305 ... 140
Bagha Mowar v. Ram Lukhan Misser, 41 Ind Cas 804 27 C L J 107 ... 413
Bai Diwali v. Patel Bechardas, 26 B 445; 4 Bom L R 102 ... 938
Baijnath Singh v. Paltu, 30 A 125; A W N (1908) 35; 5 A L J 93 ... 531
Baiju Ahir v. Lachhimia Koer, 2 U D 385 ... 650
Bakhir Mohammad v. Doorga Churn Shaha, 10 C 39; 13 C L R 200; 5 Ind Dec (N. s.) 27 ... 69
Bal Kishan Lal v. Topeswar Singh, 14 Ind Cas 845; 15 C L J 445; 17 C W N 219 ... 275
Bal Kishen Das v. W F. Legge, 22 A 149; 27 I A 58; 4 C W N 158; 2 Bom L R 523; 7 Sar P C J 601; 9 Ind Dec (N. s) 1130 476, 752
Balaji Rao v. Harirama Chetty, 32 Ind Cas 39 564
Balaram Kunbi v. Saduba Mali, 17 C P L R 178 ... 809
Baldeodas v. Manekchand, 3 Bom L R 144 ... 135
Baleswar Bagarti v. Bhagirathi Das, 7 C L J 563; 35 C 701; 12 C W N 657 ... 136

B—contd.

Page.

Balkishen Das v. Ram Narain Sahu, 30 I A 139; 30 C 738; 7 C W N 578; 5 Bom L R 461; 8 Sar P C J 489 ... 294
Balla Mal v. Ahad Shah, 48 Ind Cas 1; 124 P R 1918; 35 M L J 614; 16 A L J 905; 23 C W N 233; 25 M L T 55; 180 P W R 1918; 29 C L J 165; 1 U P L R (P. C.) 25; 21 Bom L R 558 (P. C.) ... 76
Baloram Gogai v. Chintaram, 9 C W N 549; 2 Cr L J 269 ... 63
Balvant Ganesh v. Nana Chintanan, 18 B 209; 9 Ind Dec (N. s.) 647 ... 571
Balvant Ramchandra v. Secretary of State, 29 B 480 at p 486; 7 Bom L R 497 ... 415
Bamundoss Mookerjee v. Tarinee, 7 M I A 169 (P. C.); 1 Sar P C J 616; 19 E R 273 ... 278
Bandi Bibi v. Musharraf, 42 Ind Cas 199; 4 O L J 509 ... 697
Bank of Australasia v. Nias, (1851) 16 Q B 717; 20 L J Q B 284; 15 Jur 967; 117 E R 1055; 83 R R 698 ... 616
Banke Behari v. Ram Bahadur, 44 Ind Cas 891; (1918) Pat 223; 4 P L W 281; 4 P L J 191 ... 649
Bansi Lal v. Durga Prasad, 2 Ind Cas 645; 9 C L J 429 ... 536
Bansidhar v. Sant Lal, 10 A 133; A W N (1888) 35; 6 Ind Dec (N. s.) 90 ... 490
Banu Mal v. Pars Ram, 43 Ind Cas 656; 35 P W R 1918; 30 P R 1918; 47 P L R 1918 ... 349
Banwari Lal v. Mahesh, 49 Ind Cas 540; 21 O C 228 at p 232; 6 O L J 168; 41 A 63; 23 C W N 577; (1919) M W N 490; 45 I A 284 (P. C.) ... 344
Barber Maran v. Ramana Goundan, 20 M 461; 7 M L J 269; 7 Ind Dec (N. s.) 327 ... 410
Barhamdeo Prasad v. Tara Chand, 2 Ind Cas 961; 41 C 654 at p 655; 15 M L T 62; (1919) M W N 38; 12 A L J 82; 18 C W N 345; 19 C L J 132; 16 Bom L R 89, 26 M L J 243; 41 I A 45 (P. C.) ... 945
Barkat Ali v. Basant Nunia, 39 Ind Cas 356; 21 C W N 175 ... 42
Barnes v. Addy, (1874) 9 Ch App 244; 43 L J Ch 513; 30 L T 4; 22 W R 505 ... 358
Barney, In re, Barney v. Barney, (1892) 2 Ch D 265; 61 L J Ch 585; 67 L T 23; 40 W R 637 ... 358
Baroda Kant Karmakar v. Srimath Sil, 18 Ind Cas 211 ... 729
Baroja Rakhal Mojumdar v. Empress, 5 C W N 330 ... 860
Barraclough v. Johnson, (1838) 8 A & E 99; 3 N & P 233; 1 W W & H 162; 7 L J Q B 172; 2 Jur 839 ... 2
Basdeo v. John Smidt, 22 A 55; A W N (1899) 172; 9 Ind Dec (N s) 1068 ... 649
Baseemati Debi v. Tarit Basami Dassi, 44 Ind Cas 416; 31 C L J 354 ... 517
Basovanagudi Narayana Kamathy v. Lingappa Shetty, 54 Ind Cas 943; 11 L W 34; 26 M L T 439; 38 M L J 28 ... 598
Batchu Ramajogayya v. Vajjula Jagannadham, 49 Ind Cas 872; 42 M 185; 25 M L T 23; 9 L W 229; 36 M L J 29; (1919) M W N 148 (F. B.) ... 741

B—contd.

Page.

Bechi v. Ashan-ullah Khan, 12 A 461 at p 471 (F. B.); A W N (1893) 149; 6 Ind Dec (N. s.) 1039 ... 68
Beddow v. Beddow, (1878) 9 Ch D 89; 47 L J Ch 588; 36 W R 570 ... 576
Beg v Allah Ditta, 38 Ind Cas 354; 44 C 749; 12 P W R 1917; 21 M L T 310. 32 M L J 615; 19 Bom L R 388; 45 P R 1917; 15 A L J 525; 21 C W N 842; 26 C L J 175; 44 I A 89 (P. C.) ... 824
Behary Lal v. Kedar Nath Mullick, 18 C 469; 9 Ind Dec (N s.) 313 ... 453
Behary Shah v. Nubby Khan, 9 W R 13 Cr ... 508
Bejoy Krishna Mukerjee v. Jibon Krishna Ganguly, 46 Ind Cas 333; 27 C L J 596 ... 985
Belaet Khan v. Rash Beharee Mookerjee, 22 W R 549 ... 38
Bengal and North Western Railway Company v, Haji Mutsaddi, 7 Ind Cas 160; 7 A L J 833 ... 717
Beni Ram v. Kundan Lal, 21 A 496; 1 Bom L R 400; 3 C W N 522; 26 I A 58; 7 Sar P C J 523; 9 Ind Dec (N. s.) 1022 (P. C.) ... 815
Benode Behari Bose v. Srimati Nistarini Dassi, 32 I A 193 at p 200; 15 M L J 331; 7 Bom L R 857; 3 C 180; 2 C L J 189; 9 C W N 961 ... 378
Beradar Singh v. Bacha Mahto, 54 Ind Cas 39; (1920) Pat 5; 5 P L J 32; 1 P L T 55 ... 465
Berhamdeo Pershad v. Tara Chand, 33 C 92; 9 C W N 89 ... 945
Best v. Haji Muhammad Sait, 23 M 18; 8 Ind Dec (N. s.) 407 ... 251, 648
Bevan-Petman v. Ganesh Das, 34 Ind Cas 542; 49 P R 1916; 144 P W R 1916; 149 P L R 1916 ... 597
Bhag Mal v. Talia, 6 P L R 1907; 44 P W R 1907 ... 576
Bhaga Shah v. Bura Shah, 58 P R 1888 ... 255
Bhagoji v. Bapuji, 13 B 75; 7 Ind Dec (N. s.) 51 ... 312
Bhagwan Das v. Mohan Lal, 25 A 421; A W N (1903) 83 ... 179
Bhagwan Dayal v. Param Sukh Das, 27 Ind Cas 623; 37 A 179 at 185; 13 A L J 179 ... 316
Bhagwana v. Balik Ram, 51 Ind Cas 408; 37 P R 1919 ... 466
Bhagwandas v. Kanji, 7 Bom L R 611; 30 B 205 ... 516
Bhagwat Pershad v. Lachmi Pershad, 10 Ind Cas 346 ... 256
Bhagwati v. Banwari Lal, 1 Ind Cas 416; 31 A 82 (F B); 6 A L J 71; 5 M L T 185 ... 255, 809
Bhan v. Raghunath, 30 B 229; 7 Bom L R 936 ... 178
Bharat Indu v. Syed Muhammad Mustafa Khan, 52 Ind Cas 836; 17 A L J 167; 41 A 316 ... 114
Bhau v. Ramchandrarao, 20 B 423; 10 Ind Dec (N. s.) 845 ... 414
Bhola Devi v. Mohkam Chand, 48 Ind Cas 784; 121 P R 1918 ... 183
Bhola Nath Das, In the matter of the petition of, 12 C 427; 6 Ind Dec (N. s.) 290 ... 437
Bhuban Behari Nag Mazumdar v. Dhirendra Nath Banerjee, 33 Ind Cas 581; 20 C W N 1203 ... 981

Page.

B—contd.

Bhubneshwari Prasad v. Mohan Lall, 55 Ind Cas 786; 1 P L T 5 ... 649
Bhukhoree Singh v. Government, 8 W R 207 ... 508
Bhupati Nath Smrititirtho v. Ram Lal Mitra, 3 Ind Cas 642; 10 C L J 355; 37 C 128; 14 C W N 18 ... 23
Bibee Solomon v. Abdool Azeez, 6 C 687; 8 C L R 169; 3 Ind Dec (N. s.) 446 ... 879
Bibi Walian v. Banke Behari Pershad Singh, 30 I A 182; 7 C W N 774; 30 C 1021; 5 Bom L R 822; 8 Sar P C J 512 315, 401
Biddell Brothers v. E Clemens Horst Co., (1911) 1 K B 214; 16 Com Cas 12, 13 on appeal (1911) 1 K B 934; 16 Com Cas 197; reversed in (1912) A C 18; 81 L J K B 42; 105 L T 563; 17 Com Cas 55; 12 Asp M C 80; 56 S J 50; 28 T L R 42 ... 979
Bidhata Rai v. Ram Chariter Roy, 12 C W N 37; 6 C L J 651; 3 M L T 33 ... 571
Biku Halwai v. Mohesh Halwai, 8 C L J 266 ... 100
Bilas Kunwar v. Desraj Ranjit Singh, 30 Ind Cas 299; 37 A 557; 19 C W N 1207; 29 M L J 335; 2 L W 830; 18 M L T 248; 13 A L J 991; 17 Bom L R 1006; 22 C L J 516; (1915) M W N 757; 42 I A 202 (P. C.) ... 602
Bindeshuri Singh v. Pandit Balraj Sahai, 10 O C 49 at p 56 ... 391
Bindeshwari Pande v. Gokul, 22 Ind Cas 964; 12 A L J 251; 36 A 183 549, 801
Birbhadra Rath v. Kalpataru Panda, 1 C L J 388 at p 397 ... 101
Bireswer Mukerji v. Artha Chander Roy, 19 C 452; 19 I A 101; 6 Sar P C J 171; 9 Ind Dec (N. s.) 746 ... 84
Bishambhar Nath v. Fateh Lal, 29 A 176; 4 A L 94; A W N (1907) 13 ... 135
Bishen Das v. Liquidator of the Doaba Bank Limited, 31 Ind Cas 725; 42 P L R 19.6; 5 P W R 1916 ... 71
Bisheshar Das v. Ram Prasad, 28 A 627; 3 A L J 379; A W N (1906) 142 615, 703
Bisheshar Singh v. Brij Bhookhan Singh, 43 Ind Cas 300; 20 O C 336; 5 O L J 48 ... 320
Bishun Churn Roy Chowdhry v. Jogendra Nath Roy, 26 C 114; 13 Ind Dec (N. s.) 677 ... 474
Bissonauth Chunder v. Sreemutty Bamasoondery Dossee, 12 M I A 4; 2 Sar P C J 344; 20 E R 256 ... 377
Bithal Das v. Shankar Dat, 17 A 264 at pp 272, 273; A W N (1895) 57; 8 Ind Dec (N. s.) 494 ... 296
Blackburn Bobbin Co., Ltd. v. Allen & Sons Ltd, (1918) 1 K B 540; 118 L T 222; 87 L J K B 1085 ... 78
Boja Reddi v. Perumal Reddi, 26 M 506 ... 961
Bomesh Chunder Sanyal v. Hiru Mondal, 17 C 852; 8 Ind Dec (N. s.) 1112 ... 439
Bommidi Bayyan v. Surayanarayana, 17 Ind Cas 445; 37 M 70; 12 M L T. 50; 23 M L J 54; (1913) M W N 1 ... 195
Boo Jinatboo v. Sha Nagar Valab Kanji, 11 B 78 at p 85; 6 Ind Dec (N. s.) 51 ... 135
Boreito, Mrs. v. Empress, 47 P R 1888 Cr ... 448

Page.

B—concld.

Bozsom Altrincham Urban District Council, (1903) 1 K B 547; 72 L J K B 271; 51 W R 387; 67 J P 397; 19 T L R 263; 1 L G R 639 ... 303
Bradish v. Gee, (1754) 1 Keny 73 at p 77; Ambl 229; 96 E R 920 ... 546
Bradley v. Atkinson, 7 A 890; A W N (1885), 288; 4 Ind Dec (N. s.) 990 ... 7
Braja Bhusan Trigunait v. Sris Chandra Tewari, 47 Ind Cas 719; 4 P L J 20; (1918) Pat 337 425
Briggs & Co., In re; Wright, Ex parte, (1906) 2 K B 209; 75 L J K B 591; 95 L T 61 ... 137
British Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Company, Limited v. Underground Electric Railway Company of London, Limited, (1912) A C 673; 81 L J K B 1132; 107 L T 25; 56 S J 734 ... 78
Brown v. Dean, (1910) A C 373; 79 L J K B 690; 102 L T 661; 54 S J 442 ... 739
Brown v. North, (1852) 8 Ex 1 at pp 10, 16; 22 L J Ex 49 91 R R 318 ... 385
Brunsden v Humphrey, (1884) 14 Q B D 141 at p 146; 53 L J Q B 476; 51 L T 529; 32 W R 914; 49 J P 4 ... 832
Budhu Lal v. Chattu Gope, 39 Ind Cas 465; 21 C W N 269; 25 C L J 193; 44 C 816; 18 Cr L J 497 ... 511
Buniyad Husain v. Mata Din Singh, 36 Ind Cas 57; 19 O C 122; 3 O L J 313 ... 293
Burden, In re, Wood, Ex parte, (1888) 21 Q B D 21; 57 L J Q B 570; 59 L T 149; 36 W R 896; 5 Morrell 165 ... 745
Burdett v. Spilsbury, (1843) 10 Cl and F 340; 8 E R 772; 59 R R 105 ... 946
Burjorji v. Muncherji, 5 B 147; 3 Ind Dec (N. s.) 96 ... 383
Buroda Kant Roy v. Korimuddi Moonshee, 4 C L R 452 ... 53

C

Calvin's case, (1608) 7 Co Rep 5 ... 445
Carew's Estate, In re, (1858) 28 L J Ch 218; 26 Beav 187; 4 Jur N. s. 1290; 7 W R 81; 53 E R 869; 122 R R 76 ... 965
Case No. 1 of 1876, 1 M 133; 1 Ind Jur 128; 1 Ind Dec (N. s.) 87 ... 155
Cassel v. Inglis, (1916) 2 Ch 211 at p 229; 85 L J Ch 569; 114 L T 935; 32 T L R 555 ... 562
Cavander's Trusts, In re, (1881) 16 Ch D 270; 50 L J Ch 292; 29 W R 405 ... 266
Chagan Chunilal v. Suka Barku, 12 Ind Cas 384; 35 B 511; 13 Bom L R 891 ... 349
Chairman of the Municipal Commissioner of the Municipality of Bihar v. Mahant Ramdeo Das, 54 Ind Cas 227; 4 P L J 673; (1920) Pat 120 ... 821
Chakouri Mahton v. Ganga Pershad, 12 Ind Cas 609; 15 C L J 228; 16 C W N 519; 39 C 862 ... 883
Challaphroo v. Banga Behary, 31 Ind Cas 394; C W N 408; 22 C L J 311 ... 1007
Chand Kour v. Partab Singh, 18 C 98; 15 I A 156; 5 Sar P C J 243; 12 Ind Jur 331; 8 Ind Dec (N. s.) 65 (P. C.) ... 933

C—contd.

	Page.
Chandania v. Salig Ram, 26 A 40; A W N (1903) 163 ...	628
Chandanmull v. Donald Campbell and Co, 54 Ind Cas 289; 23 C W N 707 foot-note ...	831
Chandaramani Koer v. Basdeo Narain Singh, 49 Ind Cas 442; 4 P L J 57 ...	649
Chandra Kumar Das v. Emperor, 7 C W N 176 ...	228
Chandra Kunwar v. Chaudhri Narpat Singh, 29 A 184 (P. C.); 9 Bom L R 267; 2 M L T 109; 17 M L J 103; 5 C L J 115; 11 C W N 321; 4 A L J 102 ...	192
Chandramathi Ammal v. Narayanasami Aiyar, 5 Ind Cas 23; 33 M 241; 19 M L J 700; 7 M L T 369 ...	456
Chandulal Khushalji v. Awad, 21 B 351; 11 Ind Dec (N. S.) 237 ...	425
Channu Dat Vyas v. Babu Nandan, 6 Ind Cas 223; 32 A 527; 7 A L J 529 ...	685
Charu Chandra Ghosh v. Chandi Charan Roy Chowdhury, 27 Ind Cas 492; 19 C W N 25 ...	981
Chaturbhaj Sahay v. Muhammad Habib, 54 Ind Cas 36 ...	48
Chedambaram Chetty v. Karunalayavalangopuly, 3 M H C R 342 ...	596
Cheekati Zamindar v. Ranasooru Dhora, 23 M 318; 8 Ind Dec (N. S.) 624 ...	118
Chidambara Pillai v. Tiruvenyadathienyar 7 M L J 1 ...	118
Chidambaram Chetti v. Pichappa Chetty, 30 M 243; 2 M L T 326 ...	358
Chidambaram Chettiar v. Krishna Vathiyar, 37 Ind Cas 836; 40 M 233; 21 M L T 24; 5 L W 132; (1917) M W N 44; 32 M L J 13 ...	976
Chiman Lal v. Hari Chand, 19 Ind Cas 669; 40 C 879; 17 C W N 885; 126 P W R 1913; 187 P L R 1913; (1913) M W N 509; 18 C L J 70; 15 Bom L R 616; 14 M L T 83; 102 P R 1913; 40 I A 156 (P. C.) ...	824
Chintamani Pramanik v. Hriday Nath Kamila, 51 Ind Cas 123; 29 C L J 241 ...	142
Chotay Lall v Chunnoo Lall, 4 C 744; 3 C L R 435; 6 I A 15; 3 Sar P C J 880; 3 Suth P C J 572; 3 Ind Jur 175; 2 Ind Dec (N S) 473 ...	83
Chuhar Singh v. Dhaunkal Singh, 74 P R 1885	454
Chundur Nath Moitra v. Kristo Komul Singh, 15 W R 357 ...	387
Chunilal Panalal v. Bomanji Mancherji, 7 B 310; 7 Ind Jur 607; 4 Ind Dec (N. S.) 209 ...	273
Clayton's case, (1816) 1 Marivale 572 at p 608; 35 E R 781; 15 R R 161 ...	515
Cohen v. Mitchell, (1890) 25 Q B D 262; 59 L J Q B 409; 63 L T 206; 38 W R 351; 7 Marrell 207 ...	451
Collector of Bhatnagiri v. Antaji Lakshman, 12 B 534 at p 544; 6 Ind Dec (N. S.) 840 ...	415
Collector of Madura v. Moottoo Ramalinga Sathupathy, 12 M I A 397; 10 W R (P. C.) 17; 1 B L R (P. C.) 1; 2 Suth P C J 135; 2 Sar P C J 361; 20 E R 389; 3 Mad Jur 298; 1 Ind Dec (N. S.) 1	392, 690
Colls v. Home and Colonial Stores, (1904) A C 179. 73 L J Ch 484; 90 L T 637; 53 W R 30; 20 T L R 475 ...	528

C—concld.

	Page.
Comber v. Leyland, (1898) A C 524; 67 L J Q B 884; 79 L T 180 ...	604
Commissioners of Inland Revenue v. Korean Syndicate Ltd., (1920) 1 K B 598 ...	917
Commissioners of Inland Revenue v. Sangster, (1920) 1 K B 587 ...	916
Connecticut Fire Insurance v. Kavanagh, (1892) A C 473 at p 480; 61 L J P C 50; 67 L T 509; 57 J P 21 ...	574
Conradi v. Conradi, (1868) 1 P and D 514 37 L J Mat 55; 18 L T 659; 16 W R 1023 ...	958
Consolidated Exploration and Finance Co. v. Musgrave, (1900) 1 Ch 37; 81 L T 747; 48 W R 298; 69 L J Ch 11; 16 T L R 13 ...	539
Crown v. Kadu, 176 P L R 1905; 31 P L R 1904 Cr; 1 Cr L J 1082 ...	775
Cumming v. Shand, (1860) 5 H & N 95; 29 L J Ex 129; 8 W R 182; 1 L T 300; 157 E R 1114; 120 R R 498 ...	385
Cursandas Natha v. Ladkavahu, 19 B 571 at p 577; 10 Ind Dec N. S.) 381 ...	432

D

Daia Chand v. Sarfraz, 1 A 117; 1 Ind Dec (N.S.) 79 ...	937
Dakhina Mohan Roy v. Saroda Mohan Roy, 21 C 142 (P. C.); 20 I A 160; 17 Ind Jur 576; 6 Sar P C J 366; 10 Ind Dec (N. S.) 727 ...	495
Dalglish v. Guzuffer Hussain, 23 C 427; 12 Ind Dec (N. S.) 284 ...	418
Dammar Singh v. Pirbhu Singh, 4 A L J 155; A W N (1907) 70; 29 A 290 ...	300
Damodaran Namboodri v. Govindan Nair, 53 Ind Cas 229; 37 M L J 307 ...	609
Darves Haji Mahamad v. Jainudin, 30 B 603; 8 Bom L L 751 ...	450
Data Ram Tewari v. Deokali Tewari, 25 Ind Cas 855; 17 O C 299; 11 O L J 463 ...	629
Dattoo v. Ramchandra, 30 B 119; 7 Bom L R 669 ...	476
Daulat Ram v. Durga Prasad, 15 A 333; A W N (1893) 110 ...	972
Daulat Ram v. Woolen Mills Company Limited, 95 P R 1908; 165 P W R 1908 ...	70
Dawkins v. Antrobus, (1881) 17 Ch D 615 at p 632; 44 L T 557; 29 W R 511 ...	532
Dawlatrao v. Govindrao, 1 Ind Cas 243; 5 N L R 13 ...	177
Dayaram Jagivan v. Gordhondas Dayaram, 31 B 73; 8 Bom L R 885 ...	763
Deb Narain Dutt v. Baidya Nath, 2 Ind Cas 148 14 C W N 68 ...	813
Deb Narain Dutt v Chairman of the Baruipur Municipality, 20 Ind Cas 264; 17 C W N 1230; 19 C L J 205; 41 C 168 ...	821
Deb Narain Dutt v. Chairman of the Baruipur Municipality, 12 Ind Cas 32; 39 C 141 ...	821
Debendra Nath Das v. Bibudhendra Mansingh, 45 Ind Cas 411; 45 C 805; 5 P L W 1; 35 M L J 214; 27 C L J 542; 22 C W N 674; 16 A L J 5[illegible]; 23 M L T 384; (1918) M W N 379; 20 Bom L R 743; 45 I A 67 (P. C.)	816, 817
Debi Prosad v. Ram Ghulam Sahu, 25 Ind Cas 89; 19 C L J 263 ...	380

D—contd.

Page.

Debi Singh v. Jia Ram, 25 A 214; A W N (1903) 21 ... 301
Dent v. Turpin, (1861) 2 J & H 139; 30 L J Ch 495; 7 Jur (N S.) 673; 4 L T 637; 9 W R 548; 70 E R 1003; 134 R R 166 ... 712
Deochand v. Moti, 1 N L R 178 ... 197
Deokali Koer v. Kedar Nath, 15 Ind Cas 4-7; 39 C 704; 16 C W N 838 361, 550, 574
Deoki Nandan Singh v. Bansi Singh, 10 Ind Cas 371; 16 C W N 124; 14 C L J 35 ... 453
Deorao v. Sakhu Rai, 11 C P L R 49 ... 628
Dhakeswar Prasad Singh v. Jioo Choudhry, 46 Ind Cas 385; 3 P L J 448 ... 423
Dhanpatmal v. Kishinlal, 35 Ind Cas 536; 10 S L R 1 ... 154
Dharam Kunwar v. Balwant Singh, 15 Ind Cas 673; 34 A 398; 16 C W N 675; 9 A L J 730; 14 Bom L R 485; (1912) M W N 641; 12 M L T 95; 16 C L J 160; 23 M L J 200; 39 I A 142 (P. C.) ... 625
Digumber Roy Chowdhry v. Moti Lal Bundopadhya, 9 C 562; 12 C L R 204; 7 Ind Jur 529; 4 Ind Dec (N. s,) 1023 ... 123
Din Muhammad, In the matter of the petition of, 5 A 226; A W N (1882) 237; 3 Ind Dec (N S.) 193 ... 654
Dinanath Abaji v. Sadhashiv Hari Madhave, 3 B 9; 2 Ind Dec (N, s.) 6 ... 685
Dino Nath Mohunto v. Chundi Koch, 16 Ind Cas 349; 16 C L J 14 ... 125
Dinobundhoo Chowdhry v. Kristomonee Dosses, 2 C 162 at p 171; 1 Ind Dec (N. s.) 393 ... 195
Dip Singh v. Girand Singh, 26 A 313; 1 A L J 1; A W N (1904) 38 ... 992
Diwakar Janardhan v. Janardhan Chimnaji, 3 C P L R 64 ... 46
Diwan Singh v. Paro, 33 Ind Cas 529; 89 P R 1916; 70 P W R 9:6 ... 824
Diwarkar v. Chandanlal, 39 Ind Cas 6; 12 N L R 164 at p 168; 11 Bom L R 992; 25 C L J 17; 21 M L T 6; 5 L W 103; (1917) M W N 50; 21 C W N 314; 44 C 201; 32 M L J 6.6 (P. C.) ... 88
Dobson & Barlow v. Bengal Spinning & Weaving Co., 21 B 126; 11 Ind Dec (N. s.) 86 ... 159
Doe d. Bradford v. Watkins, (1806) 7 East 551; 103 E R 213; 3 Smith 517; 8 R R 670 ... 128
Doe d. Macartney v. Crick, (1805) 5 Esp 196; 8 R R 848 ... 128
Doe d. Turnbull v. Brown, (1826) 5 B & C 384, 29 R R 275; 08 E R 143; 8 Dowl & Ry 100 ... 545
Doleman & Sons v. Ossett Corporation, (1912) 3 K B 257; 81 L J K B 103 ; 07 L T 581; 76 J P 457; 10 L G R 915 ... 152
Donaldson v. South Sheilds Corporation, (1899) 79 L T 685; 68 L J Ch 162 ... 36
Dosibai v. Ishwardas, 15 B 222 (P. C.); 18 I A 22; 15 Ind Jur 154 & 281; 6 Sar P C J 10; 8 Ind Dec (N. s) 150 ... 486
Dougal v. McCarthy, (1893) 1 Q B 736; 62 L J Q B 462; 4 R 402; 68 L T 699; 41 W R 484; 57 J P 597 ... 844

D—concld.

Page.

Duchess of Kingston's case, (1776) 2 Sm L C 11th Ed 731 at p 738; 20 How State Trials 537; 34 H L Jo 655 607, 616
Dudhnath Pandu v. Mathura Prasad, 24 A 317; A W N (1902) 75 ... 961
Duke of Buccleuch v. Metropolitan Board of Works, (1871) 5 H L 418; 41 L J Ex 137; 27 L T 1 ... 942
Dukha Mandal v. Grant, 16 Ind Cas 467; 16 C L J 24 ... 38
Dulla v. Empress, 2 P R 1901 Cr, 32 P L R 1901 ... 778
Duncan Co, In re, (1905) 1 Ch D 307; 74 L J Ch 188; 92 L T 108; 53 W R 299; 12 Manson 38 72, 252
Durga Charan Das v. Sashi Bhusan Guho, 13 C 275 at p 279; 6 Ind Dec (N. s.) 683 ... 240
Durga Chowdhrani v. Jewahir Singh Chowdhri, 17 I A 122; 18 C 23; 5 Sar P C J 590; 9 Ind Dec N s. 16 ... 118
Durgozi Row v. Fakeer Sahib, 30 M 197; 1 M L T 433; 17 M L J 9 ... 493
Durham Brothers v. Robertson, (1898) 1 Q B 765 at p 774: 67 L J Q B 484; 78 L T 438 ... 147
Dwarka Pershad v. Tulsee Ram, 10 C P L R 103 ... 194
Dwarkadas Tejbhandas, In re, 31 Ind Cas 948 17 Bom L R 925; 40 B 235 ... 425
Dwarkanath Bysak v Mahendranath Bysak, 9 B L R 198 at p 209; 18 W R 305 ... 570
Dwarkanath Roy Chowdhry v. Dinobundhu Singh, 15 W R 461 ... 346

E

East Indian and Anglo Indian Deposit and Loan Society Limited v. Dr. T M Nair, 31 M 364; 4 M L T 89 ... 936
Eastern Mortgage and Agency Company v. Fakir-ud-din, 17 Ind Cas 849 17 C W N 16 ... 841
Elliaya v. Late Collector of Salem, 3 M H C R 59 ... 554
Emaduddin Chowdhury v. Daulesh Mamud, 39 Ind Cas 240 ... 844
Emperor v. Girand, 25 A 375; A W N (1903) 79 ... 55
——— v. Imambux Rowal Khan, 24 Ind Cas 952; 7 S L R 194; 15 Cr L J 544 ... 769
——— v. Kamal, 30 Ind Cas 1000; 16 Cr L J 712; 9 S L R 82 ... 862
——— v. Kiru, 11 Ind Cas 132; 10 P R 1919; Cr (F. B.); 24 P W R 1911; 12 Cr L J 364; 205 P L R 1911 ... 778
——— v. Muhammad Din, 22 Ind Cas 742; 23 P R 1913 Cr; 96 P L R 1914; 15 Cr L J 166 ... 851
——— v Murli Singh, 13 Ind Cas 922; 33 A 775; 13 Cr L J 170 ... 439
——— v Ranjan Dadubhai, 31 Ind Cas 381; 17 Bom L R 921; 6 Cr L J 781 ... 501
— v. Siranadu, 30 M 469; 17 M L J 476; 6 Cr L J 373 ... 499
——— v. Tilak Pandey, 29 Ind Cas 97; 37 A 344; 13 A L J 466; 16 Cr L J 465 ... 855

Page.

E—concld.

Emperor v. Tula Khan, 30 A 30; A W N (1908) 133; 5 A L J 318; 7 Cr L J 427; 4 M L T 41 (F. B.) ... 771
Empress v. Jafar M Talab, 5 B 85; 5 Ind Jur 428; 3 Ind Dec (N s.) 58 ... 851
Enuga Sundarama Reddi v. Beswada Pattabhiramireddi, 42 Ind Cas 421; (1917) M W N 495; 6 L W 272 ... 316
Errikulappa Chetty v. Official Assignee, Madras, 32 Ind Cas 190; 39 M 903 ... 268
Evans v. Davies, (1836) 4 Ad & E 840; 2 H & W 15; 6 L J K B 268; 111 E R 1000 ... 431

F

Faizyab Khan v. Nizam-ud-Din, 6 Sel Dec 1911 ... 47
Fakir Muhammad Khan v. Ali Sher Khan, 10 Ind Cas 113 ... 744
Fateh v. Bhanju Ram, 41 Ind Cas 730; 93 P R 1917; 49 P W R 1917 ... 918
Fateh Ali v. Muhammad Hayat, 18 Ind Cas 818; 197 P L R 1913; 63 P W R 1913 ... 913
Fatimatulnissa Begum v. Sundar Das, 27 C 1004; 27 I A 103; 4 C W N 565; 7 Sar P C J 718; 14 Ind Dec (N. s.) 657 (P. C.) ... 988
Fatma v. Durya Sahib, 10 B H C R 187 ... 312
Fazal Rab v. Manzur Ahmad, 45 Ind Cas 773; 16 A L J 433; 40 A 425 ... 947
Fernandez v. Rodrigues, 21 B 784; 11 Ind Dec (N. s.) 528 ... 425
Flood v. Egan, (1899) 20 N S W R 337 ... 324
Flower v. Lloyd, (1879) 10 Ch D 327; 39 L T 613; 27 W R 496 ... 616
Flower v. Local Board of Law Leyton, (1877 5 Ch D 347; 46 L J Ch 621; 36 L T 760. 25 W R 545 ... 528
Freeman v. Tranah, (1852) 12 C B 406; 21 L J C P 214; 16 Jur 1141 ... 6
Friend v. Young, (1897) 2 Ch D 421 at p 436; 78 L T 222; 46 W R 139 ... 431
Fundumal v. Mahamed Sharif, 4 Ind Cas 1156; 3 S L R 175 ... 527

G

Gadadhar Bose v. Radha Churn Poddar, 34 C 868 ... 391
Gajanand v. Shaik Taleb Jalaluddin, 46 Ind Cas 173; 22 C W N 535 ... 546
Gajendar Singh v. Sardar Singh, 18 A 176; A W N (1893) 23; 8 Ind Dec (N s. 824 ... 312
Galleway v. Mayor and Commonalty of London, (1866) 1 H L 34; 35 L J Ch 477; 12 Jur (N s.) 747; 14 L T 865 ... 33
Galton v. Emuss, (1844) 13 L J Ch 388; 8 Jur 507; 1 Coll 243; 63 E R 402 ... 965
Gamon v. Vernon, (1678) 83 E R 532; 2 Lev 231 ... 555
Ganapati v. Chathu, 12 M 223; 4 Ind Dec (N. s.) 505 ... 763
Ganda Mal v. Sughra Bibi, 5 P R 1900; P L R 1900 p 30 ... 25
Ganda Mal v. Thakur Harkishen, 3 P R 1900, P L R 1900; p 10 ... 144

Page.

G—contd.

Ganda Singh v. Gulab Singh, 25 Ind Cas 724; 66 P W R 1914; 159 P L R 1914 ... 876
Ganesh Krishna Kulkarni v. Damoo Nathu, 36 Ind Cas 627; 41 B 64; 18 Bom L R 782 ... 481
Ganesha Row v. Tulja Ram Row, 19 Ind Cas 515; 36 M 295; 17 C W N 765; 11 A L J 589; 18 C L J 1; 15 Bom L R 626; 14 M L T 1; (1913) M W N 575; 25 M L J 150; 40 I A 132 (P. C.) 100, 316
Ganeshi Lal v. Nand Kishore, 15 Ind Cas 312; 34 A 487; 10 A L J 45; 13 Cr L J 479 ... 777
Ganeshi Lal v. Shugan Chand, 5 Ind Cas 914; 9 P R 1910 Cr; 12 P W R 1910 Cr; 11 Cr L J 329 ... 851
Ganga Bakhsh v. Rudar Singh, 22 A 434; A W N (1900) 152; 9 Ind Dec (N. s.) 1327 ... 396
Ganga Chandra Chaudhury v Alak Chand Saha, 18 Ind Cas 996; 17 C W N 698 ... 467
Ganga Prasad v. Ram Dayal, 23 A 502; A W N (1901) 150 ... 380
Ganga Prosad v. Raj Coomar Singh, 30 C 617 ... 459
Ganga Ram v. Abdul Rahman, 28 P R 1907; 93 P L R 1908; 140 P W R 1907 ... 658
Ganga Sahai v. Ganga Baksh, A W N (1890) 3 ... 114
Ganga Sahai v. Kesri, 30 Ind Cas 265; 42 I A 177 at p 182; 19 C W N 1175; 18 M L T 203; 29 M L J 329; 2 L W 837; 13 A L J 999; 17 Bom L R 998; 37 A 544; 22 C L J 508; (1915) M W N 713 (P. C.) ... 396
Ganga Sahai v. Lekhraj Singh, 9 A 253; 5 Ind Dec (N. s. 604 ... 628
Garurudhwaja Pershad Singh v. Saparandhwaja Pershad Singh, 27 I A 238; 23 A 37; 10 M L J 287; 5 C W N 33; 2 Bom L R 831; 7 Sar P C J 724 (P. C.) ... 22
Gauri v. Chandramani, 1 A 262; 1 Ind Dec (N. s.) 177 ... 199
Gaya Loan Office Limited v. Awadh Behari Lal, 37 Ind Cas 507; 1 P L J 420; 3 P L W 51 ... 48
General Rolling Stock Company, In re, Joint Stock Discount Company's Claim, Ex parte, (1872) 7 Ch Ap 646 at p 649; 41 L J Ch 732; 27 L T 88; 20 W R 762 ... 72
Geroge Langridge v. Grace Atkins, 17 Ind Cas 792; 35 A 29; 10 A L J 431; 13 Cr L J 856 ... 777
Ghafoor Khan v. Kalandari Begam, 9 Ind Cas 127; 33 A 327; 8 A L J 79 ... 381
Ghanshyam Das v. Hardei, 32 Ind Cas 380; 2 O L J 562 ... 316
Ghanya v. Ukund Rao, 4 N L R 9 ... 826
Ghelabhai v. Hargavan, 12 Ind Cas 928; 36 B 94; 13 Bom L R 171 ... 685
Ghulam Jilani v Muhammad Hussan, 4 Bom L R 161; 12 M L J 77; 29 I A 51; 6 C W N 226; 29 C 167; 8 Sar P C J 154; 25 P R 1902 P. C.) 78, 678
Girdhari Lall v. Kantoo Lall, 1 I A 321; 14 B L R 187; 22 W R 56; 3 Sar P C J 380 ... 293
Girish Chandra Chowdhry v. Kedar Chandra Roy, 27 C 473; 4 C W N 569; 14 Ind Dec (N. s.) 311 ... 491

G—contd.

Page.

Girja Bai v Sadasiv Dhundiraj, 37 Ind Cas 321; 42 I A 15'; 20 C W N 1085; 14 A L J 822: 20 M L T 78; 12 N L R 113; (1916 2 M W N 65; 18 Bom L R 621; 4 L W 114; 24 C L J 207; 31 M L J 455; 43 C 101 (P. C.) ... 294
Girwar Narain Mohton v. Maqbulunnissa, 36 Ind Cas 542; 1 P L J 438 ... 428
Globe New Patent Iron & Steel Company, In re, (1879) 48 L J Ch 295; 40 L T 580, 27 W R 424 ... 164
Gobardhan Das v. Gopal Ram, 7 A 366; A W N (1885) 57; 4 Ind Dec (N. s.) 604 ... 285
Gobardhan Das v. Jai Kishen Das, 22 A 224; A W N (1900) 52; 9 Ind Dec (N s.) 1180 116, 504
Gobinda Ranee Dasee v. Brinda Ranee Dasee, 35 C 1104; 12 C W N 1039 ... 126
Gokal Chand v. Milkhi, 35 Ind Cas 543; 65 P R 1916; 157 P W R 1916; 1 P L R 1917 ... 824
Golab Chand v. Bahuria Ram Murat Koer, 10 Ind Cas 268; 13 C L J 432 ... 48
Golabdas v. Collector of Surat, 3 B 186 at p 189; 6 I A 54; 3 Sar P C J 889; 2 Ind Dec (N. s.) 125 ... 486
Gomer Sirda v. Queen-Empress, 25 C 863; 2 C W N 465; 13 Ind Dec N. s.) 563 ... 55
Gooroo Gobind Shaha v. Anund Lall Ghose, 13 W R 49 (F. B.) 5 B L R (F. B.) 15 ... 123
Gopal v. Mahtaba, 2 Ind Cas 237; 12 O C 78 ... 329
Gopal Iyer v. Thirunengadam Pillai, 38 Ind Cas 481; 32 M L J 503; 5 L W 407 ... 268
Gopammal v. Srinivasa Aiyangar, 27 Ind Cas 921; 28 M L J 96 ... 534
Gopammal v. Srinivasa Aiyangar, 34 Ind Cas 432; 30 M L J 508 ... 534
Gopee Lall v. Sree Chundraolee Buhoajee, 19 W R 12 ... 625
Gopi Chand v. Ram Chand, 12 Ind Cas 729; 177 P W R 1911 ... 876
Gopikisan v. Padamraj, 37 Ind Cas 510; 12 N L R 174 ... 131
Gopini Debi v. Lokenath Tewari, 11 Ind Cas 696; 19 C W N 140 ... 181
Gour Mani Debi v Chairman of the Panihati Municipality, 6 Ind Cas 861; 14 C W N 1057; 12 C L J 74 ... 685
Governor and Company of the British Cast Plate Manufacturers v. Meredith, (1792) 4 T R 794; 1 O E R 1306 ... 509
Govind v. Chandrabhaga, 34 Ind Cas 675; 12 N L R 100 ... 626
Govind v. Parashram, 25 B 161; 2 Bom L R 864 ... 967
Govinda Mal v. Santa, 26 Ind Cas 441; 83 P R 1914; 232 P L R 1915; 192 P W R 1914 ... 927
Govinda Pillai v. Taluk Board of Kumbakonam, 4 Ind Cas 32; 32 M 371; 4 M L T 209; M L J 333 ... 523
Grande Venkata Ratnam v. Corporation of Calcutta, 48 Ind Cas 593; 22 C W N 745; 28 C L J 32; 19 Cr L J 753 ... 586
Gray v. Smith, (1890) 43 Ch D 208; 59 L J Ch 145; 62 L T 5; 38 W R 150 ... 31
Guddappa v. Tirkappa, 25 B 189; 2 Bom L R 872 ... 194

G—concld.

Page.

Gulabrao v. Sitaram, 8 C P L R 11 ... 197
Gulam Hussein v. Mahamaddally Ibrahimji, 7 Ind Cas 455; 12 Bom L R 531; 34 B 540 ... 927
Gulappa v. Tayawa, 31 B 453; 9 Bom L R 831 177
Gulzari Lal v Daya Ram, 9 A 46; A W N (1886) 287; 5 Ind Dec N s.) 431 ... 432
Gulzari Lal v. Madho Ram, 26 A 417; A W N (1904) 61; 1 A L J 65 ... 809
Gunga Dass Dey v. Ramjoy Dey, 12 C 30; 6 Ind Dec (N. s.) 20 ... 68
Gunga Sahai v. Sheo Lal, 132 P R 1894 ... 919
Gunnaji Bhavaji v. Makanji Khushalchand, 3 Ind Cas 159; 34 B 259; 11 Bom L R 498; 6 M L T 234 ... 927
Gur Narayan v. Sheo Lal Singh, 49 Ind Cas 1; 46 C 566; 17 A L J 66; 36 M L J 65; 9 L W 335; 23 C W N 521; 1 U P L R (P. C.) 1 (P. C.) 351, 602
Gur Sahai v. Girdhar Lal, 52 Ind Cas 75; 22 O C 84; 1 U P L R (J. C. 54; 6 O L J 411 ... 293
Gur Sukhraj v. Gur Chandiram, 1 Selected Decision of Sind Sadar Courts 353 at p 357 ... 690
Gurdeo Singh v. Chandrika Singh, 1 Ind Cas 913; 36 C 193; 5 C L J 811 ... 537
Gurkha Association Simla v. Muhammad Umar, 51 Ind Cas 905 ... 711

H

Hadu v. Lala, 21 Ind Cas 951; 41 P R 1914; 15 P L R 1914; 16 P W R 1914 ... 928
Hagu Biswas v. Manmatha Nath Mitra, 22 Ind Cas 760; 18 C W N 959; 15 Cr L J 184 ... 63
Halli Jha v. Lal Singh, 27 Ind Cas 425; 21 C L J 454 ... 315
Hamlyn v. Wood, (1891) 2 Q B 488; 60 L J Q B 734 65 L T 286; 40 W R 24 ... 688
Hanamantram Radhakisan v. Shivanarayan Asuram, 43 Ind Cas 238; 43 B 258; 20 Bom L R 970 (F. B.) ... 402
Hanmant Ramchandra v. Bhimacharya, 12 B 105; 12 Ind Jur 274; 6 Ind Dec (N. s.) 556 258, 999
Hanoomanpersand Panday v. Babooee Munraj Koowaree, 6 M I A 393. 18 W R 81*n*; Sevestre 253*n*; 2 Suth P C J 29; 1 Sar P C J 552; 19 E R 147 (P. C.) 871, 881
Har Narayan v. Ramji Das, 23 Ind Cas 743; 12 A L J 465; 15 Cr. L. J 375 ... 501 Haradhan Mandal v. Iswar Das Marwari, 38 Ind Cas 797; 2 P L J 61; 3 P L W 258 ... 938
Hardit Singh v. Gurmukh Singh, 47 Ind Cas 626; 28 C L J 437; 58 P W R 1918; 64 P R 1918; 24 M L T 389; 20 Bom L R 1064; (1919) M W N 1; 9 L W 123; 1 U P R (P. C.) 8 (P. C.) ... 142
Harendra Lal Roy Choudhury v. Hari Dasi Debi, 23 Ind Cas 637; 41 C 972; 27 M L J 80; (1914) M W N 46'; 16 M L T 6; 18 C W N 817; 19 C L J 484 16 Bom L R 400; 12 A L J 774; 1 L W 1050; 41 I A 110 (P. C.) 521, 537
Harendra Lall Roy v. Sarvamangala Dabee, 21 C 183; 12 Ind Dec (N. s.) 798 ... 923
Hargopal v. Abdul, 9 B H C R 429 ... 380

Page.

H—contd.

Hari Kishen Bhagat v. Kashi Pershad Singh, 27 Ind Cas 674; 42 C 876; 17 M L T 115: 19 C W N 370; 13 A L J 223; 2 L W 219; 21 C L J 225: 28 M L J 565; 17 Bom L R 426; (1915) M W N 511; 42 I A 64 (P. C.) ... 427

Hari Shankar v. Babu Ram, 18 Ind Cas 746; 24 P W R 1912; 73 P L R 1913 ... 471

Harihar Banerji v. Ramsashi Roy, 48 Ind Cas 277: 29 C L J 117 at p 135 23 C W N 77; 16 A L J 969; 35 M L J 707; 9 L W 148; 46 C 458; (1919) M W N 471; 1 U P L R (P. C.) 56; 45 I A 222; 25 M L T 153; 21 Bom L R 522 (P. C.) ... 128

Harlock v Beal, (1916) 1 A C 436; 85 L J K B 602; 114 L T 193; 21 Com Cas 201; 60 S J 236; 32 T L R 251 ... 637

Harmanoje Narain Singh v. Ramprosad Singh, 6 C L J 462 ... 839

Harmongal Narain Singh v. Ganaur Singh, 3 Ind Cas 309; 13 C W N 40 ... 247

Harnam Singh v. Emperor, 10 Ind Cas 114; 12 Cr L J 213; 16 P R 1911 Cr; 155 P L R 1911; 55 P W R 1911 Cr ... 501

Harnam Singh v. Hardevi, 10 Ind Cas 365; 43 P R 1911; 137 P L R 1911; 86 P W R 1911 ... 823

Harnor v. Groves, (1855) 24 L J C P 53 at p 56; 15 C B 667; 3 C L R 406; 3 W R 168; 24 L T (o. s) 215; 100 R R 535; 139 E R 587 ... 544

Harvey v. Rex, (1901) A C 601 at p 611; 70 L J P C 107; 84 L T 849; 17 T L R 601 ... 569

Hasomal v. Shah Nawaz Shah, 2 S D 380 ... 487

Hawell v. Coupland, (1876) 1 Q B D 258 at p 262, 46 L J Q B 147; 33 L T 832; 24 W R 470 ... 637

Heffer v. Martyn, (1867) 36 L J Ch 372 at p 373; 15 W R 390 ... 965

Helliwell v. Hobson, (1858) 3 C B (N. s.) 761; 140 E R 942; 111 R R 829 ... 923

Henderson v. Eason, (1851) 85 R R 628; 17 Q B 701; 21 L J Q 82; 16 Jur 518; 117 E R 1451 ... 762

Herbert v. Greeme, (1854) 8 Ir Ch Rep 270 at p 274 ... 841

Hidayat Ali Khan v. Basit Ali Khan, 54 P R 1892 ... 454

High Court Proceedings, dated 20th July 1875, 2 Weir 666 ... 508

Higham v. Ridgway, (1808) 10 East 109; 10 R R 235; 103 E R 717 ... 584

Hikmatullah Khan v. Imam Ali, 12 A 203 at p 206; A W N (1890) 87; 6 Ind Dec (N. s.) 878... 655

Hill v. Glifford, (1907) 2 Ch D 236 at p 244; 76 L J Ch 627; 97 L T 266; 23 T L R 601 ... 569

Hira Lal v. Himalaya Glass Works Co. 10 Ind Cas 433; 176 P L R 1911; 100 P W R 1911 ... 70

Hira Lal Mitra v. Uday Chandra Dey, 14 Ind Cas 33; 16 C W N 1027; 16 C L J 103 ... 698

Hirabai v. Lakshmibai, 11 B 573; 6 Ind Dec (N. s) 377 ... 938

Hirji Khetsey and Company v. Bombay Baroda and Central India Railway Company, 25 Ind Cas 241; 39 B 191; 16 Bom L R 467 ... 715

Hoghton, In re, Hoghton v. Fiddey, (1874) 18 Eq 573; 47 L J Ch 758; 22 W R 854 ... 459

Page.

H—concld.

Hoperoft v. Emperor, 1 Ind Cas 737; 36 C C 163; 13 C W N 151; 8 C L J 565; 9 Cr L J 259 ... 50

Hormarji Ardesir Hormarji, In the matter of, 17 B 334 at p 340; 9 Ind Dec (N. s.) 217 ... 449

Howa v. Sit Shein, 42 Ind Cas 803 (F. B); 9 L B R 92; 11 Bur L T 77 ... 208

Humber Ironworks and Shipbuilding Company, In re, Warrant Finance Company, Ex-parte, (1869) 4 Ch Ap 643; 38 L J Ch 712; 20 L T 859; 17 W R 780 ... 71

Humfrey v. Dale, (1857) 26 L J Q B 137; 7 El & Bl 266; 3 Jur (N. s.) 213; 110 R R 587; 119 E R 1246 ... 909

Hurdwary Mull v. Ahmed Musaji, 1 Ind Cas 371; 13 C W N 63 326, 546

Hurro Nath Rai Chowdhri v. Randhir Singh, 18 C 311; 18 I A 1; 15 Ind Jur 34; 5 Sar P C J 642, 9 Ind Dec (N. s.) 207 873, 1008

Husainara Begum v. Rahmannessa Begum, 8 Ind Cas 837; 38 C 342; 13 C L J 3 ... 410

Hutt v. Shaw, (1886) 3 T L R 354 ... 948

I

Imam Bakhsh Khan v. Karim Shah, 16 P R 1895 ... 273

Imperator v. Ghulam Kadir, 12 Ind Cas 656; 5 S L R 105; 12 Cr L J 568 ... 760

——— v. Jaro, 12 Ind Cas 646; 5 S L R 54; 12 Cr L J 558 ... 769

——— v. Mulo, 19 Ind Cas 948; 14 Cr L J 292; 6 S L R 284 ... 239

Imperial Gas Light and Coke Co. v. Broadbent, (1859) 7 H L C 600 at p 612; 29 L J Ch 377; 5 Jur (N. s.) 1319; 11 E R 239; 115 R R 295 ... 575

Inayat v. Ganga, 32 Ind Cas 829; 3 P R 1916; 200 P W R 1915 ... 928

Ishan Chandra Mitter v. Raja Ramranjan Chukarbutty, 2 C L J 125 at p 132 ... 748

Ishar v. Sundar, 48 Ind Cas 809; 125 P R 1918 ... 466

Ishar Das v Harkishan Das, 35 Ind Cas 577; 148 P W R 1916; 7 P L R 1917 ... 880

Ismail v. Jagannath, 19 Ind Cas 255 ... 876

Ismail Mussajee Mookerdam v. Hafiz Loo, 33 C 772; 3 C L J 484. 10 C W N 570; 3 A L J 352; 8 Bom L R 379. 16 M L J 160; 1 M L T 137; 23 I A 86 (P. C.) ... 24

Isri Prosad v. Rai Ganga Prosad Singh Bahadur, 3 Ind Cas 311; 14 C W N 165 ... 248

Iyappa Nainar v. Manikka Asari, 27 Ind Cas 247; 40 M 630 ... 744

J

Jada Arkamma v. Rama Sastrulu, 6 M 287; 2 Ind Dec N. s) 475 ... 430

Jaddo Tiwari v. Baram Deo Singh, 51 Ind Cas 88, 17 A L J 377 ... 514

Jadunandan Prosad Singha v. Koer Kallyan Singh, 3 Ind Cas 653; 15 C L J 61; 16 C W N 612 ... 606, 613

Jagadamba Chaodhrani v. Dakhina Mohun Roy, 13 I A 84; 13 C 708; 10 Ind Jur 307; 4 Sar P C J 715; 6 Ind Dec (N. s.) 705 ... 626

J—contd.

Page.

Jagannath Prasad Gupta v. Runjit Singh, 25 C 354; 13 Ind Dec N. s) 237 ... 628
Jagannath Raghunath v. Narayan Lal, 7 Ind Cas 459; 34 B 553; 12 Bom L R 515 ... 954
Jagat Chandra Dutt v. The Collector of Chittagong, 18 Ind Cas 551; 17 C W N 1001 at p 1002; 17 C L J 61; 40 C 64 ... 465
Jagdeo Narain Singh v. Bhagwan Mahto, 54 Ind Cas 672; 1 P L T 27 ... 818
Jageshwar Roy v. Raj Narain Mitter, 31 C 195; 8 C W N 168 ... 926
Jaiprakash Lal, In the metter of the petition of, 6 A 26 (F. B); A W N (1883) 208; 3 Ind Dec (N. s.) 641 ... 672
Jairam v. Balaji, 14 C P L R 9 ... 197
Jamal v. Moolla Dawood Sons & Co., 31 Ind Cas 949; 43 C 493; 20 C W N 105; 30 M L J 73; 14 A L J 89, 19 M L T 50; 3 L W 181; 23 C L J 137; (1916) 1 M W N 70; 18 Bom L R 315; 9 Bur L T 8; 43 I A 6 P. C.) ... 648
Jamiat Singh v. Ujagar Singh, 55 Ind Cas 833; 1 L 15 ... 931
Jamieson & Co. v. Jamieson, (1898) 5 R P C 169; 14 T L R 160 ... 712
Jamnabai v. Dharsey, 4 Bom L R 893 ... 377
Jamnabai v. Raychand Nahalchand, 7 B 225; 7 Ind Jur 4.9; 4 Ind Dec (N. s) 153 ... 6.5
Janki Kuar v. Lachmi Narain, 30 Ind Cas 789; 37 A 535; 13 A L J 753 ... 616
Jaswanti v. Tej Narain, 41 Ind Cas 192; 120 P W R 1917; 10 P R 1918 ... 199
Jatindra Mohan Tagore v. Ganendra Mohan Tagore, 9 B L R 377 (P. C.); 18 W R 359; 2 Suth P C J 692; 3 Sar P C J 82 ... 257
Jatindra Nath Chatterjee v. Emperor, 11 C W N 696; 34 C 698; 5 Cr. L J 427 ... 234
Jayanti Subbiah v. Alamelu Mangamma, 27 M 45 199, 524
Jayawickreme v. Amarasuriya, (1918) A C 869 at p 873; 87 L J P C 165; 119 L T 499 ... 101
Jeo Lal Singh v. Ganga Pershad, 10 C 996; 5 Ind Dec (N. s.) 664 ... 465
Jeuna Bahu v. Parmeshwar Narayan, 49 Ind Cas 6.0; 17 A L J 207; 3 5 M L J 215; 23 C W N 490; 25 M L T 278; 29 C L J 443; 21 Bom L R 589; 10 L W 26; (1919) M W N 347; 12 Bur L T 80 (P. C.) ... 140
Jhanda Khan v. Bahadur Ali, 3 P R 1893 ... 144
Jhandu Khan v. Barkhurdar, 150 P R 1889 ... 273
Jhitibai v. Tejmal, 41 Ind Cas 35; 3 N L R 109 ... 711
Jhoja Singh v. Queen-Empress, 23 C 492; 12 Ind Dec (N s) 328 ... 50
Jhunku Lal v. Beshashar Das, 46 Ind Cas 7.; 16 A L J 490; 40 A 6 2 ... 917
Jittindra Nath Palit v. Lokendra Nath Palit, 34 Ind Cas 657; 22 C L J 593 ... 336
Jiwan Singh v. Misri Lal, 18 A 146; 23 I A 1; 6 M L J 47; 6 Sar P C J 675; 8 Ind Dec (N. s) 804 ... 427
Jiwraj v. Sheokumar Bai, 56 Ind Cas 65 ... 84
Jogeshwar Mazumdar v. Abed Mahomed Sirkar, 3 C W N 13 ... 680

J—concld.

Page.

Jogeswar Narain Deo v. Ram Chandra Dutt, 23 C 670 (P. C); 23 I A 37; 7 Sar P C J 13; 6 M L J 75; 12 Ind Dec (N. s) 445 (P. C) ... 938
Jogeswar Rai v. Kesho Prasad Singh, 37 Ind Cas 26); 1 P L J 190 ... 435
Joykalee Dassee v. Chandmalla, 9 W R 133 ... 961
Jugdish Chunder Biswas v. Chowdhry Zahoor-ul-Huq, 24 W R 317 ... 346
Jwala Prasad v. East Indian Railway Co., 46 Ind Cas 99; 16 A L J 535 ... 947
Jyani Begam v. Umrao Begam, 32 B 612; 10 Bom L R 764 ... 10

K

Kadirvelu Nainar v. Kuppuswami Naicker, 45 Ind Cas 774; 41 M 743; 34 M L J 590; 23 M L T 272; 8 L W 193; (1918) M W N 514 ... 616
Kahan Singh v. Waris Khan, 48 P R 1899 ... 12
Kahla Singh v. Diala, 38 Ind Cas 64; 113 P R 1916; 175 P W R 1916 ... 734
Kaikhusru Aderji v Secretary of State for India in Council, 12 Ind Cas 117; 15 C W N 909; 10 M L T 97; (1911) 2 M W N 23; 14 C L J 268; 13 Bom L R 788; 8 A L J 1219; 21 M L J 1100; 33 B 1; 38 I A 204 (P. C.) ... 815
Kailash Chandra Adhikary v. Karuna Kantha Chowdhury, 19 Ind Cas 677; 18 C W N 477 ... 123
Kailash Mondul v. Baroda Sundari Dasi, 24 C 711; 1 C W N 565; 12 Ind Dec (N s.) 1143 ... 195
Kali Kanta v. Gouri Prosad Surma, 17 C 906; 8 Ind Dec (N. s) 1149 ... 685
Kali Prasanna Sil v. Panchanan Nandi, 33 Ind Cas 670, 20 C W N 1000; 23 C L J 489; 44 C 367 ... 693
Kalidas v. Municipality of Dhandhuka, 6 B 696; 3 Ind Dec (N. s.) 913 ... 2
Kallu v. Sital, 44 Ind Cas 717; 16 A L J 225; 40 A 314 ... 765
Kamala Nayak v. Ranga Rau, 1 M H C R 24 26), 553
Kameshwar Pershad v. Chairman of the Bhabua Municipality, 27 C 849; 14 Ind Dec (N. s.) 556 ... 821
Kameshwar Pershad v. Run Bahadur Singh, 12 C 458; 6 Ind Dec (N s.) 311 ... 809
Kameswar Pershad v. Run Bahadur Singh, 6 C 813; 8 C L R 361; 8 I A 8; 4 Shome L R 81; 4 Sar P C J 210; 5 Ind Jur 157; 3 Ind Dec (N. s.) 545 ... 1008
Kameswar Pershad v. Ruttan Koer, 20 C 79 (P. C.); 19 I A 234; 6 Sar P C J 241; 10 Ind Dec N s) 53 ... 194
Kamla Devi v. Gur Dayal, 51 Ind Cas 283; 17 A L J 330 ... 988
Kamta Prasad v. Syed Ahmad, 1 Ind Cas 799; 6 A L J 451; 31 A 373 ... 140
Kandasami Pillai v. Ramasami Mannadi, 51 Ind Cas 507; 36 M L J 313; (1919) M W N 194; 42 M 203 ... 531
Kanhai Lal v. Brij Lal, 47 Ind Cas 207; 40 A 487; 22 C W N 914; 8 L W 212; 24 M L T 236; 35 M L J 459; 16 A L J 825; (1918) M W N 709; 28 C L J 394; 5 P L W 294; 20 Bom L R 1043; 45 I A 118 (P. C.) ... 595

Page.

K—contd.

Kanhia v. Mohin Lal, 10 A 495; A W N (1888) 181; 6 Ind Dec (N. s.) 333 ... 171
Kanhya Lal v. Krishna, 39 P R 1884 ... 874
Kantee Chandra Mukerji v. Ali Nabi, 9 Ind Cas 935; 33 A 414; 8 A L J 199 ... 969
Karam Khan v. Daryai Singh, 5 A 331; A W N (1883) 55; 3 Ind Dec (N s.) 317 360, 550
Kashi v Bajrang Prasad, 30 A 36; 4 A L J 763; A W N (1907) 281 ... 195
Kashi Ram v. Emperor, 17 P R 1832 Cr. ... 172
Kassum Goolam Hussein v. Dayabhai Amarsi, 12 Ind Cas 547; 36 B 58; 13 Bom L R 973 ... 462
Katama Natchiar v. Rajah of Shivagunga, 9 M I A 539 at p 610; 2 W R P C 31; 1 Suth P C J 520; 2 Sar P C J 25; 19 E R 843 (P. C.) ... 938
Kawal Nain v. Prabhu Lal (Budh Singh), 40 Ind Cas 286; 44 I A 159; 15 A L J 581; 2 P L W 57; 21 C W N 986; 33 M L J 42; 19 Bom L R 642; 26 C L J 101; (1917) M W N 514; 6 L W 330; 39 A 496 (P. C.) ... 294
Kedar Nath, In re, 1 Ind Cas 142; 31 A 59; 6 A L J 22; A W N (1908) 279; 9 Cr L J 59 ... 434
Kedar Nath v. Chandu Mal, 26 A 25; A W N (1903) 179 ... 140
Kedar Nath v Ratan Singh, 7 Ind Cas 648; 32 A 415; 14 C W N 585; (1910) M W N 341; 8 M L T 193; 12 C L J 225; 12 Bom L R 656; 13 O C 332; 20 M L J 900; 37 I A 161 P. C.) ... 938
Kedar Nath Das v. Hemanta Kumari Dasi, 22 Ind Cas 709; 18 C W N 447 ... 607
Kedar Nath Mitter v. Dinobandhu Shaha, 31 Ind Cas 636; 42 C 1043 at p 1048; 9 C W N 724 ... 430
Kedar Nath Roy v. Amritalal Mookerjee, 17 Ind Cas 283; 6 C L J 342; 17 C W N 492 ... 13
Kedarmal v. Surajamal, 3 Ind Cas 447; 33 B 364 10 Bom L R 1230 ... 604
Kelu Nair v. Meenakshi, 21 Ind Cas 639; 25 M L J 586; 14 M L T 574 ... 289
Khankar Abdur Rahman v. Ali Hafez, 23 C 256; 5 C W N 351 ... 752
Khiali Ram v. Taik Ram, 36 Ind Cas 452; 38 A 540; 14 A L J 834 ... 992
Khillooram Lokuram v. Louis Dreyfus & Co., 52 Ind Cas 130; 13 S L R 8 ... 152
Khirode Chandra Roy v. Srimati Ashtulla Bee, 35 Ind Cas 557; 20 C W N 845 ... 271
Khubsurat Koer v. Saroda Charan Guha, 12 Ind Cas 167; 14 C L J 526; 15 C W N 126 ... 849
Khuda Bakhsh v. Mathra Das, 18 Ind Cas 182; 62 P R 1913; 85 P L R 1913; 89 P W R 1913 ... 928
Khuda Yar v. Wahab Din, 35 P R 1901; 47 P L R 1901 ... 919
King-Emperor v Bhut Nath Ghose, 7 C W N 345 ... 584
Kirty Churn Mitter v. Annath Nath Deb, 8 C 757; 11 C L R 95; 4 Ind Dec (N. s.) 488 ... 571
Kishan Lal v. Garuradhwaja Prosad Singh, 21 A 238; A W N (1899) 44; 9 Ind Dec (N. s.) 861 ... 396
Kishorchand v. Madhowji, 4 B 497; 5 Ind Jur 320; 2 Ind Dec (N s.) 777 ... 159

Page.

K—concld.

Kitchen v. Campbel v. (1772) 3 Wils 305; 2 Bl Rep 827; Lofft 208; 95 E R 1069 ... 832
Kitts v. Moore, (1895) 1 Q B 253; 64 L J Ch 152; 12 R 47; 71 L T 676; 43 W R 84 ... 542
Kizhekkekath Komalukutti v. Puthiakath Muhamad, 45 Ind Cas 743; (1918) M W N 200; 41 M 629; 34 M L J 171; 23 M L T 178; 7 L W 291 ... 13
Kodumal v. Volkart Bros, 48 Ind Cas 434; 12 S L R 24 ... 77
Kong Lone v. Ma Pay, 4 L B R 13; 6 Cr L J 125 ... 508
Koontee Debee v. Hirdoy Nath Durreepa, 16 W R 206 ... 680
Krell v. Henry, (1903) 2 K B 740 at p 754; 72 L J K B 794; 89 L T 328; 52 W R 246; 19 T L R 711 ... 637
Krishna Chandra Dutta Chowdhury v. Kiran Bajania, 10 C W N 499 ... 491
Krishna Das Roy v Kali Tara Chowdharani, 44 Ind Cas 80; 22 C W N 289 ... 465
Kristna Hande v. Padmanabha Hande, 21 Ind Cas 177; 25 M L J 442; 14 M L T 233; (1913) M W N 802 ... 289
Krishna Kishore De v. Amar Nath Khettry, 56 Ind Cas 532; 31 C L J 272; 24 C W N 633 ... 699
Krishna Reddi v. Sundara Reddi, 26 Ind Cas 384; (1914) M W N 931 ... 957
Krishnabhat v. Kapabhat, 6 B H C R (A. C. J.) 137 ... 685
Krishnama v. Krishnasami, 2 M 62; 6 I A 120; 3 Ind Jur 322; 3 Suth P C J 620; 6 C L R 201; 4 Sar P C J 28, 1 Ind Dec (N s.) 315 ... 685
Krishnammal v. Manandiar Sundaraja Aiyar, 22 Ind Cas 912; 38 M 693; 15 M L T 103; (1914) M W N 200; 1 L W 147 ... 323
Krishnarav Ganesh v. Rangrav, 4 B H C R (A. C. J.) 1 ... 415
Krishnasami Naidu v. Somasundaram Chattiar, 30 M 335 (F. B.); 17 M L J 95; 2 M L T 116 483
Krishnaswami Pillai v. Varadaraja Ayyangar 5 M 345 at pp 355, 356; 2 Ind Dec (N. s.) 240 ... 19
Krishnayya v. Pichamma, 11 M 287; 4 Ind Dec (N s.) 200 ... 23
Kumar Chandra Kishore Roy v. Basat Ali, 44 Ind Cas 763; 27 C L J 478; 22 C W N 627 ... 249
Kumara Asima Krishna Deb v. Kumara Kunara Krishna Deb, 2 B L R (O. C.) 11 ... 378
Kumbalinga Pillai v. Ariputra Paidiacha, 18 M 436; 5 M L J 200; 6 Ind Dec (N. s.) 653 ... 396
Kundan Mal v Sardar Allah Dad Khan, 5 Ind Cas 841; 19 P R 1910; 36 P W R 1910; 167 P L R 1910 ... 655
Kunhammad v. Kutti, 12 M 90; 4 Ind Dec (N. s.) 412 ... 463
Kunhanujan v. Anjelu, 17 M 296; 6 Ind Dec (N. s.) 205 ... 269
Kunhi Sou v. Mulloli Chathu, 17 Ind Cas 933; 38 M 86; 23 M L J 695; 12 M L T 605 ... 553
Kunhikutti v. Achotti, 14 M 462; 5 Ind Dec (N. s.) 323 ... 865
Kuppa Gurukal v. Dorasami Gurukal, 6 M 76; 7 Ind Jur 75; 2 Ind Dec (N. s.) 331 ... 23
Kyinan v. Set Lal, 8 Ind Cas 1196; 3 Bur L T 100 ... 729

Page.

L

Labouchere v. Earl of Wharncaliffe, (1880) 13 Ch D 346 at p 350; 41 L T 618; 28 W R 337 ... 562
Lachhman Prasad v. Sarnam Singh, 40 Ind Cas 284; 39 A 500; 15 A L J 584; 2 P L W 29; 21 C W N 990; 33 M L J 39; 19 Bom L R 646; 26 C L J 97; (1917) M W N 516; 6 L W 334; 44 I A 163 (P. C.) ... 44
Lachmeswar Singh v. Manowar Hossein, 19 C 253; 19 I A 48; 6 Sar P C J 133; 9 Ind Dec (N. s) 614 ... 610
Lachmi Narain v. Jwala Nath, 18 A 344 at p 347; A W N (1896) 87; 8 Ind Dec (N. s.) 936 ... 285
Lachmi Narayan Lal v. Maharaja Kesho Prasad Singh, 52 Ind Cas 127; 5 P L J 1; 1 P L T 193; (1920) Pat 102 ... 344
Lacy v. M'Neale, (1824 4 D & R 7 ... 137
Ladu Ram v. Mahabir Prasad, 37 Ind Cas 996; 39 A 171: 15 A L J 31 ... 744
Lagan Burt Koer v. Khakhan Singh, 43 Ind Cas 962; 3 P L J 92 ... 423
Lakshman Govind v. Amrit Gopal, 24 B 591; 12 Ind Dec (N. s.) 924 ... 960
Lakshmandas v. Anna, 32 B 356 ... 847
Lakshmi Achi v. Subbarama Aiyar, 29 Ind Cas 142, 39 M 488· 2 L W 403; 28 M L J 491; (1915) M W N 327; 17 M L L 385 ... 566
Lakshmidas Lalji, In re, 32 B 184; 10 Bom L R 28; 7 Cr L J 35; 3 M L T 116 ... 855
Lakshumanan Chettiar v. Paraasivan Pillai, 52 Ind Cas 720; 37 M L J 159; (1919) M W N 653 ... 482
Lal Kunwar v. Chiranji Lal, 5 Ind Cas 549; 37 I A 1; 14 C W N 285; 11 C L J 172; 7 M L T 57; (1910) M W N 8; 12 Bom L R 244; 20 M L J 182; 32 A 104 (P. C.) ... 889
Lal Shah v. Hira Lal, 41 Ind Cas 163: 106 P R 1917; 119 P W R 1917 ... 192
Lala Ramjewan Lal v. Dal Koer, 24 C 403; 12 Ind Dec (N. s.) 938 .. 171
Lala Sheo Churn Lal v. Ramnandan Dobey, 22 C 8; 11 Ind Dec (N. s) 7 ... 594
Lalji Nensey v. Keshowji, 17 Ind Cas 193; 37 B 340; 14 Bom L R 840 ... 135
Lalji Tewari v. Emperor, 54 Ind Cas 894; 5 P L J 58; 1 P L T 147; (1920) Pat 125; 21 Cr L J 190 ... 855
Lalla Sheo Churn Lal v. Ramnandan Dobey, 22 C 8; 11 Ind Dec (N. s.) 7 ... 462
Landauer v. Asser, (1905) 2 K B 184; 74 L J K B 659; 93 L T 20; 53 W R 534; 10 Com Cas 265; 21 T L R 424 ... 78
Lane v. Copsey, (1891) 3 Ch D 411; 61 L J Ch 55; 65 L T 375; 40 W R 87 ... 425
Lekha Mal v. Ram Rikh, 56 Ind Cas 46n; 2 U P L R (B. R) 31 ... 47
Lekhu v. Hanwanta, 48 Ind Cas 418; 114 P R 1918; 176 P W R 1918; 129 P L R 1918 ... 455
Lelu v. Ram Chand, 31 Ind Cas 294; 23 P R 1916: 174 P W R 1915 .. 824
Lenz v. Lalchand, 19 Ind Cas 925; 6 S L R 278 at p 283 ... 894
Lewis v. Baker, (1905) 1 Ch 46 at p 50; 74 L J Ch 39; 91 L T 744; 21 T L R 17; 54 W R 146 ... 269

Page.

L—contd.

Limba v. Rama, 13 B 548; 7 Ind Dec (N. s.) 363 ... 635
Llewhellin v. Chuni Lal, 4 A 423; A W N (1882) 101; 2 Ind Dec (N. s.) 1063 ... 604
Lodna Colliery Co. v. Bepin Behary Bose, 55 Ind Cas 113; 1 P L T 84 ... 189
Logadapatti Chinnayya v. Kotla Ramanna, 19 Ind Cas 579; 38 M 203; (1913) M W N 87; 13 M T 421; 25 M L J 228 ... 607
Lok Chand v. Hazir Khan, 41 Ind Cas 59; 93 P R 1917; 167 P W R 1917 ... 573
Lokenath Singh v. Dhwakeshwar Prosad Narayan Singh, 27 Ind Cas 435; 21 C L J 253; 20 C W N 51 ... 142
Lopez v. Muddun Mohun Thakoor, 13 M I A 467; 14 W R P C 11; 5 B L R 521; 2 Suth P C J 336; 2 Sar P C J 594; 20 E R 625 ... 344
Lucas v. Official Assignee of Bengal, 56 Ind Cas 577; 24 C W N 418; 21 Cr L J 481 ... 792
Lutchmanen Chetty v Siva Prokasa Mudaliar, 26 C 349; 3 C W N 160; 13 Ind Dec (N. s) 826 ... 135
Lyons v. Blenkin, (1821) Jacob 245; 37 E R 842; 33 R R 38 ... 243

M

Ma Gun Bon v. Maung Po Kywe, 2 U B R (1897-01) 68 at p 73 ... 681
Ma Gywe v. Ma Thi Da, 2 U B R (1892-96) 194 ... 632
Ma Hnin Bwin v. U. Shune Gone, 23 Ind Cas 433. 8 L B R 1; 7 Bur L T 105; 16 Bom L R 377; 27 M L J 41; 18 C W N 1121; 16 M L T 143; 20 C L J 264; 41 C 837; 1 L W 914; (1914) M W N 449; 41 I A 121 (P. C.) ... 631
Ma Pon v. Po Chan, 2 U B R (1897-01) 116 ... 632
Ma Sein Nyo v. Ma Kywe, 2 U B R (1892-96) 159 ... 682
Ma Thet v. Ma San On, 2 L B R 85 ... 681
Ma Tok v. Ma Thi, 3 Ind Cas 719; 5 L B R 78 764
M'Donnell v. M'Kinty, (1847) 10 Ir L R 514 ... 189
Machi Raju Venkataratnam v. Ranganayakamma, 48 Ind Cas 270; 41 M 985; 8 L W 292; 24 M L T 197; (1918) M W N 599; 35 M L J 335 ... 481
Macnaghten v. Lala Mewa Lall, 3 C L R 285 ... 269
Madan Mohan Singh v. Gaja Prosad Singh, 11 Ind Cas 228; 14 C L J 150 ... 323
Madan Mohan Singh v Raj Kishore Kumari, 17 Ind Cas 1; 17 C L J 384 ... 805
Madepalli Venkataswami v. Madepalli Suramma, 45 Ind Cas 614; 41 M 1022; 34 M L J 343; 24 M L T 60; 8 L W 202; (1918) M W N 482 ... 78
Madho Parshad v. Mehrban Singh, 18 C 157; 17 I A 194 (P. C.); 5 Sar P C J 686; Rafique & Jackson's P C No 12 ; 9 Ind Dec (N. s) 105... 45
Mado Ram, In the matter of the petition of, 21 A 18 ; A W N (1899) 15; 9 Ind Dec (N. s.) 825 ... 434
Madon Mohon Mondal v. Baikanta Nath Mondul, 0 C W N 839 ... 611
Madras Irrigation and Canal Company, In re Wood v. Madras Irrigation and Canal Company, (1883) 23 Ch D 248 at 252, 49 L T 228 ... 165

Page.

M—contd.

Madras Steam Navigation Company v. Shalimar Works Limited, 28 Ind Cas 463; 42 C 85 ... 961
Mahabeer Pershad v. Ramyad Singh, 12 B L R 90; 20 W R 192 ... 45
Mahabir Pershad Singh v. Macnaghten, 16 C. 682; 16 I A 107 (P. C.); 5 Sar P C J 345; 13 Ind Jur 133; 8 Ind Dec (N. S.) 451 ... 195
Mahabir Prasad v Srinarayan, 46 Ind Cas 27; 3 P L J 398; 1918) Pat 328; 4 P L W 437 ... 962
Mahadeo Lal v. Langat Singh, 40 Ind Cas 257; 2 P L J 457; 1 P L W 504; (1917) Pat 169 ... 490
Mahadev Balkrishna Kelkar v. Krishnabai, (1896) P J 609 ... 402
Mahamahopadyaya Rangachariar v. Municipal Council of Kumbakonam, 29 M 539; 1 M L T 333; 16 M L J 582 ... 528
Mahamaya Debi v. Haridas Haldar, 27 Ind Cas 400; 20 C L J 183; 42 C 455; 19 C W N 208 ... 24
Maharaja of Benares v. Babu Vijai Narain Singh, Sel Dec No. 14 of 1914 ... 549
Maharani v. Ram Adhar, 13 Ind Cas 508 ... 691
Mahendra Ram v. Singi Lal, 48 Ind Cas 197; 3 P L J 651 ... 757
Mahesh Narain v. Nowbat Pathak, 32 C 837 at p 847; 1 C L J 487 ... 762
Mahesh Prasad v. Radhika Prasad, Sel Dec No. 17 of 1912 ... 650
Mahomed Ali v. Joogul Ram, 14 W R 124 ... 729
Mahomed Ali Essaji v. Karachi Municipality, 20 Ind Cas 672; 7 S L R 31 ... 528
Mahomed Ali Khan v. Khaja Abdul Gunny, 9 C 744 (F. B.); 12 C L R 257; 4 Ind Dec (N. S.) 1145 ... 347
Mahomed Esuf v. Rajaratnam Pillai, 5 Ind Cas 712; 33 M 402; 7 M L T 55 ... 711
Mahomed Golab v. Mahomed Sultiman, 21 C 612; 10 Ind Dec (N. S.) 1038 ... 636
Mahomed Hossein v. Emperor, 22 Ind Cas 766; 41 C 743; 15 Cr C L J 190; 18 C W N 1247 ... 592
Mahomed Ibrahim Hossein Khan v Ambika Pershad Singh, 14 Ind Cas 496; 39 C 527; 11 M L T 265; (1912) M W N 367; 9 A L J 332; 14 Bom L R 280; 16 C W N 505; 15 C L J 411; 22 M L J 468; 39 I A 68 (P. C.) ... 195
Mahomed Musa v. Aghore Kumar Ganguli, 28 Ind Cas 930; 21 C L J 231; 17 Bom L R 420; 28 M L J 548; 19 C W N 250; 13 A L J 229; 17 M L T 143; 2 L W 258; 42 C 801; (1915) M W N 621; 42 I A 1 (P. C.) ... 278
Majju v. Teja Singh, 44 Ind Cas 944; 29 P R 1918; 114 P W R 1918; 113 P L R 1918 ... 455
Makrand Singh v. Kallu Singh, 50 Ind Cas 640; 41 A 58; 17 A L J 647; 1 U P L R (A) 73 ... 869
Mal Singh v. Munshi Ram, 7 Ind Cas 711; 69 P R 1910; 96 P W R 1910; 125 P L R 1910 ... 12
Malkarjun v. Narhari, 25 B 337; 3 C W N 10; 2 Bom L R 927, 27 I A 216; 10 M L J 368; 7 Sar P C J 739 (P. C.) ... 261
Malikarjunadu Setti v. Lingamurthi Pantulu, 25 M 244; 12 M L J 279 ... 565
Malmesbury Railway Co. v. Budd, (1876) 2 Ch D 113; 45 L J Ch 271 ... 576

Page.

M—contd.

Man Singh v. Emperor, 3 Ind Cas 977; 10 Cr L J 443; 115 P L R 1909; 28 P W R 1909 Cr; 11 P R 1909 Cr ... 434
Mancharam v. Pranshankar, 6 B 298; 6 Ind Jur 426; 3 Ind Dec (N. S.) 655 ... 23
Manghirmal v. Vithalram, 13 Ind Cas 225; 5 S L R 107 ... 685
Mangli v. Subha Singh, 20 Ind Cas 272; 1 P L R 1914; 218 P W R 1913 ... 257
Mani Lall Singh v. Trustees for the Improvement of Calcutta, 44 Ind Cas 770; 45; C 343; 22 C W N 1; 27 C L J 1 ... 33
Manilal v. Bai Tara, 17 B 398; 9 Ind Dec (N S.) 259 ... 199, 624
Manna Lal v. Karu Singh, 56 Ind Cas 766; 1 P L T 6 (P. C.) ... 874, 883
Mannava Annapurnamma v. Uppala Akkayya, 19 Ind Cas 12; 36 M 544; 13 M L T 268; (1913) M W N 328; 24 M L T 333 ... 410
Manners v. Satroghan Das, 36 Ind Cas 178; 20 C W N 800 ... 370
Mannu Lal v. Ghulam Abbas, 6 Ind Cas 788; 32 A 287; 13 O C 12; 11 C L J 557; 12 Bom L R 439; 14 C W N 744; 8 M L T 57; 37 I A 77; 20 M L J 591 (P. C.) ... 315
Manohar Lal v Benarsi Das, 29 A 495; 4 A L J 407; A W N (1907) 121 ... 83
Manohar Lal v. Jadu Nath Singh, 33 I A 128; 8 Bom L. R 489; 10 C W N 898; 4 C L J 8; 16 M L J 291; 3 A L J 710; 28 A 585; 9 O C 219; 1 M L T 210 (P. C.) ... 107
Mansaram Chakravarti v. Ganesh Chakravarti, 16 Ind Cas 383; 17 C W N 521 ... 703
Mara v. Browne, (1896) 1 Ch D 199; 65 L J Ch 225; 73 L T 638; 44 W R 330 ... 358
Marochin v. Parsuram Maharaj, 10 Ind Cas 905 ... 271
Marturu Subbamma v. Gadde Narayya, 43 Ind Cas 4; 41 M 259; 33 M L J 634; 22 M L T 429; 6 L W 738; (1917) M W N 828 (F. B.). ... 619
Mathra Mohan Saha v. Ramkumar Saha, 35 Ind Cas 305; [illegible] 790; 23 C L J 26; 20 C W N 370 ... 266
Mathunsa Rowthan v. Apsa Bin, 12 Ind Cas 444; 36 M 194, 21 M L J 969; 10 M L T 373; (1911) 2 M W N 425 ... 493
Mathura Prasad v. Emperor, 40 Ind Cas 303; 18 Cr L J 635 ... 670
Matigara Coal Co. v. Shragers, 13 Ind Cas 429; 38 C 824 ... 537
Maula Bakhsh v. Muhammad Bakhsh, 54 P R 1906; 74 P L R 1907; 87 P W R 1903 ... 823
Maung Ba Shwe v. Ma Nyun, 9 Ind Cas 457; 4 Bur L T 13; 12 Cr L J 82 ... 664
Maung Htu v. Maung Che, C A No. 120 of 1918 ... 256
Maung Kyin v. Ma Shwe La, 42 Ind Cas 642; 45 C 320; 15 A L J 825; 33 M L J 648; 3 P L W 185; 6 L W 777; 22 C W N 257; 23 M L T 36; 27 C L J 175; 20 Bom L R 278; (1918) M W N 300; 9 L B R 114; 11 Bur L T 21; 44 I A 236 (P. C.) ... 476, 752
Maung Pe v. Ma Myitta, (1900) 2 Chan Toon's L C 220 ... 682
Maung Shwe Ngon v. Mi Min Dwe, S J 110 ... 976

M—contd. Page.

Mayan Thariyakath Kathijakutti Umma v. Ithikamparambil Kuthussa, 5 Ind Cas 924; 20 M L J 415; 7 M L T 173; (1910) M W N 158 ... 13
Meenakshi v. Muniandi Panikkan, 25 Ind Cas 957; 38 M 1144; 1 L W 704; (1914) M W N 672; 16 M L T 270; 27 M L J 353 ... 954
Meenakshinaidoo v. Subramaniya Sastri, 14 I A 160; 11 M 26; 5 Sar P C J 54; 11 Ind Jur 393; 4 Ind Dec (N S) 18 ... 574
Megh Singh v. Nazar Fatma, Sel Dec No. 4 of 1911 ... 821
Meghonath v. Malich, Appeal No. 420, dated the 30th August 1881, Digest Civil Rulings 1882, No. 90, Part 8 ... 46
Mehtab-ud-din v. Abdullah, 140 P R 1908, 93 P W R 1907 ... 823
Mengha Ram v. Hassu, 49 Ind Cas 231; 41 P R 1918 ... 162
Meser Mulick v. Hafiyuddi Mullick, 9 Ind Cas 965; 13 C L J 316 ... 729
Metropoliton Board of Works v. McCarthy, (1874) 7 H L 243; 43 L J P C 385; 31 L T 182; 23 W R 1 5 ... 33
Meyer v. Everth, (1814) 4 Camp 22; 15 R R 722 ... 544
Mi Myin v. Nga Twe, U B R (1904—1906), Buddhist Law, Divorce p 19 ... 975
Mi Nyo v. Mi Nyein Tha, 2 U B R (1904-05) Buddhist Law, Inheritance, 15 ... 682
Mi Thaik v. Mi Tu, (1883) S J L B 184 ... 682
Midnapore Zemindari Co. Ltd. v. Gobinda Mahto, 8 C L J 31 at p 33 ... 100
Midnapur Zemindary Co. v. Secretary of State for India, 40 Ind Cas 93; 21 C W N 834; 44 C 352 ... 570
Miles v. New Zealand Alford Estate Co, (1886) 32 Ch D 266; 55 L J Ch 80 ; 54 L T 582; 34 W R 669 ... 101
Mina Kumari Bibi v. Surendra Narain Chakravaty, 3 Ind Cas 12; 14 C W N 96; 10 C L J 226 ... 961
Minakshi v. Virappa, 8 M 89; 9 Ind Jur 21; 3 Ind Dec (N. S) 62 ... 258
Minalal Shadiram v. Kharsetji Jivaji, 30 B 395; 8 Bom L R 296 ... 352
Mir Allahdad Khan v. Hiradas, 1 S D 437 ... 488
Mir Mahomed v. Khubomal, 21 Ind Cas 517; 7 S L R 58 ... 493
Mirza v. Samdili, 99 P R 1892 ... 12
Mirza Shamsher Bahadur v. Kunj Behari Lal, 7 C L J 414; 12 C W N 273; 3 M L T 212 ... 189
Mithoo Singh v. Gopal Lal, 3 C W N 761 ... 512
Mohammad Mahmud Shah, In re, 13 C 66; 6 Ind Dec (N.S) 541 ... 72
Mohammad Mumtaz Ali Khan v. Partab Singh, Sel Cas No. 233 of 1893 ... 307
Mohanlal v. Tekchand, 18 Ind Cas 826; 9 N L R 18 ... 826
Mohendra Nath Chakraburty v. Ramtaran Bandopadhya, 55 Ind Cas 96; 23 C W N 1049; 31 C L J 357 ... 517
Mohim Chandra Deb v. Pyari Lal Das, 39 Ind Cas 213; 21 C W N 537; 44 C 412; 25 C L J 99 ... 1002
Mohini Mohun Dass v. Juggobundoo Bose, 9 W R 312 ... 346

M—contd. Page.

Moinuddin Khan v. Chajju Singh, 2 A L J 276 ... 1003
Mokoondo Lal Shaw v. Gonesh Chunder Shaw, 1 C 104 1 Ind Dec (N S) 68 ... 378
Moll Schutte & Co. v. Luchmi Chand, 25 C 505; 2 C W N 283, 13 Ind Dec (N. S.) 335 ... 648
Moonshee Buzlool Rahman v. Iron Dhun Dutt, 8 W R 2 2 ... 301
Moruful Huq v. Surendra Nath Roy, 15 Ind Cas 843; 16 C W N 1002 ... 607
Motabhay Mulla Essabhoy v. Mulji Haridas, 29 Ind Cas 223; 42 I A 10 ; 17 M L T 402; 28 M L J 589; 13 A L J 529; 19 C W N 713; 21 C L J 507; 17 Bom L R 460; 2 L W 524, (1915) M W N 522; 39 B 399 (P. C.) ... 335
Moti Shah v. Crown, 39 P R 1889 Cr ... 418
Motilal v. Surajmal, 30 B 167; 6 Bom L R 1038 ... 604
Moulvi Nizamuddin v. Kasturchand, 15 C P L R 61 ... 135
Muhammad Abdul Ghaffur Rowther v. Hamida Beevi Ammal, 52 Ind Cas 505; 42 M 631; 25 M L T 242; 36 M L J 456; (1919) M W N 484 ... 553
Muhammad Akbar v. Munshi Ram, A W N (1899) 203 ... 140
Muhammad Allahdad Khan v. Muhammad Ismail Khan, 10 A 209; 6 Ind Dec (N. S.) 193 ... 925
Muhammad Bakhsh v. Amir Begam, 44 Ind Cas 837; 23 P R 1918 ... 597
Muhammad Husain v. Abdul Kareem, 29 Ind Cas 237; 39 M 544; 17 M L T 424 ... 564
Muhammad Hussain v. Sultan Ali, 54 P R 1903 823
Muhammad Sulaiman Khan v. Muhammad Yar Khan, 11 A 267 at p 283 (F. B); A W N (1889) 55; 13 Ind Jur 427; 6 Ind Dec (N. S.) 598 ... 285
Muhammad Umar Khan v. Muhammad Niaz-uddin Khan, 13 Ind Cas 344; 39 I A 19; 9 A L J 137; 15 C L J 1912; 12 P L R 1912; 22 M L J 240; 14 Bom L R 182; 16 C W N 458; 39 C 418; 126 P R 1912; 6 P W R 1912; (1912) M W N 77; 11 M L T 76 (P. C.) ... 626
Muhammad Yakub v. Emperor, 6 Ind Cas 454; 32 A 571; 7 A L J 649; 11 Cr L J 255 ... 439
Muhammad Yussub v. Sayad Ahmed, 1 B H C R App) XVIII ... 685
Mukhtar Ahmad v. Barati Lal, 25 Ind Cas 316; 17 O C 224; 1 O L J 335 ... 753
Mulraj Khatau v. Vishwanath Prabhuram Vaidya, 17 Ind Cas 627; 37 B 198; (19 2) M W N 1247 12 M L T 652; 11 A L J 7; 24 M L J 6); 17 C W N 209; 15 Bom L R 9; 17 C L J 162; 40 I A 24 (P. C) ... 147
Mungal Pershad Dichit v. Grija Kant Lahiri, 8 C 51; 8 I A 123; 11 C L R 113; 4 Sar P C J 249; 4 Ind Dec (N. S.) 32 ... 802
Mungala Dabee v. Dinonath Bose, 12 W R (A. O. J.) 35; 4 B L R (O. C.) 72 ... 524
Mungniram Marwari v. Gursahai Nand, 17 C 347; 16 I A 195; 13 Ind Jur 449; 5 Sar P C J 463; 8 Ind Dec (N. S) 770 ... 970
Municipal Commissioner of Bombay v. Mathurabai, 30 B 558, 8 Bom L R 457; 4 Cr L J 23 ... 2

Page.

M—concld.

Municipality of Parola v. Lakshamandas, 25 B 142 at p 150; 2 Bom L R 857 ... 528
Munisami Mudaly v. Abbu Reddy, 27 Ind Cas 323; 38 M 705; (1915) M W N 45; 27 M L J 740 267, 612
Munna Lal v. Hajira Jan, 7 Ind Cas 404; 7 A L J 879; 38 A 28 ... 175
Muno Muhammad Rowther v. Muthu Alagappa Chettiar, 44 Ind Cas 894; 34 M L T 234; 23 M L T 16 ; 7 L W 380 ... 118
Murugesam Pillai v. Gnana Sambanda Pandra Sannadhi, 39 Ind Cas 659; 40 M 402 at pp 408, 409; 21 M L T 288; 32 M L J 369; 15 A L J 281; 1 P L W 457; 5 L W 759; 21 C W N 761; 19 Bom L R 456; 25 C L J 589; (1917) M W N 487; 44 I A 98 (P. C.) ... 137
Muthia Chetty v. Arunachallam Chetty, 23 Ind Cas 745; 7 Bur L T 1; 7 L B R 129 ... 923
Muthia Naick v. Emperor, 43 Ind Cas 592; 41 M. 322; 19 Cr L J 176 ... 230
Muthiah Chettiar v. Bawa Sahib, 26 Ind Cas 46; 27 M L J 605; 1 L W 96 ... 260
Muthukrishna Aiyar v. Veeraraghava Aiyar, 21 Ind Cas 316 38 M 297; 25 M L J 356; (1913) M W N 839; 14 M L T 411 ... 146
Muthumeenakshi Ammal v. Chendra Sekhara Ayyar, 27 M 493 ... 938
Muthuvijia v. Venkatachallam Chetti, 20 M 35; 6 M L J 235; 7 Ind Dec (N. s) 25 ... 536
Muttukaruppa Kundan v. Rama Pillai, 3 M H C R 158 ... 250
Mylapore Iyasawmy v. Yeo Kay, 14 C 801 (P. C.); 14 I A 168; 11 Ind Jur 397; 5 Sar P C J 50; 7 Ind Dec (N. s.) 531 (P. C.) ... 929
Myna Boyee v. Otaram, 8 M I A 400; 2 W R P C 4; 2 M H C R 196; 1 Suth P C J 452; 1 Sar P C J 797; 19 E R 582 (P. C.) ... 953

N

Naduvil Edom Kelu Achan v. Varadaraju Aiyar, 24 Ind Cas 481; 26 M L J 238 ... 242
Nafar Chandra v. Ratanmala Debi, 7 Ind Cas 921; 15 C W N 66; 13 C L J 85 ... 377
Naginlal v. Official Assignee, 17 Ind Cas 876; 37 B 243; 14 Bom L R 1148 ... 528
Nand Ram v. Bhupal Singh, 13 Ind Cas 5; 8 A L J 1294; 34 A 126 ... 873
Nanjappa Goundan v. Peruma Goundan, 4 Ind Cas 18; 32 M 530; 6 M L T 284; 19 M L J 454 ... 493
Nanomi Babuasin v. Modhun Mohun, 13 I A 1; 4 Sar P C J 682; 13 C 21; 10 Ind Jur 151; 6 Ind Dec (N. s) 510 ... 747
Narain Prasad v. Sarnam Singh, 40 Ind Cas 284; 44 I A 163; 15 A L J 584; 2 P L W 29; 21 C W N 900; 33 M L J 39; 19 Bom L R 646; 26 C L J 97; (1917) M W N 516; 6 L W 334; 39 A 500 (P. C.) ... 767
Narain Singh v. Chaturbhuj Singh, 20 A 362; A W N (1898) 72; 9 Ind Dec (N. s) 592 ... 319
Narasimma Thatha Acharya v. Anantha Bhatta, 4 M 301; 1 Ind Dec (N. s.) 1107 ... 23
Narayan v. Ganoji, 15 B 692; 8 Ind Dec (N. s.) 468 ... 536

Page.

N—concld.

Narayan Bisnoi v. Jaswant Singh, 1 N L R 147 ... 393
Narayan Shankar v. Secretary of State, 30 B 570; 8 Bom L R 543 ... 425
Narayan Vithal v. Govind Narayan, 1 N L R 154 ... 177
Narayana Annavi v. Ramalinga Annavi, 36 Ind Cas 423; 39 M 587 ... 998
Narayanan Chettiar v. Lakshmanan Chettiar, 29 Ind Cas 1; 39 M L J 456; 28 M L J 571 ... 522
Narpat Singh v. Mahomed Ali, 11 C 1; 4 Sar P C J 558; Rafique and Jackson's P C N No 82; 5 Ind Dec N. s.) 757 (P C.) ... 938
Nasrat Ullah v. Mujib Ullah, 13 A 303; A W N (1891) 117; 7 Ind Dec (N. s.) 195 ... 611
Nathu Singh v. Gulab Singh, 17 A 167; A W N (1895) 36; 8 Ind Dec N. s.) 433 ... 628
Native Iron Ore Company, In re, (1876) 2 Ch D 345; 45 L J Ch 517; 34 L T 777; 24 W R 603 ... 167
Nawab Khan v. Sheikh Ghulam Ahmed, 7 P R 1875 ... 702
Nawab Malka Jahan Sahiba v. Deputy Commissioner of Lucknow, 6 I A 67; 3 Sar P C J 214; Rafique & Jackson's P C No. 55 ... 307
Nawab Muhammad Azmat Ali Khan v. Lalli Begum, 9 I A 8; 8 C 423; 4 Sar P C J 310; 6 Ind Jur 201; 17 P R 1882; 4 Ind Dec (N. s) 269 ... 425
Nawab Nazir Begam v. Rao Raghunath Singh, 50 Ind Cas 434; 46 I A 43; 36 M L J 521; 17 A L J 591; 23 C W N 700; 21 Bom L R 484; 26 M L T 40; 30 C L J 86; (1919) M W N 498; 1 U P L R (P. C.) 49; 41 A 571; 11 L W 188 (P. C.) 768, 869, 1008
Nawal Singh v. Emperor, 14 Ind Cas 766; 34 A 393; 9 A L J 481; 13 Cr L J 302 ... 855
Neall v. Beadle, (1913) 107 L T 616; 57 S J 77 14
Nihal Devi v. Kishore Chand, 8 Ind Cas 999; 97 P R 1910; 142 P W R 1910; 11 P L R 1911 ... 183
Nil Madhab v. Haran Prosad, 20 Ind Cas 325; 17 C W N 1161; 19 C L J 146 ... 531
Nimmala Mahankali v. Kallakuri Subba Rao, 41 Ind Cas 268; 32 M L J 455 ... 564
Nirodbarani Dasi v. Shiba Das Pal, 3 Ind Cas 76; 36 C 975; 13 C W N 1084 ... 23
Nissim Isaac Bekhor v. Haji Sultanalli Shustary, 28 Ind Cas 433; 17 Bom L R 249 at p 257; 40 B 11 ... 911
Nitayi Behari Saha Paramanik v. Hari Govinda Saha, 26 C 677; 13 Ind Dec (N. s.) 1033 ... 465
North v. Percival, (1898) 2 Ch 128, 67 L J Ch 321; 78 L T 615; 46 W R 552 ... 31
North London Co. v. Great Northern Railway Co., (1883) 11 Q B D 30; 52 L J Q B 380; 48 L T 695; 31 W R 495 ... 575
Nundo Lal Mullick v. Punchanon Mukherjee, 42 Ind Cas 484; 45 C 60; 26 C L J 187; 21 C W N 1076 ... 736
Nur Ali v. Bahawl, 31 Ind Cas 386; 34 P R 1916; 54 P W R 1916 ... 652
Nur-ud-din v. Pran Kishen Chakravarty, 47 Ind Cas 16; 16 A L J 630; 40 A 659 ... 883
Nusserwanjee Pestonjee v. Meer Mynooddeen Khan, 6 M I A 134; 19 E R 59 ... 693

Page.

O

Official Assignee of Madras v. Mary Dalgairns, 26 M 440 ... 452
Oriental Government Security Life Assurance Co. Ltd. v. Oriental Assurance Co Ltd., 21 Ind Cas 258; 40 C 570 ... 711

P

Pal Devi v. Fakir Chand, 60 P R 1895 ... 480
aladugu Parasuramayya v. Valli Ramachandradu, 21 Ind Cas 561; 38 M 432; 14 M L T 392; (1913) M W N 871 ... 676
Palakdhari Rai v. Manners, 23 C 179; 12 Ind Dec (N. S.) 119 ... 418
Palakkunnath Illath Govindan Nambudri v. Ottathayil Moidin, 42 Ind Cas 943; 41 M 469; 33 M L J 693 ... 155
Palaniandy Goundan v. Emperor, 1 Ind Cas 54; 32 M 218; 5 M L T 218; 9 Cr L J 146 ... 54
Palaniappa Chetty v. Palaniappa Chetty, 40 Ind Cas 185; 40 M 18; 32 M L J 364; (1917) M W N 393; 5 L W 776 ... 514
Palaniappa Chetty v. Sreemath Deivasikamony Pandara Sannadhi, 39 Ind Cas 722; 40 M 709; 21 C W N 729; 15 A L J 485; 1 P L W 697; 33 M L J 1; 19 Bom L R 567; 22 M L T 1; (1917) M W N 507; 26 C L J 153; 6 L W 222; 44 I A 147 (P. C.) ... 882
Panchkari Chattapadhya v. Maharaj Bahadur Singh, 28 Ind Cas 708; 19 C W N 136 ... 811
Pandharinath v. Shankar, 25 B 586, 3 Bom L R 244 ... 68
Pandit Badri Prosad v. Bhim Sen, Sel Dec No. 2 of 1892 ... 821
Pandu v. Pandu, 5 C P L R 80 ... 761
Parbati Kumari Debi v. Jagadis Chunder Dhabal, 29 C 433 (P. C.); 29 I A 82; 6 C W N 490; 4 Bom L R 365; 8 Sar P C J 205 ... 177
Parbhudas Lakhmidas v. Shankarbhai, 11 B 632; 6 Ind Dec (N. S.) 435 ... 807
Parkinson v. Hanbury, (1867) 2 H L I at pp 11 19; 36 L J Ch 292; 16 L T 243; 15 W R 642 ... 135
Parmanand v. Birkhu, 1 Ind Cas 903; 5 N L R 21 ... 383
Parmanand Misir v. Sahib Ali, 11 A 438; A W N (1889) 155; 6 Ind Dec (N S) 708 ... 987
Partab Singh v. Bhaputi Singh, 21 Ind Cas 288; 40 I A 182; 17 C W N 1165; (1913) M W N 785; 14 M L T 299; 25 M L J 492; 11 A L J 901; 16 O C 247; 18 C L J 384; 15 Bom L R 1001; 35 A 487 (P. C.) ... 401
Partab Singh v. Karam Chand, 184 P R 1889 (F. B.) ... 273
Parvatibai v. Vishvanath, 29 B 207; 6 Bom L R 1125 361, 570
Patch v. Ward, (1867) 3 Ch App 203 at pp 206, 207; 18 L T 134; 16 W R 441 ... 607
Patent Bread Machinery Company, In re; Valpy & Chaplin, Ex parte, (1872) 7 Ch Ap 289; 26 L T 228; 20 W R 347 ... 164
Peary Mohun Mondal v. Radhika Mohun Hazra, 8 C W N 315 ... 467
Penney v. Todd, (1878) 26 W R (Eng) 502 ... 840
Perumal Uddyar v. Krishnama Chettyar, 17 M 251; 6 Ind Dec (N. S.) 173 ... 495

Page.

P—contd.

Perumbra Nayar v. Subrahmanian Patter, 23 M. 445; 10 M L J 61; 8 Ind Dec (N. S) 712 ... 256
Petherpermal Chetty v. Muniandy Servai, 35 C 55'; 10 Bom L R 590; 12 C W N 562; 5 A L J 290; 7 C L J 528; 14 Bur L R 108; 18 M L J 277; 35 I A 98; 4 M L T 12; 4 L B R 266 (P. C.) 522
Phula v. Shibdayal, 34 P R 1873 ... 702
Pirbhu Narain Singh v. Amir Singh, 29 A 369; A W N (1907) 83 ... 140
Pirthi Chand Lal Chowdhury v. Sheikh Basarat Ali, 3 Ind Cas 449; 13 C W N 1149; 10 C L J 343; 37 C 30 ... 818
Po Kin v. Crown, 1 L B R 355 ... 228
Pollock v. Kelly, (1856) 6 Ir C L R 367 ... 128
Ponniah Nadan v. Deivani Ammal, 52 Ind Cas 247; 36 M L J 493; 9 L W 453; 46 M L T 311 ... 119
Ponnusami Pillai v. Samu Ammal, 38 Ind Cas 937; 31 M L J 247 ... 482
Ponnusami Pillai v. Singaram Pillai, 46 Ind Cas 849; 41 M 731; 34 M L J 526; (1918) M W N 768 ... 957
Poole v. Huskinson, (1843) 11 M & W 827; 152 E R 1039 ...
Pothi Naicken v. Nagama Naicker, 32 Ind Cas 486; 30 M L J 62; 19 M L T 50; 3 L W 115, (1916) 1 M W N 79 ... 643
Poultney, In re, Poultney v. Poultney, (1912) 1 Ch 245 ... 375
Poultney, In re; Poultney v. Poultney, (1912) 2 Ch 541; 81 L J Ch 748; 107 L T 1; 56 S J 667 ... 375
Powell v. Broadhurst, (1901) 2 Ch 160; 70 L J Ch 587; 84 L T 620; 49 W R 532; 17 T L R 501 ... 410
Prag Narain v Mul Chand, 19 A 535; A W N (1897) 150; 9 Ind Dec (N S.) 346 ... 618
Prakasarayanim Garu v. Venkata Rao, 21 Ind Cas 319; 38 M 100; 25 M L J 300; (1913) M W N 800 ... 957
Pramotha Nath Gangooly v. Khetra Nath Banerjee, 32 C 270; 9 C W N 247 ... 425
Prankrishna Chandra, In the matter of the petition of, 6 B L R App 80 ... 228
Prem Sukh Das v. Ram Bhujawan Mahto, 52 Ind Cas 964; (1919) Pat 451; 1 P L T 34 ... 860
President of the Taluk Board v. Narayanan, 16 M 317; 3 M L J 12; 5 Ind Dec (N. S.) 928 ... 528
Price v. Thomas, (1831) 2 B & Ad 218; 109 E R 1125; 36 R R 550 ... 155
Prince Mirza Jehan Kadr Bahadoor v. Nawab Badshoo Bahoo Sahiba, 12 I A 124; 12 C 1; 4 Sar P C J 630; 9 Ind Jur 322; Rafique & Jackson's P C No. 91; 6 Ind Dec (N. S.) 1 ... 307
Prince Mirza Jehan Kudr Bahadur v. Nawab Afsur Bahu Begum, 6 I A 76; 4 C 727; 3 Sar P C J 865; Rafique & Jackson's P C No. 54; 3 Ind Jur 222; 2 Ind Dec (N. S.) 462 ... 307
Priya Nath Bachier v. Miajan Sardar, 20 Ind Cas 571; 24 C L J 83 ... 48
Probhabati Dasi v. Taibaturinessa Chaudhurani, 20 Ind Cas 664; 17 C W N 1088; 19 C L J 62 811
Prosonno Kumar Chakravarti v. Prokash Chandra Dutta, 28 Ind Cas 562; 19 C W N 329 ... 539

P—concld.

Page.

Prosunna Kumari Debya v. Golab Chand, 14 B L R 450; 3 Sar P C J 449; 23 W R 253; 2 I A 145; 3 Suth P C J 102 ... 23
Protap Chandra Roy v. Judhister Das, 23 Ind Cas 69; 19 C W N 143; 19 C L J 408 ... 181
Protap Chandra Saha v. Mohammad Ali Sarkar, 20 Ind Cas 443; 41 C 342; 19 C L J 66; 18 C W N 592 ... 476
Public Prosecutor v. Abdul Hameed, 22 Ind Cas 981; 36 M 585 at pp 589, 590; 15 Cr L J 197 ... 439
Pugalia Vettorammal v. Vettor Goundan, 13 Ind Cas 475; 22 M L J 321; (1912) M W N 89; 11 M L T 103 ... 998
Pulaka Veetil Muthalakulangara Kunhu Moidu v. Thiruthipalli Modhava Menon, 1 Ind Cas 1; 32 M 410 19 M L J 584 (F. B.) ... 542
Puran Chand v. Sheodat Rai, 29 A 212; A W N (1907) 31; 4 A L J 51 ... 271
Puri Dass v. Kanhu Behera, 38 Ind Cas 135; 1 P L J 536 ... 345
Pusapati Venkatapathiraju Garu v. Vatsawaya Venkata Subbadrayyamma, 47 Ind Cas 563 at pp 573, 574 ... 497
Puttu Lal v. Ram Sarup, 46 Ind Cas 190; 16 A L J 468 ... 161

Q

Queen v. Barnardo Jone's case, (1891) 1 Q B 194; 64 L T 72; 39 W R 195 ... 242
——— v. Burah, (1878) 3 A C 889 at p 907 ... 445
——— v. Mittun, 11 W R 53 Cr ... 852
——— v. Slator, (1881) 8 Q B D 267 at p 272; 30 W R 410; 51 L J Q B 246; 46 J P 694 ... 238
Queen-Empress v. Abdul Hossein, 15 C 194; 12 Ind Jur 347; 7 Ind Dec (N. S.) 714 ... 497
——— ——— v. Kangla, 23 A 82; A W N (1900) 208 ... 228
——— ——— v. Mona Puna, 16 B 661; 8 Ind Dec (N. S.) 919 ... 50
——— ——— v. Mutasaddi, 21 A 107; A W N (1898), 185; 9 Ind Dec (N. S.) 778 ... 50
——— ——— v. Nga Tun Bye, U B R (1897-01) I, 354 ... 228
——— ——— v. O'Brien, 19 A 111; A W N (1893) 191; 9 Ind Dec (N. S.) 72 ... 777
——— ——— v. Soshi Bhushan, 15A 210; A W N (1893) 96; 7 Ind Dec (N. S.) 853 ... 510
——— ——— v. Tribhavan Manekchand, 9 B 131; 5 Ind Dec (N. S.) 88 63, 508
Quilter v. Heatly, (1883) 23 Ch D 42; 48 L T 373; 31 W R 331 ... 458
Quinn v. Leathem, (1901) A C 495 at p 506; 70 L J P C 76; 85 L T 289; 50 W R 139; 65 J P 708; 17 T L R 749 ... 45

R

Page.

R v. Ingham, (1859) 29 L J M C 18; 8 Cox C C 240; 24 Jur 55; 8 W R 28 ... 793
R v. Isaac Schama and Jacob Abramovitch, (1914) 11 Cr App R 45 at p 49; 84 L J K B 396; 112 L T 480; 79 J P 184; 59 S J 284; 81 T L R 88 ... 849
R M S Chetty v. Mahomed Essa Saheb, 5 C W N 692 ... 975
Rachappa Subrao v. Shidappa Venkatrao, 50 Ind Cas 280; 46 I A 24; 21 Bom L R 289; 17 A L J 418; 25 M L T 298; 36 M L J 437; 29 C L J 452; 43 B 507; 10 L W 274; 24 C W N 33; 1 U P L R (P. C.) 83 (P. C.) ... 341
Radha Gobind Koer v. Rakhal Das Mukherjee, 12 C 82; 6 Ind Dec (N. S.) 56 ... 391
Radha Pershad Singh Bahadur v. Ram Khelawan Singh, 23 C 302; 12 Ind Dec (N. S.) 202 ... 465
Radha Prasad Mullick v. Ranee Mani Dasee, 35 C 896; 12 C W N 729 (P. C.); 35 I A 118; 4 M L T 23; 18 M L J 287; 5 A L J 460; 10 Bom L R 604; 8 C L J 48 ... 377
Radhamoni Debi v. Collector of Khulna, 27 C 943; 27 I A 136; 4 C W N 597; 2 Bom L R 592; 7 Sar P C J 714; 14 Ind Dec (N. S.) 617 ... 812
Raghubar Mahto v. H. Manners, 11 Ind Cas 389; 13 C L J 568 ... 369
Raghunath v. Nil Kanth, 20 C 843 (P. C.); 20 I A 112; 6 Sar P C J 302; 17 Ind Jur 374; Rafique & Jackson's P C No. 129; 10 Ind Dec (N. S.) 567 ... 273
Raghunath Das v. Sundar Das Khetri, 24 Ind Cas 304; 42 C 72 at p 83; 18 C W N 1058; 1 L W 567; 27 M L J 150; 16 M L T 353; (1914) M W N 747; 16 Bom L R 814; 20 C L J 555; 13 A L J 154; 41 I A 251 (P. C.) 260, 463
Raghunath Roy Marwari v. Durga Prashad Singh, 50 Ind Cas 849; 23 C W N 914; 17 A L J 597; 36 M L J 660; 1 U P L R (P. C.) 43; 26 M L T 76; 30 C L J 169; 21 Bom L R 895; 10 L W 347 (P. C.) ... 187
Raghunathji Tarachand v. Bank of Bombay, 2 Ind Cas 173; 34 B 72; 11 Bom L R 255 ... 136
Rahimadulla Sahib v. Emperor, 31 M 140; 17 M L J 584; 3 M L T 79; 7 Cr L J 54 ... 856
Raj Kaur v. Talok Singh, 33 Ind Cas 992; 38 P R 1916; 99 P W R 1916 ... 824
Raja v. Krishnabhat, 3 B 232; 2 Ind Dec (N. S.) 156 ... 686
Raja Kishendatt Ram v. Raja Mumtaz Ali Khan, 5 C 198; 5 C L R 213; 6 I A 145; 4 Sar P C J 17; 3 Suth P C J 637; Rafique and Jackson's P C No. 58; 3 Ind Jur 426; 3 Shome L R 1; 2 Ind Dec (N. S.) 737 ... 195
Raja Mohkam Singh v. Raja Rup Singh, 15 A 352 P. C.; 20 I A 127; 6 Sar P C J 327; 17 Ind Jur 376; 7 Ind Dec (N. S.) 945 ... 273
Raja of Vizianagaram v. Collector of Vizagapatam, 25 Ind Cas 780; 38 M 1128; 27 M L J 278; (1914) M W N 610; 1 L W 635 ... 95
Rajah Amir Hasan Khan v. Mukhdoom Singh, Rafique & Jackson's P C No. 31 ... 693

Page.

R—contd.

Rajah Pirthi Singh v. Rani Raj Kower, 12 B L R 238: 20 W R 21; 3 Sar P C J 259 ... 199
Rajah of Venkatagiri v. Isakapalli Subbiah, 26 M 410 ... 676
Rajah Vurmah Valia v. Ravi Vurmah KunhiKutty, 1 M 235 (P.C.) 4 I A 76; 3 Sar P C J 687; 1 Ind Jur 134; 3 Suth P C J 382; 1 Ind Dec (N. s) 156 ... 23
Rajani Kanta Ghose v. Secretary of State for India, 51 Ind Cas 226; 46 C 90; 23 C W N 649; 45 I A 190 (P. C.) 816, 817
Rajaram v. Ganesh, 23 B 131; 12 Ind Dec (N. s) 87 ... 23
Rajendra Lall Agarwalla v. Raj Coomari Debi, 34 C 5; 11 C W N 65 ... 377
Rajendro Kumar Bose v. Mohim Chandra Ghose, 3 C W N 763 ... 180
Rajeshwar Mullick v. Gopeshwar Mallick, 35 C 226; 12 C W N 323; 7 C L J 315 ... 23
Rajkumar Singh v. Emperor, 37 Ind Cas 487; 1 P L J 298; 18 Cr L J 135; 3 P L W 33 ... 855
Rajlakshmi Dasee v. Katyayani Dasee, 12 Ind Cas 464; 38 C 639 ... 537
Rajoni Bibi v. Hafisonnissa Bibi, 4 C W N 572 ... 128
Rajya v. Balkrishna Gangadhar, 29 B 415; 7 Bom L R 439 ... 415
Ralla v. Budha, 50 P R 1893 ... 931
Ram v. Pir Baksh, 33 P R 1901; 71 P L R 1901 ... 455
Ram Bahadur Pal v. Ram Shanker Prasad Pal, 27 A 685; 2 A L J 455; A W N (1905) 158 ... 454
Ram Chandra Sil v. Ramanmani Dasi, 36 Ind Cas 890; 20 C W N 773 ... 812
Ram Charan Chandra v. Tirupulla Sheikh; 13 Ind Cas 1007; 39 C 774; 16 C W N 645; 13 Cr L J 191 ... 591
Ram Dayal Pandey v. Genda Tewari, 37 Ind Cas 641; 1 P L J 479; 3 P L W 59 ... 994
Ram Dyal Saligram v. Nurhurry Balkrishna, 18 B 368; 9 Ind Dec (N. s.) 753 ... 458
Ram Kinkar Biswas v. Akbil Chandra Chowdhury, 11 C W N 350 at p 351; 5 C L J 242; 2 M L T 137; 35 C 519 ... 464
Ram Kirpal v. Rup Kuari, 11 I A 37 at p 41; 6 A 200 (P. C.); 4 Saraswati's P C No. 489; 3 Ind Dec (N. s.) 718 ... 165
Ram Kishen Shastri v. Kashi Bai, 29 A 264; A W N (1907) 67; 4 A L J 152 ... 74
Ram Krishen Das v. Tanda Mal, 10 Ind Cas 543; 33 A 677; 8 A L J 723 ... 135
Ram Krishna v. Tripurabai, 1 Ind Cas 647; 33 B 88; 10 Bom L R 1029 ... 258
Ram Mohan Lal v. Sheikh Kachu, 32 C 386; 9 C W N 249 (F. B.); 1 C L J 1 ... 370
Ram Nigah Singh v. Emperor, 41 Ind Cas 1007; 1 P L W 772; 18 Cr L J 895; (1918) Pat 64; 4 P L W 141 ... 854
Ram Parkash Das v. Anand Das, 33 Ind Cas 583; 43 C 707; 20 C W N 802; 14 A L J 621; (1916) 1 M W N 406; 31 M L J 1; 18 Bom L R 490; 3 L W 556; 24 C L J 116; 20 M L T 267; 43 I A 73 (P. C.) ... 882
Ram Piyari v. Emperor, 5 Ind Cas 656; 7 A L J 103; 32 A 152; 11 Cr L J 203 ... 239

Page.

R—contd.

Ram Sahay v. Jagdamba Singh, 37 Ind Cas 163; 19 O C 153 at p 158; 3 O L J 683 ... 691
Ram Saran Das v. Basheshar Nath, 55 P W R 1907 ... 72
Ram Shankar Lal v. Ganesh Parshad, 29 A 385; 4 A L J 273; A W N (1907) 97; 2 M L T 248 536
Ram Tahal Singh v. Dubri Rai, 28 A 310; 3 A L J 838; A W N (1906) 21 ... 144
Rama Aiyar v. Vanamamalai Aiyar, 27 Ind Cas 736 ... 531
Rama Ayyan v Sreenivasa Pattar, 19 M 230; 5 M L J 248; 6 Ind Dec N s) 865 ... 977
Rama Iyengar v. Anga Gurusami Chetti, 46 Ind Cas 62; 8 L W 109; 35 M L J 129 ... 13
Rama Kant v. Gobind Chunder (1852) Bengal S D A 398, 12 Ind Dec o. s.) 310 ... 685
Rama Naik v. Nagamuthu Nachiar, 43 Ind Cas 515; 22 M L T 516; 7 L W 33 ... 521
Ramachari v. Duraisami Pillai, 21 M 367; 7 Ind Dec (N. s.) 474 ... 463
Ramakristha v. Ranga, 7 M 424; 2 Ind Dec N. s) 879 ... 689
Ramamurthi Aiyar v. Subramania Aiyar, 12 M L J 385 ... 74
Ramanadan v. Rangammal, 12 M 260 (F. B.); 4 Ind Dec (N. s) 531 193, 525
Ramanath Thakoor v. Chundernarain Chowdhry, Marsh 136; 1 Ind Jur (o. s.) 44 ... 345
Ramanatham Chetty v. Ragammal, 27 Ind Cas 849; 17 M L T 61 ... 969
Ramanathan Chetti v. Murugappa Chetti, 29 M 282; 4 C L J 189; 10 C W N 825; 33 I A 139; 1 M L T 327; 3 A L J 707; 16 M L J 265; 8 Bom L R 498 (P. C.) ... 22
Ramasamy Chetty, In the matter of, 27 M 510; 1 Weir 787; 14 M L J 394 ... 51
Ramaswami Aiyar v. Vaithilinga Mudali, 1 Weir 28 ... 510
Ramaya v. Devappa Ganpaya, 30 B 109; 7 Bom L R 642 ... 957
Ramayya v. Subbarayudu, 13 M 25; 4 Ind Dec (N s.) 728 ... 553
Ramayyangar v. Krishnayyangar, 10 M 185; 3 Ind Dec N. s.) 881 ... 450
Rambilas, In re, 26 Ind Cas 136; 38 M 639; 2 M L J 175; 16 M L T 505; (1914) M W N 894; 15 Cr L J 688 ... 777
Rambrichh Ram v. Tarak Tewari, 33 Ind Cas 805; 14 A L J 589 ... 315
Ramchandra v. Venkatarao, 6 B 593 at pp 602, 603; 3 Ind Dec (N. s.) 854 ... 415
Ramchunder Bapoojee v. Ramchunder Lakshmun, 9 Harr 537 ... 685
Rameshwar Prosad Singh v. Lachmi Prasad Singh, 31 C 111; 7 C W N 668 ... 171
Rameshwar Singh Bahadur v. Dhanpat Singh, 5 Ind Cas 334; 11 C L J 197 ... 329
Rameshwar Singh Bahadur v. Raghunandan Khowas, 38 Ind Cas 337; 1 P L J 403; 2 P L W 364 ... 490
Rameswar Pershad Singh v. Ram Bahadur Singh, 34 C 70; 11 C W N 178; 5 C L J 175, 17 M L J 59; 2 M L T 165 (P. C.) ... 100

R—contd.

Page.

Ramkishore v. Jainarayan, 20 Ind Cas 958; 40 C 963; (1913) M W N 661; 14 M L T 163; 17 C W N 1189; 18 C L J 237; 15 Bom L R 867; 11 A L J 865; 25 M L J 512; 10 N L R 1; 40 I A 2 3 (P. C.) ... 822
Ramkrishnapuri v. Mohanlal, 15 Ind Cas 642; 13 Cr L J 498· 8 N L R 57 ... 591
Ramlal v. Lakhmichand Muniram, 1 B H C R App. 51 at p 71 ... 135
Ramman Lal v. Ram Gopal, 47 Ind Cas 987; 21 O C 200; 5 O L J 629 ... 526
Ramphul Sahoo v. Misree Lall, 24 W R 97 ... 1004
Ramrup Mahto v. H. Manners, 4 C L J 209 ... 369
Ramsden v. Dyson, (1865) 1 H L 129; 12 Jur (N. S.) 506; 15 W R 926 ... 815
Rana Ganpat Singh v. Kangra Valley Slate Company, 62 P R 1898 ... 729
Ranchordas v. Pestonji, 9 Bom L R 1329 ... 430
Randiparazil Kunhisow v. Mulloli Chathu, 17 Ind Cas 933; 23 M L J 695; 38 M 86; 12 M L T 605 ... 269
Rangappa v. Bismila Khan, 32 Ind Cas 238; 12 N L R 9 ... 251
Rangasami Reddi v. Gnana Sammantha Pandara Sannadhi, 22 M 264; 8 Ind Dec (N. S.) 188 ... 178
Rangnath Sakharam v. Govind Narasina, 28 B 639; 6 Bom L R 592 ... 352
Rangubai v. Bhagirthibai, 2 B 377; 1 Ind Dec (N. S.) 674 ... 628
Ranjit Misser v. Ramudar Singh, 16 Ind Cas 946; 16 C L J 77; 17 C W N 116 ... 537
Ranjit Sinha v. Kalidasi Debi, 5 Ind Cas 205; 37 C 57; 14 C W N 527 ... 323
Rao Raghunath Singh v. Nazir Begam, 19 Ind Cas 639 .. 873
Ravji Appaji v. Mahadev Bapuji; 22 B 672 at p 679; 11 Ind Dec (N. S.) 1030 351, 388
Ravjinarayan v. Dadaji Bapuji, 1 B 523; 1 Ind Dec (N. S.) 345 ... 415
Rebala Bahu Reddi v. Dodla Rami Reddi, 31 Ind Cas 978 ... 613
Reddaway v. Banham, (1896) A C 199; 65 L J Q B 381; 74 L T 289; 44 W R 638 ... 711
Redfern, In re, Redfern v. Bryning (1877) 6 Ch D 133; 47 L J Ch 17; 37 L T 241; 25 W R 902 ... 477
Reference under Act No. 1 of 1879, (Indian Stamp Act), section 49, 17 A 55; A W N (1894) 204; 8 Ind Dec (N. S.) 360 ... 156
Reference from the Board of Revenue under section 46 of the Stamp Act, In the matter of, 8 C 254; 10 C L R 33; 4 Ind Dec (N. S.) 162 ... 155
Reference under Stamp Act, section 57, 24 M 176 .. 155
Reference under Stamp Act, section 57, 25 M 3 .. 155
Rendell v. Grundy, (1895) 1 Q B 16; 64 L J Q B 185; 14 R 19; 71 L T 564; 43 W R 50 ... 339
Reni (Beni) Prasad v. Hardai Bibi, 14 A 67; A W N (1892) 16 ; 7 Ind Dec N. S.) 415 ... 653
Resal Singh v. Shadi, 43 Ind Cas 317; 95 P R 1917; 174 P W R 1917; 13 P L R 1918 ... 144

R—concld.

Page.

Reynolds v Ashby & Sons, Limited, (1903) 1 K B 87; 72 L J K B 51; 87 L T 640; 51 W R 405; 19 T L R 70 ... 806
Rich v Johnson, (1740) 2 Stra 1142; 93 E R 1083 ... 189
Riply v. Nahapiet, 17 Ind Cas 902, 6 L B R 88; 5 Bur L T 155 ... 548
Robert Watson & Co. v. Collector of Zillah Rajshahye, 13 M I A 160; 12 W R P C 43; 3 B L R P C 48; 2 Suth P C J 269; 2 Sar P C J 500; 20 E R 511 ... 693
Robinson v. Duleep Singh, (1879) 11 Ch D 798; 48 L J Ch 758; 39 L T 313; 27 W R 21 ... 235
Rodocanachi v. Milburn, (1886) 18 Q B D 67; 56 L J Q B 202; 56 L T 594; 35 W R 241; 6 Asp M C 100 ... 648
Ruddar Singh v. Dhanpal Singh, 26 A 153; A W N (1903) 221 ... 1006
Rulia v. Wariam Singh, 20 Ind Cas 454; 94 P R 1913; 287 P L R 1913; 177 P W R 913 ... 931
Rungiah Goundan & Co. v. Nanjappa Row, 26 M 780; 13 M L J 412 ... 534
Rup Chand v. Jambu Parhsad, 6 Ind Cas 272; 32 A 247; 14 C W N 545; 7 A L J 349; 12 Bom L R 402; 11 C L J 454; 8 M L T 3; 20 M L J 439; (1910) M W N 432; 37 I A 93 (P. C.) ... 83
Rupa Telin v. Bisambar Teli, 8 C P L R 1 ... 383
Rupchand v. Minhomal, 27 Ind Cas 366; 8 S L R 164 ... 69
Rupchand Ramchand v. Hukumatrai, 42 Ind Cas 829; 11 S L R 56 at p 59 ... 892
Russell v. Russell, (1880) 14 Ch D 471 at p 478; 49 L J Ch 268; 42 L T 112 ... 562
Rustomjee Dhunjibhai Sethna v. Frederic Gaeble, 51 Ind Cas 486; 46 C 852; 23 C W N 496 ... 425
Rutnessur Sen v. Kali Kumar Bidyabhusan, 15 Ind Cas 701; 16 C W N 693 ... 181

S

Sachendra Nath Mitra v. Muhammad Habibullah, 24 Ind Cas 707 ... 922
Sadashiv v Narayan, 11 Ind Cas 987; 35 B 452; 13 Bom L R 661 ... 353
Sadho Misser v. Golab Singh, 3 C W N 375 ... 879
Sadhu Krishna Ayyar v. Kuppan Ayyangar, 30 M 54; 1 M L T 268; 16 M L J 470 ... 256
Sadik Husain Khan v. Hashim Ali Khan, 36 Ind Cas 104; 38 A 627 at p 651; 34 M L J 607; 14 A L J 1248; 19 O C 192; 18 Bom L R 1037; 21 C W N 130. (1916) 2 M W N 577; 21 M L T 40; 1 P L W 157; 4 O L J 22; 25 C L J 363; 6 L W 378; 30 Bur L T 140; 43 I A 2 2 (P. C.) 925
Sahib Ditta v. Daya Singh, 3 Ind Cas 271 ... 730
Sahodra Kuer v. Govardhan Tiwari, 39 Ind Cas 458; 2 P L J 280; 1 P L W 327; (1917) Pat 164 ... 939
Sahtawan v. Mohan Singh, A W N (1896) 51 ... 7

Page.

S—contd.

Sahu Ram Chandra v. Bhup Singh, 39 Ind Cas 280; 39 A 437; 21 C W N 698; 1 P L W 557; 15 A L J 437; 19 Bom L R 498; 26 C L J 1; 33 M L J 14; (1917) M W N 439; 22 M L T 22; 6 L W 213; 44 I A 126 (P. C.) 44, 526, 746, 882
Salaman v. Warner, (1891) 1 Q B 734; 60 L J Q B 624; 39 W R 547 ... 303
Salu Bai v Bajat Khan, 42 Ind Cas 200; 13 N L R 130 .. 673
Saminatha Ayyar v. Venkatasubba Ayyar, 27 M 21; 13 M L J 300 ... 68
Samiya Mavali v. Minammal, 23 M 450; 10 M L J 240; 8 Ind Dec (N. S.) 744 361, 550
Sana Eman Saib v. Mooma Ena Mahomed Meera Saib, 22 Ind Cas 77; 7 Bur L T 96; 7 L B R 70 910
Sanga v. Mali, 8 Ind Cas 1043; 214 P L R 1910 ... 919
Sanka Krishnamurthi v. Bank of Burma, 11 Ind Cas. 79; 35 M 692; (1911) 1 M W N 385; 21 M L J 620; 11 M L T 56 ... 135
Sankaran Nambair v. Narayanan Thirumumpu, 55 Ind Cas 86; 11 L W 192; 38 M L J 251; (1920) M W N 205; 43 M 405 ... 522
Santo v. Jok, 36 Ind Cas 625; 44 P R 1916; 81 P L R 1917; 213 P W R 1916 ... 824
Sanyasi Charan Mandal v Asutosh Ghosh, 26 Ind Cas 866; 42 C 225 at p 233 ... 136
Saon Gond v. Sheonandan Lal, 14 C P L R 60 63
Sarat Chandra Roy v. Nahapiet, 8 Ind Cas 1142; 37 C 907 at p 911 ... 537
Sardar Singh v. Maharaj Das, 3 Ind Cas 608; 79 P R 1909; 126 P L R 1909; 127 P W R 1909 ... 823
Sardarmull Jessraj v. Agarchand Mahata & Co. 52 Ind Cas 588; 23 C W N 811 546, 575
Sariatullah Sarkar v. Pran Nath Nandi, 26 C 184; 13 Ind Dec (N. S.) 723 ... 419
Sarurjigar Begam v. Baroda Kant Mitter, 5 Ind Cas 539; 37 C 526; 14 C W N 974; 11 C L J 563 248
Satto v. Amar Singh, 53 Ind Cas 256; 62 P L R 1919 ... 144
Satyabadi Behara v. Harabati, 34 C 223; 5 C L J 192 ... 195
Satyabadi Gountia v. Bediadhar Bar Panda, 46 Ind Cas 892; 3 P L J 404 ... 699
Satyesh Chunder Sircar v. Dhunpat Singh, 24 C 20; 12 Ind Dec (N. S.) 678 ... 596
Saunders v Vautier, (1841) Cr & Ph 240; 10 L J Ch 354; 54 R R 286 .. 575
Sawyer v. Louis Dreyfus & Co., 20 Ind Cas 504; 7 S L R 1 ... 154
Secretary of State for India v. British India Steam Navigation Co., 9 Ind Cas 783; 13 C L J 90; 15 C W N 848 ... 303
——— v. Gulam Rusul, 34 Ind Cas 535; 18 Bom L R 242; 40 B 392 ... 528
——— v. Kalekhan, 16 Ind Cas 947; 37 M 113; (1912) M W N 786; 23 M L J 181; 12 M L T 224 ... 529
——— v. Luchmeswar Singh, 16 I A 6; 15 C 233; 5 Sar P C J 275; 13 Ind Jur 10; 8 Ind Dec (N. S.) 147 ... 118
——— v. Rajlucki Debi, 25 C 239 at p 243 ... 529
——— v. Vakhatsangji Meghrajji, 19 B 668; 10 Ind Dec (N. S.) 447 ... 508

Page.

S—contd.

Seddon v. Tutop, (1796) 6 T R 607; 1 Esp 401; 3 R R 274; 101 E R 729 ... 832
Seena Pena Reena Seena Mayandi Chettiyar v. Chokkalingam Pillay, 31 I A 83; 27 M 291 (P. C.); 8 C W N 545; 14 M L J 200; 8 Sar P C J 587 ... 118
Seena Vana Ramiah Ayyar v. Gopala Ayyar, 49 Ind Cas 20; 41 M 1054; 35 M L J 355 ... 268
Sennandan v. Kollakiran, 2 M 208; 4 Ind Jur 499; 1 Ind Dec (N. S.) 416 ... 250
Seshamma Shettati v. Chickaya Hegade, 25 M 507; 12 M L J 119 ... 118
Sethurama Sahib v. Srimantha Chotta Raja Sahib, 40 Ind Cas 820; (1917) M W N 327 ... 289
Sewa Singh v. Ganeshi Lal, 5 Ind Cas 592; 8 P W R 1910 ... 876
Shabiuddin v. Deomoorat Koer, 30 C 655 ... 474
Shadi v. Empress, 17 P R 1888 Cr ... 448
Shahanchi Khan v. Begam Jan, 20 Ind Cas 451; 13 P R 1914; 286 P L R 1913; 191 P W R 1913 ... 914
Shahbaz Khan v. Umrao Puri, 30 A 181; A W N (1908) 64; 5 A L J 147; 7 Cr L J 381 ... 439
Shaikh Bahadur v. Eradatullah Mallick, 6 Ind Cas 801; 37 C 642; 14 C W N 799; 12 C L J 45; 11 Cr L J 407 ... 856
Shaikh Khoda Buksh v. Shaikh Tajuddin, 8 C W N 359 ... 729
Sham Lal v. Johri Mal, 1 Ind Cas 732; 37 P R 1909; 50 P W R 1909; 38 P L R 1909 ... 945
Shamu Patter v. Abdul Kadir Rowthan, 16 Ind Cas 250; 35 M 607; 16 C W N 1009; 23 M L J 321; 12 M L T 338; (1912) M W N 935; 10 A L J 259; 14 Bom L R 1034; 16 C L J 596; 39 I A 218 (P. C.) ... 946
Shankar v Mukta, 22 B 513; 11 Ind Dec (N. S.) 923 ... 380
Shashi Bhushan Bid v. Jotindra Nath Roy Chowdhury, 10 Ind Cas 463; 38 C 681; 15 C L J 443 ... 571
Sheik Budan v Bamchandra, 11 B 537; 6 Ind Dec N. S. 354 ... 802
Sheikh Kamar-ud-din v. Jowahir Lal, 2 A L J 397; 1 C L J 381; 9 C W N 601; 15 M L J 258; 27 A 334; 32 I A 102; 7 Bom L R 433; 8 Sar P C J 810 (P. C.) ... 1007
Sheikh Mahomed Assanoolah Chowdhry v. Shamshir Ali, 4 C L R 185 ... 680
Sheikh Sona Ullah v. Troylukho Nath Gorai, 2 C W N 383 ... 7
Sheo Narain v. Nur Muhammad, 30 A 72; 5 A L J 20; A W N (1908) 12 ... 255
Sheo Prasad Sonar v. Mangar Manhar, 25 Ind Cas 185; 12 A L J 1150 ... 1004
Sheo Shankar Ram v. Jaddo Kunwar, 24 Ind Cas 504; 41 I A 216; 18 C W N 968; 16 M L T 175; (1914) M W N 593; 1 L W 645; 20 C L J 282; 36 A 383; 12 A L J 1173; 16 Bom L R 810 (P. C.) ... 274
Sheobabu v. Udit Narain, 24 Ind Cas 490; 12 A L J 757 ... 153
Sheobarat Kuari v. Bhagwati Prasad, 17 A 523; A W N (1895) 117; 8 Ind Dec (N. S.) 660 .. 123

S—contd.

Page.

Sheodeni Roy v. Chattoorbhuj Roy, 8 Ind Cas 785; 12 C L J 376 ... 181
Sheonandan Persad Sukul v. Bacha Raut, 4 Ind Cas 54: 9 C L J 284 43, 418
Sheonandan Singh v. Ramhit Singh (Deo Saran Singh), 13 Ind Cas 593; 15 C L J 647 ... 370
Shib Chandra Kar v. A C. Dulcken, 48 Ind Cas 78; 28 C L J 123 266, 613
Shib Lal v. Paras Ram, 42 Ind Cas 242; 84 P W R 1917; 86 P L R 1917 ... 885
Shivbai Babya Swami v. Yesu Cheoo Nayakin, 48 Ind Cas 130; 43 B 235; 20 Bom L R 925 ... 261
Shoshinath Ghose v. Krishnasunderi Dasi, 6 C 381; 7 I A 250; 7 C L R 313; 4 Sar P C J 191; 3 Shome L R 231; 3 Suth P C J 812; 4 Ind Jur 589; 3 Ind Dec (N. s.) 248 ... 83
Shridhar Ballal v. Chintaman Sadashiv, 18 B 396; 9 Ind Dec (N. s.) 772 ... 273
Shrimant Sagajirao v. S. Smith, 20 B 736; 10 Ind Dec (N. s.) 1061 360, 550
Shrinivas v. Balvant, 20 Ind Cas 162; 37 B 513; 15 Bom L R 533 ... 621
Shrinivas v. Hanmant, 24 B 260; 1 Bom L R 799; 12 Ind Dec (N. s.) 709 ... 626
Simhachalam v. Rati Konta Lala, 41 Ind Cas 138; 21 C W N 573; 25 C L J 451; 18 Cr L J 762; 44 C 912 ... 777
Sinya Pillai v. Govinda Reddy, 43 Ind Cas 905; 41 M 435; (1918) M W N 107 ... 619
Sita Ram v. Raja Ram, 12 P R 1892 ... 941
Sitarambhat v. Sitaram Ganesh, 6 B H C R 250 ... 688
Sivagami Achi v. Subrahmania Ayyar, 27 M 259; 14 M L J 57 ... 453
Sivini Appalanarasimhulu v. Murada Sangasi, 17 Ind Cas 120; 38 M 33 ... 96
Siyadat-un-nissa v. Muhammad Mahmud, 19 A 342; A W N (1897) 76; 9 Ind Dec (N. s.) 225 ... 68
Smith v. Anderson, (1880) 15 Ch D 247; 50 L J Ch 39; 43 L T 329; 29 W R 21 ... 917
Sobh Nath Singh v. Emperor, 12 C W N 138; 6 Cr. L J 431 ... 55
Somasundara Mudaliar v. Ganga Bissen, 28 M 386 ... 171
Sonu Khushal Khadake v. Bahinibai Krishna, 33 Ind Cas 950; 40 B 351 at p 357; 18 Bom L R 545 ... 354
Soundaran Ayyar v. Sennia Naicken, 23 M 547; 10 M L J 329; 8 Ind Dec (N s.) 785 ... 847
South Durham Iron Company, In re; Smith's case, (1879) 11 Ch D 579; 48 L J Ch 480; 40 L T 572; 27 W R 845 ... 164
Sreemutty Soorjeemoney Dossee v. Denobundoo Mullick, (1855) 1 Boulnois 223; 3 Ind Dec (o. s.) 133 ... 377
Sri Balusu Gurulingaswami v. Sri Balusu Ramalakshmamma, 26 I A 113 at p 144; 22 M 398; 8 Ind Dec (N. s.) 286; 3 C W N 427; 9 M L J 67; 21 A 460; 9 Ind Dec (N. s.) 1001; 1 Bom L R 296; 7 Sar P C J 330 628, 633
Sri Gopal v. Pirthi Singh, 20 A 110 at p 113; A W N (1897) 216; 9 Ind Dec (N. s.) 431 ... 195

S—contd.

Page.

Sri Virada Pratapa Raghunada Deo v. Sri Brozo Kishore Patta Deo, 3 I A 154 1 M 69; 11 Mad Jur 188; 25 W R 291; 3 Sar P C J 583; 3 Suth P C J 263; 1 Ind Dec (N. s.) 45 (P. C.) ... 392
Sridharan Somayajipad v. Puramathan Somayajipad, 23 M 10; 9 M L J 350 ... 143
Srimati Bramamoyi Dasi v. Joges Chandra Dutt, 8 B L R 400 ... 378
Srinath Dass v. Hari Pada Mitter, 3 C W N 637 ... 285
Srinath Roy v. Dinabandhu Sen, 25 Ind Cas 467; 42 C 489; 18 C W N 1217; (1914) M W N 654; 1 L W 733; 16 M L T 319; 12 A L J 1193; 20 C L J 385; 16 Bom L R 901; 41 I A 221 (P. C.) ... 346
Stanley v. Dowdeswell, (1875) 10 C P 102; 23 W R 389 ... 30
Steeds v. Steeds, (1889) 22 Q B D 537 at p 540; 58 L J Q B 302; 60 L T 318; 37 W R 378 ... 410
Stephen Clark v. Ruthnavaloo Chetti, 2 M H C R 296 ... 159
Stevens v. Jeacocke, (1848) 12 Q B 731; 17 L J Q B 163; 12 Jur 477; 116 E R 647; 75 R R 614 ... 509
Stevenson v. Lambard, (1802) 102 E R 490; 2 East 575; 6 R R 511 ... 554
Stewart, Mrs. v. Bank of Upper India Limited, 34 Ind Cas 932; 32 P R 1916; 214 P W R 1915 ... 489
Subapathi v. Somasundaram, 16 M 76; 2 M L J 244; 5 Ind Dec (N. s.) 760 ... 257
Subba Naik v. Rama Aiyar, 37 Ind Cas 892; 40 M 777; 5 L W 261; (1917) M W N 426 ... 514
Subbanadri Appa Rao v. Gopalkrishnamma, 16 M 34; 5 Ind Dec (N. s.) 731 ... 553
Subbaraya Goundan v. Ranganatha Mudaliar, 32 Ind Cas 971; 30 M L J 387; (1916) 1 M W N 216; 3 L W 273; 40 M 93 ... 554
Subramania Aiyar v. Poovan, 27 M 28 ... 531
Subramania Ayyiar v. Arumuga Chetty, 26 M 30 ... 711
Subramania Chettiar v. Rajeswara Sethupathi, 43 Ind Cas 187; 41 M 327; (1917) M W N 872; 6 L W 762; 34 M L J 84 ... 238
Subramania Iyer v. Rajeswara Sethupathi, 38 Ind Cas 827; 42 M 1016 ... 476
Sukhdeo Jha v. Jhapat Kamat, 54 Ind Cas 945; 5 P L J 120; 1 P L T 49; (1920) Pat 67; 2 U P L R (Pat) 39 ... 526
Sukhnandan Singh, v. Bhagwan Dat Dube, 2 U D 180 ... 650
Sulochana Debi v. Jagattarini Debi, 53 Ind Cas 602; 0 C L J 51 ... 171
Sultan Singh v. Nidhan Singh, 31 P R 1899 ... 143
Sundar v Salig Ram, 29 Ind Cas 309; 26 P R 1911 (F. B); 34 P L R 1911; 33 P W R 1911 ... 734
Sundar Mal Marwari v. J. C. Murray, 15 Ind Cas 964; 16 C L J 375 ... 320
Sunderbai v. Collector of Belgaum, 52 Ind Cas 897; 46 I A 15; 21 Bom L R 1 43; 23 C W N 753; (1919) M W N 254 43 B 376 (P. C.) ... 341
Suradhani Debya v. Chandra Nath Pramanik, 37 Ind Cas 131; 20 C W N 1011 ... 757

S—concld.

Page.

Suraj Bakhsh v. Thakurain Chab Kuar, 26 Ind Cas 98; 1 O L J 532 .. 697
Suraj Bunsi Koer v. Sheo Persad Singh, 5 C 148; 6 I A 88; 4 C L R 226; 4 Sar P C J 1; 3 Suth P C J 589; 2 Shome L R 242; 2 Ind Dec (N. S.) 705 ... 45
Suraj Kumar v. Baldeo Das, 18 Ind Cas 701; 48 P R 1913; 23 P W R 1913; 60 P L R 1913 ... 471
Suraj Narain v. Ratan Lal, 40 Ind Cas 988; 44 I A 201; 21 C W N 1065; 20 O C 211; 2 P L W 160; 33 M L J 180; 15 A L J 684; 19 Bom L R 737; 22 M L T 121; 26 C L J 267; 6 L W 509; (1917) M W N 477; 4 O L J 762; 40 A 159 (P. C.) ... 396
Surnomoyi v. Johur Mahomed Nasyo, 10 C L R 545 ... 38
Surti v. Narayan Das, 12 A 530; A W N (1890) 110; 6 Ind Dec (N. S.) 1082 ... 570
Suryanarayana v. Patanna, 48 Ind Cas 689; 45 I A 209; 36 M L J 585; 41 M 1012; 25 M L T 30; (1918) M W N 859; 23 C W N 273; 9 L W 126; 29 C L J 153; 1 U P L R (P. C.) 11; 21 Bom L R 547; (1919) M W N 463 (P. C.) 119, 414
Suryanarayana v Venkataramana, 26 M 681 ... 395
Sutroogun v. Sabitra Dye, 5 W R 109 (P. C.) ... 88
Syam Mandal v. Seti Nath Banerjee, 38 Ind Cas 493; 44 C 954 at p 962; 24 C L J 523; 21 C W N 776 ... 260
Syert v. Jonas, (1848) 2 Exch 111; 76 R R 515 ... 544

T

T. C. Mukerji v. Afzal Beg, 27 Ind Cas 694; 37 A 155; 13 A L J 98 ... 611
Tahaldai Kumri v. Gaya Prasad Sahu, 5 Ind Cas 135; 37 C 214; 14 C W N 443; 11 C L J 588 ... 743
Talewand Singh v. Rukmina, 3 A 353; 5 Ind Jur 601; 2 Ind Dec (N. S.) 166 ... 199
Tamplin Steamship Company v. Anglo Mexican Petroleum Products Company, (1916) 2 A C 397 at p 403; 85 L J K B 1389; 115 L T 315; 21 Com Cas 299; 32 T L R 677 ... 637
Tanjore Palace Estate v. Andi Ramiah Chetty, 11 Ind Cas 339; (1911) 1 M W N 364 ... 68
Tara Chand v. Afzal Beg, 13 Ind Cas 185, 34 A 184; 8 A L J 1329 ... 571
Tara Chand v. Official Liquidators of the People's Bank of India Limited, 29 Ind Cas 265; 46 P R 1915; 90 P L R 1915; 71 P W R 1915 ... 70
Tara Das Malakar v. Ram Doyal Malakar, 2 C W N 125 ... 128
Tara Singh v. Muhammad, 74 P R 1903 ... 144
Tarak Das Pal Chowdhury v. Harish Chandra Banerjee, 16 Ind Cas 977; 16 C L J 54[illegible]; 7 C W N 163 ... 813

T—concld.

Page.

Tatham Bromaga & Co. v. Burr, (1898) A C 382 at p 386; 67 L J P 61; 78 L T 473; 46 W R 530; 8 Asp M C 401; 14 T L R 269 ... 909
Taylor v. Caldwell, (1863) 3 B & S 826; 32 L J Q B 164; 8 L T 356; 11 W R 726; 122 E R 309; 129 R R 573 ... 635
Tenant v. Elliot, (1797) 126 E R 744; 1 Bos & Pul 3; 4 R R 755 ... 619
Thaker Tirbhuwan Bahadur Singhv. Raja Rameshar Bakhsh Singh, 33 I A 156; 4 C L J 405; 10 C W N 1065; 16 M L J 440; 28 A 727; 8 Bom L R 722; 3 A L J 695; 1 M L T 265; 9 O C 377 (P. C.) ... 626
Thakore Becharji Ranaji v. Thakore Pujaji Vaktaji, 14 B 31; 7 Ind Dec (N S.) 479 ... 611
Thames and Mersey Marine Insurance Co, Limited v. Hamilton Fraser & Co, (1887) 12 A C 484 at p 493; 56 L J Q B 626; 57 L T 695; 36 W R 337; 6 Asp M C 200 ... 909
Thathu Naick v. Kondu Reddi, 1 Ind Cas 221; 32 M 242; 5 M L T 248 ... 352
Thattantavita v. Puthalathan Kandi Kombi Aliasan, 53 Ind Cas 437; 37 M L J 340; 19 L W 410; 26 M L T 297; (1919) M W N 732; 42 M 753 (F. B.) ... 260
Thellusson v. Woodford, (1805) 11 Ves 112; 8 R R 104; 1 Bos & P N R 357; 32 E R 1030 ... 378
Thikkillath Tarawat v. Manchu Nair, 27 Ind Cas 863; 2 L W 102 ... 15
Tholappala Charlu v. Venkata Charlu, 19 M 62; 5 M L J 209; 6 Ind Dec (N. S.) 748 ... 685
Thomas Pereira, In re, 1 M H C R 217 ... 72
Thompson v. Hickman, (1907) 1 Ch D 550; 76 L J Ch 254 96 L T 454; 23 T L R 311 ... 189
Tillmanns & Co. v. Knutsford Limited, (1908) 2 K B 385 at pp 402, 403; affirmed in (1908) A C 406; 77 L J K B 977; 99 L T 399; 13 Com Cas 334; 11 Asp M C 105; 24 T L R 786 ... 909
Timmappa Kuppaya v. Rama Venkanna Naik, 21 B 311; 11 Ind Dec (N. S.) 210 ... 269
Tituram Mukerji v. Cohen, 33 C 203; 32 I A 185; 2 C L J 408; 9 C W N 1073; 15 M L J 379; 7 Bom L R 920; 3 A L J 59; 8 Sar P C J 908 (P. C.) ... 574
Tok Gyi v. Emperor, 55 Ind Cas 810; 8 L B R 425; 10 Bur L T 77; 17 Cr L J 378 ... 228
Tribhovan Gangaram v. Amina, 9 B 516; 5 Ind Dec (N. S.) 343 ... 380
Tribhovandas v. Nagindas, 54 Ind Cas 233; 21 Bom L R 1137 ... 626
Tricumdass Mulji v. Khimji Vullabhdass, 16 B 626; 8 Ind Dec (N. S.) 896 ... 425
Tripura Charan Banerjee v. Hari Mati Dasi, 9 Ind Cas 657; 38 C 493; 15 C W N 807 ... 954
Trustees for the Improvement of Calcutta v. Chandra Kanta Ghosh, 36 Ind Cas 749; 44 C 219; 24 C L J 246; 21 C W N 8 ... 32
Tukaram Gopal v. Pandurang Sadaram, 25 B 584; 3 Bom L R 143 ... 68
Tukaram Manaji Dhargar v. Ramchandra Hari Peshkar, 2 N L R 25 ... 741
Tulsi Ram v. Nathu, 39 Ind Cas 93; 5 P R 1917 ... 814
Turton v Turton, (1889) 42 Ch D 128; 58 L J Ch 577; 61 L T 571; 38 W R 2[illegible]; 54 J P 51 ... 712
Tye v. Fynmore, (1813) 3 Camp 462; 14 R R 809 ... 54

Page.

U

U Shwe Gon v. Ma Hnin Bwin, 9 Ind Cas 412; 5 L B R 231 at p 236; 4 Bur L T 1 ... 682
Udai Ram v. Court of Wards, Aligarah, 29 Ind Cas 678 ... 143
Udit Tewari v. Bihare Pande, 21 Ind Cas 460; 35 A 521; 11 A L J 812 ... 549
Uma Singh v. Rai Tarini Prosad, 25 Ind Cas 532; 19 C L J 451 at p 452 ... 40
Umar Baksh v. Faizulla, 13 P R 1879 ... 702
Umes Chandra Banerjee v. Dinabandhu Mahanti, 29 Ind Cas 956; 21 C L J 570 ... 410
Unnoda Dabee v. Maria Louisa Stevenson, 22 W. R 290 ... 106
Upadrashta Venkata Sastrulu v. Divi Seetharamudu, 51 Ind Cas 304; 46 I A 123 at p 128; 21 Bom L R 925; 17 A L J 725; 37 M L J 42; 26 M L T 175; 30 C L J 441; 10 L W 632; 24 C W N 129; 43 M 166 (P. C.) ... 416
Upendra Kishori Rai Chaudhury v. Ram Tara Debya Chaudhurani, 4 Ind Cas 542; 13 C W N 695 ... 941
Upendra Nath Bose v. Bindeshri Prosad, 32 Ind Cas 468; 22 C L J 452; 20 C W N 210 ... 101

V

Vadala v. Lowes, (1890) 25 Q B D 310; 63 L T 128; 38 W R 594 607, 616
Vadapalli Narasimham v. Dromanaraju Seetharamamurthy, 31 M 163; 18 M L J 26; 3 M L T 256 ... 482
Vadilal Lallubhai v. Shah Khushal Dalpatram, 27 B 157; 4 Bom L R 968 135, 471
Vaitheswara Aiyar v. Srinivasa Raghava Iyangar, 50 Ind Cas 309; 42 M 348; 36 M L 296; 9 L W 362; 25 M L T 351; (1919) M W N 299 (F. B) ... 619
Valliamunai Achi v. Nataraja Pillay, 13 Ind Cas 906; 11 M L T 157; (1912) M W N 198 ... 613
Valu v. Ganga, 7 B 84; 7 Ind Jur 261; 4 Ind Dec (N. S.) 56 ... 199
Vaman Janardan Joshi v. Collector of Thana, 6 B H C R (A. C. J.) 191 ... 415
Vasudev Pandit v. Collector of Puna, 10 B H C R 471 ... 415
Veerabasavaraju Pantulu v. Balasurya Prasada Rao, 48 Ind Cas 706; 45 I A 265; 41 M 998; 25 M L T 1; 17 A L J 34; 36 M L J 40; 23 C W N 251; 29 C L J 184; 9 L W 243; 21 Bom L R 238; 1 U P L R (P. C.) 18 ... 392
Veeranan Ambalam Feria Karuppan v Annasawami Iyer, 12 Ind Cas 1; 21 M L J 845; 10 M L T 185; (1911) 2 M W N 162 ... 119
Velaga Mangamma v. Bandlamudi Veerayya, 30 M 308; 17 M L J 182; 2 M L T 178 ... 626
Velayutha Chetty v. Govindasami Naicken, 8 Ind Cas 364; 34 M 543; (1910) M W N 637, 9 M L T 103 ... 531
Vellanki Venkata Krishna Rao v. Venkata Rama Lakshmi, 4 I A 1; 1 M 174; 1 Ind Jur 63; 26 W R 21; 3 Sar P C J 669; 3 Suth P C J 353; 1 Ind Dec (N. S.) 116 (P. C.) ... 392

Page.

V—concld.

Venkama v. Subramaniam, 34 I A 22 at p 26; 9 Bom L R 84; 30 M 50; 4 A L J 150; 5 C L J 140; 11 C W N 345; 17 M L J 114; 2 M L T 91 ... 392
Venkat Rao v. Kohlu Gond, 13 C P L R 19 ... 269
Venkata Rajagopala Surya Row Bahadur v. Basavi Reddy, 26 Ind Cas 986; (1914) M W N 771; 1 L W 785; 26 M L T 407; 29 M L J 457 ... 841
Venkata Chariar v Rangaswami Ayyangar, 51 Ind Cas 709; 9 L W 282; 25 M L T 223; 36 M L J 532; (1919) M W N 336 ... 14
Venkatachariar v. Narasimha Ayyangar, 48 Ind Ind Cas 301; (1918) M W N 846; 35 M L J 647; 24 M L T 459; 9 L W 164 ... 14
Venkatammal v. Andyappa Chetti, 6 M 130; 7 Ind Jur 127; 2 Ind Dec (N. S.) 369 199, 525
Venkatapa Naik v. Subba Naik, 29 M 179; 16 M L J 59 ... 616
Venkatasubba Sastrial v. Subramania Aiyar, 42 Ind Cas 827; (1917) M W N 674; 6 L W 703 ... 476
Vijiarangam v. Lokhaman, 8 B H C R (O. C J.) 244 ... 625
Vinayak Shivrao v. Dattatraya Gopal, 26 B 661; 4 Bom L R 492 ... 195
Virupakshappa v. Shidappa, 26 B 109, 3 Bom L R 565 ... 100
Vishnu Trimbak v. Tatia, 1 B H C R 22 ... 416
Vithal v. Siwa, 15 Ind Cas 933; 8 N L R 82 135
Vithal Krishna Joshi v. Anant Ramchandra, 11 B H C R 6 ... 685
Vithaldas Khandas v. Indravellu, 29 Ind Cas 936; 8 Bur L T 161; 8 L B R 202 ... 930
Vitla Butten v. Yamenamma, 8 M H C R 6 ... 999
Von Hatzfeldt Wildenburg (Princess) v. Alexander, (1912) 1 Ch 284; 81 L J Ch 184; 105 L T 434 ... 30

W

Wallingford v. Mutual Society, (1880) 5 A C 635 at p 697; 50 L J Q B 49; 43 L T 258; 29 W R 81 ... 541
Walliullah v. Durga Prasad, 28 A 340; 3 A L J 181; A W N (1906) 38 ... 571
Waman Dinkar Kelkar v. Emperor, 51 Ind Cas 257; 43 B 300; 20 Bom L R 995; 20 Cr L J 433 855
Waman Jagannath Joshi v. Balaji Kusaji Patil, 14 B 167; 7 Ind Dec (N. S.) 570 ... 655
Wasappa v. Secretary of State for India, 31 Ind Cas 498; 17 Bom L R 979; 40 B 200 ... 508
Watcham v. East Africa Protectorate, (1919) A C 533; 87 L J P C 150; 34 T L R 481; 120 L T 258 ... 477
Watson and Co., v. Ramchand Dutt, 18 C 10; 17 I A 110; 5 Sar P C J 535; 9 Ind Dec (N. S.) 7 ... 609
Weatherall v. Eastern Mortgage and Agency Company, 9 Ind Cas 935; 13 C L J 495 ... 841
West v. Downman, (1880) 14 Ch D 111; 42 L T 340; 29 W R 6 ... 509
Whitaker, In re, Whitaker v. Palmer, (1904) 1 Ch D 299; 73 L J Ch 166; 90 L T 277 ... 72
Williams v. Earle, (1868) 3 Q B 739; 9 B & S 740; 37 L J Q B 231; 19 L T 238; 16 W R 1041 ... 269

W—concld. Page.

Williams v. Williams, (1894) 12 W R 663; 10 L T (N. S.) 286; 10 Jur (N. S.) 608; 3 N R 701 ... 954
Williams Brothers v. Ed. T Agius Limited, (1914) A C 510; 83 L J K B 715; 110 L T 865; 19 Com Cas 200; 58 S J 377; 30 T L R 351 ... 648
Williamson v. Barbour, (1878) 9 Ch D 529; 50 L J Ch 147; 37 L T 698 ... 135
Winn v. Bull, (1877) 7 Ch D 29; 47 L J Ch 139; 26 W R 230 ... 30
Wood v. Wood, (1874) 9 Ex 190 at p 196; 30 L T 815; 22 W R 709 ... 562
Woomesh Chandra Maitra v. Barada Das Maitra, 28 C 17 ... 195
Worral v. Deane, (1833) 2 Dowl 261 ... 545
Wright v. Harton, (1887) 12 A C 371; 56 L J Ch 873; 56 L T 782; 36 W R 17; 52 J P 179 ... 164

Y

Yashvant Narayan Kamat v. Vithal Divakar Parulekar, 21 B 267 at p 269; 11 Ind Dec (N. S.) 181 ... 654

Y—concld. Page.

Yelumalai Chetti v. Srinivasa Chetti, 29 M 294 ... 255
Young v. Kershaw, (1899) 81 L T 531; 16 T L R 52 ... 739
Young & Co. v. Bankier Distillery Co, (1893) A C 691; 69 L T 339; 58 J P 100 ... 971
Yule & Co. v. Mahomed Hossain, 21 C 124; 1 C W N 71; 12 Ind Dec (N. S.) 749 ... 643

Z

Zaka-ud-din v. Saraj-ud-din, 16 Ind Cas 772; 79 P R 1912; 217 P W R 1912; 221 P L R 1912 ... 824
Zaki Hasan v. Deo Nath Sahai, 4 Ind Cas 433; 10 C L J 470 ... 536
Zamindar of Ramnad v. Ramamany Ammal, 2 M 234; 4 Ind Jur 442; 1 Ind Dec (N. S.) 435 ... 553
Zenatunnessa Khatun v. Girindra Nath Mukherjee, 30 C 788 360, 550

S. N. Si
Advocate High Court
Jammu & Kashmir
Srinagar.

G. N. Dar
Advocate High Court
Jammu & Kashmir
Srinagar

INDIAN CASES

1920.

VOLUME LVI.

PRIVY COUNCIL.

APPEAL FROM THE PUNJAB CHIEF COURT.

December 4, 1919.

Present:—Lord Shaw, Sir John Edge, Mr. Ameer Ali and Sir Lawrence Jenkins.

Nawab Bahadur MUHAMMAD RUSTAM ALI KHAN SINCE DECEASED (NOW REPRESENTED BY Nawab MUHAMMAD SAJJAD ALI KHAN AND OTHERS) AND ANOTHER—PLAINTIFFS—APPELLANTS

versus

THE MUNICIPAL COMMITTEE OF KARNAL CITY—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Highway—Dedication to the public—Intention to dedicate—Permissive use by tenants or their visitors, effect of—Dedication to a section of the public, whether sufficient—Punjab Municipal Act (III of 1911), ss. 3, 171—Public street, what is.

In cases where the existence of a public highway is in issue, it is of crucial importance to distinguish between the grant to the public as such of a right of way and the permission which naturally flows from the use of the ground as a passage for visitors to or traders with the tenants whose shops abut upon it. [p. 3, col. 2]

A public right of way can be acquired by user of, or by dedication to, the public in general. But in order to constitute a valid dedication to the public of a highway by the owner of the soil there must be an intention to dedicate—there must be an animus dedicandi, of which the user by the public is evidence, and no more, and a single act of interruption by the owner is of much more weight, upon a question of intention, than many acts of enjoyment. The onus of establishing such an intention lies heavily upon the person asserting the dedication. [p 4, col. 1.]

A person in dedicating land to public use may place such limits as he wishes upon the dedication. There may be a dedication to the public for a limited purpose as for instance an access to a particular building, or a footway, horse-way or drift-way, but there can be no such thing in law as a public right of way constituted by dedication to only a section of the public. [p. 3, col. 2; p. 4, col. 1.]

A plot of ground left open in a market owned by a citizen, and by its nature accessory to shop property and let by him as such to his shop tenants, and neither drained, lighted, nor cleaned by a Municipality would not form a public street, and if the Municipality enters upon it and builds a road across it in spite of the objection of the owner and without taking any steps under the Statute to acquire it, such action amounts to a trespass and the ground still remains the private property of the owner. [p. 4, cols. 1 & 2.]

Appeal from a decree of the Punjab Chief Court (Sir Donald Johnstone, KT., C. J., and Mr. Justice Scott-Smith), dated the 12th April 1916 and reported as 35 Ind. Cas. 458, reversing a decree of the Court of the District Judge, Karnal, dated the 23rd December 1912.

FACTS of the case sufficiently appear from their Lordships' judgment. That judgment, however, is incorrect in stating that the District Judge affirmed, and the decree of the Chief Court disaffirmed, the existence of a public street: on the contrary the District Judge negatived the existence of a public right of way and gave plaintiffs (the Nawab, now appellant) an injunction: but on appeal the Chief Court (Scott-Smith, J., and Johnstone, C. J.) reversed the decision and dismissed plaintiffs' suit.

Messrs. De Gruyther, K. C., and O'Gorman, for the Appellants:—There is no evidence here from which a dedication to the public of the space between the shops can properly be inferred. The Nawab has held this market for a long time, but this is the first time that his ownership has ever been disputed. Before Act III of 1911 there was an Act XX of 1891 (Punjab) dealing with the same matter—vide sections 3 (g) and 75 (g): but between 1891 and 1911 the Nawab submitted to no acts impugning his absolute ownership. So far from being dedicated, the enclosure had gates, which were shut at night. The way in suit is an occupation way, not a highway.

[SIR LAWRENCE JENKINS.—If the Municipal Committee are right, you would have no right to close the gates. You have to ascertain if the Nawab had an intention to give.]

The right enjoyed by members of the public was limited to coming to the shops: it was enjoyed in the right of the tenants, not as members of the public.

Reference was made to Poole v. Huskinson (1), Anderson v. Juggodumba Dabi (2), Municipal Commissioner of Bombay v. Mathurabai (3), Kalidas v. Municipality of Dhandhuka (4).

[SIR LAWRENCE JENKINS referred to the Indian Easements Act, 1882, (Act V of 1882), section 21, illustration (b), and to Barraclough v. Johnson (5).]

The respondents did not appear.

JUDGMENT.

LORD SHAW.—This is an appeal from a decree of the Chief Court of the Punjab, dated the 12th April 1916, reversing a decree of the Court of the District Judge, Karnal, dated the 23rd December 1912.

The respondents in the appeal are the Municipal Committee of Karnal City. The proceedings had reference to an alleged public street in Karnal. The District Judge affirmed, and the decree of the Chief Court disaffirmed, the existence of such a public street.

The Municipality has made no appearance by Counsel at the Bar of the Board. Their Lordships are in the position of having to decide what ex facie is an important question of public right, in the absence of those who in the ordinary course would defend it. This has added to the difficulties of the case.

By section 3, sub-section 13, of the Punjab Municipal Act, 1911, "street" is defined to mean:—

"Any road, footway, square, court, alley or passage accessible, whether permanently or temporarily, to the public, whether a thoroughfare or not."

And by the same sub section "public street" is defined to mean any street—

"(i) over which the public have a right of way; or

"(ii) heretofore levelled, paved, metalled, channelled, sewered, or repaired out of the Municipal or other public funds; or

"(iii) which, under the provisions of section 171, is declared by the Municipality to be, or under any other provisions of this Act becomes a public street."

On one outstanding fact of the case there would appear to be no difficulty in the judgments of the Courts below, namely that, apart from the question now raised as to the street, the appellants are the absolute owners of Nawab Ganj, a market in the city. Notwithstanding the protest of the appellants, the Municipal Committee recently constructed a metalled road through the Ganj on the plea that the area over which the road was laid was a "public street" under the Municipal Act as above quoted

The Ganj is built in a form of a Katra or rectangular close, to which entrance is obtained by four gates. One of these gates was missing at the institution of the suit. The others existed and were shut at night. Round the close was a series of shops which were leased mostly to grain merchants. The enclosure thus formed is a narrow courtyard, on the floor of which the tenants pile up their grain in separate heaps, and under the courtyard there are masonary bins for storage. There seems little doubt that the solum of the courtyard was necessary, or at least most valuable, to the tenants of the shops, and these tenants not only paid rent for the shops, but paid dues for the use of the courtyard.

The Municipality have under their Act the ordinary powers of draining, cleaning and lighting. Prior to the operations complained of they never exercised any of such powers over the ground in issue, They never drained the courtyard. In the correspondence preceding the action, and in the pleading of the suit, they claimed, however, that the courtyard was municipally lighted; but it turned out, and has been so found by both Courts, that the only lighting was by two lanterns put up by or for a member of the Municipal Committee for his own convenience,

(1) (1843) 11 M. & W. 827; 152 E. R. 1039.
(2) 6 C. L. R. 282.
(3) 30 B. 558; 8 Bom. L. R. 467; 4 Cr. L. J. 23.
(4) 6 B. 686; 3 Ind. Dec. (N. s) 913.
(5) (1838) 8 A. & E. 99; 3 N. & P. 233; 1 W. W. & H. 162; 7 L. J. Q. B. 172; 2 Jur. 839.

As the learned Judges of the Chief Court say, "there is no evidence that the Mandi was properly lit by the Municipal Committee, and the putting up of these two lanterns does not prove that the place was a public one." The cleaning of the courtyard was never done by the Municipality; on the contrary, the responsibility for that was laid by them upon the appellants' predecessor. This important matter will be presently referred to.

A plot of ground of this character owned by one citizen, and by its nature accessory to shop property, and let by him as such to his shop-tenants, and neither drained, lighted, nor cleaned by the Municipality, would not appear in ordinary circumstances to form a public street. The only foundation for such a plea would be that which has been affirmed by the Court below, namely, that there existed through this Ganj a public right of way, and that this had been acquired by reason of dedication as such by the owner. The question in the case is whether this view is correct.

On this question it is admitted that there has been no dedication expressly or in writing. It appears also to be quite clear that there is no user of long duration from which an inference of such a dedication to the public would naturally arise.

Their Lordships have, however, examined the evidence of dedication relied upon by the Chief Court, and it may be at once stated that they found nothing therein which is adequate to support such a transaction.

The Board do not enter upon details, but feel inclined to cite the principal example of the evidence relied on by the Court below. It is that of Mr. Ram Chander. In the judgment appealed from it is stated "that he frequently passed through that part of the Kacha road which previously existed where the Pacca road now is. He is a perfectly independent witness, and we have no reason for disbelieving him."

Their Lordships entirely accept the description of the witness here given. On examination of his evidence, however, it turns out that for a few years back he has gone from his bungalow to his office "generally via Nawab Ganj Mandi." And he says:—

'There used to be a Kacha road previously at the place where the Municipal Committee has now built a Pacca road. I do not know whether it is a public road or not. I often pass by that road."

After explaining that his office has been in the neighbourhood only for the last seven or eight years, he adds:—

"There was no fixed way before the construction of the Pacca road. I used to pass by the way I could find. There was no drain on any side. Previously corn was generally stored on the road also. Some passage was left.....As there was no particular Pacca road and drain, corn was generally stored a little way off the centre. Most of the Banias objected to my passing. When I passed over the corn the shopkeepers objected, saying 'why do you go over the corn?'"

Their Lordships cite this as a sample not of evidence of dedication, but of evidence which is wholly insufficient to suggest dedication, to the public. It is in such cases of crucial importance to distinguish between the grant to the public as such of a right of way, and the permission which naturally flows from the use of the ground as a passage for visitors to or traders with the tenants whose shops abut upon it. In the present case it appears to their Lordships extremely doubtful whether the term "dedication" can with propriety be applied to what took place. If the term be employed, it can only be in this sense that the dedication of the solum of the courtyard was dedication not to the public, but to the uses of the shopkeepers and their customers, the principal use being the storing and display of grain. At night, when business was over, the place was shut up and the gates were closed.

It is true that members of the public would get access to a place which was used by customers, and might or might not pass through it. This on the point of dedication infers nothing. A person in dedicating land to public use may, of course, place such limits as he wishes upon the dedication, if he make those limits clear and definite. That is to say, he may announce to the public that a certain road is dedicated to it as access, say, to a particular building or for a particular purpose. But there can be no such thing in law as a public right of way, constituted by dedication to only a section of the public. As Baron Parke said in Poole v. Huskinson (1):—

"There may be a dedication to the public for a limited purpose, as for a footway, horse-way, or drift-way; but there cannot be a dedication to a limited part of the public."

A further dictum of that very learned Judge may be also cited:—

"In order to constitute a valid dedication to the public of a highway by the owner of the soil, it is clearly settled that there must be an intention to dedicate—there must be an animus dedicandi, of which the user by the public is evidence, and no more; and a single act of interruption by the owner is of much more weight, upon a question of intention, than many acts of enjoyment."

Upon this point the evidence appears to their Lordships to be substantially all in one direction. According to it, intention to dedicate (apart from the user, of which a sample has been given) there was none. On the contrary, so recently as the year 1902, the Municipality itself treated the Ganj not as public but as private property. On an application of the shopkeepers therein, the municipal authority wrote, to the propierter of the Ganj asking that a well should be protected by a wooden structure, while as to the right of way, etc., the Municipality put the matter thus:—

"The way in the market is in a very bad condition, and the sweeper deputed by the State does not do any work. A bad smell is spreading in the market. It is requested that the way in the market should be paved with concrete, because the income of the octroi duty of the market is deposited in the treasury of the Nawab. If you be so generous as to get this amount deposited in the Municipal Fund, the Municipal Fund shall be responsible for cleanliness and for getting the road in the market made Pucca, otherwise you should make your own arrangements in connection therewith."

No date is assigned by the Court below for the alleged dedication; but it cannot be said that it occurred after the date of this letter: and the letter itself is a negation of the idea of dedication to the public having been made.

Notwithstanding this, the Municipality entered upon the ground and built a road across it inspite of the objection of the Nawab and without taking any steps under this Statute to acquire the ground. In the opinion of their Lordships, this was a trespass. The ground still remains the private property of the appellants.

Their Lordships will humbly advise His Majesty that the appeal be allowed, and that the decree of the Chief Court of the Punjab, dated the 12th April 1916 be recalled with costs, and the decree of the District Court be restored. The respondents will pay the costs of this appeal.

Appeal allowed.

Solicitors for the Appellants: Messrs. Ranken & Chester.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

CIVIL RULE No. 744 OF 1916.

August 28, 1919.

Present :—Sir Asutosh Mookerjee, KT.

KALYAN SINGH AND OTHERS—PETITIONERS

versus

RAMGOLAM SINGH AND OTHERS—OPPOSITE PARTY.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 151—Act of Court—Party, whether can be prejudiced by act of Court—Judge, duty of—Inherent power of Court to make order required by justice.

On an appeal coming before the High Court that Court suggested that the matters in dispute should be investigated in a separate suit; this was accepted by both parties, with the result that the appeal was not heard on the merits. It transpired, however, that the matters could not be so investigated, and the parties were thus relegated to the position of not having the matters in controversy between them decided by the High Court. In these circumstances an application was made to the High Court for restoration of the appeal so that it might be heard on the merits:

Held, that the Court had inherent power to make the restoration in order to enable it to discharge the duty cast upon it as a Court of Justice to determine the controversy between the parties, and that applying the maxim actus curiæ neminem gravabit (an act of the Court shall prejudice no man), the failure of the Court to decide a case after submission could not be permitted to defeat the substantial rights of the litigants. [p. 6, col. 1.]

KALYAN SINGH v. RAMGOLAM SINGH.

Rule in the matter of Appeal from Original Order No. 495 of 1904, decided by Maclean, C. J., and Mockerjee J., on the 12th February 1906.

Babus Dwarka Nath Chuckerbutty and Kali Kinkar Chuckerbutty, for the Petitioners.

Babus Biraj Mohan Mozumder and Ramendra Mohan Mozumdar, for the Opposite Party.

JUDGMENT.—This is an application to vacate an order made by the late Chief Justice Sir Francis Maclean and myself on the 12th February 1906 in Appeal from Original Order No. 495 of 1904. That appeal was directed against an order of the Subordinate Judge of Monghyr, dated the 6th June 1904, in the matter of an application for restitution in execution proceedings. The effect of the order of the Subordinate Judge was that the objection to the grant of restitution was overruled. The judgment of this Court which was delivered by the Chief Justice was as follows:—

"We think this case has fallen into a little confusion, possibly, speaking with all respect, by reason of the order made by a Division Bench of this Court; but let that pass. We suggested to the learned Vakil for the appellants that perhaps the best way to deal with the case would be that the appeal should be withdrawn, leaving it to the present appellants, who are the judgment-debtors and objectors, to bring a suit to recover possession of the property in dispute, the present decree-holders, respondents, undertaking that neither the present proceedings for restitution, nor the fact that the previous suit brought by the present appellants (No. 359 of 1900) was subsequently dismissed for non prosecution on the 5th of March 1903 shall in any sense be treated as a bar to any fresh suit which the present appellants may be advised to institute in relation to the disputed property. Both parties agreeing, we by consent make the order accordingly. We make no order as to the costs of this appeal."

This order was made in the presence of Mr. Digambar Chatterjee and Mr. Dwarkanath Chakrabarti who represented the appellants and of Dr. Rashbihari Ghosh, Maulvi Muhammad Yusoof and Mr. Haribhushan Mookerjee who represented the respondents. The parties and their representatives thought that a satisfactory way had been found for the investigation of the matters in controversy. On the 19th April 1911 a suit was instituted, as contemplated by the order of this Court, in the Court of the Subordinate Judge at Monghyr. The suit was tried on the merits and was dismissed on the 14th August 1912. The plaintiffs lodged an appeal in this Court on the 6th January 1913. The papers were printed in due course, and the appeal was set down for disposal before Fletcher and Richardson, JJ., on the 4th June 1915. The Court, of its own motion, raised the question, whether the suit could be maintained in view of the dismissal for non-prosecution on the 5th March 1903 of the suit of 1900. The question was not taken up at the instance of either party. The plaintiffs could not possibly raise a question as to the competence of their suit. The defendants, who had not raised any such objection in the trial Court and had obtained a decision on the merits in their favour, were anxious to have the dispute concluded by a pronouncement on the merits of the controversy by this Court. The Bench, however, notwithstanding the terms of the judgment of the 12th February 1906 and inspite of what had happened in the trial Court and what the litigant parties anxiously desired in this Court, proceeded to deal with the question of the maintainability of the suit, came to the conclusion that the suit was barred under section 103 of the Civil Procedure Code of 1882 and dismissed it on that ground. Fletcher, J., stated explicitly that as the point was one for which the plaintiffs themselves were not responsible, he thought there should be no order for the costs of the appeal. The plaintiffs, thus baffled in their search after justice, have applied to me to rescind the order made by Sir Francis Maclean and myself on their appeal on the 12th February 1906 so that the appeal may be restored and heard on the merits. I feel no doubt that the application should be granted in the interest of justice.

I am not called upon to consider the correctness of the decision of Fletcher and Richardson, JJ. I assume for the purposes of this application that the order was right and appropriate. The position thus is that the matter in controversy between the parties has never been decided by this Court —not in 1906, because we were of opinion that it could be investigated by a separate suit, not in 1915 because another Division Bench of this Court took the view that the matter could not be investigated in a separate suit. The parties are in no way to blame for the embarrassing situation in which they now find themselves. The judgment of Sir Francis Maclean makes it abundantly clear that the suggestion first came from the Court that the matters in dispute should be investigated in a separate suit, and, as might be expected, it was accepted by both the parties. The result was that the appeal was not heard on the merits. This course was adopted on the assumption that the question could be investigated in a separate suit. That anticipation has not been realised. In such circumstances, the Court has inherent power to vacate the order to enable it to discharge the duty cast on it as a Court of Justice to determine the controversy between the parties. It would constitute a just reproach to the administration of justice by this Court, if a litigant were sent from post to pillar and from pillar to post without even ultimately obtaining a hearing on the merits of his case. In the events which have happened here, the maxim applies actus curiæ neminem gravabit, an act of the Court shall prejudice no one. This maxim is, in the language of Cresswell, J., in Freeman v. Tranah (1), founded upon justice and good sense and affords a safe and certain guide for the administration of the law. It is the duty of a Judge to try the causes set down for trial before him, and the failure of the Court to decide a case after submission cannot be permitted to defeat the substantial rights of a litigant. There is thus no escape from the conclusion that the order made by Sir Francis Maclean and myself on the 12th February 1906 should be vacated.

The opposite party has laid stress on the delay which has taken place in bringing this matter before the Court. The judgment of Fletcher and Richardson, JJ., was pronounced on the 4th June 1915. The application was ready on the 20th December 1915, though it was not actually moved before me till the 1st September 1916. Mr. Dwarkanath Chakrabarti, who was in charge of the matter, has explained that though the papers were made ready, he really found it difficult to advise his clients as to the appropriate procedure, in view of the extraordinary circumstances of the case, which, he added, were unique in his long experience. He further stated that an additional difficulty was created by reason of the fact of the establishment of the High Court at Patna. Finally, the matter was mentioned to me in Court much earlier than the date on which it was actually heard. In all these circumstances, I thought that a Rule should be issued and I have heard nothing to change my opinion.

The result is that the Rule is made absolute and the order of the 12th February 1906 revoked. The consequence will be that Appeal from Order No. 495 of 1904 will stand restored to the file of this Court as an undisposed of appeal and will be heard by such Bench as may be appointed by the Chief Justice by virtue of the authority vested in him.

As regards the costs of this Rule, it has been argued by the opposite party that they are not responsible for what has happened; that they have been throughout ready and willing to submit to a decision on the merits by this Court, both in the appeal from original order and in the appeal from original decree; and that in view of the peculiar circumstances of the case, they were bound to enter appearance in this Rule. There is much force in these contentions and they point to the conclusion that the opposite party should have the costs of this Rule. We assess the hearing fee at five gold mohurs.

The records will be retained in this Court till the final disposal of the appeal.

Rule made absolute.

(1) (1852) 12 C. B. 406; 21 L. J. C. P. 214; 16 Jur. 1141.

RADHA KISHEN v. RATTAN LAL.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 2443 OF 1919.

March 26, 1920.

Present:—Mr. Justice Chevis, Acting Chief Justice.

RADHA KISHEN—DEFENDANT—APPELLANT

versus

RATTAN LAL AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS—RESPONDENTS.

Landlord and tenant—Enhancement of rent, effect of—Agreement to vacate within one month of receipt of notice—Notice to quit not expiring with end of month, validity of—Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), . 106.

Mere enhancement of rent does not put an end to an existing tenancy. [p. 8, col. 1.]

Defendant executed a lease in plaintiffs' favour on the 30th August 1916, under which rent was fixed at Rs. 16 per mensem payable on the 2nd day of each Hindi month. The lease also contained an agreement to the effect that the defendant would within one month of receipt of notice pay the rent and vacate without objection. On the 27th May 1917 the parties agreed to raise the rent to Rs. 40 per mensem, but there was no other change in the terms of the tenancy. On the expiry of the lease on the 30th August 1917 no new lease was executed. On the 8th August 1918 plaintiffs sent defendant a notice to vacate within one month from receipt of notice This notice was received by the defendant on the 10th August, which was the 3rd day of a Hindi month. The defendant having failed to vacate, the plaintiffs sued for ejectment and for recovery of rent:

Held, (1) that the raising of the rent to Rs. 40 per mensem did not create any fresh tenancy and after the expiry of the lease the old terms still continued to apply as no fresh ones were agreed upon. [p. 8, col. 1.]

(2) that as there was a clear contract in the lease to vacate at one month's notice, section 106 of the Transfer of Property Act did not apply and the notice was perfectly valid, even though it was not received on the 2nd day of the Hindi month. [p. 8, col. 1]

Bradley v. Atkinson, 7 A. 899: A.W.N. (1885), 288; 4 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 990; Sahtawan v. Mohan Singh, A. W. N. (1896), 51; Shaikh Sona Ullah v. Troylukho Nath Gorai, 2 C. W. N. 383, distinguished.

Second appeal from the decree of the District Judge, Delhi, dated the 3rd November 1919, reversing that of the Munsif, 1st Class, Delhi, dated the 13th August 1919.

Mr. Des Raj Sawhny, for the Appellant.

Mr. Manohar Lal, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—The plaintiffs are the landlords, defendant is the tenant of a shop in Delhi City.

Plaintiffs sue for ejectment and rent.

There was a lease, dated 30th August 1916, under which rent was fixed at Rs. 16 per mensem payable on the 2nd day of each Hindi month. One clause in the lease is: "When the landlords want me to vacate I will, within one month of receipt of notice, pay my rent and vacate without objection."

On 27th May 1917 the parties agreed to raise the rent to Rs. 40 per mensem but there is no evidence as to any other change in the terms of the tenancy. The lease expired on 30th August 1917, but no new lease was executed. On 8th August 1918, the plaintiffs sent defendant a notice to vacate within one month from receipt of notice, rent in default to be at Rs. 125 per mensem. This notice was received by defendant on the 10th August, which was the 3rd day of a Hindi month.

The first Court gave a decree for rent only, holding that the notice was invalid as it was a monthly lease and the notice did not expire concurrently with the end of a month of the tenancy. The learned District Judge on appeal held that the notice was valid as it complied with the terms of the old lease which were still in force, and he gave a decree for ejectment as well as for rent, including rent for one month at Rs. 125. The defendant appeals to this Court.

As a matter of fact it does not much matter whether the decree for ejectment stands or not, as I am told by defendant's Counsel that defendant still holds possession by a new arrangement, paying Rs. 80 per mensem as rent.

Two points are argued before me, (1) that the notice was invalid, and (2) that the rent for the last month decreed by the District Judge at Rs. 125 is unreasonably high.

As to (1) reliance is placed on Bradley v. Atkinson (1), Sahtawan v. Mohan Singh (2) and Shaikh Sona Ullah v. Troylukho Nath Gorai (3) and it is urged that the Munsif's decision is correct. But all these rulings relate to cases where there was no contract, and section 106 of the Transfer of Property Act applies to such cases. "But that section begins by saying in the absence of a contract to the contrary," so where there is a contract to the contrary the section does not apply. Here we have a clear contract in the lease to vacate at one month's notice, the month to count from date of receipt of notice. So I consider the notice was perfectly valid, even though it was not received on the 2nd day of the month.

(1) 7 A. 899; A. W. N. (1885), 288; 4 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 990.
(2) A. W. N. (1896), 51.
(3) 2 C. W. N. 383.

No authority has been cited for the proposition that mere enhancement of rent put an end to the old tenancy. For plaintiffs, on the other hand, Woodfall's Law of Landlord and Tenant, 19th edition, page 259, and Lord Halsbury's Laws of England, Volume 18, pages 467 and 550, are cited. I hold that the raising of the rent to Rs. 40-0-0 created no fresh tenancy. After the year expired the old terms would still apply, as no fresh ones were agreed upon. The notice was then quite valid in my opinion.

As to rent I think Rs. 125 rather unreasonable. The new terms to which the parties have now agreed seems to me a good guide.

I accept the appeal only so far as to reduce the rent for the last month, covered by the District Judge's decree, from Rs. 125 to Rs. 80.

The appeal fails in other respects and the defendant must pay costs in this Court.

Costs in the lower Courts to be as ordered by the District Judge.

Appeal partly accepted.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

APPEAL FROM ORIGINAL DECREE No. 123 OF 1918.

August 28, 1919.

Present:—Sir Asutosh Chaudhuri, KT., and Mr. Justice Cuming.

NURUNNESSA KHANUM—

PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

Khoja MUHAMMAD SAKRU—

DEFENDANT—RESPONDENT.

Muhammadan Law—Dower, claim for, nature of—Relinquishment of dower, valid, requisites of—Burden of proof.

There is nothing in the Muhammadan Law to render valid the relinquishment of a claim for dower which was prompted when the lady was not a free agent or in a position to exercise free and deliberate judgment, and was under an influence which she was not in a position to overcome. [p. 11, col. 1.]

According to Muhammadan Law, the character of the obligation to pay the dower is a debt. The moment the dower is settled it is enforceable as a debt. The dower becomes the property of the wife by the mere contract and she may, therefore, deal with or dispose of it before taking possession of the same. The dower is the right of the woman solely; and hence it is that she is empowered to give it up or relinquish it in the continuance of the contract. As the debt is enforceable under the Contract Act, it can also be released under section 63 of that Act. [p. 10, col. 2]

There is nothing in the Muhammadan Law which requires that a relinquishment of a claim for dower, to be valid, must take place immediately after the husband's death. The lady can relinquish it at any time. No consideration is needed for such relinquishment, but it must be shown that the lady had the opportunity of considering the matter when it is said she gave up her claim. [p. 11, col. 1.]

Appeal against the decree of the Additional Subordinate Judge, Dacca, dated the 22nd December 1917.

Babus Dwarka Nath Chuckerbuty and Sasadhar Roy (Sr.), for the Appellant.

Babus Mahendra Nath Ray and Bhupendra Chandra Guha, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—This is a suit for dower by a Mohamedan lady of rank against her husband's brother. The husband died on the 13th April 1913, leaving her and his brother his legal heir. The claim is based upon a Kabinnama said to have been executed on the 27th July 1907, when the lady was a minor. The dower settled was Rs. 15,000, one-half payable on demand and the other half on dissolution of marriage. She attained majority in January 1913, that is, about three months before the death of her husband. That there was a Kabinnama was disputed by the defendants and it was also said that she had verbally relinquished her claim for dower after the death of her husband and thus released the estate from liability. The learned Subordinate Judge has held the first point in the plaintiff's favour, and as regards the second point he discusses the evidence and says that although there are minor discrepancies, he is 'inclined to believe that the plaintiff released the dower" when her husband's dead body was being removed.

It was argued on behalf of the plaintiff that even if it be so held, effect ought not to be given to any words of release she might have used, as she was then overwhelmed with grief and could not have made a relinquishment of her free-will that there was evidence that her mother and sister urged her at that time to make such a remission and that such release, if any, ought not to be considered as valid and binding upon her. The learned Subordinate Judge "did not think there was any force in this argument, as the plaintiff knew that it was her sacred duty to make her late husband free from liabilities to her, and she released her dower voluntarily although her sister and mother might have reminded her of her duty at that time, when it was the duty of every near relation to bid good-bye to the departed soul and wish him a safe voyage to his place of rest." This issue having been held in the defendant's favour and her suit dismissed, she has preferred this appeal.

It is an admitted fact in the case that "the plaintiff and her late husband had very great love for each other, and that she became overwhelmed with grief for his untimely death" (paragraph 7, written statement). What happened at the time the dead body was taken away is described by the defendant's witness Saliman Bibi in this way: "There was great noise there on account of crying. At the time of seeing the dead man's face, Nurunnessa's mother and sister held her and took her there. They took her there near the dead body to show her his face. The face was shown while they stood in front of the door of the hall. They were within the hall when they saw the face. Even when she was looking at the face, Nurunnessa (the plaintiff) was crying loudly ... ... Nurunnessa said this when she forgave 'I have relinquished my claim to Rs. 10,000 as dower, May God also pardon you' ... ... The dead body was taken away as soon as the face was shown." Another witness Mahabatjan said "The ladies were in the hall; they saw the face; the plaintiff was amongst the ladies; ... ... She began to weep very much; her mother and her sister requested her not to weep but to do her duty then and forgive the Moharana. She then gave up her Moharana saying: 'I have forgiven my Moharana, may God also forgive you.' She said this while she was weeping, ... The plaintiff was weeping very much at the time of seeing the face ... ... when she came to see the dead body her mother or sister took her there by holding her arm; her arm was being held when she gave up the claim." Khaja Enaet Hossein said: "The plaintiff then saw the face and wept aloud; her elder sister then told her to give up the Moharana; the plaintiff while weeping said 'I have forgiven my Moharana, God will also.' The dead body was then taken out." Khaja Fakirulla said: "The plaintiff was brought to the front of the door frame by her mother, her elder sister, Musa Miah's mother and my sister Latifunnessa Bibi. The plaintiff was weeping then; she was overwhelmed with grief ... ... The plaintiff's mother said something to her and her sister too said something."

It has been argued before us that even if the discrepancies in the statements of the witnesses as regards the amount and the manner in which the Moharana was said to have been given up be overlooked and the finding of the Subordinate Judge that the plaintiff relinquished her dower at that time be accepted, yet no effect should be given to it, as an act of that character must be shown to have been voluntarily and deliberately made; that her free will and deliberate judgment had been exercised. If it was a case of a document executed at that time relinquishing her dower, the Court would have required proof that she had independent advice, and was capable of exercising her judgment, that she was free from influences. It was argued that a lady in that state of mind, at such a critical time and in such surroundings was likely to be greatly influenced by any expressions of opinion that her act was a meritorious and a religious one and she might thus have felt impelled to make a relinquishment, but advantage ought not to be taken of that fact and effect ought not to be given to it, when she is not prepared to give up her claim after consideration, that there is nothing in the Muhammadan Law that such relinquishment cannot be made except on that occasion.

Baillie in his Digest says (2nd Edition, part I, page 55?, 1875) that "the gift of dower to a dead husband is valid on a favourable construction of the law." A footnote adds "to release him from responsibility at the date of judgment." Ameer Ali in his Muhammadan Law, 4th Edition, Volume 1, Chapter II, section 111, page 174, says, "A woman may release her dower to her deceased husband, that is, a widow is entitled to exonerate or discharge the estate of her deceased husband from the liability of her dower-debt." In the 4th Edition of Wilson's Digest of Muhammadan Law we find a new section added as 47A, which runs thus: "The release of dower by a wife to husband is expressly sanctioned by the Koran (K. IV 4, which is a mistake for IV 3) and is, therefore, not void for want of consideration." The passage in the Koran runs thus: "Give the women their dower freely; but if they voluntarily remit unto you any part of it enjoy it with satisfaction." Sale's Koran IV 3; see Wherry's Edition (Trubner's Oriental Series), Volume II, page 69. The same Surah is translated by Rodwell thus:—"Give women their dowry freely: but if of themselves they give up aught thereof to you, then enjoy it as convenient and profitable." (The Koran: Everyman's Library Edition, page 411). The above passage refers to remission of the dower to the husband in his lifetime. "Voluntarily" in its ordinary sense means freely, without compulsion, not under any obligation: Att.-Gen. v. Ellis (1). It was held in Jyani Begam v. Umrao Begam (2) that according to Muhammadan Law a dower is a debt and its remission by a widow without acceptance by the heirs of the husband is effective. It was argued in that case that according to Muhammadan Law the remission of a debt extinguishes it and it is not necessary that there should be any acceptance of the remission on the part of the debtor. It was contended on the other hand that the formlua pronounced "I have given up my dower for the sake of God and his Apostle" showed that the remission was in the form of a Sadaka (religious gift), that a gift according to the Muhammadan Law requires tender, acceptance and seisin (Hedaya, 2nd Edition, Book XXX, Chapter I, page 482): that the intention of the donor ought to be declared in the presence of the donee and in the case of Sadaka, seisin is necessary (Hedaya, page 489). The learned Judge accepted the view that according to Muhammadan Law a debt remitted is a debt extinguished and that no acceptance is required. In Abi Dhunimsa Bibi Ammal v. Muhammad Fathiudini (3) it was held that a relinquishment of her right to dower by a Mahomedan woman, who is a minor under the Indian Majority Act, is invalid under the Indian Contract Act (IX of 1872). That case decided as to whether the relinquishment of a dower was "an act in the matter of the dower" and protected by section 2 of the Indian Majority Act. Both the above cases are not of much help in this case. According to the Muhammadan Law it is well established that the character of the obligation to pay the dower is a debt. The moment the dower is settled it is enforceable as a debt. The dower becomes the property of the wife by the mere contract and she may, therefore, deal with or dispose of it before taking possession of the same. [Shama Charan Sircar's Muhammadan Law, Tagore Lecture (1874) page 361]. The dower is the right of the woman solely; and hence it is that she is empowered to give it up or relinquish it in the continuance of the contract. (Hamilton's Hedaya, Book II, Chapter III, page 45.) As the debt is enforceable under the Contract Act, it can also be released under section 63 of the Contract Act, but the question is whether the remission which is said to have been made in this case can be considered as binding upon the lady and irrevocable. We think that in all such cases free assent must be established. It might be shown that the lady voluntarily and deliberately gave up her right. It is quite true that members of the family to which she belonged knew the precept in the Koran, if it can be so called; and she also knew instances in her own family where dower had been given up and that it was looked upon as a meritorious act. But she was overwhelmed with grief at the time, the body was just about to be removed for burial and that very near relatives spoke to her about its being a meritorious act. She was surrounded by female relatives and it is very natural that under those circumstances a very young woman was led to say something which was understood as a relinquishment of her dower debt, without having considered the matter from her personal point of view and under a sudden emotional impulse. Circumstances of this character have impelled Hindu women to perform the Sati. If a document had been given by this lady at that time—relinquishing her rights in favour of the heir, it would have been looked upon with disfavour and we think that an alleged verbal relinquishment under such circumstances ought not to be favoured. There is nothing in the Muhammadan Law that such relinquishment, to be valid, must take place immediately after the husband's death. She can relinquish it at any time. It can be remitted in favour of the heir after the husband's death. No consideration seems to be needed for such relinquishment, but what we have to see is whether she had the opportunity of considering the matter when it is said she gave up her claim. She was in the presence of death and in great mental distress. She had no time for freedom of thought and action. It is also conceded by the learned Vakil for the respondent that free assent must be established. That is a question irrespective of Muhammadan Law. We think she was prompted and was not a free agent at the time. She was not in a position to exercise free and deliberate judgment and influence was exercised which she was not in a position to overcome. It is immaterial that she was influenced by her own mother and sister. Under those circumstances we are unable to uphold the alleged relinquishment as valid.

(1) (1895) 2 Q. B. 466; 64 L. J. Q B. 813; 15 R. 584; 73 L. T. 190 & 350; 44 W. R. 13; 59 J. P. 774.

(2) 32 B. 612; 10 Bom. L. R. 764.

(3) 44 Ind. Cas. 293; 41 M. 1026; 23 M. L. T. 78; (1918) M W. N. 246; 35 M. L. J. 465.

The learned Subordinate Judge has drawn an adverse inference against her from the fact that the Kabinnamah is not forthcoming. He thinks that inasmuch as the lady relinquished her claim it was not looked upon as a valuable document and that no care was taken to preserve it. The fact is that it was with the mother who is dead, and it cannot be found. The loss of the document need not be taken against her. She has married again and it may be that she has been influenced by her present husband to make the claim, but it is a legal debt which was due to her and which is not time-barred. She is in possession of some of the husband's immoveable properties. That debt, according to the Muhammadan Law, is a lien upon the property in her possession. It was argued that the lien could not be discharged by a verbal relinquishment; that under the Registration Act it was necessary to have a registered document. There is some force in this contention, but even if we do not accept it as correct, having regard to the circumstances of the case we cannot hold that the relinquishment is operative.

After the case had been fully argued before us, an application was made yesterday on behalf of the respondent that he should be allowed to argue certain other points which we were told his Vakil considered worthy of discussion, namely, that there was no sufficient evidence about the due execution of the Kabinnamah and also about its loss. No points other than those referred to in our judgment were even indicated when the appeal was argued. The arguments took the best portion of two days and we think it is too late to re-hear the matter. We cannot do so in the absence of the other side. One of us is going to leave India for six months, and this is the last day before the long vacation. We are unable to accede to the prayer.

We allow the appeal with costs in both Courts. There will be a decree for Rs. 15,000 in favour of the plaintiff against the estate left by her husband Khaja Mahomed Arjoo, with interest at 6 per cent. from date of suit.

Appeal allowed.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 189 OF 1920.

March 26, 1920.

Present:—Mr. Justice Martineau.

AHMAD YAR AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS—APPELLANTS

versus

SAADULLAH AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Custom—Abadi—Mortgage of house by non-proprie- tor—Presumption—Suit for possession, whether maintainable.

The initial presumption is against a non-proprietor being able to alienate the site of, and his right of residence in, his house without the consent of the proprietary body.

In the case of such an alienation the proprietors are entitled to a decree for possession.

Second appeal from the decree of the District Judge, Mianwali, dated the 8th November 1919, reversing that of the Munsif, 1st Class, Mianwali, dated the 27th May 1916.

Mr. Abdul Razaq, for the Appellant.

Lala Bishen Nath, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—The house and courtyard in suit were in the possession of Rahman. He has died and his nephews (defendants Nos. 1 and 2) have mortgaged the property to defendant No. 3. The present suit for possession of the property was first brought by Bakhtan, widow of Kamal, but Kamal's sons were afterwards substituted as plaintiffs. They alleged that the property belonged to their father Kamal, who had given it to Rahman for residence, and they disputed the right of defendants Nos. 1 and 2 to mortgage it.

The defendants denied these allegations and pleaded that they had been in adverse possession for more than 12 years.

The Munsif found that the site belonged to the plaintiffs, but that it was Rahman who had built the house on it, and that the defendants' possession was not adverse. He gave the plaintiffs a decree for possession of the site, with permission to the defendants to remove the materials of the house.

On the defendants' appeal the District Judge, after referring to a clause in the wajib-ul-arz with regard to the non-proprietors, held that there had been no abandonment of the house by the defendants, who were still living in the village, and apparently on this ground he accepted the appeal and dismissed the suit.

The plaintiffs have filed a second appeal in this Court.

The District Judge does not appear to have understood the case correctly, for no question of abandonment arises at all.

In the first place both the Courts below have assumed that defendants Nos. 1 and 2 are non-proprietors, though it does not appear to have been admitted that those defendants are non-proprietors and their Counsel does not admit it.

In the second place if they are non-proprietors, the question then to be determined is whether they were entitled by custom to alienate the site and their right of residence in the house to defendant No. 3, the initial presumption being against them (paragraph 236 of Rattigan's Digest of Customary Law). This point has not been gone into at all. If the custom (supposing that the defendants allege it) is not proved, the mortgage to the third defendant is invalid.

It is contended for the respondents that even if the mortgage was invalid, the plaintiffs would not be entitled to possession of the property during the lifetime of the mortgagors, but this contention does not appear to be correct as there are several cases in which decrees for possession have been given, e.g., Mirza v. Samdili (1), Kahan Singh v. Waris Khan (2) and Mal Singh v. Munshi Ram (3). If defendants Nos. 1 and 2 are non-proprietors and are not competent by custom to alienate the site or their right of residence, the plaintiffs would apparently be entitled to a decree.

I accept the appeal, set aside the decree of the District Judge, and remand the case to him under Order XLI, rule 23, Civil Procedure Code, for fresh disposal of the appeal before him with reference to the foregoing remarks. The Court fee paid on the appeal in this Court will be refunded. Other costs will be costs in the case.

Appeal accepted;
Case remanded.

(1) 99 P. R. 1892.
(2) 48 P. R. 1899.
(3) 7 Ind. Cas. 711; 69 P. R. 1910; 96 P. W. R. 1910; 125 P. L. R. 19.0.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 1325 OF 1918.

December 11, 1919.

Present:—Mr. Justice Oldfield and Mr. Justice Sesbagiri Aiyar.

KOLANGERETH RAMAN NAIR AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS—APPELLANTS

versus

KOLIMATAMULLATHIL MARIYOMMA AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS Nos. 2 TO 7—RESPONDENTS.

Malabar Law—Landlord and tenant—Denial of title—Forfeiture—Denial, what amounts to—Kudima and adima tenures—Denial to render service—Resumption, liability to.

In order that a denial of the landlord's title by a tenant may operate as a forfeiture of the tenancy, such denial must be brought home to the knowledge of the landlord, and it must be unequivocal and clear. The mere acceptance and retention by a tenant of a document in which he is spoken of as the jenmi would not operate as a denial of the landlord's title, but the setting up of a prescriptive title would. [p. 14, col. 2.]

In the case of kudima and adima tenures in Malabar, a grant made for past services cannot be resumed, but a grant made for future services, can be resumed for failure to perform the services and a denial of title is tantamount to a denial to render services [p. 15, col. 2; p. 16, col. 1.]

Second appeal against the decree of the Court of the Subordinate Judge, Tellichery, in A. S. Nos. 465 and 477 of 1916 (A. S. Nos. 345 and 362 of 1915, District Court), preferred against the decree of the Court of the District Munsif, Kuthuparamba, in O. S. No. 707 of 1913.

FACTS.—Suit in ejectment on the ground of forfeiture consequent on an alleged denial of title. The tenure is Kudima Jenmam and the tenancy comprises three items And the date is more than 60 years prior to the alleged denial of title. Kudima Jenmam is a permanant tenure which confers substantial rights on the tenant. Both the Courts below dismissed the suit. The defendants say in their written statements that at a prior date they denied the landlord's title.

This second appeal come on for hearing on the 19th March 1919 (Oldfield and Seshagiri Aiyar, JJ.)

Mr. K P. M. Menon, for the Appellants.—Where there is an unequivocal repudiation of the proprietary title of the landlord, forfeiture is worked and the landlord can eject. No doubt, if the denial is purely incidental as by a mention of same in dealing with properties other than the subjects of the tenancy, there may not be a forfeiture. When it appears from the pleadings of the tenants that at a prior date they repudiated the landlor's title, that is sufficient to prove the denial.

Mayan Thariyakath Kathijakutti Umma v. Ithikamparambil Kuthussa (1) (the allegation of purchase before suit).

[OLDFIELD, J.—The denial, if any, is communicated to the landlord only by the written statement which is after suit and so is of no value.]

Communication to the landlord is not necessary. The very object of forfeiture clauses would make it unnecessary.

Kizhekkekath Komalukutti v. Puthiakath Muhamad (2) has no application to the present case, for the denial was made only incidentally. Here the tenant's sub-tenant has described the tenant as the holder of the Jenmabhogam and necessarily the counterpart would contain the same description by the tenant himself. An oral assertion is quite sufficient for the purpose. And the counterpart may have been oral.

There is no authority, legislative or judicial, for the positions that the denial must be addressed to the landlord.

[SESHAGIRI AIYAR, J.—See Napier, J., in Kizhekkekath Komalukutti v. Puthiakath Muhamad (2).

Only if the Transfer of Property Act applies, where an overt act by the landlord is necessary. See Rama Iyengar v. Anga Gurusami Chetti (3). But where the filing of the plaint for ejectment is sufficient, no communication is necessary.

[OLDFIELD, J.—The principle of the Transfer of Property Act is followed in the case of agricultural leases.]

No doubt the principle is followed, but the overt act and the communication which is thereby rendered necessary form a special feature of the Act and not of the general principle.

And the repudiation need not be verbally direct or express.

(1) 5 Ind. Cas. 924; 20 M. L. J. 415; 7 M. L. T. 173; (1910) M. W. N. 158.
(2) 45 Ind. Cas. 743; (1918) M. W. N. 200; 41 M. 629; 34 M. L. J. 170; 23 M. L. T. 178; 7 L. W. 291.
(3) 46 Ind. Cas. 62; 8 L. W. 102; 35 M. L. J. 120

Venkata Chariar v. Ranjaswami Ayyangar (4) is a similar case.

Mr. Mir Zynuddin, for the Respondent.—Rule 187 of the Civil Rules of Practice. The plaintiff Devaswom had notice of the claim petition put in by us, when these lands were attached as belonging to the Devaswom. No notice need be given under rule 187. Further there has been acceptance of rent subsequent to the alleged forfeiture and so forfeiture has been waived. Even if forfeiture has not been waived, we have perfected our title by limitation and adverse possession. Though it is alleged that the landlord came to know of the forfeiture only in 1915, there is no finding that it was so. Claim by adverse possession is resisted by saying that rent was being received. That is found against. Under Article 143 no knowledge is necessary and the date when the forfeiture is incurred is the material date.

JUDGMENT.—The first question in this case is whether there is a denial of title and if so, does the denial cover all the items in the suit or only some. The 2nd question is, supposing there is a denial, whether, having regard to the nature of the tenure, no forfeiture is incurred. On the first question the Subordinate Judge had made some obvious mistakes which have confused the issue. He is clearly wrong in saying that the denials in Exhibits II, III, and IV are only repetitions of the denial in Exhibit D. Exhibit D relates to item I. Exhibits II, III and IV relate to items 2 and 3, and the nature of the denials in these two sets of documents is altogether different. Exhibit D will be considered later on. As regards the other documents we may first deal with Exhibit II, as observations with regard to one of them would apply to the others as well. Exhibit II is a sub lease executed to the defendants. In that, the sub lessee uses the expression with reference to the property demised "belonging to you the Jenmi." In another place the language used is "without the Jenmi's permission." Mr. Menon argued that as the defendant accepted these documents without raising objection to the language employed, he must be deemed to have tacitly assumed the role of a Jenmi and to have denied the title of the plaintiff. This seems to be a very far-fetched suggestion. It is well-understood in this Presidency that the denial must be brought home to the knowledge of the landlord and it must be unequivocal and clear. In Kichekkekath Komalukutti v. Puthiakath Muhamad (2) and in Rama Iyengar v. Anga Guruswami Chetti (3) this principle was distinctly stated. See also the decision in Venkatachariar v. Narasimha Ayyangar (5) Here the defendant did no act which can be said to amount to a denial of the title of his landlord. It has not been pointed out to us that the landlord was made aware of any denial of title by the defendant. Under these circumstances the receipt and retention of a document by the defendant in which he is spoken of as the Jenmi could not operate as a denial of the plaintiff's title. Therefore, so far as items 2 and 3 are concerned, the decision of the lower Appellate Court should be confirmed though not for the reasons given by it.

The case as regards item 1 is different. The alleged denial is contained in Exhibit D. That was a claim petition presented in the year 1876 by the defendants' predecessor-in-title. The occasion for this claim was an attempted sale of the property in execution of a decree against the plaintiffs' predecessor-in-title. In the claim it was stated that the property should not be sold as the "Jenm right of the Devaswom on this Paramba is barred by limitation." This is in effect denying the title of the Jenmi to the property. In Foa on Landlord and Tenant it is stated that the setting up of a prescriptive title would amount to a denial of the landlord's title. The decision in Neall v. Beadle (6) is referred to. Although that judgment is not quite explicit on the point, it stands to reason that where a tenant impeaches the title of the landlord on the ground that there is no subsisting title as the property vested in him by virtue of adverse possession, such an attitude should be regarded as amounting to a denial of title.

(4) 51 Ind. Cas. 709, 9 L. W. 282; 25 M. L. T. 223; 36 M. L. J. 532; (1919) M. W. N. 336.

(5) 48 Ind. Cas. 301; (1918) M. W. N. 846; 35 M. L. J. 647; 24 M. L. T. 469; 9 L. W. 164.

(6) (1913) 107 L. T. 646; 57 S. J. 77.

Now comes the important question, whether having regard to the nature of the estate in the possession of the defendants such a denial would entail forfeiture. It is now well established in this Presidency, following the Privy Council ruling in Abhiram Goswami v. Shyama Charan Nandi (7), that a perpetual lease can be forfeited by the tenant denying the title of the landlord. In the present case the defendants claim that they have been in possession of the property for a very long time and that they have made improvements upon the property. The plaintiffs' allegation is that the properties in suit belong to the Devaswom of which the plaintiffs are Uralans and that they were leased to the Tarwad of the defendants on Kudima Jenmam. As to when it was so leased and whether it was within the memory of man, does not appear. The findings of the Court below, which may be accepted, are that the property belonged originally to the plaintiffs' Devaswom and that the 1st defendant's predecessors must have come into possession at some time under the Devaswom The contention of the respondents is that a Kudima or Adima right is not resumable under any circumstances. There are no considered decisions upon the point. In Thikkillath Tarawad v. Manchu Nair (8) it was held that an assertion of Jenmam right by the Kudima will not work a forfeiture so as to enable the landlord to eject him. The decision cited by the learned Judges is not applicable to the present case. On the other hand in Second Appeal No. 1413 of 1903 Benson and Krishnaswami Aiyar, JJ., confirmed a judgment of Mr. Phillips as District Judge, in which he held that an Adima right can be forfeited by denial of title. The judgment of the High Court simply says: "We think it is a perpetual lease. The second appeal is dismissed with costs." In Second Appeal No. 987 of 1904 Benson and Wallis, JJ., upheld the decision of Mr. Venkatramana Pai, the District Judge, who refused to disturb the Kudima tenant from his holding although there has been a denial of title. In the judgment of the High Court there was no discussion of the question.

A consideration of the nature of the tenure suggests that this case cannot be disposed of without further enquiry. In Graem's Glossary an Adima Grant is described thus:—

"The Adima Grant of a Paramba or garden was also often conferred by a superior lord, or Tala Udaya Tamburan, upon his own Adiyan or vassal; but here it was in the nature of an Inam or gift, no consideration having been received for it by the proprietor. An annual trifling tribute of superiority is, however, reserved to the proprietor to prevent the garden being entirely alienated. The garden reverts to the proprietor on failure of heirs on the part of the Adiyan, and if the Adiyan takes part with the enemies of his patron, the latter may resume the property. Under any other circumstances the Adiyan cannot be dispossessed, and he has the right of burial within the garden."

'In this (describing a Kudima grant) the land is made over in perpetuity to the grantee, either unconditionally as a mark of favour, or on condition of certain services being performed. The terms Adima and Kudima mean a slave, or one subject to the landlord, the grant being generally made to such persons. A nominal fee of about two fanams a year is payable to the landlord to show that he still retains the proprietary title. Land bestowed as a mark of favour can never be resumed; but where it is granted as remuneration for certain services, to be performed, the non-performance of such services, involving the necessity of having them discharged by others, will give the landlord power to recover the land. The non-payment of the annual fee will form no ground for ousting the grantee, but it will be recoverable by action. The hereditary property of Native Princes cannot be conferred on this tenure, the Ruling Prince having only the right of enjoyment during life without power to alienate" (Proceedings of the Court of the Sadder Adalat No. 18, dated 5th August 1856).

Logan in his Malabar Law accepts the above description. In the report submitted by the Malabar Land Tenures Commission the above quotation is accepted as correctly defining the Kudima and Adima Tenures. The question in this case is whether the grant was made for past services or for future services. If the former, apparently the tenure cannot be resumed. If the latter, there can be no question that for failure to perform the services the lands can be resumed. It may be taken that the denial of title is tantamount to a denial to render services. Therefore, before finally deciding the case, it is necessary to call for a finding whether the Devaswom granted the lands in question to the defendants' Tarwad for past services or for future services.

(7) 4 Ind. Cas. 449; 36 C. 1003; 10 C. L. J. 284; 6 A. L. J. 857; 14 Bom. L. R. 1234; 19 M. L. J. 530; 14 C. W. N. 1; 36 I. A. 148 (P. C.).

(8) 27 Ind. Cas. 863; 2 L. W. 102.

A further question must also be considered by the lower Court. Exhibit D is dated 1876. Since its date it was suggested the Devaswom has received the prescribed rent and has, therefore, waived its right to enforce the forfeiture. There is no finding whether the Devaswom was aware of its right to eject the defendants' Tarwad on account of forfeiture for denial of title. The difficult question whether the landlord is entitled to enforce the forfeiture after a considerable period of time, even though he was aware of it and acquiesced in the tenant holding on as if there had been no forfeiture, need not be discussed at this stage. The lower Appellate Court must be asked to return findings on these questions on fresh evidence, if any, tendered within 3 (three) months from this date. Seven days are allowed for objections.

In obedience to the order contained in the above judgment, the Temporary Subordinate Judge of Tellicherry submitted the following

FINDINGS.—I have been ordered to submit findings on the following three issues:—

1. Whether the Devaswom granted the lands in question to the defendants' Tarwad for past services or for future services?

2. Whether the Devaswom has received the prescribed rent and has thereby waived its right to enforce the forfeiture?

3. Whether the Devaswom was aware of its right to eject the defendants' Tarwad on account of forfeiture for denial of title?

2. Issue No. 1.—After remand plaintiffs have examined two witnesses. Defendants have adduced no new evidence. The Tarwad of defendants Nos. 1 to 4, called Kolimata Mulathil, appears to be an ancient, rich and influential Mopla Tarwad in the locality. Kunkan Nayar, examined by the plaintiffs, states, "The Tarwad of defendants Nos. 1 to 4 is an ancient one. I have seen it to be a rich and influential Tarwad." This Kunkan Nayar, who is aged 54, states that he knows this Devaswom for the last 50 years. The other witness examined by the plaintiffs Kannan Nambiar, who is aged 55, states that he knows this Devaswom for the last 30 years. These two witnesses do not know under what circumstances the Kudima grant now in question was granted. No one is now able to say as to when it was granted. If the allegation in Exhibit D is true, it is one granted more than 90 years ago. Plaintiffs' case now appears to be that it is one granted neither for past services nor for future services. It is not alleged by the defendants that they have undertaken to perform any service or that they are performing any. The two witnesses examined by the plaintiffs state that Moplas are not allowed to make any offering to the temple or to perform themselves or through any one else any service in the temple. It is clear under the circumstances that the grant in question is one made not for future services. As to whether it is one granted for past services, there is no evidence. My finding, therefore, on this issue is that the grant in question is not one made for future services and that there is no evidence to show that it is one made for past services.

8. Issues Nos. 2 and 3.—No new evidence has been adduced regarding the point involved in these issues. The suit was instituted on 10th July 1913. In paragraph 8 of the plaint the cause of action is alleged to have arisen on and after January 1913. There is admission in paragraph 3 of the plaint that Porapad was paid till 1079, 1903-04. Narayanan Nambiar (P. W. No. 1), Kariasthan of the plaint Devaswom, states, "It was in 1913 or 1912 that 2nd plaintiff told me that the Tarwad of defendants Nos. 1 to 4 was keeping Porapad in arrears and claiming, Jenm right in respect of the plaint items." Second plaintiff has not been examined. Again he states, 'Before I got Exhibit D, the Devaswom was not aware of the claim made by the Tarwad of defendants Nos. 1 to 4. I got Exhibit D only two days before filing is in Court." The evidence on record shows that the Devaswam has not collected Porapad after knowing the denial of title. Th claim evidenced by Exhibit D was made when property was attached for decree obtained against the Devaswom. There is no evidence to prove that the Devaswom had notice of this claim. The District Munsif considers this question in paragraph 14 of his judgment. There is no evidence on record to show that the Devaswam became aware of this claim about the time it was filed in Court. For waiver there should be knowledge of the denial of title. There is no evidence to prove such knowledge. I, therefore, find issue No. 2 in the negative and on issue No. 3, I find that the Devaswom became aware of its right to eject on account of forfeiture of the denial of title only in 1912.

This second appeal coming on for final hearing after the return of the findings of the lower Appellate Court upon the issues referred by this Court for trial, the Court delivered the following

JUDGMENT.—We accept the finding and dismiss the second appeal with costs. (One set).

M. C. P.

Appeal dismissed.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 1467 OF 1916.

March 24, 1920.

Present:—Mr. Justice Scott-Smith and Mr. Justice Abdul Raoof.

NANAK CHAND—DEFENDANT—APPELLANT

versus

TEK CHAND AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS AND DEVI DAYAL AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Punjab Pre-emption Act (II of 1905), ss. 13, fourthly, fifthly, 14 (c)—"Staircase," meaning of—Step to a thara, whether an "entrance from the street"—Election between two equal pre-emptors—Suit instituted and decree passed before repeal of Act—Applicability of Act.

One D. sold a house to J. for Rs. 1,000. T. and others brought a suit for pre-emption on the ground that their house was adjacent to the house sold and that a party-wall was jointly owned by them and the vendor. N. and others brought a second suit for pre-emption of the same house on similar allegations. T. and others claimed a superior right of pre-emption by reason of the fact that a step leading to a thara which formed part of their house and the house sold was common to both. The first Court held that both sets of plaintiffs had equal rights of pre-emption and that the vendors having elected N. and others, they were entitled to a decree under section 14 (c) of the Punjab Pre-emption Act, 1905. On appeal the District Judge held that T. and others had a preferential right under section 13, fifthly, and passed a decree in their favour. N. and others thereupon preferred a second appeal to the High Court:

Held, (1) that the sale having been made and the suit having been instituted while the old Act was in force, it was governed by the Punjab Pre-emption Act of 1905; [p. 18, col 2.]

(2) that the step leading to the thara could not be called a "staircase" within the meaning of section 13, fourthly, of that Act; [p. 18, col. 2.]

(3) that it could not be said to be an entrance from the street within the meaning of section 13, clause fifthly; [p. 19, col. 1.]

(4) that, therefore, T. and others did not have a preferential right of pre-emption and N. and others, having been elected by the vendor, were entitled to a decree. [p. 19, col. 1.]

Second appeal from the decree of the District Judge, Jhelum, dated the 20th January 1916, reversing that of the Subordinate Judge, 2nd Class, Gujrat, dated the 21st December 1912, decreeing the claim on payment of Rs. 1,000 on or before 1st April 1916.

Bakhshi Tek Chand, for the Appellant.

Lalas Fakir Chand and Balwant Rai, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—This second appeal arises out of a suit for pre emption. On the 13th of March 1912 Devi Dayal and others sold to Jagan Nath a house situate in Jalalpur Jattan for Rs. 1,000. Two suits were brought to pre-empt the sale. Tek Chand and others instituted their suit on the 27th of June 1912 on the ground that their house was adjacent to the house sold, and that a party-wall belonged jointly to the owners of the two houses. They further alleged that the plaintiffs and the vendors had a common thari forming part of their respective houses. A fourth ground was also alleged, which being immaterial for the decision of this appeal need not be mentioned.

The second suit was instituted by Nanak Chand and others, who also claimed the right of pre emption on the ground that their house was adjacent to the house sold and the party-wall between their house and the house sold was jointly owned by the owners of the respective houses. A further ground on the basis of an easement was also urged. For the sake of convenience the house sold has been described in the judgment of the lower Appellate Court as A; the house owned by Tek Chand and others as B, and that owned by Nanak Chand and others as D, and for the purpose of deciding this appeal we shall also adopt the description given in the judgment of the lower Appellate Court. There was no dispute as to the existence of the custom of pre-emption. The Court of first instance held that the owners of both the houses B and D had equal right of pre-emption, for the reason that both of them were adjacent to the house A and that the party-walls were jointly owned by the vendors and the respective owners of the houses B and D. The vendors having elected Nanak Chand and others as pre-emptors, the Court held that under section 14 (e) of the old Punjab Pre-emption Act, the latter were entitled to a decree. The suit of the rival pre-emptors Tek Chand and others was dismissed. A superior right of pre-emption was claimed by Tek Chand and others by reason of the fact that a step leading to the thara was common between the owners of the house B and the house sold. This plea was repelled by the Court of first instance. It was urged that the common step leading on to the thara owned by the owners of the houses A and B came within the definition of a staircase and brought their case under section 13, clause fourthly, of the Act. On an appeal by Tek Chand and others the lower Appellate Court took a different view and held that the owners of the house B had a preferential right under section 13, fifthly, and passed a decree in their favour.

The rival pre-emptors Nanak Chand and others have preferred this second appeal and it has been contended on their behalf that the steps leading on to the thara cannot come under the description of "a common entrance from the street" and, therefore, cannot give to Tek Chand and others a preferential right of pre emption under section 13, fifthly, of Act II of 1905. The simple question, therefore, which arises for decision in the appeal is whether the step marked Y in the plan can be called "a common entrance" leading to the houses A and B. An alternative plea set up by Tek Chand and others was that the step at Y answered the definition of a staircase and entitled them to claim a preferential right under clause fourthly also. This alternative plea was, however, overruled by the lower Appellate Court, but as it has been set up again on behalf of the respondents by their learned Counsel we have to decide this plea also. We may at once dispose of this plea by saying that as regards the decision on this point we entirely agree with the lower Appellate Court that the step in question cannot be called a staircase and the case of the plaintiffs, therefore cannot come under clause fourthly. A plea was also raised on behalf of the respondents that the suit was not governed by Act II of 1905 and that, therefore, the plaintiff Nanak Chand and others were not entitled to the benefit of the election made by the vendors in their favour under section 14 (e) of the Act. We do not think that there is any force in this contention. The sale in question was made while the old Act was in force, and the suit was also instituted and the decree of the trial Court was passed before the present Act came into existence. We are clearly of opinion that the present suit is governed by the old Act II of 1905. The only question, therefore, which remains for decision is whether the step Y has been rightly held by the lower Appellate Court as "a common entrance" from the street to the houses A and B. The question is by no means an easy one to decide. In Webster's Dictionary an "entrance" is defined as "a door", "a gateway," or "a means of entrance." The step in question in this case is neither a door nor a gateway, but it has been contended on behalf of the respondents that it answers the description of "a means of entrance". Before the District Judge it was admitted that the owners of both the houses A and B used the step as a means of approach to their respective houses. This is not strictly true. It is really only a means to assist people who are not sufficiently active to get on to the tharas and having regard to the popular meaning of the term we are of opinion that it cannot be said to be an "entrance from the street" within the meaning of clause fifthly of section 13 of the Pre-emption Act II of 1905. One might just as well say that any part of the tharas appertaining to the house in dispute is an entrance from the street, because one has to enter upon it in order to reach the actual dwelling house.

For the reasons set fourth above we set aside the judgment and decree of the lower Appellate Court and restore those of the Court of first instance with costs throughout.

Appeal allowed.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

APPEAL FROM APPELLATE DECREE No. 1163 OF 1918.

August 27, 1919.

Present:—Justice Sir Asutosh Chaudhuri, Kt., and Mr. Justice Cuming.

NITYA GOPAL BANERJEE—

PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

PROVAS CHANDRA MUKHERJI

AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Hindu Law—Temple—Pala or turn of worship, transfer of, validity of—Custom, requisites of—Right of management and right of service in connection with temples, distinction between—Compulsory and private alienation—Private alienation, when permissible—Shebait, duties and power of—Sale of priestly office for benefit of shebait, legality of—Pala, sub-division of, legality of—Question of law—Appeal, second—Separation of pala from immoveable property of endowment, whether permissible.

Custom, if established, may render private alienation of a pala valid, but in determining the question, the benefit to the idol must be taken into consideration as a matter of primary importance. Property dedicated to a deity is extra commercium, and is entitled to special protection of the sovereign whose duty it is to intervene to prevent fraud and waste. Persons having the management and possession of the property of an idol must of necessity be empowered to do whatever may be required for the service of the idol and for the benefit and preservation of its property. The manager of the endowment is by virtue of his office the administrator of the property attached to it. As regards the property he is in the position of a trustee. Sale of the trusteeship for pecuniary gain is not permissible. The sale of a priestly office for the benefit of the shebait is illegal. Right of worship is property, but has not all the incidents of property. A distinction has been made between transfers inter vivos and transfers by Will. The shebait is manager or quasi trustee for the benefit of the idol and as the office endures only for his life, he has no right of devise by Will, as his Will only comes into operation on his death when there is nothing for him to alienate. [p. 23, cols. 1 & 2.]

The requisites of custom are that it should be ancient, and invariable, uniform, reasonable, not immoral, certain and consistent. About its being ancient it must have existed "so long as the memory of man runneth not to the contrary." [p. 22, col. 1.]

There is a distinction between the right of management and the right of service in connection with temples, private and public, and between compulsory and private alienations. Private alienations are not absolutely prohibited but alienations to strangers are not favoured. In the case of private alienations the prohibition is not of general application and custom and usage govern and prevail over the text law which prohibits both partition and alienation. [p. 22, col 2; p. 23, col. 1.]

The question as to whether a pala is divisible or not is a point of law and can be raised for the first time in second appeal. [p. 24, col. 2.]

Division of a pala by inheritance is on a different basis from division by transactions inter vivos or by devise. [p. 24, col. 2.]

Separation of a pala from the immoveable property of an endowment is not a reasonable method of management of the property or of conducting the sheba. Where there is no custom of separation of the pala and the endowed property, sub-division inter vivos of the pala alone should not be allowed, as it cannot be for the benefit of the deity. [p. 24, col. 2; p. 25, col. 1.]

Appeal against the decision of the Additional District Judge, Hooghly, dated the 22nd January 1918, reversing that of the Subordinate Judge, Howrah, dated the 29th July 1915.

Babus Brojo Lal Chuckerbutty and Upendra Narain Bagchi, for the Appellant.

Dr. Sarat Chandra Basak and Babu Chandra Sekhar Sen, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—One Nilmony Chakravarti was entitled to a turn of worship of a deity known as Malai Chandi which extended to 69 days in the year. Nilmony died on the 14th November 1913. The plaintiff claimed that turn of worship as his heir. Nilmony, however, a few days before his death executed a kobala in favour of defendant No. 1 in respect of 33 days out of his turn. The kobala purports to have been for consideration for a sum of Rs. 300, said to have been spent during the illness of Nilmony. The learned Subordinate Judge held that there was no consideration for the kobala and that undue influence had been exercised over Nilmony who was ill and that misrepresentations had also been made to him. He held that the transfer was only of the turn of worship irrespective of the debutter property and as according to him no custom for such transfer had been made out, there was not an effective transfer. On both the above grounds he decreed the plaintiff's suit. He, however, found that the defendant No. 1 was on the line of succession, being the sister's son of the shebait Gobinda Chakravarti, and that he could become a shebait if Gobinda died without any sons.

On appeal the learned District Judge agreed with the trial Court that it had not been established that there was money consideration for the document. He, however, found that the defendant and his wife resided for some time on a portion of Nilmony's homestead, and that as Nilmony's health did not permit him to perform the pooja, defendant No. 1 had for some time performed the pooja; that during his last illness defendant No. 1 and his wife attended on him and that the kobala was executed openly, and after consultation with other shebaits: that the document had been presented by Nilmony himself for registration and he was satisfied upon the evidence that Nilmony quite understood what he was doing, and although the word "sale" had been used in the kobala, he found that Nilmony desired to convey the pala to the extent of 33 days to defendant No. 1; that he had by a subsequent document made a gift of the remaining six days to his Purohit Dharmadass. He also found that it was a perfectly natural thing for Nilmony to desire to transfer the right of worship to defendant No. 1. On the death of Kalachand, who was the original defendant, his son Nonilal has been brought upon the record. The learned Judge did not find that Nilmony was induced to make the transfer by undue influence, and he held that although the document purported to be a kobala it should be looked upon as a gift, although the consideration mentioned was fictitious and imaginary. He also held that transfers of palas had been proved to have been made for a great number of years beginning from at least 1259 B. S. (1852 A. D.). He held upon the oral evidence and the documents produced before him, principally Exhibits C, D, E, F, G, J, K, that the palas of this Thakurani were transferable by custom. He found nothing in the cross-examination of the shebait witnesses to indicate that "the custom of transfering palas was restricted to transferences of palas along with the debutter land." He held "immemorial origin, continuity and certainty of the custom of transfers of palas of the goddess in question established" and disagreeing with the learned Subordinate Judge, he dismissed the plaintiff's suit.

It was urged before us on behalf of the appellants (1) that no custom had been established and the immemorial origin referred to by the District Judge was an overstatement, as there was no evidence of any transfer before 1852; (2) that the transfer was bad, not being to one in the line of succession or to a shebait, but to a person who, although connected with one of the shebaits and his possible heir, was not competent to take; (3) that the transfer of a pala apart from the debutter property was void; (4) that the document, being one of sale stated to be for consideration; ought not to be treated as a gift; (5) that as the man was suffering from death illness, the document having been executed on the 10th November 1913 and registered on the 13th November and the man dying on the 14th, the transfer could not be treated as being inter vivos; (6) that the division of the pala into two portions, 33 days to defendant No. 1 and six days to another, rendered both illegal.

In answer to the above it was argued that having regard to a series of transfers dating from 1852 and the finding arrived at by the learned Judge as regards custom, such finding could not be set aside or questioned on second appeal; that the transfer in this case was to one in the line of shebaits, not to a stranger, but to a person who was performing the service in the life-time of Nilmony; that the transfer was openly made with the consent of several other shebaits and ought to be looked upon as for the benefit of the trust, which is the governing principle for determining such questions; that the transfer of a pala apart from transfer of the property was not a question which was raised at the earlier stages of the case; that the document in question showed that the transfer was to Kalachand "as a shebait," but whether these words actually covered a transfer of the debutter property or not was not of importance as the plaintiff had merely prayed to have the transfer of the turn of worship set aside; that there was evidence on the record to show that the plaintiff had himself sold his share in some of debu'ter properties which he purported to have inherited from Nilmony; that an ostensible deed of sale may be treated as a deed of gift and it had been rightly treated as such in this case; that the transfer was not affected by the fact that the man died shortly after the execution of the document; that a pala being divisible by inheritance, there was no reason why the holder who had the right of gift inter vivos could not apportion the period of his turn to different persons; that in all these cases the principal thing to be kept in view was whether the transaction was against the interest of the deity, if not so found, there was nothing on principle which prevented such a division; that no point as to the divisibility of the pala had been made in the trial and the appeal Courts and not even taken in the grounds of appeal before this Court and it should not, therefore, be entertained. It is, therefore, necessary to examine the case at some length.

The origin of this foundation is not known. The Thakurani is established in a village. The plaint mentions 33 persons as the present shebaits, all of whom have been made defendants. They are Banerjis, Mukerjis, Chatterjis, Chakravartis, Roys and consist of males and females. Defendant No. 1, in his written statement, gives the names of 70 other persons, males and females, including Chakravartis, Chatterjis Banerjis and one Sarkhel. The Chakravartis appear to have been the original shebaits, and daughters, sisters' sons, widowed daughters in-law, maternal grandfather's heirs have taken by transfers or descent. In what sense all these persons are shebaits is not very clear. Whether they have merely a right of management, or are the representatives of priests who served the idol, does not appear. There is some immoveable debutter property and offerings are also received which are taken by the persons enjoying the palas. There is some evidence, says the Subordinate Judge, that "the palas have been assigned and transferred to one who could come in the line of succession if there was no direct descendant in the line of the son." Whether the endowment is private or public does not clearly appear, although it is apparently the latter as a village sanctuary is mentioned and offerings from the public are received. The transactions evidenced by documents are all of them conveyances except one the earliest in date, which is a Will (Exhibit K) dated 30th Sravan 1259, corresponding to 19th August 1852. It transferred the entire pala of the testator and his share of the debutter property to his widowed daughter-in-law as she was the most competent person to carry on the worship, by which supervision of the worship was meant. The testator had no son, but had a daughter with a son who was residing elsewhere. The next in order of date is a kobala Exhibit G, dated 30th Sravan 1289 (14th August 1882). The vendor had got the pala and property by inheritance but as he was not a resident of the place he sold both to a co-sharer shebait. There are two kobalas, Exhibits C & D, in 1292. Both the vendors were females who had inherited the pala and property from their husbands. In one the sale was to a co-sharer shebait, in the other to reversionary heirs, but both sales included the pala and property. Having regard to the names of the shebaits who are Banerjis, Mukerjis, Chatterjis, etc., it is not a violent inference that the present shebaits represent both the male and female lines of the original shebaits and also transferees by will or sale. It is clear that non-resident shebaits have from time to time, for a great number of years, transferred their rights to co-sharer shebaits. Exhibit J, a kobala dated 19th Sravan 1292 (6th August 1885) is, however, said to be an instance of a sale to a stranger, but the document itself refers to him as a shebait and we must treat him as such.

In speaking of custom in connection with the transfer of the rights of shebaits in respect of shrines and sanctuaries, there is likelihood of confusion between the rules of the shrines and the rules observed amongst those who manage the shrines, between the rules of a sect and the rules of management of the endowment, betwen shebaits as trustees of the endowed property and as managers of the service in respect of which they are holders of an office. We have nothing to do in this case with sectarian rules, but with an alleged custom of transfer of turns of worship by shebaits. The requisites of custom are that it should be ancient and invariable, uniform, reasonable, not immoral, certain and consistent. About its being ancient it must have existed "so long that the memory of man runneth not to the contrary." In Garurudhwaja Pershad Singh v. Saparandhwaja Pershad Singh (1) the evidence of an unbroken custom for 80 years was held sufficient. It was also held in Ramanathan Chetti v. Murugappa Chetti (2) that an unbroken usage for a period of 19 years was conclusive evidence of a family arrangement as to palas, or turns of worship, to which the Court was bound to give effect. Here we have evidence of some transactions which date as far back as 1852 and the question is, can we deduce the necessary elements of custom from them. It appears from the evidence that transfers of palas were not always made to heirs or co-sharer shebaits, but in one case at least to a relative considered competent to carry on or supervise the worship. The periods of the turns have been determined by descent and apparently the shebaits have treated themselves as co-sharers of the endowed properties, their shares being determined in the same manner as if the property was secular, inheritable by descent, that is to say, a shebait with a pala of 39 days in the year has been treated as co-sharer of the endowed property to the extent of 39/365. In every instance so far as the documents are concerned the co sharer's pala and his so-called share in the debutter property have been transferred at the same time. It is from that fact that the learned Subordinate Judge inferred that the custom pointed to transfers of both of them jointly, that one was not separated from the other. He considered the joint character of the transfer reasonable, as the worship was likely to suffer if the property was separated from the sheba. The property in this case was undoubtedly endowed for the sheba and must be so used. The managers of the service are also managers of the endowed property in this case, and it is evident that for convenience of management the shebaits have treated themselves as co-sharers in respect of the palas and the endowed property, but in no instance has a shebait treated his pala and right of management of the debutter property separately. The two are intimately associated together and do not appear to have been dealt with one independently of the other. The sub division has been, as a rule, by descent, although occasionally varied by transfers within a limited circle. The transferee had both at the same time, and after his death his heirs have become vested with his rights to both by descent. The mere transfer of the pala involves the possibility of its discontinuance, on failure of funds. The property was endowed for securing the permanence of the worship. It further involves two lines of descent. If the transferor merely transfers the pala and keeps hold of his share of the property, two separate lines of descent may be created—one for the pala and one for the property—each disconnected from the other. In this particular instance the transfer appears to be merely of the pala and the offerings, spoken of in the document as utpana profits. It does not deal with the immoveable property. If it was intended to deal with the landed property, the document would have been differently stamped, particulars of the property would have been given as required by the Registration Act and the extent of the share would have been mentioned. From these circumstances it has been taken by both the Courts below that the pala only has been transferred and with it the right to take the offerings. The plaintiff has treated Nilmony's share of the endowed property as his by descent and the transferee has not so far questioned it. There is a distinction between the right of management and the right of service in connection with temples, private and public, and between compulsory and private alienations. Private alienations have not been held as absolutely prohibited, but alienations to strangers have not been favoured. In the case of private alienations the prohibition has not been held to be of general application, and custom and usage have been held to govern and prevail over the text law which prohibits both partition and alienation. These question are discussed at some length in Rajaram v. Ganesh (3). It is useless to refer to the decided cases in detail as they depend upon separate sets of facts and circumstances, although some general principles may be deduced from them which may be thus summarised. Custom, if established, may render private alienations valid, but that, in determining the question, the benefit to the idol must be taken into consideration as a matter of primary importance. Property dedicated to a deity is extra commercium, and is entitled to special protection of the Sovereign whose duty it is to intervene to prevent fraud and waste [Bhupati Nath Smritiitirtho v. Ram Lal Mitra (4)]. Persons having the management and possession of the property of an idol must of necessity be empowered to do whatever may be required for the service of the idol and for the benefit and preservation of its property [Prosunna Kumari Debya v. Golab Chand (5)]. The manager of the endowment is by virtue of his office the administrator of the property attached to it. As regards the property he is in the position of a trustee [Ramanathan Chetti v. Murugappa Chetti (2)]. Sale of the trusteeship for pecuniary gain is not permissible: [Rajah Vurmah Valia v. Ravi Vurmah Kunhi Kutty (6)]. The sale of a priestly office for the benefit of a shebait is illegal: Narasimma Thatha Acharya v. Anantha Bhatta (7) and Kuppa Gurukal v. Dorasami Gurukal (8).

(1) 27 I. A. 238; 23 A. 37; 10 M. L. J. 267; 5 C. W. N. 33; 2 Bom. L. R. 831; 7 Sar. P. C. J. 724 P. C.).

(2) 29 M. 283; 4 C. L. J. 189; 10 C. W. N. 825; 33 I. A. 139; 1 M. L. T. 327; 3 A. L. J. 707; 16 M. L. J. 265; 8 Bom. L. R. 498 (P. C.).

(3) 23 B. 131; 12 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 87.

(4) 3 Ind. Cas. 642; 10 C. L. J. 355; 37 C. 128; 14 C. W. N. 18.

(5) 14 B. L. R. 450; 3 Sar. P. C. J. 449; 23 W. R. 253; 2 I. A. 145; 3 Suth. P. C. J. 102.

(6) 1 M. 235 (P. C.); 4 I A. 76; 3 Sar. P. C. J. 687; 1 Ind. Jur. 134; 3 Suth. P. C. J. 382; 1 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 156.

(7) 4 M. 391; 1 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 1107.

(8) 6 M. 76; 7 Ind. Jur. 75; 2 Ind. Dec. (N. S) 331.

Right of worship is property, but has not all the incidents of property. A distinction has been made between transfers inter vivos and transfers by will. It has been said that the shebait is manager or quasi trustee for the benefit of the idol, and as the office endures only for his life he has no right of devise by Will, as his Will only comes into operation on his death when there is nothing for him to alienate [Rajeshwar Mullick v. Gopeshwar Mallick (9)]. This case is not is consonance with Mancharam v. Pranshankar (10), which was disapproved in Rajeshwar Mullick v. Gopeshwar Mullick (9), but it has since been followed in this Court in Nirodbarani Dasi v. Shiba Das Pal (11), where "clear benefit to the Thakur" was considered to be the right standard. In the case before us there is evidence of transfer of the pala and property by Will. The deed of sale has been held inoperative as such, but the learned Judge has treated it as a deed of gift, as a transaction inter vivos. The donor, however, who was very ill, died within a very few days of the execution of the document, and it seems a fairly reasonable deduction that it was executed in anticipation of his death and to operate after his death. The document mentions money consideration which has been disbelieved by both the Courts. We should not treat untrue recitals in deeds with any degree of complacency when the giver and the taker are parties to them. They are intended to mislead and may acquire the sanctity of truth with age. This very transaction, although discarded by the Courts as a conveyance, may yet be relied upon by future shebaits as affording good evidence of custom. This transfer, however, was not for pecuniary advantage. There is evidence that the giver was not actuated by any dishonest motives. He was on his death bed and acted after consultation with other shebaits. He had no near heirs. He was anxious to provide for due carriage of the sheba and he knew the taker who had done the work satisfactorily when he was ill. These circumstances may lessen the heinousness of a false recital, namely, that of a fictitious consideration, but all the same the transaction must be looked upon as reprehensible, especially as it relates to a religious trust. The giver made a lying statement to benefit the taker and it is clear that the taker was primarily responsible for it. Both took a discreditable part. The learned Judge has, on the strength of Ismail Mussajee Mookerdam v. Hafiz Boo (12), treated the document as a deed of gift. There was an issue in that case as to whether the donor who was capable of making the transfer was of unsound mind or not, but none with regard to undue influence which was the case suggested at a later stage, when the first contention failed. The Judicial Committee found the evidence insufficient to establish the latter contention. They took into account the existing circumstances at the time of the transaction, namely, that the mother was extremely hostile to her son and did not intend him to take; that she was old and in case of her death her son would have inherited the greater part of her property. The only way to prevent it was to transfer it in her lifetime. A power of attorney which had been executed by the mother showed that she contemplated an absolute gift to the daughter. The lady's object could not have been attained by any benami transaction. It was found that the consideration mentioned in the deed of transfer did not pass, but having regard to the above facts the Judicial Committee held that the deed of sale was intended to be a deed of gift and treated it as such. The transfer in the case was not for pecuniary advantage and was intended to provide for the due performance of the poojah and there was no near heir to transfer to and it may not be unjust to treat it as a deed of gift and although it was intended to operate as a Will, having regard to, the fact that transfers by Will have taken place, and as early as 1852, that circumstance also may be taken in its favour. The learned District Judge has differed from the Subordinate Judge on the question as to whether the pala can be rightly held transferable by custom although the debutter property has not been included. The latter has strongly relied upon Muhamaya Debi v. Haridas Haldar (13). Evidence as regards the custom in this case has gone up to 1852 and may be held established, but the severance of the pala from the property does not seem to have taken place before this transaction and cannot be held established by custom. Their separation is fraught with consequences which may not be beneficial to the deity. They are intimately associated with each other. Allowing the pala to one and the property to another is likely to create trouble to the detriment of the endowment. They were not intended to be severed and have not been treated as severable. Division by inheritance is on a different basis from division by transactions inter vivos or by devise. In this case the donor's 39 days have been divided into two parts, 33 days to Kalachand and 6 days to the purohit Dharmadas, whom we do not find spoken of as a member of the family. Although objection to such division of the pala does not appear to have been taken before this, the respondent cannot be said to have been taken by surprise. It is a point of law. He had sufficient time to consider it. The fact of division is admitted. In the Kalighat temple case, Mahamaya Debi v. Haridas Haldar (13), palas were found heritable, partible and also devisable by custom. They had been the subject of sales, gifts, mortgages and leases, although within a limited circle. The palas seem to have been treated as not connected with the immoveable property, if any, belonging to the maker. The facts of that case are different. The transactions extended over a long period and were of a different character. That case deals with accepted principles but otherwise does not apply to this case. We do not think that it was competent for Nilmony to sub-divide the period of his pala. The palas would again be sub-divided by descent and instead of one branch having 39 days, there is a possibility of three branches being created with two divisions of the pala and one branch holding the property. There may be sub divisions again inter vivos

(9) 35 C. 226; 12 C. W. N. 323; 7 C. L. J. 315.

(10) 6 B. 298; 6 Ind. Jur. 426; 3 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 655.

(11) 3 Ind. Cas. 76; 36 C. 975; 13 C. W. N. 1084.

(12) 33 C. 773; 3 C. L. J. 484; 10 C. W. N. 570; 3 A. L. J. 353; 8 Bom. L. R. 379; 16 M. L. J. 166; 1 M. L. T. 137; 33 I. A. 86 (P. C.).

(13) 27 Ind. Cas. 400; 20 C. L. J. 183; 42 C. 455 19 C. W. N. 208.

on the strength of the present sub division. We do not certainly think that it is a reasonable method of management of the property or of conducting the sheba. It is bound to create dissension and confusion, which certainly cannot be for the benefit of the Thakur. There is every likelihood of the property being diverted for other purposes and dissipated and the sheba discontinued. In that view we think the appeal ought to be allowed. If it had merely been a question of the sub-division of the pala into two parts and if it was said that opportunity should be given to the defendant to give evidence on the point we would have remanded the case, but as we agree with the view taken by the Subordinate Judge that the custom of separation of the pala and the property has not been proved and of the unreasonable character of such separation, that it cannot be for the benefit of the deity, the appeal should be allowed on that ground alone. Each party to pay his own costs in all Courts. The defendant will not be held liable for rendering any account of the offerings or the dealings with them. The plaintiff will not be allowed to recover anything from him on that account. The transfer is held inoperative and void and there will be a declaration to that effect.

Appeal allowed.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

CIVIL REVISION PETITION CASE No. 926 OF 1919.

March 30, 1920.

Present:—Mr. Justice Martineau.

MAULA BAKHSH—DEFENDANT—PETITIONER

versus

RAM DAS—RESPONDENT.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 141, O. IX, r. 13—Application for setting aside ex parte decree—Dismissal for default—Application for restoration, whether entertainable—Limitation Act IX of 1908), Sch. I, Art. 181.

Plaintiff obtained an ex parte decree on the 13th January 1919. On the 4th July the defendan applied to have it set aside, but the application was dismissed for default on the 16th October. On the 25th November the defendant made a fresh application:

Held, that the application of the 25th November should be treated as one for the restoration of the application of the 4th July and as such was entertainable, the procedure laid down in Order IX, rule 13, Civil Procedure Code, being applicable to it by the operation of section 141 of the Code; [p. 26, col 1.]

(2) that the application was governed by Article 181 of Schedule I to the Limitation Act and was within time. [p. 26, col. 1.]

Petition, under section 25 of the Small Cause Courts Act, for revision of the order of the Judge, Small Cause Court, Lahore, dated the 8th December 1919.

Mr. Badr ud-Din Kureshi, for the Petitioner.

Mr. Jai Gopal Sethi, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—On the 13th January 1919 the plaintiff obtained an ex parte decree. On the 4th July the defendant applied to have it set aside, but on the 16th October the application was dismissed for default. On the 25th November the defendant made a fresh application, which the Judge of Small Cause Court has dismissed as time-barred. The defendant applies for revision of the order.

The application of the 25th November would no doubt be barred by limitation, as the lower Court observes, if it were regarded as one for setting aside the ex parte decree (which in form it is), and also if it were regarded as one for review of the order of the 16th October. But I think it would be fair and equitable to treat the application as one for the restoration of the application of the 4th July, and the question is whether such an application can legally be entertained and whether it is within time.

The learned Judge of the Small Cause Court has held on the authority of Ganda Mal v. Sughra Bibi (1) that such an application is not a miscellaneous application and can only be treated as one for review. In the case relied upon by him an appeal had been dismissed for default, and an application to have it restored to the file was also dismissed for default. An application was made to set aside the latter order of dismissal, and was rejected by the Additional District Judge on the ground that the proceeding was a proceeding in an appeal and not a miscellaneous proceeding to which section 647 of the Civil Procedure Code would be applicable, and it was held by the Chief Court that the Additional District Judge's view was correct. That decision, however, was given when the Civil Procedure Code of 1882 was in force and there is a material distinction between section 647 of that Code and the corresponding section 141 of the present Code.

(1) 5 P. R. 1900; P. L. R. 1900 p. 30.

Section 647 of the old Code provided that the procedure prescribed in that Code should be followed, as far as it could be made applicable, in all proceedings in any Court of civil jurisdiction other than suits or appeals, and it was because the proceeding in which the application referred to in Gandamal v. Sughra Bibi (1) was made was an appeal, that section 647 was held to be inapplicable. But in section 141 of the Code now in force the words "other than suits or appeals" have been omitted, and the procedure provided in the Code in regard to suits is to be followed, as far as it can be made applicable, in all proceedings in any Court of civil jurisdiction. The application made by the defendant on the 25th November, if treated as one for restoring the application dismissed on the 16th October, is clearly entertainable, the procedure laid down in Order IX, rule 13 of the Civil Procedure Code, being applicable to it by the operation of section 141.

Such an applicatian is governed by Article 181 of the 1st Schedule to the Limitation Act, as there is no other Article which applies. The period of limitation under that Article is 3 years, so that the application is within time.

I accordingly accept the application for revision, set aside the order of the lower Court, and direct that Court to dispose of the application of the 25th November 1919 on the merits, treating it as one for restoration of the application of the 4th July. The Court fee on the application for revision will be refunded. Other costs will be costs in the case.

Petition accepted.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

APPEAL AGAINST ORDER No. 115 OF 19.8.

July 21, 1919.

Present:—Mr. Justice Spencer and Mr. Justice Krishnan.

KAMALAMBAL—PLAINTIFF—RESPONDENT—APPELLANT

versus

DORASAMI CHETTIAR—DEFENDANT—No. 1—PETITIONER—RESPONDENT.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XXIII, r. 3—Compromise—Agreement between parties, when amounts to completed compromise.

The question when a contract becomes complete depends on the facts of each particular case. If a consensus ad idem has been reached between the parties on all the proposed or disputed terms, there is a contract. If, however, two persons agree in writing that, up to a certain point, the terms shall be the terms of the contract, but that the minor terms shall be subjected to a mediator and shall be as are approved by him, or if they are otherwise left unsettled, there is no contract. But if all the terms are agreed to, any stipulation to embody these terms in a formal document will not affect the contract, except when there is a further stipulation, express or implied, that the contract shall not be treated as complete till the formal document is drawn up and signed. [p. 31, col. 2; p. 32, col. 1.]

Appeal against the order of the Court of the Subordinate Judge, Negapatam, dated the 18th March 1918, in I. A. No. 130 of 1918, in Original Suit No. 49 of 1916.

This appeal coming on for hearing on the 17th and 24th of October 1918, the Court (Ayling and Krishnan, JJ.) delivered the following JUDGMENT.—There is no doubt that paragraph 7 of Exhibit A is ambiguous and it is desirable that evidence should be taken as to what the parties intended thereby.

We must call for findings on the following issues:—

(1) What were "the other terms of the Razinama" referred to in paragraph 7 of Exhibit A?

(2) Was the settlement of the matters dealt with in Exhibit A conditional on a settlement being subsequently arrived at on the "other terms" referred to in the above first issue?

Each side may adduce evidence. The findings will be submitted within six weeks and seven days will be allowed for filing objections.

KAMALAMBAL v. DORASAMI CHETTIAR.

In compliance with the order contained in the above judgment, the Subordinate Judge of Negapatam submitted the following

FINDINGS.—I am directed by the High Court to submit findings on the following issues:—

(1) What were "the other terms of the Razinamah," referred to in paragraph 7 of Exhibit A?

(2) Was the settlement of the matters dealt with in Exhibit A conditional on a settlement being subsequently arrived at on the "other terms" referred to in the above 1st issue?

2. 1st issue.—Paragraph 7 of Exhibit A runs as follows—

"After consulting the Vakils about all the remaining Razi terms (* *) etc., another Razinamah should be written and filed into Court in accordance with the reliefs which each party has to get." The 1st defendant called 3 persons, who admittedly acted as mediators in bringing about the compromise in question, as his witnesses to prove what was meant by the words 'the other terms of the Razinamah' in paragraph 7 of the Exhibit A. They all swear that all the points in difference between the plaintiff and the 1st defendant were completely settled by Exhibit A. Petitioner's 1st witness particularly deposes that all the terms in Exhibit A had been settled and agreed to by both parties before it was begun to be written, that when the signatures of the parties were taken in it, the amount also was settled and agreed to by them as Rs. 16,000 and that the plaintiff signed Exhibit A consenting to this figure. He has also deposed that the moveables mentioned in Exhibit A were the only moveables she wanted to be given. It further appears from his evidence and that of petitioner's witnesses Nos. 2 and 3 that the plaintiff wanted that the Will on which she relied on in this suit must be recited in the Razinamah as true and that the 1st defendant insisted on the adoption on which he relied on should also be recited therein as true, and that the mediators said that the Pleaders must be consulted to find out what sort of recitals should be made as regards those points in the Razinamah. Petitioner's 1st witness swears that the words 'Baki yavathu rajinamah sharathugal' (the other terms of the Razinamah) in paragraph 7 of Exhibit A were intended to mean what had to be subsequently written about the adoption and the Will after consulting the Pleaders as above stated. It clearly appears from his evidence and also from the evidence of petitioner's witnesses Nos. 2 and 3 that it was not intended to consult the Pleaders on any other point. The sum and substance of their evidence is that by the words 'Baki yavathu rajinamah sharathugal' in paragraph 7 of Exhibit A it was not meant that any terms relating to the reliefs which the plaintiff or the 1st defendant wanted in the suit had to be arrived at by consultation of Pleaders, but that only the form in which the Razinamah must be worded, especially with regard to the recital as to the adoption and the Will, must be settled after consultation of Pleaders and put in the Razinamah petition to be presented to the Court. All these witnesses are respectable and admittedly acted as mediators between the parties in arriving at the compromise. Petitioner's witnesses Nos. 2 and 3 were summoned by the plaintiff herself to give evidence in this enquiry. There is absolutely no ground why their evidence should be discredited and that of the plaintiff and her Pleader's clerk, the writer of Exhibit A, who clearly appears to be interested in her, which is highly improbable, as will be shown later on, should be believed. Petitioner's 3rd witness distinctly deposes that the terms in Exhibit A and what the Pleaders might advise to be recited about Will and adoption had to be embodied in another paper to be presented in Court and that the plaintiff did not insist on any new reliefs not granted by Exhibit A to be given to her. This witness was the plaintiff's witness in the suit itself, being an attestor in the Will relied on by her.

(3) The plaintiff, on the other hand, who was examined on commission at her instance, has given out a story, the object of which seems to be more to back out of the terms of Exhibit A than to make out that by the words 'Baki yavathu rajinamah sharathugal' it was meant that some additional reliefs which she claimed had to be considered and settled after consultation of Pleaders,

She has stated: "The 1st defendant told then that his adoption should be mentioned. I objected to that and said that my husband's Will should be recognised and that the monies payable to Venkatachela and to the charities under the Will should be paid to Venkatachela. I also said that the amount mentioned in the Will for the charities should be set apart and provision should be made for the charities. I wanted two houses for my residence. The diamond earring worn by the 1st defendant should be handed over to me. Chain collar and iron safe should be given over to me. The amount to be fixed as compromise should be paid in cash to me. The amount of maintenance payable to the 2nd defendant should be fixed and a receipt obtained from her. Debts incurred by me, by my husband and by husband's brother, Subbia Chettiar, should not bind me. If any defect were to arise in the titles to immoveable property I should not be held liable for the same. These were the terms that I wanted them to incorporate in the Razinamah." She proceeds to say that it was finally settled that she should get Rs. 16,000, that she asked the mediators as to why the above terms were not incorporated in Exhibit A and that they said that it was merely a memo and that the Razinamah would be written only after consulting the Vakils. She states that Saminatha Mudaliar, petitioner's 1st witness, said that the above terms were to be included in the Razinamah and that it was so stated in paragraph 7 of the memo. But none of the mediators supports her in this, as already shown. Petitioner's 1st witness clearly states that there was no talk that plaintiff must have two houses, that there was no reference to any family charity and that plaintiff did not want any release of 2nd defendant's maintenance right. Petitioner's 2nd witness swears that plaintiff did not insist on Rs. 16,000 being paid in cash in one payment and that she did not want any dwelling house. Petitioner's 3rd witness also swears that plaintiff did not want a dwelling house and that she did not insist on the ear rings which the 1st defendant was wearing, to be given to her. In fact he swears that she did not insist on any new reliefs being granted to her other than those in Exhibit A. Petitioner's 1st witness swears that the talk of compromise was on the line that plaintiff must get money and 1st defendant should get properties.

(4) Even the plaintiff's own witness, her Pleader's clerk, Doraisamy Aiyar, does not go to the length of supporting her completely, though he has tried his best to support her. He has deposed that when Exhibit A was read out to the plaintiff, the 1st defendant said that adoption must be recited as admitted in it, while she said that Will must be recited as true, that she also asked for more moveables and insisted on money being paid in cash in one payment, that she also insisted on a diamond earring and other moveables, which he does not now remember, being given to her and that the mediators said that the amount alone might be fixed then and that the other matters might be included after consultation of Pleaders. He adds that the plaintiff signed Exhibit A on his telling her in the presence of the mediators that if the other matters were not settled and included in the Rezinamah, that document would be a waste paper.

(5) Afterwards this witness went to Mr. B. S. Nataraja Sastrial, the 1st defendant's Pleader, to get a formal Razinamah written. But curiously enough he consulted him only as regards the recital to be made about the alleged adoption and Will which is found in paragraph 1 of Exhibit I. The rest of the contents in Exhibit I was written by himself in his Pleader's house without consulting Mr. B. S Nataraja Sastrial. He has changed therein some of the terms in Exhibit A and added new terms of his own accord, which he deposes to have done on the basis of what the parties (plaintiff) represented to him when Exhibit A was executed. In other words by the changes introduced in Exhibit I by him, he intended to make it acceptable to the plaintiff. But his evidence shows that she did not agree to abide by the terms of Exhibit I, and so no formal Razinamah could be drafted and presented in Court.

(6) If really it was intended in the beginning to consult the Pleaders as regards the matters now enumerated by the plaintiff, he would naturally have consulted Mr. B. S. Nataraja Sastrial on them all and would not have confined the consultation to the recital to be made as regards Will and adoption as he did. As regards the plaintiff's alleged insistence on Rs. 16,000 being paid in cash in one payment, his evidence is that she objected to the payment of it by instalments a little, and wanted the amount to be paid in cash, that the mediators said that it would be difficult for the 1st defendant to get Rs. 16,000 at once, but that they would ask him to pay it if he could get it by the time of the filing of the Razinamah in Court and that they did not say what should be the case if the 1st defendant was not able to raise that amount by that time. The result of that evidence is that the plaintiff was not serious in her request to be paid Rs. 16,000 in cash in one payment; else, she would not have signed Exhibit A, which provides for a payment of Rs. 5,000 only in cash in one payment and for the payment of the rest in instalments. After all, this witness's impression as to what matters were intended to be meant by the wards 'Baki yavuthu rajinamah sharathugal' in paragraph 7 of Exhibit A, on which the Pleaders had to be consulted, is that they relate to (1) what sort of wording should be used about the adoption, (2) about the Will, and (3) what should be written in the Razinamah to safeguard the parties' rights against a possible suit by a reversioner. From this it is clear that by those words it was not intended to come to a settlement on questions relating to the various reliefs which the plaintiff says in her deposition she claimed and were left open when Exhibit A was signed by her. With regard to the diamond ear-rings in particular this witness's evidence is that the plaintiff wanted them, that the mediators simply said "Are you going to wear them?" and that on her again repeating her demand they said 'Agattum' (let us see). This shows clearly that there was no clear understanding that her request should be subsequently considered and that a decision should be arrived at on it.

(7) When Exhibit I was prepared by her Pleader's clerk, her father, Natesa Pillai, the 1st defendant's agent, Natesa Thevar and Nagalinga Mudaliar (petitioner's witnesses Nos. 2 and 3) were present, but none said then that any more terms should be added to those in Exhibit I. From this also it is clear that the plaintiff's deposition, about her insistence on additional reliefs and the mediators leaving them for subsequent consideration, is false.

(8) I find on the evidence above discussed that by the words 'the other terms of the Razinamah' in Exhibit A, paragraph 7, it was meant only to introduce a recital as regards the Will relied on by the plaintiff and the adoption relied on by the 1st defendant with the advice of the Pleaders and to make the language of Exhibit A more formal so as to make it fit to be filed directly into Court, as for instance, by introducing the name of the Court, the number of the suit, the description of the parties, etc., and that those words were not intended to cover the question whether any other terms, by way of reliefs, to be given to the plaintiff or the 1st defendant should be introduced after consultation of Pleaders.

(9) 2nd issue:—On this issue also my finding is against the plaintiff. There is no evidence worth the name that the settlement of the matters dealt with in Exhibit A was conditional on a settlement being subsequently arrived at later on on any other terms. Petitioner's 1st witness has deposed that there was no understanding that only on the settlement of any terms left not settled, the Razinamah in Exhibit A should come into force. He has further deposed that there was no talk as to what should happen if a formal Razinamah could not be prepared. Petitioner's 2nd witness also has deposed that there was no talk as to what should happen if those things were not done, those things being according to him (1) the 1st defendant's handing over Rs. 5,000 and the moveables mentioned in Exhibit A to Saminatha Mudaliar (petitioner's 1st witness) to be handed over to the plaintiff, and (2) the subsequent filing of a Razinamah on the hearing date in Court. Petitioner's 3rd witness also swears that there was no talk as to what should happen if a formal Razinamah could not be prepared. The plaintiff's evidence that if all her demands as mentioned in her deposition were not settled and included in Exhibit A, that document must be deemed to be a waste paper and that she was made to understand so by the mediators, cannot be believed for a moment in the light of the above evidence of the mediators. Her 2nd witness's evidence (counter-petitioner's 2nd witness) also on th point cannot be believed, especially as it has been found that there were no further terms by way of reliefs in her favour to be decided and included in Exhibit A when it was signed by the plaintiff. His evidence, that he pointed out to the plaintiff paragraph 7 of Exhibit A to show that it would not be binding on her unless all her demands were settled and provided for in it, is not countenanced by that paragraph for nowhere in that paragraph is it stated that a settlement of the terms to be further settled should affect the binding nature of the settlement of the terms included in Exhibit A.

This appeal came on for final hearing after the return of the finding of the lower Court on the issues referred by this Court for trial.

The Hon'ble Mr. T. Rangachariar (with him Mr. N. M. Malim Sahib), for the Appellant.—Exhibit A is not a completed contract. It is dependent on the drawing up of another formal Razi petition after consulting the Vakils. To that petition, Exhibit I, the plaintiff was not a party and she refused to sign it. There was, therefore, no lawful compromise within the meaning of Order XXIII, rule 3, Civil Procedure Code. Exhibit A only embodies the terms of the negotiations and they did not develop into a final, concluded compromise. When plaintiff declined to sign Exhibit I, the compromise fell through.

The Subordinate Judge's findings as to the nature and effect of Exhibits A and I are wrong. The matter that was left to be decided was not merely formal. The other terms, referred to in paragraph 7 of Exhibit A, relate to separate and distinct matters.

See Winn v. Bull (1), Appleby v. Johnson (2), Stanley v. Dowdeswell (3) and Von Hatzfeldt Wildenburg (Princess) v. Alexander (4).

Mr. T. R. Ramachandra Aiyar (with him Mr. K. S. Jayarama Aiyar), for the Respondent.—Exhibit A evidences a completed contract. The terms were all settled and only formal matters were pending decision. The Subordinate Judge so finds it expressly. There has been a concluded adjustment which cannot be re-opened. See Winn v. Bull (1).

JUDGMENT.—The only point for decision in this case is whether Original Suit No. 49 of 1916 has been validly compromised between the plaintiff and the 1st defendant by a lawful agreement written under Order XXIII, rule 3, of the Code of Civil Procedure, as alleged by the 1st defendant. Plaintiff's case is that though there was a mediation between the parties and an agreement was arrived at on some of the points in dispute, there were still other points outstanding to be settled, and, therefore, there was no completed contract. The Subordinate Judge decided in favour of the 1st defendant that Exhibit A signed by the parties evidenced a completed agreement and gave a decree in its terms. Hence the appeal to us by the plaintiff.

The plaintiff admits Exhibit A, but contends that that it is only a memorandum of the points provisionally agreed to by her and that the matter remained in a state of negotiation still and that it was only after certain further points were settled after consultation with Vakils and a formal Razinamah petition was drawn up and signed by her embodying all the terms that the contract would become complete. She declined to sign Exhibit I, which was the formal petition that was so drawn up, and she contends that there was, therefore, no agreement binding on her and that the attempted compromise fell through.

In Exhibit A there is a statement in clause 7 which seemed to lend some support to her case. It says "that in respect of all the other terms of the Razinamah, Vakils shall be consulted and another Razinamah prepared and filed in Court regarding" the reliefs to be granted to each. Now, as the expression "the other terms of the Razinamah" was ambiguous and it was not clear whether it referred merely to the wording of the Razinamah as defendant contended or to other terms of dispute on the merits between the parties and as the Subordinate Judge had disposed of the matter in the first instance on the affidavits of the parties and as plaintiff's affidavit did not state what those other terms were according to her, we considered it proper that evidence should be taken of the mediators and others who took part in bringing about the alleged

(1) (1877) 7 Ch. D. 29; 47 L. J. Ch. 139; 26 W. R. 230.
(2) (1874) 9 C. P. 158.
(3) (1875) 10 C. P. 102; 23 W. R. 389.
(4) (1912) 1 Ch. 284; 81 L. J. Ch. 184; 105 L. T. 434.

settlement under Exhibit A to explain the clause and we, therefore, remanded the case for the purpose and directed the Subordinate Judge to take evidence and return findings as to what the "other terms" were and whether the settlement under Exhibit A was conditional on the settlement to be arrived at on those other terms. The Subordinate Judge has taken the evidence and has returned findings on both points in favour of the defendant. He finds that "the other terms" did not refer to any points of dispute on the merits between the parties, but only to the introduction of a recital as regards the truth of the Will relied on by the plaintiff and of the adoption relied on by the first defendant with the advice of Pleaders in the Razinama and to make the language of Exhibit A more formal so as to make it fit to be filed in Court, and on the 2nd issue he finds that it was not intended that the settlement under exhibit A was to be conditional on any other terms being settled later.

Mr. T. Rangachariar for the appellant contended that his findings on these issues were wrong. On the evidence on record we are inclined to agree with the Subordinate Judge that all matters in dispute between the parties were really settled before Exhibit A was drawn up and that the "other terms" in clause 7 really refer to what the Subordinate Judge finds. The plaintiff wanted a recital of the truth of her Will and the defendant of the truth of his adoption in the final Razinama petition; but in view of the terms agreed to in Exhibit A these recitals were of no importance and apparently were not a matter of dispute between the parties. The parties, having disputed these points in the suit, apparently wanted to consult the Vakils to find out if it was proper to add such admissions in the Razi petition and if so, how they should be worded. This is what the plaintiff's witnesses say and we think it is most likely. Even the 2nd witness for the plaintiff admits this was what was meant by clause 7. There is no real foundation for the suggestion that the introduction of these recitals was a matter of dispute between the parties, which was arranged to be settled between them after consulting their respective Vakils. The statement of plaintiff's 1st witness in cross-examination to which our attention was drawn that "the plaintiff said that Will must be recited as true and defendant that adoption was true and we mediators said that on those points the Pleaders must be consulted and decision arrived at," must be read with the rest of his evidence and the evidence of the other mediators, when it will be clear that what he meant was that the Vakils were to decide how the recitals could be properly made, and not that the parties should decide whether the recitals should be made at all. We are unable to credit the plaintiff when she enumerates a number of items of dispute as referred to in clause 7, for she is not corroborated in it by her own 2nd witness. We accept the finding of the Subordinate Judge as to the meaning of clause 7.

We also accept the Subordinate Judge's finding that the settlement under Exhibit A was not in any way dependent on the settlement of any other terms afterwards. It is fully supported by the evidence on record and was hardly attacked by the appellant's Pleader. All the mediators whose evidence we have accepted support this view.

In these circumstances, can it be said that Exhibit A does not evidence a completed contract? We do not think so. Mr. Rangachariar cited several English cases as in his favour, viz., Winn v. Bull (1), Appleby v. Johnson (2), Stanley v. Dowdeswell (3) and Von Hatzfeldt Wildenburg (Princess) v. Alexander (4), while on the other side the cases in North v. Percival (5) and Gray v. Smith (6) were cited. It is not necessary to refer to them in detail, as the law on the point as to when a contract should be viewed as complete and when not is fairly clear. The question has to be decided in each case on its own facts. If a consensus ad idem had been reached between the parties on all the proposed or disputed terms, there is a contract: but if, as Jessel, M. R., puts it in the case in Winn v. Bull (1) "if two persons agree in writing that up to a certain point the terms shall be the terms of the contract but that the minor terms shall be submitted to a Solicitor and shall be as are approved of by him" or if they are otherwise left unsettled there is no contract; this is so even if they are minor terms. But if all the terms are agreed to, any stipulation to embody those terms in a formal document will not affect the contract except when there is a further stipulation, express or implied, that the contract shall not be treated as complete till the formal document is drawn up and signed. The English cases cited illustrate these principles.

(5) (1893) 2 Ch. 128; 67 L. J. Ch. 321; 78 L. T. 615; 46 W. R. 552.

(6) (1890) 43 Ch. D. 208; 59 L. J. Ch. 145; 62 L. T. 335; 38 W. R. 310.

In the present case we have found that though the parties desired to have a formal Razinamah petition prepared and to have the recitals above referred to included in it, this no way affected the agreement come to in Exhibit A. These were formal matters left to the Vakils to arrange as they thought fit without affecting the contract between the parties. We think the objection raised by the appellant that the contract under Exhibit A was incomplete and unenforceable fails. It may be that she is entitled to have the recitals put in the Razi petition but she never asked for it.

The appeal against order fails and is dismissed with costs.

M. C. P.

Appeal dismissed.

PRIVY COUNCIL.

APPEAL FROM THE CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

December 16, 1919.

Present:—Viscount Finlay, Lord Sumner and Lord Parmoor.

THE TRUSTEES FOR THE IMPROVEMENT OF CALCUTTA—APPELLANTS

versus

CHANDRA KANTA GHOSH—RESPONDENT.

Calcutta Improvement Act (V of 1911), ss. 41, 42, 69, 81—Improvement scheme—Land acquisition—Recoupment principle—Land affected by execution of scheme, what is.

Under section 42 of the Calcutta Improvement Act, 1911, an improvement scheme may provide for the acquisition, by the Board of Trustees appointed under the Act, of any land comprised in the scheme which will in their opinion be affected by the execution of the scheme. [p. 33, col. 1.]

It is not necessary that the land should be physically affected by the operation of the scheme, or that it should be injuriously affected by severance or otherwise. [p. 36, col. 2.]

Land is affected by the execution of a scheme whenever its value is thereby enhanced or diminished. [p. 36, col. 1.]

Even though the land is only taken for the purposes of recoupment, the Board has the same powers of compulsory acquisition and the assessment of the value is regulated by the same principles, as if the land were required for the actual working of the scheme. If it is required for any of the purposes of the Act, whereof recoupment is one, the provisions for compulsory acquisition apply. [p. 37, col. 2.]

Appeal from a decree of the Calcutta High Court (Justice Sir Asutosh Mookerjee, Kt., and Mr. Justice Cuming), reported as 36 Indian Case 749, affirming a decree of the First Subordinate Judge of the 24-Pergunnahs.

FACTS of the case will sufficiently appear from their Lordships' judgment and from the report of the High Court proceedings in Trustees for the Improvement of Calcutta v. Chandra Kanta Ghosh (1). From these it will be seen that Mookerjee and Cuming, JJ., affirmed the view of the trial Court that the powers of compulsory acquisition, which the Act conferred upon the Trustees, did not extend to cases where the land was only acquired for the purpose of recoupment and because it was believed that its value would be enhanced by the scheme.

Sir John Simon, K. C., Dunne, K. C., Sir W. Garth, K. C., and Mr. G. B. MacNair, for the Appellants, submitted that the decisions of the lower Courts were erroneous. The Trustees had power to acquire the land in suit under section 41 of the Calcutta Improvement Act. It was sufficient under that section that the land was in their opinion required for the execution of the scheme. It was not necessary that it should be land required for the actual widening of Russa Road—land to form part of the widened road. That the powers of acquisition were not confined to such land was clear from section 39, which gave power to acquire land for the purpose of laying out the area with new roads and of forming building sites. But in any case there is power under section 42 to acquire any land which will, in the opinion of the Board, be affected by the execution of the scheme. This does not mean merely "physically affected": it is sufficient that the land is affected in value. A Full Bench of the Calcutta High Court has rightly decided, since this case was heard, that the Calcutta Improvement Act authorises the Board to acquire land compulsorily for purposes of recoupment, either by selling or otherwise dealing with the land under section 81 or by abandoning it in consideration of a payment by the owner under section 78.

(1) 36 Ind. Cas. 749; 41 C. 219; 24 C. L. J. 243; 21 C. W. N. 8.

Mani Lall Sing v. Trustees for the Improvement of Calcutta (2).

We rely on and adopt the reasoning of Woodroofe, J., in the order of reference in that case.

Any other interpretation of section 42 of the Act makes that section almost meaningless: it cannot have been intended merely to authorize the acquisition of land which is afterwards found not to be wanted. It is argued against us that section 42 might be arbitrarily or improperly applied, if it has the scope for which we contend: but there is little danger of this, as under section 49 the sanction of the Local Government is required for the scheme.

The powers conferred upon a public body entrusted by the Legislature with the duty of making public improvements in a city are not to be construed so severely and restrictively as if those powers were bestowed upon a body of adventurers: Galloway v. Mayor and Commonalty of London (3).

(Reference was also made to sections 40, 68, 69, 81 and 122 of the Act).

Messrs. Upjohn, K. C., De Gruyther, K. C., and Dube, for the Respondent.—The land here was not required for the execution of the scheme under section 41 of the Act: the resolution provides only for the widening of Russa Road, and it is not contended that it was needed for that purpose. Section 42 does not bring into the Act any land which is not part of the scheme for the execution of the works. If it had been intended to introduce into the Act the principle of recoupment, it would not have been done by mere inference, as appellants contend, but on specific terms not admitting of mistake. There is a whole chapter of the Act devoted to finance, and such a provision, if it were desired to introduce it, would have been included in that chapter. "Land affected" in section 42 (a) must mean land which is itself affected, not land the value of which is affected. "Affected" here has the same meaning as "injuriously affected" in the Lands Clauses Act, 1845: it covers a physical interference with a right, whether public or private, which an owner (of land) is entitled by law to make use of, in connection with the (land).

Metropolitan Board of Works v. McCarthy (4).

The phrase "injuriously affected" is adopted in section 23 of the Land Acquisition Act (I of 1894). One object of section 42 is to enable the Trustees to take land in respect of which they anticipate a heavy claim for severance under that section. There has been no expression of opinion by the appellants, either by resolution or otherwise, that the land in suit is in fact affected by the scheme. We submit that it was included in the scheme merely in order to hold us to ransom under section 78 of the Act.

Sir John Simon, K. C., in reply, referred to the terms of the resolution published in the Calcutta Gazette, which set out that the land was "required to be taken by Government at the expense of the Calcutta Improvement Trust for a public purpose, viz., for the street scheme known as the Scheme No. IV," etc.

JUDGMENT.

LORD PARMOOR.—This is an appeal from a judgment and decree of the High Court of Judicature at Fort William in Bengal, dated the 22nd August 1916, affirming a judgment and decree of the First Subordinate Judge of the 24-Pargunnahs. The respondent brought the present suit for a declaration that the appellants had no power under the provisions of a Road Improvement Scheme, framed under the Calcutta Improvement Act of 1911, to acquire certain land owned by him, and that all proceedings in connection with the acquisition of such land were ultra vires and of no effect. Both the lower Courts have decided in favour of the respondent, holding that the land in question is not required for the Road Widening Scheme and that its acquisition for any other purpose is not warranted under any of the provisions of the said Act. The appellants obtained leave to appeal to His Majesty in Council and submit that the judgments and decrees of both Courts should be reversed and the suit dismissed.

(2) 44 Ind. Cas. 770; 45 C. 343; 22 C. W. N. 1; 27 C. L. J. 1.

(3) (1866) 1 H. L. 34; 35 L. J. Ch. 477; 12 Jur. (N. S.) 747; 14 L. T. 865.

(4) (1874) 7 H. L. 243; 43 L. J. P. C. 385; 31 L. T. 182; 23 W. R. 115.

The decision of the appeal depends upon the construction to be placed on certain sections of the Calcutta Improvement Act, 1911, an Act under which improvement schemes for Calcutta may be framed by the appellants (therein called the Board) and sanctioned by the Local Government. Whenever the Local Government does sanction an improvement scheme, there is a duty to announce the fact by notification, and the publication of a notification is conclusive evidence that the scheme has been duly framed and sanctioned. This provision does not affect the right of the respondent to institute a suit to have it declared that the Board in framing the scheme acted ultra vires, or that the scheme as sanctioned does not authorise the appellants to acquire by compulsion the land in question. During the course of the argument the attention of thier Lordships was directed to a number of decisions upon various Acts of Parliament giving a compulsory power for the acquisitions of land, but in each case the decision must depend upon the provisions of the particular Act and the purposes for which and conditions under which in such Act land may be compulsorily acqred. It bec omes necessary, therefore, to consider what were the considerations on which the Board acted in framing the scheme, and whether the scheme as sanctioned gives the Board the powers which they are seeking to enforce.

The preamble of the Act recites in general terms that it is expedient to make provision for the improvement and expension of Calcutta by opening up congested areas, laying out and altering streets, providing open spaces for purposes of ventilation or recreation, demolishing or constructing buildings, acquiring land for the said purposes, and for the re housing of persons of the poorer and working classes displaced by the execution of improvement schemes, and otherwise as thereinafter appearing. It is not necessary further to consider the preamble.

Section 2 enacts that an improvement scheme means a general improvement scheme or a street scheme, or both. In the present case the scheme was a street improvement scheme framed for the purpose of creating new, or improving existing, means of communication and facilities for traffic. Section 39 enacts (inter alia) that whenever the Board are of opinion that for the purpose of creating new or improving existing means of communication and facilities for traffic, it is expedient to lay out new streets or to alter existing streets (including bridges, causeway and culverts), the Board may pass a resolution to that effect and shall then proceed to frame a street scheme for such area as they may think fit.

At a meeting of the Board on the 17th September 1912, Resolution No. 5 was passed. This resolution was approved at a meeting of the Board on the 8th October 1912 at which it was resolved that the scheme for the widening of Russa Road, as far as Hazra Road, prepared in accordance with Resolution No. 5 of the 17th September 1912, should be adopted and notices issued under sections 43 and 45.

It was argued on behalf of the respondent that lands had been included by the Board within the area of the scheme, not because they were wanted for any of the purposes of the Act, but with the object of exacting an exemption fee from the owners, although the Board were actually not anxious to acquire the buildings and would possibly, or probably, fail to make a profit, if they did actually acquire and re-sell the land. Under section 78 owners may apply to the Board requesting that the acquisition of their land should be abandoned in consideration of the payment of a sum to be fixed by the Board in that behalf. The object of this section is to give an opportunity to owners of land to request the abandonment of its compulsory acquisition, and it only comes into operation where land has been properly included in a scheme as required for purposes of the Act. To have included land within the area of the scheme, not because it was wanted for purposes of the Act, but in order to exact an exemption fee from the owner would, in the opinion of their Lordships, have been a misuse of the powers conferred upon the Board, and if in fact the Board had included the land of the respondent in the scheme merely for the purpose of exacting exemption fees, the Board would have acted ultra vires and the respondent would have been entitled to succeed in his action, although it might have been anticipated that, by means of such fees, funds would be obtained to ease the burden of the expenditure to be incurred in the execution of the scheme. After the scheme had been sanctioned, an application of the respondent requesting that, under section 78, the acquisition of his land should be abandoned, in consideration of a payment by him, was considered by the Board and rejected on the ground that his land was required for the "lay-out," which evidently refers to the lay-out of land not actually required in the execution of the street widening. The same expression is to be found in the evidence of Mr. Bompas, the chairman of the Board, but their Lordships do not find that the evidence of Mr. Bompas is in any way inconsistent with the inference to be drawn from the record of what passed at the Board when Resolution No. 5 was passed on the 17th September 1912.

On the 17th September 1912 a proposal was brought before the Board in favour of gazetting all land from which there was a reasonable chance of obtaining an exemption fee. This proposal was directly negatived, and only two members of the Board voted in its favour. In the opinion of their Lordships, this decision disposes of the allegation that the Board framed the area of the scheme on the principle of including land for the purpose of exacting exemption fees, whether or not such land might, in their opinion, be required for the execution of the scheme or affected by the execution thereof.

At the same meeting, and after the above proposal had been negatived, the chairman asked for definite instructions in regard to the Russa Road scheme, and, after voting, it was determined that all properties abutting on the Russa Road should not be gazetted for acquisition, but only those properties which as a matter of fact it would pay the Board to acquire and sell again. The effect of this decision would be to limit the proposal of land acquisition to those properties only of which the value, in the opinion of the Board, might be enhanced by the execution of the scheme, or, in other words, to those properties from which a sum, in the nature of recoupment, might, in the opinion of the Board, be obtained in aid of the expenditure to be incurred. Finally, the chairman asked the opinion of the Board as to the area which should be included in the Russa Road scheme. There were three alternative projects. It was decided that the scheme should provide only for the widening of Russa Road and the taking up for recoupment purposes of land unoccupied or occupied by buildings of small value. A plan showing the area finally included in the scheme was submitted to the Local Government, and a copy, as sanctioned, was produced before their Lordships. It is not suggested that the land of the respondent is required for the execution of the road widening, and it is, at no point, nearer than 55 feet to the widened line on the west side of the street.

After an improvement scheme has been framed certain notices must be given, and after the hearing of persons entitled to make objection, representation or dissent, the Board may apply to the Local Government for sanction of the scheme. The sanction of the Local Government was notified in the Calcutta Gazette of the 21st January 1914, and the publication of a notification in respect of any scheme is conclusive that the scheme has been duly framed and sanctioned. It becomes necessary, however, to consider whether the Board had authority under the Act to frame a scheme on the terms of Resolution No. 5 of the 17th September 1912, and secondly, whether, if the scheme was duly sanctioned by the Local Government, it gives the Board the powers of compulsory acquisition of the land of the respondent.

Section 41 of the Act enacts that every improvement scheme shall provide for the acquisition by the Board of any land, in the area comprised in the scheme, which will, in their opinion, be required for the execution of the scheme. It was argued on behalf of the Board that the land of the respondent came within the provision of section 41, in that it was land which, in the opinion of the Board, was required for the execution of the scheme. It is not necessary to consider what might be included under the terms of section 41, but the scheme, now under consideration, was a scheme for the widening of Russa Road, as far as Hazra Road, and it cannot be said that the land of the respondent was required for the execution of this widening. As already stated, the land of the respondent at the nearest point was 55 feet away from the western border of the Russa Road after it had been widened to 100 feet as proposed in the scheme.

The case really depends upon the construction of section 42. Under this section, an improvement scheme may provide for the acquisition by the Board of any land in the area comprised in the scheme which will, in their opinion, be affected by the execution of the scheme. The land of the respondent is within the area delimited on the plan attached to the schme, but it was argued on his behalf that it was not land affected by the execution of the scheme. The land was included in the scheme because, in the opinion of the Board, it would pay them to acquire it and sell it again, and the question arises whether land can be compulsorily purchased in order that the Board may have the benefit of such enhanced value, and use any profit on the transaction in ease of the burden of the public expenditure. "Land" is defined to have the same meaning as in the Land Acquisition Act, 1894, in which the expression "land" includes benefits to arise out of land; but, apart from this definition, land would, using language in its ordinary natural sense, be said to be affected by the execution of a scheme, whenever its value was thereby either enhanced or diminished. It is not immaterial to observe that there was at the date of the passing of the Calcutta Improvement Act no novelty in the recoupment principle [Galloway v. Mayor and Commonalty of London (3).] But whether this principle has been sanctioned in the Calcutta Improvement Act must be determined on the language used, and the case of Donaldson v. South Shields Corporation (5) shows, if authority is necessary, that where an Act authorises land to be taken for the actual works only, a local authority, or other public body, will be restrained from taking more than is actually necessary for such works. There would appear to be nothing either in the general scheme of the Act, or in the special context, which is inconsistent with giving the word "affected" its ordinary and normal sense, but it was suggested in the argument on behalf of the respondent that the Act did not authorise the Board to acquire land unless such land was either physically affected by the execution of the scheme, or injuriously affected, whether by severance, or in some other manner. Land which would be physically affected by the scheme comes under the provision of section 41, and to limit the land which a Board may acquire under section 42 to the land, which they must acquire under section 41, would be in effect to make illusory the powers granted in section 42. The meaning of the phrase "injuriously affected" was well known in compensation law and practice when the Calcutta Improvement Act was passed, and the phrase occurs in section 23 of the Land Acquisition Act, 1894. To introduce the limitations connoted by the word "injuriously" would be in effect to alter the language of the section, and, had the Legislature desired to introduce this limitation, there would have been no drafting difficulty of any kind. A special argument that section 42 should be limited to cases of severance was based on the terms of section 49 of the Land Acquisition Act, 1894, as read in conjunction with section 42 and section 78 of the Calcutta Improvement Act, 1911. Section 49 of the Land Acquisition Act, 1894, is a section not unusual in Acts giving power for the compulsory acquisition of land, and enacts that the provisions of the Act shall not be put in force for the purpose of acquiring a part only of any house, manufactory, or other building, if the owner desire that the whole of such house, manufactory, or other building shall be so acquired. There is no limitation to cases of severance either in section 42 of the Calcutta Improvement Act, 1911, or section 78, and there is no ground for implying any limitations as affecting the authority of the Board for the acquisition of land under section 42. The result is that, in the opinion of their Lordships, none of the suggested limitations to the usual and normal meaning of the word "affected" in section 42 are admissible, and that there is no reason, either in the general purpose of the Act or the special context, that the word should not be construed in its ordinary sense, and that, as so construed, section 42 authorises the acquisition of the land of the respondent, which was inserted in the scheme, because, in the opinion of the Board, it would be enhanced in value by its execution.

(5) (1899) 79 L. T. 695; 68 L. J. Ch. 162.

Among the cases called to the attention of their Lordships was that of Metropolitan Board of Works v. McCarthy (4). In that case McCarthy was a lessee and occupier of a house in close proximity to a draw-dock which opened into the Thames. He had no right in any way to the use of the dock except as one of the public, but his premises being in close proximity to it, his use of it for the purposes of his business was very constant. The dock was entirely destroyed by the works of the Thames Embankment, and McCarthy sought compensation. The case submitted to the Court stated that "by reason of the destruction of the dock, and the destruction thereby of the access to and from the Thames, the plaintiff's premises became and were, as premises either to sell or occupy in their then condition and with reference to the uses to which any owner or occupier might put them in their then state and condition, permanently damaged and diminished in value." It was held in this case that McCarthy was entitled to compensation, but if in such a case compensation was properly given to the owner, it would not appear to be unfair that where premises in close proximity to a widened street are thereby enhanced in value such value should enure to ease the burden of public expenditure provided that the interests of the owner are properly protected. In this case the respondent would be entitled to the value of his land assessed on the same principle as the value of land actually required for the execution of the widened street, and the effect would be not to deprive him of the value of his property, but only that he would not obtain the additional value due to the proximity of his land to the improvement scheme.

It was further argued on behalf of the respondent that, although the land of the respondent might be acquired by agreement, it was not subject to compulsory acquisition. Section 69, under the head of "compulsory acquisition," empowers the Board, with the previous sanction of the Local Government, to acquire land under the provisions of the Land Acquisition Act, 1894, for carrying out any of the purposes of the Act. It was said that to take land for the purpose of recoupment is not to take it in order to carry out any of the purposes of the Act, but only to provide a means whereby such purposes can be carried out. It is difficult to understand the distinction which is suggested. If the Board are authorised to acquire land affected in value by the execution of the scheme, in order to provide funds in ease of the public burden, the acquisition of such land is directly within the purposes of the Act and, the powers of compulsory acquisition are clearly applicable thereto. Section 81 of the Act confers on the Board wide powers for the holding or disposal of any land vested in them or acquired by them under the Act, amply sufficient for dealing with any land acquired under section 42 and not required for the actual execution of the street scheme.

In the result their Lordships are of opinion that the appeal should be allowed with costs here and below and they will humbly advise His Majesty accordingly.

Appeal allowed.

Solicitors for the Appellants:—Messrs. Morgan Price & Co.

Solicitors for the Respondent:—Messrs. W. W. Box & Co.

UMED ALI v. HABIBULLAH.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

APPEALS FROM APPELLATE DECREES Nos. 666, 890, 1209, 1214, 1244, 1486 TO 1491, 1523 TO 1529 OF 1916.

May 5, 1919.

Present:—Mr. Justice Chatterjea and Mr. Justice Duval.

UMED ALI AND OTHERS—APPELLANTS

versus

Nawab Khaje HABIBULLA AND OTHERS —RESPONDENTS.

Bengal Tenancy Act (VIII B. C. of 1885*)*, ss. 50, 52 (6) —Landlord and tenant—Additional rent for additional area, suit for—Burden of proof—Standard of measurement—Evidence Act (I of 1872*)*, ss. 32 (2), 34—Talab baki papers, evidentiary value of.

In a suit for additional rent for additional area, the landlord must, under section 52 of the Bengal Tenancy Act, prove that there has been an increase in the area for which rent was previously paid and in order to do so, he must show that the land was measured at the time of the inception of the tenancy by a particular standard of measurement, and that there has been an increase in the area on measurement by the same standard. [p. 39, col. 2.]

The words "at the time the measurement on which the claim is based was made" in sub-section (6) of section 52 of the Bengal Tenancy Act refer to the measurement made at the time of the original settlement, and not to the measurement upon which the excess area is found out before the institution of the suit for additional rent. [p. 39, col. 2]

Under section 34 of the Evidence Act talab baki papers are not sufficient evidence to charge any person with liability. The talab baki papers prepared by the agent of a landlord may be evidence under section 32 clause (2) of the Evidence Act, if the landlord shows that the person making the statement is dead and that the entries were made by him in the ordinary course of business. [p. 39, col. 1.]

Appeal against the decision of the Subordinate Judge, 2nd Court, Tipperrah, dated the 24th November 1915, modifying that of the Munsif, 1st Court, Chandpur, dated the 18th November 1914.

IN APPEALS Nos. 1244 AND 1523 to 1529 OF 1916.

Babu Ramesh Chandra Sen, for the Appellants.

Babu Surendra Nath Guha, for the Respondents.

IN APPEALS Nos. 1209, 1486 TO 1491 OF 1916.

Babu Surendra Nath Guha, for the Appellants.

Babu Ramesh Chandra Sen, for the Respondents.

IN APPEALS Nos. 666, 890 AND 1214 OF 1916.

Babu Surendra Nath Guha, for the Appellant.

Babu Jatindra Mohan Ghose, for the Respondents in No. 666.

Babu Birendra Chandra De (for Babu Gopal Chandra Das), for the Respondent in No. 890 of 1916.

No one appeared for the Respondent in No. 1214 of 1916.

JUDGMENT.

SECOND APPEALS Nos. 1244, 1523 TO 1529 OF 1916.

These appeals arise out of suits for recovery of rent and also for enhancement of rent on the ground of a rise in the prices of staple food crops.

The defence was that the rent was not liable to enhancement and the defendants relied upon the presumption under section 50 of the Bengal Tenancy Act.

The learned Subordinate Judge says:—"The defendants have not exhibited their dakhilas. They, however, rely upon the plaintiffs' papers to show that their jamas have not been altered for the last 20 years. But I do not think that the presumption under section 50 of the Bengal Tenancy Act can help the case for the defense in any way, for the presumption has been rebutted by the plaintiffs. The talab baki of 1281 goes to show that the jamas originally payable by the defendants were altered in that year."

It is contended before us that talab baki papers are merely corroborative and not independent evidence. No doubt, under section 34 of the Evidence Act such papers are not sufficient evidence to charge any person with liability. There is divergence of judicial opinion, however, upon the question whether the papers sought to be used for rebutting the presumption under section 50 (as in the present case) can be said to be used for the purpose of charging a person with liability. It has been held in some cases that they are not. See the cases of Belaet Khan v. Rash Beharee Mookerjee (1), Dukha Mandal v. Grant (2). A contrary view has been taken in other cases: see Surnomoyi v. Johur Mahomed Nasyo (3), and also in the latest case on the point, namely, the case of Aktowli v. Tarak Noth Ghose (4). The plaintiffs have proved that the papers of 1281 were prepared by same agent of theirs

(1) 22 W. R. 549.

(2) 16 Ind. Cas. 467; 16 C. L. J. 24.

(3) 10 C. L. R. 545.

(4) 17 Ind. Cas. 266; 16 C. L. J. 328; 17 C. W. N. 774.

and that they were in the handwriting, and bear the signature, of the said agent; but there is no evidence to show whether the person is alive or dead. If the person is dead, the papers may be evidence under section 32, clause (2), as being the statements of a deceased person made in the ordinary course of business. The defendants did not take any objection to the admissibility of these papers in the Courts below, and in fact they relied upon these papers for a period of 20 years immediately preceding the suit. They now take objection to the admissibility of the papers of 1281, which show that there was variation of the rent in that year. In order, however, that the papers might be evidence under section 32 (2), it was for the plaintiffs to show that the person making the statement was dead and that the entries were made by him in the ordinary course of business before the collection papers could be admitted. Under these circumstances, we think that there should be an enquiry in this matter and that the plaintiffs should be given an opportunity of adducing evidence on this point. If the papers are admissible in evidence under section 32, it would be unnecessary to consider whether they are admissible under section 34.

We accordingly direct the Court below to take any evidence which the plaintiffs may adduce on this point and send up its finding on the point to this Court within one month of the arrival of this order in the Court below. The question whether those papers are admissible in evidence under section 34 of the Evidence Act (if necessary to be considered) and the other question, namely as to the right of enhancement under section 30 and the date from which the enhancement is to take effect, will be considered after the finding on the above point is received in this Court.

SECOND APPEALS NOS. 1209, 1486 TO 1491 OF 1916.

These appeals arise out of the same suits, and the main questions in these cases are, first, whether the lower Appellate Court has misunderstood the provisions of sub-section (6) of section 52 of the Bengal Tenancy Act and, secondly, whether that Court has erred in not taking into consideration matters which should have been considered under this section in determining the question whether the plaintiffs are entitled to additional rent in respect of additional area.

Section 52, sub-section (6), runs as follows: "When in a suit under this section the landlord or tenant proves that, at the time the measurement on which the claim is based was made, there existed, in respect of the estate or permanent tenure or part thereof in which the tenure or holding is situate, a practice of settlement being made after measurement of the land assessed with rent, it may be presumed that the area of the tenure or holding specified in any pottá or kabuliyat, or (where there is an entry of area in counterfoil receipt corresponding to the entry in the rent roll) in any rent roll relating to it, has been entered in such pottá, kabuliyat, or rent roll after measurement."

The learned Subordinate Judge was of opinion that the practice of recent measurement would not help the plaintiff. The learned Pleader for the appellant contends that the words "at the time the measurement on which the claim is based was made" in sub-section (6) of section 52 refer to the measurement upon which the excess area is found out before the institution of the suit, and that it does not refer to the measurement made at the time of the original settlement. We are unable, however, to hold that this is what is meant by the section. The landlord has to prove under the section that there has been an increase in the area for which rent was previously paid, and in order to do so, it has been held that he must show that the land was measured at the time of the inception of the tenancy by a particular standard of measurement, and that there has been an increase in the area on measurement by the same standard. The section merely provides that if the landlord proves that at the time the measurement on which the claim is based was made there existed a practice of settlement being made after measurement of the land assessed with rent, it may be presumed that the area specified in the potta, kabuliyat or counterfoil rent receipt was entered in it after measurement. So that if the landlord can prove such a practice, it will be presumed that the area entered in the potta, kabuliyat or rent receipt was entered after measurement; though he is not able to prove that as a matter of fact the lands in the particular case were settled after measurement ; see the case of Uma Singh v. Rai Tarini Prosad (5).

If the contention of the appellant were accepted, it would follow that the landlord on showing that there is a recent practice of settlement of land after measurement (which may be started by the landlord a few years before the suit) would be entitled to ask the Court to presume that there has been such a practice 50 or 60 years before the institution of the suit when the tenancy was created. We do not think that that is the meaning of the sub-section, although the language used makes it somewhat ambiguous. We are accordingly of opinion that so far as the contention is based upon sub section(6) of section 52, it must be over-ruled.

The learned Subordinate Judge, however, does not deal with the facts of the case bearing on the question of measurement. In the first place, he says that the plaintiffs have given evidence as to the recent practice prevailing in the Mouzah about the settlement of lands. It has been pointed out to us that the plaintiffs adduced evidence to show that lands had been settled after measurement from the year 1842 and there were produced papers of 1258 and 1280 which are referred to in the judgment of the Munsif. Besides there appears to have been a survey and settlement of lands in the year 1276. The learned Munsif appears to have considered the entire evidence bearing upon the question. The lower Appellate Court has not come to any finding upon the facts and has practically proceeded upon the proposition of law mentioned in his judgment.

We think, therefore, that the case should go back to the lower Appellate Court in order that the question may be considered and findings arrived at upon the evidence on the record, and the appeal disposed of according to law.

Costs to abide the result.

This judgment will govern Second Appeals Nos. 666 and 890 of 1916, the question in these cases being similar,

SECOND APPEAL No. 1214 OF 1916.

The respondent has not appeared in this case. This appeal arises out of a suit for enhancement of rent and also for additional rent for additional area.

(5) 25 Ind. Cas. 532; 19 C. L. J. 451 at p. 452.]

The holding originally belonged to the defendant's father. There was a subsequent division of the holding into three parts. The learned Subordinate Judge says: "It does not appear when the holding in question was created. There is nothing to show that the settlement with the defendants was made on the basis of any measurement or that they have been holding any land beyond the boundaries of the lands let out to them. In short the plaintiffs have failed to prove that the defendants are in possession of any excess land." It appears, however, from the Munsif's judgment that the quantity of land and the amount of rent of the original holding have varied from time to time, and that being so, the incidents of the original tenancy would govern the incidents of the three holdings in the possession of the defendants, into which the original holding was sub-divided. In these circumstances we do not see any reason why the plaintiffs should not be entitled to additional rent for additional area.

The result is that so far as this case is concerned, the decree of the lower Appellate Court is set aside and that of the Court of first instance restored.

We make no order as to costs of this Court, but the plaintiffs will be entitled to costs of the Court of Appeal below.

Appeals Nos. 1244, 1523 to 1529, 1209, 1486 to 1491 of 1916 remanded.

Appeal No. 1214 of 1916 allowed.

PATNA HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 402 OF 1918.

July 7, 1919.

Present:—Mr. Justice Das.

BHIKHAN QASSAB—DEFENDANT—APPELLANT

versus

Sheikh MARDAN ALI—PLAINTIFF—RESPONDENT.

Limitation Act (IX of 1908), Sch. I, Art. 142—Possession and dispossession—Suit for possession—Burden of proof—Bengal Tenancy Act (VIII B. C. of 1885), s. 103 B—Record of Rights, entry in, value of—Presumption of correctness, rebuttal of—Evidence prior to publication, whether admissible—Appeal—Appellate Court, duty of—Failure to consider weight of evidence.

BHIKHAN v. MARDAN ALI.

When a plaintiff brings a suit for possession on the allegation that while in possession he was dispossessed by the defendant, he must show when exactly he was dispossessed and he must bring his suit within 12 years of the date of dispossession. [p. 42, col. 1.]

Evidence of a date prior to that of the publication of a Record of Rights is admissible in evidence and ought to be taken into consideration by a Court and weighed in determining whether the presumption created by an entry in the Record of Rights has been rebutted. [p. 43, col. 1.]

The failure by an Appellate Court to determine the critical question between the parties to a suit and to consider the oral evidence adduced on behalf of the defendant amounts to a substantial error of procedure. [p. 43, col. 2.]

Appeal from a decision of the 2nd Sub-Judge, Muzaffarpur, dated the 23rd February 1918, modifying that of the Munsif, Sitamarhi, dated the 18th January 1917.

Mr. Khurshaid Husnain, for the Appellant.

Mr. B. N. Mitter, for Mr. L. N. Singh, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—This appeal arises out of a suit brought by the respondent for ejectment of the appellant from the land in dispute by demolishing the house, which, it is alleged, the appellant has erected on that land.

The plaintiff's case is that the land in dispute is included in Survey Plot No. 2815, which the plaintiff purchased from one Kaburuddin in 1907. He alleges that the defendant dispossessed him from the same in Baisakh 1319 by erecting a house on that land.

The defence is that the land in dispute does not form part of Survey Plot No. 2815 and that it did not belong to the plaintiff's predecessor-in interest and does not belong to the plaintiff. Alternatively, the defence urges that the defendant erected the house 18 or 19 years ago and that he has been in possession thereof ever since and that the plaintiff's suit is barred by limitation.

The lower Appellate Court has come to the conclusion that the plaintiff has proved his title to 1 cottah 12½ dhurs of land within the land in suit. It has come to this conclusion on a review of all oral and documentary evidence in the case, including the Kobala, Khatian and the Commissioner's report. In my opinion, the finding of the lower Appellate Court on this point is a finding of fact and is binding on me in second appeal.

There, however, remains the question of limitation which the defendant specifically raised. His case is, as I have stated before, that he built this house 18 or 19 years ago and that he remained in possession thereof ever since. The plaintiff, on the other hand, says that the defendant built this house in Baisakh 1319. It is, therefore, admitted that the defendant ousted the plaintiff by building a house on the land. It is, in my opinion, therefore, of vital importance to determine when the house was actually built by the defendant. If the defendant's case be true on this point, then it is obvious that the plaintiff has not been in possession of a portion of the land in dispute within 12 years of the date of suit and his action must consequently fail. If, on the other hand, the plaintiff's case be true on this point, then he is entitled to succeed in this action to the extent of 1 cottah 12½ dhurs of land.

The Court of first instance pursued this method of enquiry and in a careful judgment, which has impressed me considerably, came to the conclusion that the defendant built this house 18 or 19 years ago and that he has been in possession of the land in dispute ever since.

The lower Appellate Court has, however, pursued another method altogether. It found that Survey Plot No. 2815, in which according to the finding of the lower Appellate Court 1 cottah 12½ dhurs of the land in dispute falls, is shown in the Record of Rights as in the possession of the plaintiff's predecessor-in-interest. Having found that as a fact, it laid down as a proposition of law that the plaintiff's possession must be presumed to continue until the date which the plaintiff gives in the plaint as the date of dispossession, unless the defendant can establish that he has acquired a title by adverse possession. The line of reasoning, so far as I have been able to understand the judgment of the lower Appellate Court, is this: The Record of Rights was finally published on 8th March 1898. It records that the plaintiff's predecessor-in-interest was on that date in possession of the land. Therefore, the Court is bound to presume that the plaintiff's predecessor-in interest was in fact in possession of the land in dispute on the 8th March 1898. Therefore, the Court must further presume that the plaintiff's predecessor-in-interest and after him the plaintiff continued to remain in possession of the land until the date which he gives in his plaint as the date of his dispossession. In my opinion this argument is a fallacious one. It must be remembered that the Record of Rights is merely an item of evidence, though an item of evidence which must be presumed to be correct until the contrary is shown. Supposing the plaintiff had in this case proved by evidence which the Court accepted as conclusive that he was in possession of the land in dispute on the 8th March 1898, would the Court then be entitled to say "I shall now presume that the plaintiff continued to be in possession until the date which the plaintiff gives in his plaint as the date of dispossession, unless the defendant establishes that he has acquired a title by adverse possession?" It seems to me that the proposition has only to be stated to be rejected. A long series of cases have established that when a plaintiff brings a suit for possession on the allegation that while in possession he was dispossessed by the defendant, he must show when exactly he was dispossessed and he must bring his suit within 12 years of the date of dispossession. But according to the lower Appellate Court all that the plaintiff need show is that some time or other he was in possession of the land in dispute. As soon as he has shown that sometime or other he was in possession of the land in dispute, the Court will presume in his favour that he continued to be in possession of the land in dispute until the date which he gives in his plaint as the date of dispossession. In my opinion the Record of Rights does not stand on any better footing than any other piece of evidence which may be accepted by the Court, and the acceptance of the proposition that has been urged before me by the learned Vakil appearing on behalf of the respondent will, in my opinion, inevitably do away with the distinction between Articles 142 and 144 of the Limitation Act. But I must confess that I cannot distinguish the case of Barkat Ali v. Basant Nunia (1) which has been relied on by the lower Appellate Court. I have the greatest respect for the learned Judges who decided that case and, sitting as a single Judge, I feel that I cannot dissent from that decision. I will, therefore, approach this case from the point of view that the defendant has to establish that he has acquired a title by adverse possession.

Now, the defendant undoubtedly did attempt to prove his title by adverse possession, and the Court of first instance found that the defendant has been in possession of the property for 18 or 19 years. The defendant first of all relied upon the sale-deed in favour of the plaintiff, which shows that the southern boundary of the land purchased by the plaintiff is the house of the defendant. Therefore, it appears from the plaintiff's sale-deed itself that the defendant had a house to the south of the land purchased by the plaintiff, at any rate on the 22nd January 1907, which is the date of the plaintiff's sale-deed. But the plaintiff's case is that the defendant had another house to the south of the land purchased by him on the 22nd January 1907 and that the defendant built this house, which stands on the land in dispute, in April 1912. Therefore, unless the plaintiff can establish that the defendant had some other house to the south of the land purchased by him, it must follow that the plaintiff's case that the defendant built this house in April 1912 must be untrue. The plaintiff did attempt to prove that the defendant had another house in April 1912 to the south of the land purchased by him, a case which was found to be false by the Court of first instance. It was, of course, open to the lower Appellate Court to disagree with the Court of first instance on this point, but as I read the judgment of the lower Appellate Court, it has not attempted to discuss this matter at all. I think it was essentially necessary for the lower Appellate Court to deal with this matter and the failure to do so, in my opinion, vitiates its judgment. The defendant says very distinctly: "I built this house on the land in dispute 18 or 19 years ago and I have been in possession of it ever since." The plaintiff's Kobala on the face of it shows that the defendant had a house to the south of the land purchased by the plaintiff. The plaintiff makes a case that the defendant had another house to the south of the land purchased by him and that the house which now stands on the land in dispute was built by the defendant in April 1912. Therefore, in my opinion, the Court was bound to determine this point, especially as the Court of first instance had dealt with this point exhaustively.

(1) 39 Ind. Cas. 356; 21 C. W. N. 175.

The defendant next relies upon a Kobala of 1897. The lower Appellate Court dismissed this document entirely from its consideration, on the ground that the Record of Rights was prepared subsequently to the execution of this document. It was for the lower Appellate Court to attach whatever weight it thought proper to this Kobala, but, in my opinion, it was bound to take this document into consideration in considering whether the presumption afforded by the Record of Rights has or has not been rebutted. The lower Appellate Court erroneously thought that evidence of a date prior to that of the publication of the Record of Rights is inadmissible and cannot be taken into consideration by any Court, but it has been held that events or facts, both documentary and oral, of a date prior to that of the publication of the record are admissible and should be weighed in determining whether the presumption has been rebutted: see the case of Sheonandan Persad Sukul v. Bacha Raut (2), which has been followed in this Court in Anand Ram Marwari v. Dhanpat Singh (3). If the lower Appellate Court had considered this document, this Court could not have interfered with its estimate of that document, but the complaint of the appellant is that it has entirely dismissed this document from its consideration. I am of opinion that the lower Appellate Court erred in not taking this document into its consideration at all.

The appellant next relies upon certain Chaukidari receipts as showing that he has been in possession of this house for a number of years. The lower Appellate Court says that these receipts do not identify the house with the house built on the land in dispute. It is the defendant's case that these Chaukidari receipts are in respect of the house which he built on the land in dispute 18 or 19 years ago. It is apparently to meet this case that the plaintiff introduced the story that the defendant had another house to the south of the land purchased by him in 1907, a case which the Court of first instance disbelieved. As I have said before, it was open to the lower Appellate Court to disagree with the Court of first instance on this point but it has not done so, and in my view it was not open to the lower Appellate Court to dismiss these receipts from its consideration without first displacing the finding of the Court of first instance on this point.

Lastly the appellant relied upon oral evidence adduced by the appellant in the case. The Court of first instance discussed this evidence very fully and relied on it. It was, of course, open to the lower Appellate Court to say that it did not believe in that evidence, but it was at least incumbent on the lower Appellate Court to deal with this evidence, specially as the Court of first instance had relied on it and when the lower Appellate Court was setting aside the judgment and the decree of the Court of first instance.

In my view, therefore, the lower Appellate Court has erred both in law and in procedure: in law in that it thought that evidence of a date prior to that of the publication of the Record of Rights was not admissible in evidence and could not be taken into consideration by a Court dealing with the case and could not be weighed in determining whether the presumption of the Record of Rights has been rebutted; in procedure in that it failed to determine the critical question between the parties, namely, whether the defendant had a house to the south of the land purchased by the plaintiff other than the house which the defendant has erected on a portion of the land in dispute; also in that it failed to consider the oral evidence adduced on behalf of the appellant. The error of procedure, in my opinion, is a substantial one, for it is obvious that if the lower Appellate Court comes to the conclusion that the defendant had no other house but the house now standing on a portion of the land, the plaintiff's sale-deed as well as the Chaukidari receipts filed by the defendant may well turn the balance in favour of the defendant.

I would, therefore, allow this appeal, set aside the judgment and decree of the lower Appellate Court and remand the case to the lower Appellate Court for decision according to law. The appellant will be entitled to the costs of this appeal. The costs incurred in the Courts below will abide the result and will be disposed of by the lower Appellate Court.

(2) 4 Ind. Cas. 54; 9 C. L. J 284.
(3) 38 Ind. Cas. 37; 1 P. L. J. 563; 2 P. L. W. 341.

KISANLAL v. NATHU.

Appeal allowed;
Case remanded.

NAGPUR JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 585 OF 1918.
February 16, 1920.
Present.—Mr. Kotval, A. J. C.
Seth KISANLAL—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT
versus
NATHU AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Hindu Law—Alienation by co-parcener in undivided family, validity of—Precedents, value and applicability of.

An alienation by a co-parcener in an undivided Hindu family in the Central Provinces is valid to the extent of the alienor's own interest in the property. [p. 44, col. 2; p. 46, col. 1.]

Every judgment must be read as applicable to the particular facts proved, or assumed to be proved, since the generality of the expressions which may be found there are not intended to be expositions of the whole law, but governed and qualified by the particular facts of the case in which such expressions are to be found. [p. 45, col. 2.]

A case is only an authority for what it actually decides. It cannot be quoted for a proposition that may seem to follow logically from it. [p. 45, col. 2.]

Quinn v. Leathem, (1901) A. C. 495 at p. 506; 70 L. J, P. C. 76; 85 L. T. 289; 50 W. R. 139; 65 J. P. 708; 17 T. L. R. 749, followed.

Appeal against the decree of the District Judge, Nagpur, in Civil Appeal No. 53 of 1918, decided on the 26th September 1918.

Mr. M. Gupta, for the Appellant.

Dr. H. S. Gour and Mr. W. R. Puranik, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—Kisansingh, the father of the defendants respondents, executed a mortgage by conditional sale in favour of Jagannath, the father of the plaintiff-appellant, on the 31st May 1904. Both the mortgagor and the mortgagee are dead. The plaintiff states that the debt was borrowed by Kisansingh as the manager of the joint family for the benefit of the family. He sues for Rs. 2,976-14 3 due on the mortgage after giving credit for certain payments and, in default of payment, for foreclosure.

The defendants pleaded that they did not know if their father had executed the mortgage and that the debt was not incurred for the benefit of the family.

The pleadings of the parties are very briefly recorded and the suit has proceeded upon the basis that the property is undivided ancestral property of which the father was the manager, although this is nowhere expressly so stated.

The first Court found that the mortgage deed was executed by Kisansingh and that the debt was borrowed for the benefit of the family. It decreed the plaintiff's claim.

The lower Appellate Court held that the debt was not proved to have been incurred for the benefit of the estate and that it was not binding on the defendants. It dismissed the plaintiff's claim.

In second appeal it is urged that the suit should not have been wholly dismissed but a foreclosure decree should have been passed in respect of Kisansingh's $\frac{1}{3}$rd share.

The respondents rely on Sahu Ram Chandra v. Bhup Singh (1) and Lachhman Prasad v. Sarnam Singh (2) and contend that Kisansingh was not entitled to mortgage even his own share and that the plaintiff cannot claim a decree in respect of that share.

The view of the law as to the right of a co parcener to alienate his own interest in the undivided ancestral property accepted in these provinces is that an alienation by a co-parcener, whatever it may profess to convey, is valid to the extent of the alienor's own interest in the property. This view agrees with that of the High Courts of Madras and Bombay and differs from that of the High Courts of Allahabad and Bengal.

The case of Sahu Ram Chandra v. Bhup Singh (1) deals only with the question of what is an antecedent debt for which the son's share may be liable. The question now in dispute did not arise in that case. Their Lordships were not dealing with the question whether if a debt is not antecedent or for legal necessity, the interest of the father in the joint family property will be bound or not.

(1) 39 Ind. Cas. 280; 39 A. 437; 21 C. W. N. 698; 1 P. L. W. 557; 15 A. L. J. 437; 19 Bom. L. R. 498; 26 C. L. J. 1; 33 M. L. J. 14; (1917) M. W. N. 439; 22 M. L. T. 22; 6 L. W. 213; 44 I. A. 126 (P. C.).

(2) 40 Ind. Cas. 284; 39 A. 500, 15 A. L J. 584; 2 P. L. W. 29; 21 C. W. N. 990; 33 M. L. J. 39; 19 Bom. L. R. 646; 26 C. L. J. 97; (1917) M. W. N. 516; 6 L. W. 334; 44 I. A. 163 (P. C.).

In the case of Lachhman Prasad v. Sarnam Singh (2), however, this point is directly dealt with. Their Lordships held that it was not the general law that for every mortgage by the head of a joint family the property of the joint family could be made amenable to the extent of the interest of the mortgagor. They referred to the following passage in the judgment of Lord Watson in the case of Madho Parshad v. Mehrban Singh (3):—

"Any one of several members of a joint family is entitled to require partition of ancestral property, and his demand to that effect, if it be not complied with, can be enforced by legal process. So long as his interest is indefinite, he is not in a position to dispose of it at his own hand, and for his own purposes; but as soon as partition is made, he becomes the sole owner of his share, and has the same powers of disposal as if it had been his acquired property. Actual partition is not in all cases essential. An agreement by the members of an undivided family to hold the joint property individually in definite shares, or the attachment of a member's undivided share in execution of a decree at the instance of his creditor, will be regarded as sufficient to support the alienation of a member's interest in the estate or a sale under the execution."

They distinguished the case of Mahabeer Pershad v. Ramyad Singh (4), on the strength of which the appellant pressed for a decree against the father's share, on the ground that the judgment in that case was based upon an implied representation or undertaking given by the mortgagors that they had power to charge the joint family property, and would make good the representation by partition or otherwise. They found that in the case they were dealing with there were no such special circumstances as were found in the above case and held that the mortgage was void.

(3) 18 C. 157; 17 I. A. 194 (P. C.); 5 Sar. P. C. J. 586; Rafique & Jackson's P. C. No. 121; 9 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 105.

(4) 12 B. L. R. 90; 20 W. R. 192.

In Quinn v. Leathem (5) with reference to the application of precedents Earl of Halsbury says:

"There are two observations of a general character which I wish to make, and one is to repeat what I have very often said before, that every judgment must be read as applicable to the particular facts proved, or assumed to be proved, since the generality of the expressions which may be found there are not intended to be expositions of the whole law, but governed and qualified by the particular facts of the case in which such expressions are to be found. The other is that a case is only an authority for what it actually decides. I entirely deny that it can be quoted for a proposition that may seem to follow logically from it. Such a mode of reasoning assumes that the law is necessarily a logical code, whereas every lawyer must acknowledge that the law is not always logical at all."

Bearing in mind these observations and the fact that this case was like that of Sahu Ram Chandra v. Bhup Singh (1), one from Allahabad where the view of the law is different from that prevailing in these Provinces, it may fairly be said that their Lordships' ruling cannot be applied to similar cases arising in these Provinces. In the case of Suraj Bunsi Koer v. Sheo Persad Singh (6) their Lordships recognised that the inrerpretation of the law in Madras and Bombay is different from that in Allahabad and Bengal and if the rule in Lachhman Prasad v. Sarnam Singh (2) was meant to be laid down as the general law applicable to the whole of India, the judgment in the latter case would have referred to and explained or distinguished the former. In the absence of any such reference, explantion or distinction, it must be held that the decision in Lachhman Prasad v. Sarnam Singh (2) was only with reference to the law as accepted in Allahabad, for that is the only way in which that decision and the ruling in Suraj Bunsi Koer v. Sheo Persad Singh (6), which must both be accepted as final and correct, can be reconciled.

Their Lordships further seem to accept that the rule as laid down in Lachhman Prasad v. Sarnam Singh (2) admits of an exception where an equity arises. The view current in these Provinces has prevailed for many years before the mortgage in dispute was executed; vide Diwakar Janardhan v. Janardhan Chimnaji (7), Meghonath v. Malich (8), and an exception is here admissible on the ground that the contract must be taken to have been made on the understanding that the father's share would in any event be liable and that it would be inequitable to defeat the just expectations of a contracting party based upon the prevailing law.

(5) (1901) A. C. 495 at p. 506; 70 L. J. P. C. 76; 85 L. T. 289; 50 W. R. 139; 65 J. P. 708; 17 T. L. R. 749.

(6) 5 C. 148; 6 I. A. 88; 4 C. L. R. 226; 4 Sar. P. C. J. 1; 3 Suth. P. C. J. 589; 2 Shome L. R. 242; 2 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 705.

I hold that Lachhman Prasad v. Sarnam Singh (2) does not affect the view of the law prevailing in these Provinces. The appeal, therefore, succeeds. The decrees of the lower Courts are set aside. An account will now no taken of what will be due to the plaintiff for principal and interest on the mortgage and costs of the three Courts on the 15th August 1920, and a decree will be drawn up in terms of rule 2, Order XXXIV, First Schedule, Civil Procedure Code. In default of payment Kisansingh's 1-3rd share in the property mortgaged will be liable to be foreclosed. The plaintiff will pay 2-3rds of the costs of the defendants in the two lower Courts. The cross-objection filed by the respondents has not been pressed. It is dismissed with costs. Pleader's fee in cross-objection Rs 20. The defendants will bear their own costs in this Court.

Appeal dismissed.

(7) 3 C. P. L. R. 64.

(8) Appeal No. 420, dated the 30th August 1881 Digest Civil Rulings 1882, No. 60, Part 8.

COURT OF THE BOARD OF REVENUE, UNITED PROVINCES.

SECOND APPEAL No. 32 OF 1919 20.

March 11, 1920.

Present:—Mr. Hopkins, S. M. and Mr. Harrison, J. M.

Musammat HANIF UN-NISA—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

RAM DAYAL AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Agra Tenancy Act (II of 1901), s. 47—Enhancement of rent provided for in lease, whether enlarges period of tenancy.

A lease for a term of years which provides for a rise in the rent in the last year of the lease confers no right on the tenant to continue in possession after the termination of the period of the lease. To such a case section 47 of the Agra Tenancy Act does not apply. [p. 46, col. 2; p. 47, col. 1.]

Second appeal from the order of the Commissioner, Meerut Division, dated the 16th October 1919, in the case of ejectment.

JUDGMENT.

HARRISON, J. M.—(February 11, 1920).—This is a Zemindar's second appeal in a case in which she had sued for the ejectment of the defendant tenants on the expiry of a registered lease for 7 years. In appeal before the Commissioner the point was taken that although the lease had expired, the tenants were entitled to hold for another 5 years because within the term the last enhancement had taken effect in the last year. The plea was based on section 47 of the Agra Tenancy Act. The lease seems to have been drawn with special care, for in addition to reciting that the rent was to be Rs. 70 for the first four years, Rs. 90 for the fifth year, Rs. 112 for the sixth year and Rs. 132 for the last year, it noted that the total rent for the 7 years was to be Rs. 614 with an average of Rs. 87-11-5 per annum. In Petition No. 26 decided by me on the 8th February 1920 from the Muzaffarnagar District, Lekha Mal v. *Ram Rikh, I held that a lease in which pro-

---

*The following is the judgment in Second Civil Appeal No. 26 of 1919-20, dated 12th March 1920, decided by Mr. Hopkins, S. M., and Mr. Harrison, J. M.:—

"HARRISON, J. M.—(February 8, 1920).—This is a second appeal by a landlord in a suit for ejectment of a tenant on the expiry of a registered lease.

The lease was unusual in its terms as to rent. It fixed the rent at Rs. 625 per annum from 1317 to 1323 F., but the rent was to be Rs. 800 in 1324 F., the full period of the lease being 8 years. No attempt was made to eject the lessee until 1326 F., by which time the rent had been paid at the rate of Rs. 800 for 1324, 1325 and the Kharif of 1326 F. The tenant contends that with reference to section 47 of the Agra Tenancy Act the rent having been enhanced by registered agreement in 1324 F., he is entitled to continue to hold at that rent for 5 years counting from that year. The Commissioner in appeal held that the rent was actually enhanced in 1324 F. and that the tenant is entitled to the benefit of section 47.

vision had been made for enhancement only in the last year of the term, did not give the tenant a right to hold on for 5 years at the rent as last enhanced. The present case is stronger than that one, for it may be read as giving the land for 7 years at a gross rent of Rs. 614 payable in certain unequal annual instalments. I, therefore, cannot agree with the Commissioner's view that the rise in rent in the last year of the term gave any right to continue in possession after the termination of the original lease. I would, therefore, allow the appeal with costs to the appellant in both the Appellate Courts.

HOPKINS, S. M.—For the reasons given by me to-day in a similar case, Petition No. 26 of 1919-20, Lekha Mal v. Ram Rikh (1), Muzaffarnagar District, I agree in the order proposed.

Appeal allowed.

(1) 56 Ind. Cas. 46*n*; 2 U. P. L. R. (B. R.) 31.

I cannot agree with the Commissioner. The section quoted seems to me to apply to the case of rent which comes into force at the time a registered agreement is executed. It does not seem to me possible to extend the time for which the enhanced rent shall not be liable to further enhancement beyond the period of 5 years from the date of the agreement. In this particular case the land was held at the rent agreed upon for 8 years, although it is true that by the terms of the agreement the rent was to be increased during the term from the beginning of the eighth year. The lease in fact is comparable to a lease which provides for gradually increasing rents and the whole intention of this section seems to me to secure a reasonable period of tenure for a non-occupancy tenant whose rent is fixed by registered agreement.

The case is not free from difficulties, but the section itself is somewhat difficult of interpretation and the Board has not given any decision, so far as I can ascertain, on facts precisely similar to this. The decision most in point is Faizyab Khan v. Nizam-ud-Din (1), in which Mr. Tweedy held that the section seemed to be directed against "hole and corner" enhancement. Here there is no question of a "hole and corner" enhancement. Everything was plainly set forth.

Holding this view I would allow the appeal and restore the decree of the Assistant Collector with costs to the appellant in both Appellate Courts.

HOPKINS, S. M. [March 12, 1920.]—I agree in the order proposed. The case is of some difficulty, but I think that section 47 of the Tenancy Act must be read in connection with section 33. Section 33 provides for the rent payable on an initial contract of tenancy; section 47 provides for an enhancement of the rent previously payable. I do not consider that progressive increases in rent payable under the initial contract can be considered enhancements within the meaning of section 47. They are a part of the original agreement. Agreements to pay progressive increases of rent are not unusual, especially in the case of newly cultivated land, and in my opinion they are not illegal, even if the stages are fixed at periods of less than 5 years. The substantive rent in such case is the amount ultimately reached and the sums previously payable represent abatements from the amount. The main object of section 47, as my colleague points out, is that agreements to pay enhanced rent should be open and above board."

(1) 6 Sel. Dec. 1911.

PATNA HIGH COURT.

APPEAL FROM APPELLATE DECREE NO. 644 OF 1918.

February 2, 1920.

Present:—Mr. Justice Sultan Ahmed.

SURAJ PAL PANDEY AND ANOTHER —DEFENDANTS—APPELLANTS

versus

UTIM PANDEY AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS—RESPONDENTS.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 149—Time for paying Court-fees, extension of—Appeal—Order, whether can be interfered with—High Court, power of interference of.

An Appellate Court cannot question the propriety of an order under section 149 of the Civil Procedure Code for the payment of deficit Court-fees. If the order is not objected to when it is made, or in the Court which made it, it cannot be objected to in second appeal. [p. 48, cols. 1 & 2.]

Appeal from a decision of the District Judge, Chapra.

Mr. Rajendra Prasad, for the Appellants.

Messrs. Harnarain Prasad and Sambhu Saran, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—The plaintiffs brought the suit as the nearest reversioners of the deceased son of defendant No. 1 and sought for a declaration that certain sale-deeds executed by defendant No. 1 in favour of the other defendants were without legal necessity and not operative against the plaintiffs. The trial Court held that the plaintiffs had established that they were reversioners, but held that the sale-deeds were executed for legal necessity and were operative against the plaintiffs and dismissed the suit. The Appellate Court held that the sale-deeds in question were not genuine transactions and were not executed for legal necessity. They represented bogus transactions entered into with a view to enable the defendants Nos. 2, 3 and 4 to grab the widow's property from the plaintiffs.

A second appeal has been filed in this Court. The learned Vakil, appearing on behalf of the plaintiffs, has not challenged the findings of the lower Appellate Court, but he contends that the appeal filed before the learned District Judge was barred by limitation.

It appears that the Munsif decided the suit on the 16th of March 1917. The appeal was filed on the 2nd of April 1917 and allowing time for preparation of the decree and the certified copy of the judgment and decree, it is conceded that this appeal was filed in time. The last date on which the appeal could have been filed was the 14th of April 1917. But it has been pointed out that, though the appeal was filed on the 2nd April 1917, it was filed with insufficient Court-fee. The office, having found this, reported the matter to the District Judge who allowed time till the 17th of April, but as nobody appeared on that date the appeal was dismissed for default. The order sheet shows that, on the 24th of April, an application was filed by the appellant in the Court below for the restoration of the appeal, on which the appeal was admitted and the deficit Court-fee was paid by him on that date. No objection was taken at any time by the respondents in the Court below, i. e., the appellants in this Court, on the ground that the appeal was filed after the period of limitation allowed by law. But it is contended before me that though this objection was not taken in the lower Appellate Court it could still be taken here and reliance has been placed on the case reported as Chaturbhuj Sahay v. Muhammad Habib (1). That case was, however, under section 5 of the Limitation Act and has no bearing on the present case. Assuming, however, that it could be raised here, I have to see whether the objection itself is sustainable. It is obvious that the District Judge acted under section 149, Civil Procedure Code, in giving time to the appellant for the payment of the deficit Court-fee till the 17th. True it is that there was no compliance with this order, but that the very fact that on the 24th April the learned Judge admitted the appeal implies that he acted under section 148 of the Civil Procedure Code and enlarged the time for the payment of deficit Court-fee. I am confirmed in the view that I take of this matter, by a decision of this Court in Second Appeal No. 2210 of 1914 referred to in Gaya Loan Office Limited v. Awadh Behari Lal (2), where the learned Chief Justice Chamier and Sharfuddin, J., held that the learned Judge, under similar circumstances, acted under section 148, Civil Procedure Code.

It has been held in the case of Priya Nath Bachier v. Miajan Sardar (3) that a Judge, passing order under section 149, Civil Procedure Code, for payment of deficit Court-fees must be taken, on the record as it stands, to have exercised his discretion as provided by the section, and an Appellate Court cannot go into the question as to whether he exercised his discretion in making the various orders of payment properly. Much less would, then, this Court go behind that order in second appeal when the point was not taken at any stage in the Court below.

The case reported as Golab Chand v. Bahuria Ram Murat Koer (4) shows that the order under section 148 enlarging the time for the payment of deficit Court-fee was made by the Registrar, who had no power under the law to admit such applications. But in the present case the order admitting the appeal was made by the District Judge himself. Under these circumstances, I think the point that has been raised is untenable and I would dismiss this appeal with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

(1) 54 Ind. Cas. 36.

(2) 37 Ind. Cas. 507; 1 P. L. J. 420; 3 P. L. W. 51.
(3) 29 Ind. Cas. 571; 24 C. L. J. 88.
(4) 10 Ind. Cas. 268; 13 C. L. J. 432.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.
CRIMINAL APPEAL No. 128 OF 1920.
March 3, 1920.
Present:—Sir Grimwood Mears, KT., Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Walsh.
MANNA SINGH AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS—APPELLANTS
versus
EMPEROR—OPPOSITE PARTY.

Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), ss. 62, 302—Murder—Forfeiture of property, order of, when appropriate.

An order under section 62 of the Penal Code, directing the forfeiture of the property of a person sentenced to death for murder, is appropriate only when theft forms part of the motive for the murder. [p. 49, col. 2.]

Criminal appeal against the decision of the Sessions Judge, Farrukhabad, dated the 22nd January 1920.

Mr. Shamnath Mushran, for the Appellants.

The Government Advocate, for the Crown.

JUDGMENT.—In this case Manna Singh, caste Thakur, Sardar Singh, caste Thakur, and Lallu Singh, caste Thakur, appealed, the first from a conviction and sentence of death passed upon him, and the second and third from convictions and sentences of transportation for life. The facts are as clear as possible. The deceased man had given offence to Sardar Singh and Lallu Singh and they bore enmity against him, and on the night of the 5th of November three servants who were sleeping within a few feet of the deceased man heard his cry for help. These three men hurried to the next room, which was lighted by a lamp quite close to the bed and made bright by moonlight also. There they saw three men all of whom were previously known to them, and each witness has described what he saw. Sardar Singh and Lallu Singh were holding the deceased man down on to the bed with their lathies. Manna Singh was striking the deceased man's neck with an axe. The three men ran away into the open and in a few minutes other people arrived. From first to last there was no doubt expressed by the three servants that the attack was committed by the three men who stood their trial. A witness, Khagga, identified the axe with which the murder was committed, and swore to it having been put into his hands to sharpen on the same day preceding the night of the murder. Mr. Shamnath Mushran has had a difficult case to argue, but he has confined himself very properly to just the points which it was necessary to bring to our notice, and has said on behalf of these three men everything that the facts of the case permitted him to do, and in one respect we think that he has taken a good point in arguing that the forfeiture of property should not have been coupled with the sentences passed upon the accused men. In this we think he is right, and although the learned Judge under section 62 of the Indian Penal Code had power to do this, it was not an appropriate case in which such order should be made, because the murder was a murder due to feelings of revenge and was not a murder committed in the course of a dacoity, or which had theft as any part of its object. We think that in such cases where theft forms part of the motive forfeiture of property may very wisely be used as one of the deterrents. Now the question before us is whether the conviction against Manna Singh must be affirmed or rejected, or the nature of it altered. We are of opinion that Manna Singh has no ground whatever for this appeal. His was the hand that struck the blow that killed the deceased. Nor do we think that there can be any alteration of the sentences of transportation for life passed against Sardar Singh and Lallu Singh, and, therefore, we dismiss all three appeals. But we think it proper to say that accepting as we do the evidence against all three, it is difficult to see any logical reason why Sardar Singh and Lallu Singh should not have been sentenced to death. By common agreement these three men banded themselves together and went to that house with a newly sharpened axe, intended to kill, and there is no real difference between the man who struck the blow and the men who held the deceased in position so that the blow might be effective. However, as the matter stands we confirm the death sentence passed upon Manna Singh and order it to be carried out in accordance with law and we direct that Sardar Singh and Lallu Singh are to undergo the sentence of transportation for life. But in all three cases in which the Judge has passed the order adjudging that their property, moveable and immoveable, be forfeited, as regards that portion of the judgment we rescind that order, such rescissions to operate as from the date of the convictions. From that it follows that if in fact any property has been attached, such attachment will at once be released and the property restored to the original owners. Otherwise the convictions will stand.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL REVISION CASE No. 677 OF 1919.

CRIMINAL REVISION PETITION No. 575 OF 1919.

February 20, 1920.

Present:—Sir John Wallis, KT., Chief Justice, Justice Sir William Ayling, KT., and Mr. Justice Coutts-Trotter.

YELUCHURI VENKATACHENNAYA AND OTHERS—ACCUSED—PETITIONERS

versus

EMPEROR—OPPOSITE PARTY.

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), ss. 107, 350 (1), proviso (a)—Proceedings under s. 107—Right of person proceeded against to re-call witnesses.

A person proceeded against under section 107 of the Criminal Procedure Code has the same right, under section 350 (1), proviso a), as an accused person in a summons or warrant case, to have the witnesses re-called and re-heard. [p. 56, col. 1; p. 58, col. 2.]

Petition, under sections 435 and 439 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898, praying the High Court to revise the order, dated the 24th July 1919, of the District Magistrate, Kurnool, in Criminal Appeal No. 4 of 1919, preferred against the order, dated the 2nd May 1919, of the Court of the Deputy Magistrate, Markapur, in Miscellaneous Case No. 13 of 1918.

FACTS.—The question argued was whether proceedings taken under section 107, Criminal Procedure Code, constituted an 'inquiry' or a 'trial' so as to deprive the accused of a right to have a de novo trial or not under section 350.

This case coming on for hearing on the 17th and 18th December 1919, upon perusing the petition and the orders of the lower Courts and the records in the case and upon hearing the arguments of Mr. A. S. Viswanatha Aiyar for the Petitioners and of the Public Prosecutor on behalf of the Crown, the Court (Abdur Rahim and Spencer, JJ.) made the following ORDER OF REFERENCE TO A FULL BENCH.

ABDUR RAHIM, J.—In this case the question of law raised before us is whether proviso (a) to section 350 (1) of the Code of Criminal Procedure applies to a proceeding under section 107.

The petitioners were bound down to keep the peace by a Magistrate who did not hear the evidence, the evidence having been recorded by another Magistrate who has been subsequently transferred. An application was made for re-calling the witnesses and for the evidence being taken de novo. That application was refused. We are asked to consider whether the petitioners were not entitled under proviso (a) to section 350 (1) to have the witnesses resummoned and re-heard.

It is not disputed that the main part of section 350 does apply to this case. But what is contended is that its application to a proceeding under section 107 is by virtue of the word "inquiry" used in section 350 and that proviso (a) does not apply because it cannot be said that in a case like this any accused person is tried. The contention of the Public Prosecutor is that this is an inquiry and not a trial within the meaning of section 350.

There is no direct ruling on the point under section 350 of the present Code of Criminal Procedure, though under the old Code it was held that such a proceeding was a trial in the present connection. There are rulings to the effect that a person who is proceeded against under Chapter VIII is an accused person within the meaning of the Code of Criminal Procedure. For instance Jhoja Singh v. Queen-Empress (1) (Ghose and Rampini, JJ.), Queen-Empress v. Mona Puna (2), Queen-Empress v. Mutasaddi (3), Hopcroft v. Emperor (4). There is also

(1) 23 C. 493; 12 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 328.
(2) 16 B. 661; 8 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 919.
(3) 21 A. 107; A. W. N. (1898), 185; 9 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 778.
(4) 1 Ind. Cas. 737; 36 C. 163; 13 C. W. N. 151; 8 C. L. J. 565; 9 Cr. L. J. 259.

a decision of this Court that the words "order in a criminal trial" in clause 15 of the Letters Patent comprehend an order passed by a single Judge of this Court in a proceeding under the provisions of Chapter VIII. See Ramasamy Chetty, In the matter of (5). There can be no doubt that in section 350 and other sections of that chapter and several of the succeeding chapters the words 'inquiry or trial,' when used in juxtaposition to each other, are intended to mean two different things. Nor can there be any doubt that the word 'inquiry' is often used in several places in the general popular sense of investigation into the truth of any matter; see, for instance, section 177, where it is said "Every offence shall ordinarily be inquired into and tried by a Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction it was committed." There are also many other sections in which the word 'inquiry' is used in that popular sense. 'Inquiry' is defined in section 4 (k) as including every inquiry other than a trial conducted under this Code by a Magistrate or Court; but 'a trial' is not defined. The question in this connection would be whether a proceeding under section 107 of the Code of Criminal Procedure cannot properly be called 'a trial' within the meaning of section 350 (a). This very definition shows that the word 'inquiry' has a wider significance, which would ordinarily include trials but when used in a technical sense it is to be taken to exclude "trials."

If we examine the scheme of the Code of Criminal Procedure, it seems to me to be apparent that wherever the words 'inquiry' and 'trial' are used in two distinct senses, by 'inquiry' the Legislature mostly refers to inquiry into cases triable by the Court of Session or the High Court and sometimes also inquiries such as under Chapter XII (inquiry into disputes as to immoveable properties) which cannot be called 'trials.' Chapter XVIII is the chapter which deals with 'inquiries' into cases triable by a Court of Session or High Court. Chapter XIX deals with the form of charges, Chapter XX with the trial of summons cases by Magistrate, and XXI with the trial of warrant cases. Chapter XXII deals with summary trials and XXIII deals with trials before High Courts and Courts of Session. Then we come to Chapter XXIV, which contains section 350. That chapter is headed "General provisions as to enquiries and trials." Chapter XXV deals with the mode of taking and recording evidence in inquiries and trials. We find in section 353 that 'all evidence taken down under Chapters XVIII, XX, XXI, XXII and XXIII shall be taken in the presence of the accused, or, when his personal attendance is dispensed with, in presence of his Pleader." That does not go beyond Chapter XVIII, which deals with inquiries in cases triable by the Court of Session or High Court. Section 356 throws considerable light on the question. It says that 'in all other trials' before Courts of Session and Magistrates, other than Presidency Magistrates, and in all inquiries under Chapters XII (disputes as to immoveable properties) and XVIII (cases triable by the Court of Session or High Court) the evidence of witnesses shall be recorded in a particular manner. If this section applies to proceedings under Chapter VIII—and there can be no doubt that it does—then a proceeding under section 107 is a trial within the meaning of the Code. Chapter XXVI deals with judgments. As regards Chapter VIII, it is in part IV which deals with prevention of offences: and I do not find that in that chapter the word 'inquiry' is used in any technical sense as contradistinguished from trial. In fact, as I have already pointed out, it is in Chapter XVIII that the word "inquiry" is used in a strictly technical sense as distinguished from trial, that is to say, the Magistrate is to enquire into the cases dealt with there but is not empowered to dispose of them finally; he has to record the evidence and if he thinks there is a prima facie case, he is to commit it to the Court of Session or High Court for trial. It seems to me, therefore, that there is no warrant for holding that the word 'trial' as used in section 350 (a) is not intended to cover cases under section 107.

But even apart from that, I think that section 117 makes it quite clear that section 350 including proviso (a)—I am somewhat doubtful about proviso (b) because of the use of the word 'conviction' there—is made applicable to a proceeding under section 107. Section 117 says that an inquiry as to the truth of the information—it is evident that the word 'inquiry' here is used in the popular sense—"shall be made as nearly as practicable, where the order requires security for keeping the peace, in the manner hereinafter prescribed for conducting trials and recording evidence in summons cases; and where the order requires security for good behaviour, in the manner hereinafter prescribed for conducting trials and recording evidence in warrant cases, except that no charge need be framed." It is argued by the learned Public Prosecutor that section 117, clause (2), refers only to Chapters XX and XXI which are headed, "Trial of Summons Cases by Magistrates" and "Trial of Warrant Cases by Magistrates," and that none of the other succeeding chapters are referred to in section 117. The argument in support of this contention is, I take it, that those chapters specifically refer to trials of summons and warrant cases. But I am unable to accept this argument. Those two chapters deal only with certain limited and special questions of procedure relating to summons and warrant cases. There can be no doubt that many of the general provisions of Chapter XXIV would apply to proceedings under section 107 and similar other proceedings under Chapter VIII. But it is said that this is so because both the words 'inquiry' and "trial" are used and according to the contention for the prosecution a proceeding under Chapter VIII is an enquiry and, therefore, the provisions of Chapter XXIV are made applicable by force of that word. But it is difficult to see any force in this argument in the face of the express and clear language of section 117.

(5) 27 M. 510; 1 Weir 787; 14 M. L. J. 394.

Chapter XXIV contains many provisions which must necessarily apply to proceedings under Chapter VIII. For instance section 344 which gives power to the Court to postpone or adjourn proceedings, section 340 which says that "Every person accused before any Criminal Court may of right be defended by a Pleader" and section 341 which lays down the procedure to be observed in cases where the accused does not understand the proceedings. The Code of Criminal Procedure must be taken to be exhaustive, so far as the procedure to be observed by the Magistrates and other Criminal Courts in the various proceedings under that Code is concerned, and must be expected to provide for all cases in the proceedings under the Code where the evidence was heard and recorded by a Magistrate and that Magistrate is subsequently transferred. That is provided by section 350 and there is the other provision for such contingencies.

Section 117 says that where a matter is inquired into under Chapter VIII, the inquiry shall be made as nearly as may be practicable in the manner hereinafter prescribed for conducting trials (and not inquiries) and recording evidence in summons cases. Section 350, proviso (a), lays down what is to happen when the Magistrate who recorded the evidence is no longer exercising jurisdiction in cases where an accused is under trial. That obviously applies both to summons and warrant cases. Section 117 thus by explicit language embodies the proviso of section 350, proviso (a).

It was suggested that the provision that an inquiry shall be made in the manner hereinafter prescribed, etc., does not refer to a rule of procedure to be observed but to something else. I must say that I do not quite understand this contention but so far as I could follow it, it seems to be utterly untenable. Section 117 clarly refers to the procedure to be observed in cases under section 107 and other similar sections of Chapter VIII. Therefore, even if it were granted—I have shown that this contention is not correct—that a proceeding under this chapter is an enquiry as contradistinguished from a trial, I should still hold without any hesitation that the procedure prescribed in section 350 (a) is expressly adopted by the Legislature for the purposes of proceedings under Chapter VIII, as section 117 says that the inquiry shall be made in the manner prescribed for conducting trials.

If we look at the provisions of Chapter XXV which refers to the mode of taking and recording evidence in inquiries and trials, the position seems to be equally clear. Similarly the chapter relating to "judgment" shows that all the general provisions, as far as practicable, have to be applied in cases under Chapter VIII. I have, therefore, upon an examination of the Code arrived at the conclusion that section 350, proviso (a), applies to a proceeding under section 107.

YELUCHURI VENKATACHENNAYA v. EMPEROR.

A ruling of the Calcutta High Court was brought to our notice, in which it was held with reference to section 350 that a proceeding under section 145 of the Code of Criminal Procedure is an enquiry and, therefore, section 350 would apply. That is the case of Anu Sheikh v. Jitu Sheikh (6). Then it must be pointed out that in that case no question arose of the application of clause (a) of section 145, and it could hardly be contended that in such a proceeding there is any person who can be called "accused", nor is there any provision like that of section 117 in Chapter XII. I might also point out that section 340 of the Code of Criminal Procedure has been applied to a proceeding under Chapter VIII [see Jhoja Singh v. Queen-Empress (1)]. Section 443 has been applied to such a proceeding in Hopcroft v. Emperor (4) and section 437 in Queen-Empress v. Mutasaddi (3). I would hold, therefore, that the petitioners were entitled to ask in this case that the witnesses should be re-summoned and re-heard and I would direct that the order of the Magistrate be set aside and the case be remitted to him for further inquiry, the petitoners being given an opportunity to have the witnesses re-summoned and re-heard before the trying Magistrate.

But my learned brother takes a different view. The question of law involved is, however, one of some importance and should be setted by a Full Bench. The question is whether section 350 (1), proviso (a), Criminal Procedure Code, applies to a case under section 107, Criminal Procedure Code.

SPENCER, J.—This petition is to set aside an order made by the District Magistrate of Kurnool refusing to cancel the bonds taken from the petitioners by the Deputy Magistrate, Markapur, for security for keeping the peace. The Deputy Magistrate who held an enquiry under Chapter VIII of the Criminal Procedure Code passed an order requiring the petitioners to execute bonds to keep the peace upon evidence partly recorded by his predecessor. The question which has been argued before us is whether section 350 of the Criminal Procedure Code gives a person, against whom such proceedings are being taken, a right to demand that the witnesses already examined should be re-summoned and re-heard, when the Magistrate who first enquired into the case is transferred before the conclusion of the inquiry. Chapter XXIV of the Criminal Procedure Code deals with general provisions as to enquiries and trials and section 350, which occurs in this chapter, undoubtedly applies to proceedings for taking security to keep the peace as it in terms refers to 'inquiries' or trials. But proviso (a) runs thus: "In any trial the accused may, when the second Magistrate commences his proceedings, demand that the witnesses or any of them be re-summoned and re-heard." If it was intended that this provision should apply to inquiries also, one would expect that the words used would be 'In any inquiry or trial,' as those are the words used in the body of the section. It was held in Anu Sheikh v. Jitu Sheikh (6) that section 350 would apply to inquiries under section 145. But there is no authority for saying that the person called upon to show cause against giving security has an inherent right to insist under proviso (a) to that section on re-calling witnesses, except the case of Buroda Kant Roy v. Korimuddi Moonshee (7) which is under the Code of 1872. The learned Judges therein observe that an order directing a person to give security is in substance a conviction. With great respect I am unable to agree with that proposition. According to the strict letter of the proviso to section 350 it is only in trials that the accused can demand a re-hearing of witnesses. Although a trial is not defined in the Code, there is a definition of an inquiry in section 4 (k), which is said to include every inquiry other than a trial conducted under this Code. Wherever the word 'trial' occurs in the Code of Criminal Procedure, it appears to refer to proceedings in which an accused person stands before a Judge or Magistrate who is empowered to convict him upon a charge of an offence committed by him and to sentence him to one of the punishments described in Chapter III of the Indian Penal Code. Schedule II of the Code of Criminal Procedure provides by what Magistrates offences may be tried and Schedule III empowers certain Magistrates to try offenders. But when the schedule speaks of inquiries under the preventive sections of the Code, it refers to them as powers to require security for good behaviour or for keeping the peace. I, therefore, consider that the word 'trial' in proviso (a) to section 350 does not include an inquiry with a view to requiring security to keep the peace. There is a decision of this High Court in Palaniandy Goundan v. Emperor (8) which I am prepared to follow, that proviso (a) to section 350 applies only to trials and not to inquiries. The learned Judges were dealing there with a preliminary inquiry prior to commitment and not to an inquiry under any other chapter than Chapter XXIII. But 'inquiry' in the body of section 350 is not limited to inquiries preliminary to commitment, but also includes inquiries in miscellaneous matters under Chapters VIII, X, XI and XII, that is, to proceedings regarding security to keep the peace or for good behaviour, to suppress public nuisances, to determine disputes regarding immoveable property likely to cause a breach of the peace, as well as to a preliminary inquiry under section 476 before sending a case for inquiry or trial to a 1st Class Magistrate for an offence against the administration of justice. For this we have the high authority of Mr. Prinsep (see his commentary on the Code of Criminal Procedure). If it was intended that the provision should only apply to certain inquiries, and not to others, it would have been easy to specify the kind of inquiries intended to be covered by the words of the provision. On the other hand in proviso (a) the word 'trial' seems to be used in clear contradistinction to the words 'an inquiry or a trial' in the body of the section.

(6) 7 Ind. Cas. 54; 37 C. 812; 11 Cr. L. J. 440.

(7) 4 C. L. R. 452.

A suggestion has been made by my learned brother that by section 117 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, which directs that inquiries relating to security for keeping the peace should be made in the manner prescribed for conducting trials in summons cases and proceedings in cases of requiring security for good behaviour should be conducted in the manner prescribed for conducting trials in warrant cases, all other provisions in the Code which apply to trials, wherever they occur, will be attracted to and will govern inquiries regarding security for keeping the peace or for good behaviour, as if they were trials. In my opinion the provision in section 117 (2) refers only to the procedure laid down in Chapters XX and XXI respectively for the trial of summons and warrant cases. The general provisions in Chapters XXIV and XXV no doubt apply to proceedings under Chapter VIII, but they do so of their own force and not because they contain rules of procedure for the trial of summons and warrant cases by virtue of section 117, clause (2). This very section 117 refers to proceedings for requiring security as inquiries, and thus observes the distinction between an inquiry and a trial. In Adur Desikachari v. Emperor (9) it has been observed that proceedings under this chapter fall within the scope of an inquiry rather than a trial. We held in that case that for the purpose of the Madras Letters Patent they would come under the description of a criminal trial. But that decision was independent of the words of definition in the Criminal Procedure Code and had only to do with the words that occur in the Madras Letters Patent.

I am, therefore, of opinion that the District Magistrate was right in holding that the petitioners had no inherent right to require a re-trial of the case. I also think that we have no power to order a re-trial under proviso (b) to section 350, as there has been no conviction of an accused within the meaning of that proviso.

In my opinion, apart from the merits of the application into which we have not entered, the criminal revision petition should be dismissed. I agree that the question of law may be referred to a Full Bench.

This case came on for hearing before a Full Bench on 5th February 1920.

Mr. A. S. Viswantha Aiyar, for the Petitioner.

—A proceeding under section 107, Criminal Procedure Code, is a 'trial' and the person against whom it is taken is an 'accused' person. Buroda Kant Roy v. Korimuddi Moonshee (7). The order passed against him is in substance tantamount to a 'conviction.' See also Ramasamy Chetty, In the matter of (8) 1 Ind. Cas. 54; 32 M. 218; 5 M. L. T. 218; 9 Cr. L. J. 146.

(9) 28 Ind. Cas. 527; 28 M. L. J. 307; (1915) M. W. N. 224; 16 Cr. L. J. 303; 39 M. 589.

(5), where such a proceeding is held to be a 'criminal trial' within the purview of clause 15 of the Letters Patent. See also section 117 (2), which prescribes the procedure as being the same as for 'trials.' Failure to furnish the security ordered will result in imprisonment. Section 123. See also Queen-Empress v. Mutasaddi (3), Jhoja Singh v. Queen-Empress (1), Emperor v. Girand (10), Hopcroft v. Emperor (4).

Proviso (a) to section 350, therefore, applies and non-compliance therewith is an illegality not cured by section 537. See Gomer Sirda v. Queen-Empress (11), Subh Nath Singh v. Emperor (12).

The Public Prosecutor, for the Crown.—The proceeding is only an 'inquiry', and the proviso (a) to section 350 cannot, therefore, apply. See section 4 (k) and section 117 (2). The procedure is only to be the same as for 'trials'. The distinction between an 'inquiry' and a 'trial' is kept throughout the Code. The enquiry includes all proceedings of the kind such as under section 145. See Anu Sheikh v. Jitu Sheikh (6).

Mr. Viswanatha Aiyar in reply.

OPINION.

WALLIS, C. J.—I agree with the opinion of Ayling and Coutts Trotter, JJ., which I have had the advantage of reading, as to the effect of the proviso to section 350 read with section 117, and will only add that in my opinion trial generally means the determination of the issues arising in the particular case. As pointed out in History of English Law, Pollock and Maitland, Volume II, page 598, the word trial comes from the French trier, Latin tritare, and was first used of the testing or trial of challenges to jurors. Triers of challenges are still appointed when necessary in English criminal trials. Though we talk of the trial of persons what are really tried both in civil and criminal cases are issues. An ordinary criminal trial in England is, in the language of the common law, a trial of the general issue joined between the Crown and the accused on the latter's plea of 'not guilty' of the charge preferred against him. See Archbold's Criminal Pleading, clause 4, section 5, "The general issue", page 161, 25th Edition. On the other hand, the preliminary Magisterial inquiry, which is of comparatively modern origin, forms no part of the trial. I think the framers of the Code had this distinction in mind when they framed the definition of 'inquiry' so as to exclude 'trial,' In the present case an issue undoubtedly arises between the Crown and the accused as to whether he should be dealt with under the sections, and I see no sufficient reason why the determination of that issue should not be regarded as a trial.

AYLING, J.—The question referred to us is as follows:—"Whether section 350 (1), proviso (a), Criminal Procedure Code, applies to a case under section 107, Criminal Procedure Code."

The proviso in question refers only to a "trial", while the principal clause refers to "an inquiry or a trial." The difference is significant, and points irresistibly to the conclusion that the Legislature intended to distinguish between an inquiry and a trial, and to direct that, while the principal clause should apply to both, the proviso should only apply to a "trial." What, then, is a "trial"? It is curious that the phrase is not defined in the Code, although it is explained in section 4 that the term "inquiry" includes every inquiry other than a trial conducted under this Code by a Magistrate or Court. It looks as if the framers of the Code regarded the word "trial" as of such obvious significance as to require no definition. At the same time it is noticeable that in many sections of the Code the words "inquiry" and "trial" are used in close juxtaposition and apparently intended to signify two different things. I can find nothing to support the idea that either is ever used in any general or popular sense; for instance, the words "inquired into" in section 177, which has been referred to, seem to me intended to direct that not only the trial of a Sessions case, but the preliminary inquiry under Chapter XVIII, shall ordinarily take place before a Court having territorial jurisdiction. In the absence of express definition we can only look at the various sections of the Code in which the word "trial" is used; and I can find none in which it is not used in connection with proceedings in which a person stands before a Court empowered to convict him of some

(10) 25 A. 375; A. W. N. (1903) 79.

(11) 25 C. 863; 2 C. W. N. 465; 13 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 563.

(12) 12 C. W. N. 138; 6 Cr. L. J. 431.

"offence" alleged against him. The word "trial," as used in the Criminal Procedure Code, seems to presuppose the idea of an offence—a word defined in section 4. No "offence" is involved in an inquiry under Chap'er VIII of the Code; and in my opinion, inquiries under that chapter are not trials. It follows that the proviso to section 350 (1) does not apply "suo vigore" to such proceedings.

There remains, however, the argument that it nevertheless applies by virtue of the provisions of the second clause of section 117, Criminal Procedure Code, which runs thus:—

"Section 117. (1) When an order under section 112 has been read or explained under section 113 to a person present in Court or when any person appears or is brought before a Magistrate in compliance with, or in execution of, a summons or warrant issued under section 114, the Magistrate shall proceed to inquire into the truth of the information upon which action has been taken, and to take such further evidence as may appear necessary.

(2) Such inquiry shall be made as nearly as may be practicable, where the order requires security for keeping the peace, in the manner hereinafter prescribed for conducting trials and recording evidence in summons cases and, where the order requires security for good behaviour, in the manner hereinafter prescribed for conducting trials and recording evidence in warrant cases, except that no charge need be framed."

It is argued on behalf of the Crown that the effect of clause (2) is merely to render applicable the provisions of Chapters XX and XXI of the Code which deal with the procedure in summons and warrant cases respectively and those of Chapter XXV in so far as they deal with the mode of taking and recording evidence in such cases. On behalf of petitioner it is contended that the clause attracts the provisions of all sections of the Code, wherever found, which are applicable to summons and warrant cases and, in fact, places a person called on to show cause why he should not furnish security in exactly the same position, except as regards the framing of a charge, as a person tried in a summons or warrant case as regards the procedure to be followed and the privileges to be enjoyed by him in connection with the proceedings.

I must confess to great difficulty in the interpretation of this clause. It is certainly true that if the intention of the Legislature has been that ascribed to it on petitioner's behalf, other language might have been employed; and the specific reference to the mode of recording evidence is somewhat significant of a limitation of the attractive power of the section. On the other hand, it would have been perfectly easy to specify Chapters XX, XXI and XXV, if the framers of the Act had only these in mind. I am not much impressed with the argument based on the fact that certain other sections of the Code have been held applicable to inquiries under section 117, e. g, sections 340, 341, 344, 443 and 437. Sections 341 and 344 apply "proprio vigore" to inquiries as well as trials. Sections 340, 443 and 437 have been held applicable in Jhoja Singh v. Queen-Empress (1), Hopcroft v. Emperor (4) and Queen-Empress v. Mutasaddi Lal (3), but on a totally different ground—the true meaning to be attached to the word "accused"—not by any reference to section 117.

It seems to me that the words of the clause may be held to cover anything which has to do with the procedure in the Magistrate's Court, and that the right to have the witnesses re summoned and re-heard conferred by section 350 is as much a matter of procedure as the right to have prosecution witnesses re-called and cross-examined conferred by section 256. On the other hand, if they are to be given the narrow interpretation contended for by the Crown, such provisions as those in Chapter XXVI regarding judgments will not apply to security cases. That is to say the Magistrate in ordering security under section 118 either for good behaviour or keeping the peace would be under no legal obligation, inter alia, to record a judgment setting forth his reasons (section 367) or to give accused a copy of it without delay (section 371). So far as I can see, apart from the operation of section 117 the Magistrate might simply record an order requiring the execution of a bond, without recording any reasons or discussing the evidence. I do not think this could have been intended, especially as care has been taken to provide for an appeal against an order for security for good behaviour (vide section 406) and for the interference of the Chief Presidency or District Magistrate in either class of cases (section 125), for reasons to be recorded. The sections in Chapter XXVI certainly apply "proprio vigore" only to trials but the words "offence (if any)" in clause (2) of section 367 are very curious, and suggest that the framers of the section may have had in mind the fact that they were indirectly applicable to inquiries under Chapter VIII by reason of the clause under consideration.

After the best consideration I can give the matter, I am inclined to think that section 117 (2), Criminal Procedure Code, does attract proviso (a), section 350 (1); and would answer the reference in the affirmative.

COUTTS TROTTER, J.—The question referred to us is whether section 350 (1), proviso (a), Criminal Procedure Code, applies to a case under section 107, Criminal Procedure Code.

The petitioners in the case were bound over to keep the peace under section 107, Criminal Procedure Code, by a Magistrate who did not hear the evidence which had been heard and recorded by his predecessor, who was transferred before its final determination. The petitioners claimed under the proviso to section 350 to have the witnesses re summoned and re heard by the Magistrate who passed the final orders, and their application was refused. They applied in revision to the High Court and the learned Judges Abdur Rahim and Spencer, JJ., differed. They referred the question to this Full Bench.

Section 350 provides for a Magistrate who takes up a part-heard case acting on the evidence when wholly or in part recorded by his predecessor, and the general part of the section enables him to do so in an 'inquiry' or 'trial' but the proviso only enacts that in any 'trial' the accused may have the witnesses re called. The contention on behalf of the Crown is that the scheme of the Code is to divide magisterial proceedings into 'inquiries' and 'trials' and the latitude given to the accused is confined designedly to 'trials' and that 'inquiries' are excluded from its application. The next step in the argument is to show that proceedings under section 107 and the following sections are inquiries and not trials. The sections undoubtedly speak of an 'inquiry'—See sections 117, 118 and 119.

The first contention of the petitioners is that the word 'inquiry' is used in the Code in two senses, a narrower and technical sense and a more general one. The narrower one is defined in section 4 (k) as follows:—"'Inquiry' includes every inquiry other than a trial conducted under this Code by a Magistrate or Court". A typical instance of such an inquiry is the preliminary inquiry held by a Magistrate previous to committal for trial by a higher Court. It can hardly be contended that the right conferred by the proviso to section 350 could be successfully claimed in that case. It is said that 'inquiry' is used in a more general sense—investigation into the truth of any matter—in section 177 and the following sections, where the language used is "Every offence shall ordinarily be inquired into and tried by a Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction it was committed." But those sections are not incapable of meaning that the preliminary inquiry before trial and the subsequent trial after committal should both be within the limits of the jurisdiction of each Court in respect of it. It is further urged that the word 'trial' should be regarded as being used where the context requires it in a general and popular sense. It is quite true that the word 'trial' is not defined in the Code, but it may not unreasonably be urged that the definition of 'inquiry' impliedly defines 'trial' as every proceeding which is not an inquiry.

The question is whether we are bound to confine ourselves to the four walls of the Code taking the nearest approach we can get to a definition, express or implied, and apply it rigidly, or whether we are at liberty to supplement the Code by an application of the principles that lie at the root of the administration of the criminal law. In interpreting an English criminal Statute there would be no difficulty: it is always subject to the general principles of the common law unless they are excluded by the plain words of the Statute. The history of the doctrine of mens rea and its application to various Statutes is a familiar example. If we adopt such a procedure here, there could hardly be any doubt that the proceedings under section 107 and the cognate sections have all the features of a trial. A person against whom they are taken has repeatedly been held to be an accused within the meaning of the Code, though he is not expressly so described. He has been held to have the right to be professionally represented and if he cannot be said to be 'charged' with an offence, it is at least sought to be proved against him that he is a person with criminal or undesirable propensities. Finally the consequences to him, if he neglects or is unable to furnish security, are so serious as to entail loss of liberty for a very considerable period. On the other hand, the history of the various codes and the circumstances of those codes unquestionably show that the framers of them intended them to be complete in themselves.

Besides these general considerations it may be argued that the contrast between the body of section 350 which expressly mentions both inquiry and trial and the proviso which speaks exclusively of trial, is indicative of the intention to use trial as excluding inquiry which can properly be or is described as an inquiry within the meaning of the Code. This comes back to the original argument that inquiry must be construed as used in a non-technical and popular sense in section 107 following, because if "inquiry" there is used in the technical sense by section 4, it excludes ex vi termini the idea of its being also a trial, since an inquiry is in effect defined as that which is not a trial. No doubt if manifest absurdity or injustice ensued from treating 'inquiry' in any particular context as being used in the technical sense, the Court would feel itself at liberty to assume that the word is used in a looser and more popular sense. For reasons presently to be stated, I am of opinion that it is not necessary to decide this question or to determine whether to deprive the accused of the right of having the evidence re-heard by the Magistrate who is to determine his fate is so flagrantly oppressive as to call for the construction of the word 'inquiry' in the material sections in a different sense from that defined in the Code. For by section 117 it is enacted that "such inquiry shall be made, as nearly as may be practicable where the order requires security for keeping the peace, in the manner hereinafter prescribed for conducting trials and recording evidence in summons cases; and, where the order requires security for good behaviour, in the manner hereinafter prescribed for conducting trials and recording evidence in warrant cases, except that no charge need be framed." It is argued that this only incorporates Chapters XX and XXI of the Code, which contain specific provisions applicable only to summons and warrant cases respectively. But the Code contains many general provisions to be found outside these two chapters which regulate matters of procedure in summons and warrant cases alike, such as the directions as to the manner in which evidence shall be received and recorded, the right of the accused persons to be legally represented and the like. I think the true interpretation of section 117 is that it requires the whole of the procedure in a summons or warrant case respectively to be adopted by the tribunal which inquires into a security case. It is an essential part of that procedure to make provision for the contingency, common to all, of a case coming in the first instance before one Magistrate and afterwards before its conclusion before another. I am of opinion, therefore, that the accused has the same right to have the witnesses re-called in a security as in a summons or warrant case; for that is not a substantive right but a right relating to the procedure to be adopted. Accordingly I answer the reference in the affirmative.

M. C. P.

Answered in the affirmative.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL APPEAL NO. 1287 OF 1919.

March 18, 1920.

Present :—Justice Sir George Knox, KT.

JAGDEO PARSHAD—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

EMPEROR—DEFENDANT—RESPONDENT.

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), ss. 236

JAGDEO PARSHAD v. EMPEROR.

271, 537—Sessions case—Charge, absence of, from record, explanation of—Irregularity—Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), ss. 467, 471—Charge under s. 467—Conviction under s. 471, whether legal.

On the record of a trial by a Court of Session there should be the charge, which under section 271 of the Criminal Procedure Code has been read over and explained to the accused, and where this is not so, the record should contain an explanation of its absence. The fact that this is an omission covered by section 537 of the Code is not a sufficient answer. [p. 59, col. 2.]

Where an accused person was charged under section 467, Indian Penal Code, but it appeared in evidence that he had committed an offence under section 471, Indian Penal Code, for which he might have been charged under section 236 of the Criminal Procedure Code:

Held, that although the accused was not charged with it, he could be convicted of an offence under section 471, Indian Penal Code. [p. 60, col. 2.]

Criminal appeal against the order of the Sessions Judge, Jhansi, dated the 23rd September 1919.

Mr. J. M. Misra, for the Appellant.

The Government Pleader, for the Crown.

JUDGMENT.—Jagdeo Prasad was committed by Mr. Sathe for having, on the 1st day of December 1918 at Rajapur, forged a money order (Exhibit B) for Rs. 375 and tried to obtain payment of the amount relating to the same—an offence punishable under section 467 of the Indian Penal Code. He was also charged by the same Magistrate for having, on the 6th day of December 1918 at Rajapur, forged a money order (Exhibit M) and obtained payment of Rs. 299 12 on the basis of that money order, an offence punishable under section 467, Indian Penal Code. He was also charged by the same Magistrate for having, on the 2nd day of December 1918 at Rajapur, forged a money order (Exhibit N) and obtained payment of Rs. 5?5, an offence punishable under section 467, Indian Penal Code. He was committed to the Court of Session on these charges. I refer to these charges in order to show that in the course of his trial the attention of the accused was called to these charges which were made against him. On these charges he was tried and convicted. That conviction was quashed by this Court on the ground that the trial had been upon three separate charges of three separate offences. In the order by which the conviction was set aside an order was passed that the accused be committed for trial to the Court of the Sessions Judge of Jhansi. The Sessions Judge of Jhansi took up the case and apparently did not amend the charges. From the record that has been placed before me it is absolutely impossible to say with certainty what was the charge that was read over to the accused under section 271 of the Code of Criminal Procedure. For years past I have been pointing out this error and apparently without any hope of its being rectified. When a record is prepared for appeal in this Court, the trial clerk should see whether there is on the record a charge which has been read over and explained to the accused. If he cannot find it, he should call the attention of the Registrar to its absence and ascertain to what cause that absence is due. The mere fact that section 537 covers an error, omission or irregularity of this kind is not a sufficient answer. The Committing Magistrate, as I have shown above, did commit the accused upon three separate charges. Under section 226 of the Code the Court was empowered either to frame a charge or to add to or otherwise alter the charge, but every alteration or addition has to be read and explained to the accused. In the three charges to which I have already alluded certain alterations were made, but it is impossible to say who made those alterations. The word "section" in the first two cases was altered to "sections," the figures 471 and 420/511 were added to figures 467 and in the body of the three charge sheets matter was cut out and fresh matter inserted. Against these alterations there are initials which appear to be the initials of the Court of Session, but those initials are in opposition to the sentence contained in the judgment that charges framed by the Magistrate were not amended by the Sessions Court. What the learned Judge should have done is to have framed separate charge sheets containing the matter that was read over to the accused, and not to have resorted to what appears to be very slovenly procedure on an important matter. But for the provisions of section 225 of the Code of Criminal Procedure I should probably have been compelled to quash this trial also, and whatever truth may exist regarding the actual words of the charge sheets which were read over to the accused, this much is clear that he was charged with offences under section 467, Indian Penal Code. In a trial by a Court of Session the actual charge sheet to which the accused is called upon to plead is a very important document. It should be drawn up and considered with extreme care and caution, so that the accused may have no doubt whatever as to the offences to which he is called upon to answer and the Judge of the Appellate Court may have no doubt also upon the matter. The accused was defended in the Court of Session and he does not appear either himself or through his Pleader to have entered any objection to the charge sheet that was read over to him.

What are the facts which have been proved against the accused? It has been proved by the evidence put forward by the prosecution that in September 1918 permission was given to the accused to learn work in the post office of Rajapur, that he remained there until December of the same year, that he assisted generally in office work, that he wrote the mail list, parcel list, register list and daily accounts, that no money orders were sent after the 26th of October, that no money orders were despatched on the 1st of December 1918, and that the signature on Exhibit B, the money order which is the subject of the first charge, purporting to be that of the issuing postmaster, was not the postmaster's signature. All the above is proved by the evidence of Umanand, who was in charge of the Rajapur post office in December 1918. Khairat Husain, who had been in charge of the Manikpur post office for two years before he made his statement, namely, the 15th of September 1919, proves that he saw the accused on the 12th of December at Manikpur post office, that the accused told him that he was expecting a money order and asked the postmaster to keep it until his return, that he gave his name as Jageshar Prasad living at Rajapur in the Cawnpur District, that the accused told him that the money order would be for Rs. 375, that the accused on the 16th of December asked if the order had come and asked for the money, that the accused was told to come the next day as the office had not enough money, that the witness identified Exhibit B as being the money order in question, that on the 17th the accused returned at about 7 or 8 in the morning, wanted the money and was told to come in the evening and to bring two persons to identify him, and that the witness noted that the date of issue was November the 1st, which was a Sunday, a day on which the money orders are not issued. This and other matters caused him to suspect the order. He ascertained by wire from Rajapur post office that no money order of this kind had been issued and on the pretence of giving the money which was deposited at the Thana, he took the accused to the Thana, told the Police and handed the accused over to them. Upon the accused being asked under section 364 to explain certain matters which had been disclosed by the evidence against him, he replied that he did not attempt to get payment of this money order at Manikpur, and that he never went inside the post office at Rajapur, knows nothing about the money order, has nothing to say about it and cannot say why all the witnesses gave evidence against him. These were perfectly legitimate questions to put under section 342 of the Code of Criminal Procedure and the answers given by the accused according to that section can be taken into consideration in the trial. None of this evidence has been rebutted by any evidence for the defence and it is amply sufficient to establish an offence under section 471, Indian Penal Code. It is contended by the learned Counsel who appears for the appellant here that it cannot be considered whether an offence under section 471 was committed by the accused. The answer to this is contained in section 237 of the Code of Criminal Procedure. The accused was charged with an offence under section 467, Indian Penal Code. It appears in evidence that he committed an offence under section 471 for which he might have been charged under section 236 and that although he was not charged with it he may be convicted of that offence, namely, the offence under section 471. I cannot understand why the Court of Session did not at once frame a charge under section 471 upon reading over the record and try the accused on that section. It was a simple, straightforward case but has been complicated apparently by discussions which took place between the Court and the Government Pleader. I might pursue the evidence further but I see no need for it. It was a very serious offence committed by a young man who had obtained entrance into a post office and had abused the concession granted to him by deliberately making use of a valuable security which he had reason to believe was forged. I have, however, to consider that he has been in custody for over a year and has already had to stand one trial for this very same offence. For these reasons and these only I reduce the sentence to a sentence of three years' rigorous imprisoment with effect from this date.

Sentence reduced.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL PETITION No. 54 OF 1920.

February 19, 1920.

Present:—Sir Lancelot Sanderson, KT., Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Walmsley.

JASIR KHAN—ACCUSED—PETITIONER

versus

EMPEROR ON THE COMPLAINT OF HRISHIKESH GHORNI—OPPOSITE PARTY.

Appeal, criminal—Pleader appearing for accused without vakalatnama*—Procedure.*

Where an accused person is represented by a Pleader in an appeal, but the latter has no vakalatnama, the proper course is to adjourn the hearing of the appeal until one is forthcoming, and thus afford the accused an opportunity of being represented. [p. 61, col. 2; p. 62, col. 1.]

Rule against the order of the Additional Sessions Judge, Howrah.

FACTS appear from the judgment.

Babu Atulya Charan Bose (with him Babu Girija Bhusan Mukerjee), for the Petitioner.—I place the facts of the case first. The petitioner with several others was convicted by the Sub-Divisional Magistrate of Uluberia, who sentenced them to undergo various terms of imprisonment. The petitioners filed their appeal before the Sessions Judge of Howrah and the same was fixed for hearing on the 6th January 1920. A Vakil appeared on behalf of the other appellants before the learned Judge on the day of hearing without a Vakalatnama and the learned Judge refused to hear him on that ground only. The Vakalatnama was signed on the evening previous to the day of hearing, and the man who had the Vakalatnama with him came to the Court with the Vakalatnama at 12 o'clock immediately after the Public Prosecutor had finished his address and just when the learned Judge was remarking that he was not going to interfere in this matter. The Vakil for the petitioners wanted to make his submissions on behalf of the petitioners, but the learned Judge refused his prayer saying that he had heard the Public Prosecutor and was not prepared to upset the finding of the lower Court, and finally dismissed the appeal by his order dated 8th January 1920, which ran as follows:—

"On the date fixed for hearing a Vakil on behalf of some of the accused appeared but without any Vakalatnama. Under the circumstances I found myself unable to allow him to address the Court and after perusing the record and the grounds of appeal, I asked the Public Bresecutor to deal with each of the grounds urged in the petition of appeal."

My first submission is that reading section 423 with section 4, clause (r), of the Criminal Procedure Code the learned Sessions Judge ought to have heard the Vakil appearing for the appellant.

Under section 4, clause (r), Criminal Procedure Code, a Vakalatnama is not necessary for appearing on behalf of the petitioner.

No one appeared for the Crown to oppose the Rule.

JUDGMENT.—In this case we make the Rule absolute and direct that the appeal of Jasir Khan be re-heard. We are far from saying that the learned Additional Sessions Judge was wrong in refusing to hear the learned Pleader inasmuch as he had not got any Vakalatnama.

But having regard to the fact that the learned Pleader appeared on behalf of the appellant, we think that the learned Additional Sessions Judge might perhaps have adjourned the case until the Vakalatnama was forthcoming. The result of what took place was that the learned Additional Sessions Judge heard the Public Prosecutor upon the evidence and the appellant had not the advantage of being represented by the learned Pleader to whom he had in fact given instructions.

Consequently, we think that this Rule must be made absolute and the appeal of Jasir Khan must be re-heard.

Rule made absolute.

NAGPUR JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

MISCELLNANEOUS PETITION No. 26 OF 1919.

July 3, 1919.

Present:—Sir Henry Drake-Brockman, KT., J. C.

GANPAT AND ANOTHER—APPLICANTS

versus

BANI—NON-APPLICANT.

Evidence Act (I of 1872), s. 25—Confession to Police, admissibility of, to prove ownership of property—Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), s. 517—Property produced before Court—Power of Court to dispose of property.

A confession made to the Police by an accused person is admissible to prove the ownership of property in respect of which he is accused. [p. 63, col. 1.]

Under section 517 of the Criminal Procedure Code it is not necessary that the property to be disposed of should have been used for the commission of an offence or that some offence should appear to have been committed regarding it: the Court has power to make an order for the disposal of any property "produced before it or in its custody." [p. 63, col. 2.]

Application under section 520, Criminal Procedure Code, against the order in miscellaneous proceedings, dated the 17th April 1919, arising from Sessions Trial No. 5 of 1908, passed by the Sessions Judge, Nagpur, under section 517, Criminal Procedure Code.

Mr. A. C. Roy, for the Applicant.

The Hon'ble Mr. G. P. Dick, for the Crown.

Mr. R. B. Gadgil, for the Non-Applicant.

JUDGMENT.—This application is a sequal to Miscellaneous Petition No. 58 of 1918 and arises out of the case in which the applicants, Ganpat, and Gulab, were acquitted of murder in Criminal Appeal No. 73 of 1918 on the 15th July 1918 by one of us and Batter, A. J. C. Part of the evidence against the applicants consisted in the finding of Rs. 4,901 divided between two earthen vessels and a brass pot in a garden adjoining the house which the applicants occupy. This money the prosecution alleged to have belonged to the murdered man Bibia Mahar of Saoner. The applicants live in Gujikhedi, about a mile from Saoner, and the prosecution endeavoured to establish that on Thursday the 13th December 1917, the day before Bibia died, a large sum of money was brought to their house by the applicants and one Mahadeo who would have been tried with them had he not absconded. In the judgment disposing of the appeal it was held that, though the circumstances justified a strong suspicion that the money found buried was part of Bibia's money, yet the identity was not proved beyond reasonable doubt.

At the trial the Sessions Judge passed no order for the disposal of the sum of Rs. 4,901 and the judgment of this Court also left the point undealt with. By the time Miscellaneous Petition No. 58 of 1918 was preferred, certain creditors of Bibia who had obtained decrees against him had attached the money and the applicants had objected to the attachments. This Court's order in Miscellaneous Petition No. 58 of 1918 directed that the result of the objections should be awaited and that the applicants should then move the Sessions Judge for an order under section 517, Criminal Procedure Code. The objections were dealt with by the Munsif, Saoner, and resulted in their being allowed on the ground that Bibia was not shown by any convincing evidence to have deposited any ascertainable amount with the objectors who should, therefore, be given the benefit of their ostensible possession of the money. The objectors then moved the Sessions Judge, who has held, on the strength of the evidence given in the murder trial and an assumption, that Bibia did not pay his creditors from the sum of Rs. 5,954, which he received from Messrs. Ralli Brothers on Wednesday the 12 December 1917, that the money in question belonged to Bibia, and ordered its delivery to Bibia's widow Musammat Bani.

GANPAT v. BANI.

The applicants now contend that no additional evidence having been adduced before the Sessions Judge, the finding of this Court that the money in question is not proved to have belonged to Bibia should have been acted upon. It is also urged that by virtue of their possession of the land in which the buried rupees were found, the applicants are absolutely entitled to receive the money. Saon Gond v. Sheonandan Lal (1), Baloram Gogai v. Chintaram (2) and Hagu Biswas v. Manmatha Nath Mitra (3) are cited in support of this contention.

On behalf of Musammat Bani it is urged that this Court did not in the murder appeal find that the money belonged to the applicants and that Ganpat was altogether unable at the trial to account satisfactorily for the fact that there were among the rupees unearthed as many as 1070 of the year 1917.

For the Crown the learned Standing Counsel contended that the order is in substance just, as there is at least strong suspicion that the buried money was part of what Bibia received from Messrs. Ralli Brothers and that in any view there are strong reasons for not making the money over to the applicants.

We have given the arguments of the Counsel our careful consideration and also perused the special diary in the murder case, the evidence given at the murder trial and also that taken by the Munsif, Saoner, in connection with the applicants' objections aforesaid. The conclusion we have come to is that the money in question should not be delivered either to Musammat Bani or to the applicants until a special inquiry has been held by the District Magistrate or such Sub Divisional Magistrate as he may depute for the purpose. In the special diary we find it recorded that on the brass pot of money being discovered, the applicant Ganpat made a confessional statement which on the authority of Queen-Empress v. Tribhovan Manekchand (4) we hold to be admissible against him for the purpose of showing that the money belonged to Bibia. The evidence recorded by the Munsif, Saoner, includes the statements of Gumani (D. H. 12) and Rewa (D. H. 13), creditors of Bibia, who deposed that they accompanied Bibia and the applicants from Saoner to Ganpat's house in Gujikhedi and were paid the amount due to them by Bibia from money which he had brought in a cart. We consider it essential for the proper disposal of the matter before us that the evidence regarding Ganpat's confession, which the Standing Counsel assures us will be forthcoming, should be taken and that Gumani and Rewa along with any other creditors of Bibia who may have received payment from him on the 12th or 13th December 1917 should be examined. It is also desirable that all creditors who deny satisfaction of their claims should be formally examined on the point: the Sessions Judge should not, in our opinion, have made any assumption on this important point.

Of the cases relied upon for the applicants the first is not in point, it being evident from the authorities cited, all of which are prior to 1898, that the law applied was that contained in section 517, Criminal Procedure Code of 1882. The first part of that section ran as follows:—

"When an inquiry or a trial in any Criminal Court is concluded, the Court may make such order as it thinks fit for the disposal of any document or other property produced before it regarding which any offence appears to have been committed, or which has been used for the commission of any offence."

It is no longer necessary that the property to be disposed of should have been used for the commission of an offence or that some offence should appear to have been committed regarding it: the Court now has power to make an order for the dispcsal of any property "produced before it or in its custody." In Baloram Gogai v. Chintaram (2) it seems to have been clear that the accused who were discharged had been guilty of no dishonesty in keeping the elephant in dispute and in any view as to the ownership of the animal had a claim to compensation for their expenses in capturing and maintaining it. In the third case the accused had been acquitted of housebreaking by the High Court in revision, and it was laid down generally that after an acquittal of theft or burglary the property said to have been stolen should be restored to the accused, the complainant being [illegible]

(1) 14 C. P. L. R. 60.
(2) 9 C. W. N. 549; 2 Cr. L. J. 269.
(3) 22 Ind. Cas. 760; 18 C. W. N. 959; 15 Cr. L. J. 184.
(4) 9 B. 131; 5 Ind. Dec. (N. s.) 88.

to go to the Civil Court, file a suit and secure an injunction. In that case there does not appear to have been any indication that the acquitted person had made a confession of guilt, and we are unable to think that if such a confession could be proved the general rule laid down would be properly applicable. The report, moreover, does not show why the acquittal was ordered or on what ground the accused claimed to retain the property, and we gather from the meagre statement of facts furnished that there was room for doubt as to the ownership. However that may be, we are satisfied that there is good ground in the evidence already recorded, and in that which is likely to be forthcoming if a further inquiry is held, for declining to deliver the money in dispute to the applicants. We are also satisfied that the evidence already on record does not justify delivery of the money to Musammat Bani.

We set aside the Sessions Judge's order that the money be delivered to Musammat Bani and in lieu of deciding ourselves as to the final disposal of the property direct under section 517, Criminal Procedure Code, that the money be delivered to the District Magistrate, who will deal with it as if it had been seized by the Police and the seizure had been reported to him under section 523 of the Code. It will be open to the District Magistrate if he think fit, to depute a Sub Divisional Magistrate to take the necessary action.

Order set aside.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL REVISION No. 98 OF 1920.

April 14, 1920.

Present:—Mr. Justice Tudball.

MEWA LAL—APPLICANT

versus

EMPEROR—OPPOSITE PARTY.

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), ss. 202, 203, 476—Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), s. 211—Complaint against Police Officer—Investigation by another Police Officer, propriety of—Complaint dismissed without complainant's evidence—Complainant, order for prosecution of, whether justified.

Where a complaint is made against an Officer of Police, it is improper to direct another Police Officer to conduct the investigation, the investigation should be conducted by the Magistrate receiving the complaint or by some other Magistrate.

When a complaint is dismissed upon the report of the Investigating Officer without taking the complainant's evidence, it is improper to direct the prosecution of the complainant under section 211, Penal Code.

Criminal revision from an order of the Sessions Judge, Benares, dated the 3rd of January 1920.

Mr. Pearey Lal, for the Applicant.

The Assistant Government Advocate, for the Crown.

JUDGMENT.—The facts of this case are simple. A Police Officer searched the house of Mewa Lal. The latter made a complaint that this Police Officer had searched his house without reason and that in the course of the search he used threatening and abusive language towards him and his wife. The Magistrate sent the complaint for enquiry to another Police Officer, who reported it to be groundless. The Magistrate dismissed the complaint on the 22nd of November and on the same date called upon Mewa Lal to show cause why he should not be prosecuted under section 211 of the Code. Mewa Lal did show cause, and one ground that he put forward was that it was improper to direct his prosecution without the Court hearing his evidence. In spite of this the Court directed his prosecution under section 211 of the Code. I am far from saying that in every case the Magistrate is bound to take the evidence and cannot act upon the report of the Investigating Officer, but in the present case the accused person was a Police Officer. The investigation had been made by another Police Officer and the offence was not a cognizable one, and I do not think the Magistrate has acted wisely in directing an investigation by a Police Officer in such a case. The enquiry ought, in my opinion, to have been made either by the Magistrate himself or by some other Magistrate on his behalf. In the circumstances I do not think that the order directing the prosecution of Mewa Lal should be allowed to stand and I, therefore, set it aside.

Order set aside.

JIWRAJ v. SHEOKUWARBAI.

NAGPUR JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

FIRST CIVIL APPEAL No. 58 OF 1916.

April 5, 1917.

Present:—Mr. Mittra, A. J. C., and Mr. Prideaux, A. J. C.

JIWRAJ—DEFENDANT—APPELLANT

versus

Musammat SHEOKUWARBAI—PLAINTIFF—RESPONDENT.

Hindu Law—Adoption—Jains—Possession of child, delivery of, when complete—Grown up man, delivery of, mode of—Jain widow, adoption by—Consent of husband, whether necessary.

In matters of adoption the Jains are governed by Hindu Law to the extent that giving and taking are sufficient to constitute a valid adoption. [p 66, col. 2.]

In the case of Jains all that is necessary under the law to effect an adoption is that the possession of the child to be given in adoption must be made over to the adoptive parent. [p 65, col. 2]

In the case of a grown up man who is adopted, his being placed near his adoptive parent would be sufficient in point of law to constitute a valid delivery of possession. The ceremony of actually placing him in the lap of his adoptive parent is not essential. [p. 65, col 2.]

The permission of the husband is not necessary in the case of a Jain widow adopting a son. [p. 65, col. 2.]

Appeal against the decree of the District Judge, Nimar, in Civil Suit No. 15 of 1915, decided on the 28th April 1916.

Sir B. K. Bose and Mr. M. B. Kinkhede, for the Appellant.

Messrs. H. Mittra, M. V. Joshi and J. C. Ghose, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—This is an appeal from the decree of the District Judge, Nimar, declaring that the defendant has not been validly adopted by the plaintiff. The plaintiff in her plaint admits that she was desirous of adopting the defendant and executed a registered deed of adoption on the 28th June 1909. Certain ceremonies were performed on that occasion, but there was no giving and taking. The defendant pleaded that the District Judge of Nimar had no jurisdiction to try the suit. This point was decided against him by the lower Court and has not been raised before us in appeal. On the merits the defendant pleaded that he was duly adopted by the plaintiff on the 28th of June 1909 and that he was given by his natural mother in adoption to the plaintiff by placing him on her lap. The Pleader for the defendant, however, made an oral statement to the effect that adoption is valid among the Jains even without the boy being placed on the lap of the adoptive mother. The case of the plaintiff was that there must be some physical act of giving and taking. The District Judge in decreeing the plaintiff's suit has laid great stress upon that part of the defendant's statement which says that he was placed on the lap of his adoptive mother. He finds that there was no giving and taking in the manner pleaded by the defendant and hence with reference to the subsequent conduct of the parties that the adoption was not completed

The question for consideration is whether there was such giving and taking as the law contemplates. It is admitted that in this respect the Jains are governed by Hindu Law to the extent that giving and taking would be sufficient to constitute a valid adoption. It was already conceded in the pleadings that the permission of the husband is not necessary in the case of a Jain widow adopting a son. It seems also to have been tacitly admitted that a married man, such as the defendant was, can be validly adopted. That all is necessary under the law is that the possession of the child to be given in adoption must be made over to the adoptive mother. If the defendant has in addition to this stated in his pleadings and in his evidence that he was placed on the lap of the plaintiff, he has somewhat overstated his case. The defendant was about 25 or 26 years of age at the time of the adoption and as pointed out by the plaintiff's witness No. 1 (Ram Shastri) who officiated at the adoption ceremony, the defendant was somewhat grown up and as he could not be placed exactly on the lap of the adoptive mother, he was placed near her. We are clearly of opinion that the defendant's story is not to be entirely disbelieved merely because he has failed to prove that he was lifted up and placed on the lap of his mother in a perfectly literal sense. If he was really placed near her, that would be sufficient in point of law, and a person in the position of the defendant would be apt to describe it in the terms of the vernacular word for adoption 'gol menlena' 'to take one on the lap'.

Now the lower Court does not disbelieve the evidence of the plaintiff's witness Ram Shastri (P. W. No. 1), nor does it disbelieve the evidence of the Pleader Ramchandra (D. W. No. 10). Their statements leave no doubt in our mind that the giving and taking was completed and that they both understood that the adoption ceremonies constituted the defendant the adopted son of the plaintiff.

The deed of adoption was executed by the plaintiff on the same day and an agreement was executed by the defendant stipulating that during the lifetime of the plaintiff she was to be the owner of the estate. The deed of adoption was presented for registration on the 9th July by the plaintiff and the document was registered in her house by the Sub-Registrar. Now if for some reason or other the adoption was not completed, there would be no reason for having the deed of adoption registered. If, as suggested before us, the intention of the plaintiff was to complete the ceremonies of adoption at Burhanpur, no explanation is forthcoming as to why she would present for registration the deed of adoption on the 9th July.

Now the argument on behalf of the plaintiff respondent that there has been material variance between members and pleading has no force. Any statement made with regard to the details as to how the acceptance was made, was a surplusage and unnecessary for the purposes of the case, especially as the defendant's Pleader had stated that it was unnecessary to place the boy on the lap of the mother. The discrepancies to which our attention has been drawn are very minor matters, and cannot make us disbelieve either the plaintiff's witness No. 1 or defendant's witness No. 10, who are both described as respectable and reliable witnesses by the lower Court. The learned Advocate for the respondent asks us to read the previous statement made by Ram Shastri contained in Exhibit P-18. Reading two statements together we are of opinion that when the question arose as to whether Homa was to be performed or not, the Shastri was asked to perform the ceremonies as they are performed amongst Hindus. These were, as a matter of fact, performed. It may be that the plaintiff intended to go through the Jain ceremonies, if they were in any way different, at Burhanpur where there are many Jains living. But there is no reason to suppose that the ceremonies considered essential amongst Hindus were not gone through. The evidence on the point is clear to our mind and we see no reason to doubt that the ceremony of giving and taking was gone through, and this view is further strengthened when we take into consideration the registration of the deed of adoption shortly after the date fixed for the adoption. There is no doubt that a large number of people were invited to witness the ceremony of adoption. There is also no doubt that a learned Shastri, that is Ram Shastri (plaintiff's witness No. 1), was requested to officiate as a priest on the occasion. There is also no doubt that the documents were executed after consultation with Pleaders. Under these circumstances we are unable to accept the view that giving and taking did not take place on the 28th June 1909.

If we had entertained any doubt with regard to the completion of the ceremony, we would have certainly attached great weight to the fact that the defendant has described himself as the son of Punamchand and not as the son of his adoptive father. But the evidence on the point of adoption appears to us to be very clear and does not admit of any doubt whatever.

It must be admitted that the defendant himself in the witness-box has been unable to give an adequate explanation of how he came to be described and how he described himself as the son of Punamchand, notwithstanding this adoption. One explanation suggested before us is that as the Khata in the account books stood originally in the name of the defendant as the son of Punamchand, the same Khata was continued. It is also suggested before us that possibly as the adoption was somewhat peculiar in so far that the widow was to enjoy the estate during her lifetime, the defendant may have considered himself justified in continuing to describe himself as the son of Punamchand, as he got no benefit from the estate. Whatever reason may be for the defendant calling himself the son of Punamchand after the adoption, we are unable to hold that the evidence regarding the actual adoption admits of any doubt as to whether it was completed or not. It may be that the parties contemplated further ceremony according to the Jain custom of Burhanpur which was not performed. Although the defendant continued for about 10 months to live with the plaintiff, they were apparently not on the best of terms and that may be a reason why the plaintiff never carried out her original intention of performing in the presence of the Jain community a further ceremony according to Jain rites. This may have to a certain extent misled the defendant in believing that his adoption was not completed according to the Jain custom. But if we are right in our opinion that mere giving and taking would be sufficient to constitute the defendant the adopted son, any mistake of law under which he may have been labouring by reason of this ceremony not having been gone through cannot affect his legal rights.

There is some reliance placed by the lower Court upon Exhibit P-10, under which the defendant as well as the plaintiff's munim Chatrusa desire that the likha padhi, that is the deeds, should be kept secret at Burhanpur. The motive for this secrecy seems somewhat obscure so far as the present record is concerned. It is suggested that there was some person at Burhanpur who might be raising objection as a reversioner to the adoption. But we confess that the explanation on this point is far from satisfactory. But the law, however, does not justify us in drawing an inference that no adoption and no giving and taking had taken place.

The learned District Judge has argued that the defendant has not shown whether he was observing mourning for the members of his natural family. Although the plaintiff in her deposition says Jiwraj and his brothers had observed mourning for the death of their mother, there is nothing to show that it was really not observed by the defendant for a period shorter than the usual period by reason of the adoption. Moreover, no question was put to the defendant on the subject in cross examination. Kesrichand, who was examined on commission in Bombay, stated that he observed sutak (mourning) for three days only on account of the death of the defendant's wife. He proceeds to add that if the defendant had remained in his family, he would have observed mourning for ten days. There is no evidence contradicting this evidence regarding the practice amongst the Jains after an adoption, nor is there any evidence to contradict the fact deposed to. On the whole we have come to the conclusion that the defendant's adoption was duly celebrated and completed by the giving and taking.

The result is that the decree of the lower Court is set aside and the plaintiff's suit is dismissed with costs. We fix Rs. 350 as Pleader's fee.

Appeal allowed.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

S. R. No. 18328 of 1919.

February 10, 1920.

Present:—Sir John Wallis, Kt., Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Krishnan.

DONOPUDI SUBRAMANYAN—

APPELLANT

versus

NUNE NARASIMHAM AND OTHERS—

—RESPONDENTS.

Limitation Act (IX of 1908), s. 12—Time requisite for obtaining copy—Judgment pronounced on first day of vacation—Copy applied for several days after re-opening of Court—Period of vacation, whether can be excluded from time for appealing.

Where a judgment is pronounced on the first day of the Court's vacation, and an application for a copy is not made till several days after the re-opening of the Court, the applicant is not entitled to deduct the period of the vacation, as time requisite for obtaining a copy under section 12 of the Limitation Act, from the period prescribed for presenting an appeal. [p. 68, col. 2]

Second appeal sought to be preferred against the decree of the District Court, Kistna, in Appeal Suit No. 33 of 1918, preferred against the decree of the Court of the Subordinate Judge, Bezwada, in Original Suit No. 23 of 1916.

Mr. B. Somayya, for the Appellant.

Mr. P. Venkatarama Rao, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.

WALLIS, C. J.—The judgment of the lower

Appellate Court in this case was pronounced on 21st December 1918, the 1st day of the Christmas Vacation, and under section 12 (2) of the Limitation Act time began to run from the following day. The fact that the judgment was pronounced in the vacation made no difference in this respect as the only provision with regard to the vacation is that under section 4; if the prescribed period expires on a day when the Court is closed, the appeal may be preferred on the day when the Court re opens.

The appellant applied for copies of the decree and judgment on the 7th January 1919, which he duly obtained, but even excluding the time taken in obtaining them, he is admittedly out of time, unless he is entitled to add the days when the Court was closed for the Christmas Vacation and to treat them as a part of the time requisite for obtaining copies of the decree and judgment within the meaning of section 12. It has been held by Sankaran Nair and Ayling, JJ., in Tanjore Palace Estate v. Andi Kamiah Chetty (1) that he is not entitled to do this, and we entirely agree with that decision. It was no doubt held in Saminatha Ayyar v. Venkatasubba Ayyar (2), where the judgment under appeal was delivered later on the day before the Christmas Vacation and an application was made for copies on the 17th January, the day the Court re opened, that the appellant was entitled to exclude, not only the time actually taken in obtaining the copies, but also the whole of Christmas Vacation during which the Court was closed, when he could not have applied for copies even if he had wished to do so. That case may be distinguished on the ground that there the copies were applied for on the re opening day, in this case not until some days later, otherwise we should have to consider whether we ought to follow it. What we have to see in all these cases is what was the time requisite for obtaining copies within the meaning of the section, and by "requisite" I understand reasonably requisite. It was observed by Wilson and Beverley, JJ., in Gunga Dass Dey v. Ramjoy Dey (3) that no hard and fast rule can be laid down to meet all cases that occur under this provision, but I think it may be said that generally if not invariably, as held in Bechi v. Ashan-ullah Khan (4), the time requisite for obtaining copies cannot include any period antecedent to the appellant's asking for copies in the usual way. The appellant is under no duty to make an early application, he may apply at any time, even on the last day of the prescribed period if he so chooses; and even if the period expires on a day when the Court is closed, he may apply for copies on the re-opening day and still be within time, as held in Siyadat-unnissa v. Muhammad Mahmud (5), Tukaram Gopal v. Pandurang Sadaram (6) and Pandhari nath v. Shankar (7). In the present case the appellant had some eighty days between the re-opening of the Court and the expiry of the prescribed period in which he could have applied for copies and he did in fact apply for them a few days after the re-opening. In these circumstances I fail to see how the Christmas Vacation can be included in the time reasonably requisite for obtaining them, unless we are prepared to go so far as to say that all days on which the Court was closed during the prescribed period before the appellant applied for the copies must be included in the time requisite for obtaining copies, on the ground that the appellant could not have applied for copies on those days even if he had desired to do. This would defeat the intention of the Legislature that time should run on days when the Court is closed and would be a very strained interpretation of the words "time requisite," as used in the section which, in my opinion, mean time reasonably requisite on the facts of the case.

The appeal is barred and is dismissed with costs.

KRISHNAN, J.—I agree and have nothing to add.

M.C.P.

Appeal dismissed.

(1) 11 Ind. Cas. 389; (1911) 1 M. W. N. 364.
(2) 27 M. 21; 13 M. L. J. 300.
(3) 12 C. 30; 6 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 20.
(4) 12 A. 461 at p. 471 (F. B.); A. W. N. (1890) 149; 6 Ind Dec (N. S.) 1039.
(5) 19 A. 342; A. W. N. (1897) 76; 9 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 225.
(6) 25 B. 584; 3 Bom. L. R. 148.
(7) 25 B. 586; 3 Bom. L. R. 244.

SIND JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

REVISION APPLICATION No. 17 OF 1918.

January 4, 1919.

Present:—Mr. Kincaid, A. J. C, and Mr. Raymond, A. J. C.

GUL MAHOMED—APPLICANT

versus

FAIZ MAHOMED—OPPONENT.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 60 (b)—Execution of decree—Attachment—Agriculturist—Cattle, whether can be attached—Provincial Small Cause Courts Act (IX of 1887), s. 25—Revision—High Court, power of interference of, when to be exercised.

The question whether cattle belonging to an agriculturist are necessary to enable him to earn his livelihood, arising out of an attachment in execution, is one for the executing Court to decide.

The powers of interference vested in the High Court under section 25 of the Provincial Small Cause Courts Act should only be exercised to remedy injustice.

Application from the order of the Judge, Small Causes Court, Karachi.

Mr. Rewachand Vasanmal, for the Applicant.

Mr. Tahilram Maniram, for the Opponent.

JUDGMENT.—The facts of this revision application are shortly as follows:—

It appears that the judgment-debtor who is an agriculturist had three pairs of bullocks. One is used for the field work and two are used to carry both his own produce and that of his Zemindar in the market for sale. One pair of these bullocks was attached by the judgment creditor and the judgment-debtor applied to have the attachment raised. The application was heard by the learned Judge of the Small Cause Court, Karachi, and he on the 14th March 1918 dismissed it. Against this order an application has been made to this Court.

The ground of the learned Judge was that two pairs of the cattle were sufficient to enable the judgment-debtor to earn his livelihood as an agriculturist. It has been urged by the learned Counsel who represented the applicant that it was nowhere said in the section that the livelihood should be minimum livelihood. Had the learned Small Cause Court Judge interpreted the phrase "livelihood" to mean adequate livelihood, he would have held that the three pairs of bullocks were necessary to the applicant and would have allowed the application. In my view, however, this is not a question in which this Court can interfere. Section 60, clause (b), of the Civil Procedure Code lays down that the test is whether the cattle are or are not necessary to enable an agriculturist to earn his livelihood in the opinion of the Court.

In the case of Bakhir Mohammed v. Doorga Churn Shaha (1) it was laid down that the Court which should decide that point is the Court which issued the execution. As this point has been decided against the applicant by the Small Cause Court Judge, it is not for us to interfere with the decision. It was also observed in the case of Rupchand v. Minhomal (2) that the powers of interference vested in a High Court under section 25 of the Provincial Small Cause Courts Act should be exercised only to remedy injustice. Here no injustice whatever has been committed and this alone is a sufficient ground for dismissing the application.

The application is dismissed with costs.

Application dismissed.

(1) 10 C. 39; 13 C. L. R. 200; 5 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 27.

(2) 27 Ind. Cas. 366; 8 S. L. R. 164.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

MISCELLANEOUS CIVIL APPEAL No. 311 OF 1920.

February 17, 1920 and March 2, 1920.

Present:—Mr. Justice Scott Smith and Mr Justice Wilberforce.

DEVI DITTA MAL AND ANOTHER—CONTRIBUTORIES—APPELLANTS

versus

THE OFFICIAL LIQUIDATOR OF THE AMRITSAR BANK, LIMITED, LAHORE, IN LIQUIDATION, AND Lala CHHAJU RAM FOR THE CREDITORS—RESPONDENTS.

Companies Act (VI of 1882), ss. 147, 169—Company in liquidation, when becomes solvent—Bankruptcy rules, applicability of—Separate cases decided by one judgment—Appeals, separate, whether necessary—Procedure.

DEVI DITTA MAL v. OFFICIAL LIQUIDATOR, AMRITSAR BANK LTD.

A company in liquidation becomes solvent as soon as it has paid off its liabilities existing at the date of the winding up order. [p. 71, col. 2.]

Ordinary bankruptcy rules are applicable to companies in liquidation and when the liabilities existing at the date of the winding-up order have been discharged, creditors, when debts carry interest, are entitled to subsequent interest. [p. 71, col. 2.]

Where two separate cases are finally decided and disposed of in one judgment, two separate appeals should be filed. [p. 70, col. 2.]

Miscellaneous appeal from the order of Mr. Justice Broadway, dated the 28th October 1919, holding that the contributories are not entitled to be paid anything out of the surplus assets in these two Banks so long as the creditors whose debts carried interest have not been paid their interest up to the 4th and 16th of April 1919 in the Amritsar and People's Banks respectively, on which date the last dividends were declared.

Mr. Santanam, for the Appellants.

Lala Palwant Rai, for Lala Chhaju Ram, Lala Ragunath Sahai, for Lala Harkishen Lal, Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—The facts of this case are simple. Briefly, in the matter of the liquidation of the People's and Amritsar Banks the Official Liquidator has been able to pay off the creditors in full. Considerable assets, however, remain, the amount in the case of the People's Bank being stated to be about 16 lakhs. The surpluses have been claimed by the creditors, whose debts were carrying interest on one side, and by the contributories on the other. Mr. Justice Broadway, after referring to English and Indian authorities, has decided that the contributories are entitled to nothing as long as creditors, whose debts carried interest, have not been paid up in full. The result of this order, it is said, will be in the case of the People's Bank that the creditors will receive some three annas in the rupee interest, while nothing will be left for the contributories. Against this decision Mr. Santanam on behalf of the contributories preferred an appeal which he presented on the 3th November and after an objection regarding Court-fee, presented again on the 14th November. The judgment of Mr. Justice Broadway was dated the 28th October.

Mr. Moti Sagar, on behalf of the creditors, raises two preliminary objections. In the first place, he objects that as Mr. Justice Broadway's order dealt with two separate cases, two appeals were necessary, while only one had been presented. To this Mr. Santanam replies that he appeared in the trial Court and received one fee for the two cases which he, therefore, considered to have been consolidated. We are not impressed by this argument and consider that separate appeals should certainly have been presented. As, however, all the parties concerned in both cases were served with notices in respect of the one appeal and as the mistake was merely one of form, we decided to allow Mr. Santanam to rectify his error by putting in a properly stamped appeal to deal with the second case. The second objection taken by Mr. Moti Sagar was that the provisions of section 169 of the Companies Act of 1882 had not been complied with, inasmuch as the respondents did not receive notice of the appeal within the three weeks provided for in that section. They applied for extension of the period on the 19th November to a Judge of this Bench and this was granted subject to just exceptions. Mr. Moti Sagar, however, urges that in view of the inexcusable delay and laches of the appellant no indulgence should be granted. He points out that there was in the beginning much delay in applying for copies of Mr. Justice Broadway's judgment and that for no reason the appellants wasted the period from the 6th to 12th November in waiting for these copies after they had been prepared. He next points out that, although process-fees were put in on the 21st November, proper addresses were not supplied till the 28th November with the result that Lala Hargopal was not served till the 10th December, Chhaju Ram till the 11th December and the Official Liquidator till the 8th January. He refers to Daulat Ram v. Woollen Mills Company Limited (1), Tara Chand v. Official Liquidators of the People's Bank of India Limited (2), Hira Lal v. Himalaya Glass Works Co. (3) and Bishen D.s v.

(1) 95 P. R. 1908; 165 P. W. R. 1908.
(2) 29 Ind. Cas. 265; 46 P. R. 1915; 90 P. L. R. 1915; 71 P. W. R. 1915.
(3) 10 Ind. Cas. 438; 176 P. L. R. 1911; 100 P. W. R. 1911.

Liquidator of the Doaba Bank Limited (4) as authorities that no concession should be allowed to the appellants who have shown such want of diligence. To these objections Mr. Santanam replies that the three weeks' period laid down in section 169 has been omitted from the present Act of 1913, an indication that the Legislature considered this period unduly short for the circumstances of this country, and he also urges that he was not to blame for some of the delay. He points out, for instance, with justice that no elaborate addresses were necessary for such well known persons as Lala Hargopal and Lala Chhaju Ram, and that the office, therefore, was not justified in keeping back the issue of notices for further particulars. He also states that his clients did not take the leading part in the proceeding before Mr. Justice Broadway in which the contributories were represented by Mr. Rustomji and that his clients, therefore, expected Mr. Rustomji to appeal. He finally contends that the circumstances in the authorities relied on by Mr. Moti Sagar were totally different from those in the present case. In Daulat Ram v. Woollen Mills Company Limited (1), for instance, the order of the District Judge was passed on the 26th February and the appeal was not instituted till the 17th May and notice of appeal was not issued till the 31st July. In Bishen Das v. Liquidator of the Doaba Bank Limited (4) no extension of time was even applied for. In Tara Chand v. Official Liquidators of the People's Bank of India, Limited (2) the order of the District Judge was passed on the 21st August 1914 and the appeal was not filed till the 5th October and process-fees for issue of the necessary notices were not paid till the 5th January. We agree with Mr. Santanam that the present case does not show any marked want of diligence and we, therefore, overrule his objection and hold that the appeal is properly instituted.

As for the merits of the appeal, Mr. Justice Broadway's decision was largely based upon the assumption that the Banks in question have now become solvent companies as their creditors have been paid off in full. He referred to many authorities that in such a case such creditors could claim interest accruing after the date of the winding-up order. Mr. Santanam opened his arguments by strongly contesting the view that the Banks in question were now solvent companies. Solvency meant a power to discharge all liabilities. He contended that in this view neither Bank was yet in a position to discharge all its liabilities and pointed out that they have only arrived at their present position owing to the delay in liquidation and from interest accrued on moneys received and from calls on shares realised from contributories. We are not impressed by this argument and have no difficulty in agreeing with Mr. Justice Broadway that the Banks in question, having paid off their liabilities which existed at the date of the winding-up order, have become solvent. This is the criterion of solvency which has been accepted in all English authorities and Mr. Santanam is unable to refer to any authority to the contrary.

Mr. Santanam next urged that under section 147 of the Indian Companies Act of 1882 the assets of a company could only be applied in discharge of its liabilities existing at the date of the said order, i. e., the winding-up order. He laid much stress upon the words existing at the date of the said order, and pointed out that these words did not appear in the English Companies Acts and had been omitted from the Indian Act VII of 1913. He further contested the view taken by Mr. Justice Broadway that any of the ordinary bankruptcy rules could be applied to companies in liquidation. He pointed out that a special provision had now been made in the Act of 1913 in section 229 and that in the same way in English law bankruptcy rules had been made applicable to companies by the Judicature Act of 1875. On this point again we have no difficulty in agreeing with the decision of Mr. Justice Broadway. Even before the passing of the Judicature Act of 875 English Courts applied certain rules of bankruptcy to the case of companies in liquidation. The leading case on this point is in Humber Ironworks and Shipbuilding Company, In re; Warrant Finance Company, Ex parte, (5), in which it was held that in the case of there being a surplus creditors could claim subsequent interest. This decision in no way conflicted with previous English decisions and the Judicature Act of 1875 was not rendered necessary by this judgment. The same rule has been followed in other judgments. There are two recent decisions, Duncan & Co., In re (6) and Whitaker, In re, Whitaker v. Palmer (7), is also the unanimous opinion to the same effect of all the leading authorities on Company Law, see for instance Volume V, "Halsbury's Laws of England," page 512, "Lindley on Companies," page 1009, "Buckley on Company Law," page 474, 9th Edition, "Stirbel on Company Law," page 122?, and others. Indian Courts also have followed the same rule and applied insolvency law to such cases in judgments quoted by Mr. Justice Broadway. The judgments [Ram Saran Das v. Hasheshar Nath (8), Thomas Pereira, In re (9) and Mohammad Mahmud Shah, In re (10)] are specially applicable. We consider, therefore, that the trial Court was undoubtedly correct in applying ordinary insolvency rules to this case. The words "existing at the date of the said order" from which Mr. Santanam has attempted to derive advantage appear, as a matter of fact, to have been hardly necessary. They did not exist in the English Act of 1862, but it was always taken for granted that the liabilities to be discharged were those existing at the time when the winding-up order was made, see for instance General Rolling Stock Company, In re; Joint Stock Discount Company's Claim, Ex parte (11). There is no force in our opinion in the argument that the inclusion of these words in the Indian Act in any way detracts from the value of English decisions.

(4) 31 Ind. Cas. 725; 42 P. L. R. 1916; 5 P. W. R. 1916.

(5) (1869) 4 Ch. Ap. 643; 38 L. J. Ch. 712; 20 L. T. 859; 17 W. R. 780.

For the above reasons we agree with the judgment of the trial Court and dismiss the appeal.

Mr. Ragunath Sahai on behalf of Lala Harkishen Lal as a creditor of the Bank complained that the order of the trial Court was defective, inasmuch as it did not fix the rate of interest to be paid to the creditors. This matter, however, as we understand the judgment appealed against, has not yet been considered by the trial Court and we are not, therefore, in a position to deal with the question involved. The prayer for a uniform rate of interest can be made to Mr. Justice Broadway. We dismiss the cross-objection. Appellants will receive no costs for this appeal. Respondent will receive their costs. Rs. 300 Pleader's fee to be paid out of the assets.

Addendum to our judgments in Civil Appeal No. 2252 of 1919 and 311 of 1920.

It has been brought to our notice by Counsel for the respondent creditors that in fixing their fees at Rs. 300 and 100 respectively, we overlooked the facts that the representatives of the creditors had taken formal orders of the Court to engage Counsel and to pay their fees from the assets of the Bank. It has also been brought to our notice that the liquidation Court allowed Mr. Moti Sagar Rs. 750 before it and similarly allowed Mr. Balwant Rai Rs. 150. Further there is a clerical error in our judgments by which Counsel in the Amritsar Bank case has been allowed Rs. 300 while Counsel in the far more important People's Bank case has been allowed only Rs. 100. These being the circumstances, we think it right to amend our order with regard to costs and allow Counsel the same fees as they received before Mr. Justice Broadway. In making this amendment to our judgments we did not think it necessary to call upon the opposite party, the contributories, as they are in no way interested. These costs will be paid out of the assets.

Appeal dismissed.

(6) (1905) 1 Ch. D. 307; 74 L. J. Ch. 188; 92 L. T. 108; 53 W. R. 299; 12 Manson 38.
(7) (1904) 1 Ch. D. 299; 73 L. J. Ch. 166; 90 L. T. 277.
(8) 55 P. W. R 1907.
(9) 1 M. H C R 217.
(10) 18 C. 66; 6 Ind. Dec. (N s) 541.
(11) (1872) 7 Ch. Ap. 646 at p. 649; 41 L. J. Ch. 732; 27 L. T. 88; 20 W. R. 762.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.

FIRST APPEAL FROM ORDER No. 68 OF 1919.

April 9, 1920.

Present:—Mr. Justice Tudball and Mr. Justice Rafique.

RADHA KISHEN—DEFENDANT—APPELLANT

versus

GULZARI LAL—PLAINTIFF—RESPONDENT.

Custom—Pre-emption—Village confiscated by Government and held for 21 years—Grant to other persons—Wajib-ul-arz, entry in, not stating facts, value of.

In 1857, at the time of the Mutiny, a village was confiscated by Government, who held it for twenty-one years and then gave it in grant to persons other than the original proprietors; one year after this, a wajib-ul-arz was prepared but it did not state the actual facts. In a suit for pre-emption an entry in the wajib-ul-arz was relied on to prove the existence of a custom of pre-emption:

Held, that inasmuch as the wajib-ul-arz did not state the actual facts, the entry was no proof of the existence of the custom of pre-emption, but that it was merely a record of the wishes of the Zemindars.

Appeal against the order of the Subordinate Judge, Badaun, dated the 28th March 1919.

Mr. Lakshmi Narain, for the Appellant.

The Hon'ble Mr. N. P. Asthana, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—This is a defendant's appeal arising out of a suit for pre emption. The Court of first instance dismissed the suit on the ground that the custom did not exist. The lower Appellate Court set aside that decision and held that the custom was established and remanded the suit for decision on the other points. To prove the custom the plaintiff produced a wajib ul arz for 1272 Fasli. To rebut the evidence contained therein the defendant produced a copy of the halat dehi. The Court of first instance held that the circumstances set forth in the halat dehi showed clearly that no custom of pre emption could possibly have existed in this village. The lower Appellate Court thinks that these circumstances are insufficient to rebut the entry in the wajib-ul arz of 1272. Apparently the lower Appellate Court overlooked one of the facts clearly set forth in the halat dehi. That is that in the year 1250 Fasli, i.e., at the time of the Mutiny, this village was confiscated and it was held at least for twenty one years by Government before it gave it in grant to certain other persons. It was only one year after this that the wajib-ul-arz of 1272 Fasli was drawn up. This circumstance alone is sufficient to show that no custom could possibly have existed, for there was no proprietary body in existence at all for at least twenty-one years. This is another of those instances in which clearly the wishes of the Zamindar have been set forth and not the actual facts. No custom could possibly have been in existence in 1272 Fasli. We think that the Court below was in error. We set aside the order of the Court below and restore the decree of the Court of first instance. The appellant will have his costs in all Courts.

Order set aside.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

CIVIL MISCELLANEOUS PETITION No. 187 OF 1920.

January 28, 1920.

Present:—Sir John Wallis, KT., Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Krishnan.

T. AMINUDEEN SAHIB—RESPONDENT No. 6 IN A. No. 176 OF 1919—PETITIONER

versus

PYARI BI AND ANOTHER, MINORS, BY GUARDIAN MAHOMED ABDUL AZIZ BATCHA SAHIB—APPELLANTS IN A. No. 176 OF 1919—RESPONDENTS.

Limitation Act (IX of 1908), s. 12—Time requisite for obtaining copy—Application for copy dismissed for default—Copy of decree obtained by party other than appellant—Appellant, whether entitled to deduction of time for obtaining copy.

Inasmuch as the law does not require that the copy of a decree accompanying a memorandum of appeal should have been obtained by the appellant himself, the provisions of section 12 of the Limitation Act would apply where a copy of the decree appealed against was obtained by another person. [p. 74, col. 2.]

Where, therefore, an appellant applied for a copy of a decree, but his application was dismissed in default of paying the necessary fees, and he presented an appeal accompanied by a copy of the decree obtained by another person:

RAM DAS v. ABBAS.

Held, that, under section 12 of the Limitation Act, he was entitled to an exclusion of the time occupied in obtaining the copy in computing the period prescribed for the appeal.

Petition praying that, in the circumstances stated in the affidavit filed therewith, the High Court will be pleased to dismiss with costs Appeal No. 176 of 1919, preferred to the High Court against the decree of the Court of the Temporary Subordinate Judge, Vellore, in Original Suit No. 18 of 1917 (Original Suit No. 45 of 1916 on the file of the Sub-Court of North Arcot).

FACTS appear from the judgment.

Mr. L. A. Govindaraghava Aiyar, for the Petitioners, raised the objection that the Appeal No. 176 of 1919 was barred. The appellant's application for copy of the decree appealed against was dismissed for default of payment of copying charges. He filed the appeal with a copy of the decree obtained by another party. He is not entitled to a deduction of time taken by that party in obtaining the copy. See Ramamurthi Aiyar v. Subramania Aiyar (1). If that period is not taken into account, the appeal is out of time.

Mr. G. Krishnasami Aiyar, for the Respondent.—The view taken in Ramamurthi Aiyar v. Subramania Aiyar (1) is wrong and is not warranted by the provisions of Order XLI, rule 1, Civil Procedure Code, which must be read with section 12 of the Limitation Act. There is no restriction on the copy of the decree which should accompany the appeal memorandum in the Code. There is no express provision that the decree should have been obtained on the appellant's application. And no such restriction need be imported into section 12 of the Limitation Act. The view of the Allahabad High Court in Ram Kishan Shastri v. Kashi Bai (2) is sounder.

ORDER.—This case raises a question as to the meaning of the words "time requisite for obtaining a copy of the decree appealed from" in section 12 (2) of the Limitation Act, which provides for the exclusion of such time in computing the period of limitation prescribed for the appeal. The appellant in this case applied within the prescribed period for a copy of the decree but allowed the application to be dismissed for non-payment of the copying charges. He subsequently filed the appeal together with a copy of the decree which had been obtained by another party, and claimed a deduction under the section of the time taken in obtaining such a copy. It was held in Ramamurthi Aiyar v. Subramania Aiyar (1) that he was not entitled to the deduction, but the Allahabad High Court in Ram Kishan Shastri v. Kashi Bai (2) dissented from this ruling for which no reasons are given, and we are unable to follow it. As has often been pointed out, this and other sections of the Limitation Act must be read together with the corresponding provisions of the Civil Procedure Code. If we so read them, it is clear that the copy of the decree appealed from which is mentioned in the section is the copy of the decree appealed from which has to accompany the memorandum of appeal under Order XLI, rule 1 (formerly section 541), Civil Procedure Code. The Code does not require that the copy of the decree accompanying the memorandum should have been obtained on the application of the appellant himself, and there are no grounds for importing this restriction into section 12 of the Limitation Act. The appellant was in order when he presented a copy obtained by another party with his memorandum and was entitled under the section to the deduction claimed. We must, therefore, overrule the objection that the appeal is out of time.

Petition dismissed.

M. C. P.

(1) 12 M. L. J. 385.
(2) 29 A. 264; A. W. N. (1907) 67; 4 A. L. J. 152.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

FIRST CIVIL APPEAL No. 189 OF 1917.
April 16, 1920.
Present:—Mr. Justice Shadi Lal and Mr. Justice Broadway.

RAM DAS—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT
versus
ABBAS AND ANOTHER—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Contract Act (IX of 1872), s. 16—Undue influence

RAM DAS v. ABBAS.

—Burden of proof—Unconscionable bargain—Test—Compound interest, agreement to pay, effect of.

An agreement to pay interest at a stipulated rate does not become unconscionable merely because there is a stipulation to pay compound interest at the same rate in the event of there being a default in the payment of the simple interest agreed upon. [p. 76, col. 1.]

There is nothing inherently wrong or oppressive in a lender's securing for himself compound interest after the borrower has for a considerable time neglected to pay the debt or the interest accruing due upon it which he has contracted to pay. It is the state of affairs at the time when the bargain was struck that has to be considered, and not the ultimate claim made. [p. 76, col. 1.]

First appeal from the decree of the Senior Subordinate Judge, Attock at Campbellpur, dated the 19th October 1916.

Mr. B. R. Puri, for the Appellant.

Mr. Feroze-ud-Din Ahmad, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—The suit giving rise to this appeal was instituted by Ram Das, son of Sona Shah, under the following circumstances:— On the 12th June 1899 Abbas and Ghulam Husain, two Awans of Mauza Saghar in the Tallagang Tahsil, executed a mortgage deed in favour of Ram Das under which they mortgaged a fourth share in certain lands belonging to them in lieu of Rs. 500. The mortgagors retained possession and could redeem at any time within 12 years. The interest payable was fixed at Rs. 1-1 per cent. per mensem to be paid yearly and in default of the due payment of this interest compound interest was payable thereon at the same rate.

A few months later, on the 24th February 1900, the same mortgagors executed a second mortgage deed of the same property in lieu of Rs. 200. The conditions as to interest were the same, the rate, however, being Rs. 2-1 per cent. per mensem instead of Rs. 1-1. The mortgagors having failed to redeem the property within the prescribed period of 12 years, Ram Das sued for possession and was granted a decree which, however, has not been executed.

On the 16th August 1915 the said mortgagors filed an application under section 4 of Act XI of 1913 in the Court of the Assistant Collector, Pindigheb, claiming to be entitled to redeem the property on payment of Rs. 500, the principal sum due on the two mortgage-deeds. The Assistant Collector came to the conclusion that the mortgagors should not be made to pay the interest stipulated for in the said deeds, but directed that they were entitled to redeem both mortgagees on payment of Rs. 500 plus Rs. 665-5, or a total of Rs. 1,165-5, to be paid within a month. Ram Das, therefore, brought this suit for a declaration that the mortgagors, Abbas and Ghulam Husain, were not entitled to redeem the land in question without payment of the interest and compound interest due under the said mortgages. He claimed a sum of Rs. 8,559-7-3 in addition to the Rs. 1,165-5 mentioned above.

The mortgagors defendants pleaded (1) that the interest was not a charge on the property and (2) that the stipulation to pay compound interest was penal and had been made through undue influence. The learned Subordinate Judge held that the interest was a charge on the property and that the stipulation as to compound interest was not penal but that "the rate was induced by undue influence," and accordingly granted the plaintiff a decree declaring him "entitled to the principal sum due on the two deeds of hypothecation dated the 12th June 1899 and the 24th February 1900, and simple interest at Rs. 1-1 per cent per mensem from the date of the execution of the deeds until redemption or until the date when plaintiff takes over possession under the decree in his favour, whichever date is earlier". Against this decree Ram Das has preferred this appeal through Mr. B.R. Puri, and the only point for determination is whether the agreed rate of interest (Rs. 1-1 per cent.) was induced by undue influence. It should be noted that the plaintiff is claiming interest at the rate of Rs. 1-1 per cent. per mensem in respect of both the mortgages, though in the second mortgage the rate agreed on was Rs. 2 1 per cent. per mensem. Now, the mortgagors have not gone into the witness box and there is no statement as to the nature of the influence that was brought to bear and induced them to agree to pay interest at the rate fixed, and also to pay compound interest in default. The learned Subordinate Judge has based his decision on the fact that the plaintiff had other dealings with the mortgagors and that the consideration for the two mortgages was in part previous indebtedness. He conceded that the initial onus lay on the mortgagors to prove undue influence, but he held that having regard to illustration (c) to section 16 of the Indian Contract Act the onus had shifted to the plaintiff-appellant (1) because of the previous dealing and (2) because of the unconscionable nature of the bargain. The evidence on the record consists of the statements of the plaintiff himself and Kirpa Ram, a petition-writer, who drew up the two mortgages. They agree in stating that no undue influence was used. As has been stated above, neither of the mortgagors has stated what the nature of that "influence" was either in their pleas or in the witness box. The fact that the mortgagee had other dealings with the mortgagors is one that undoubtedly had a bearing on the question, as is clear from illustration (c) to section 16 of the Indian Contract Act, but in order to bring this case within the purview of that illustration it must also be found that the bargain " appear to be unconscionable." This matter was considered by their Lordships of the Privy Council in a case reported as Balla Mul v. Ahad Shah (1), where it was held that there was nothing inherently wrong or oppressive in a lender's securing for himself compound interest after the borrower had for a considerable time neglected to pay the debt he owed or the interest accruing due upon it which he had contracted to pay. It is the state of affairs at the time when the bargain was struck that has to be considered, and not the ultimate claim made. In the present case, the rate of interest in the first mortgage, viz, Rs. 12-12 0 per cent. per annum, was not extortionate. The interest agreed upon in the second mortgage was, of course, double but even then it was about six per cent. less than the interest claimed in Balla Mal v. Ahad Shah (1) and, as pointed out above, the plaintiff in his plaint is only claiming the lesser rate under both the mortgages. We are unable to see that an agreement to pay interest at the rate of Rs. 12-12 0 per cent. per annum is unconscionable nor can such an agreement became so merely because there is a stipulation to pay compound interest at the same rate in the event of there being a default in the payment of the simple interest agreed upon. This being the case, we are of opinion that the plaintiff was entitled to the declaration prayed for by him and that the defendants-respondents are liable to pay the whole of the interest due as a condition precedent to the redemption of the land mortgaged.

We accordingly accept this appeal and give the plaintiff a decree declaring that the two mortgages are redeemable only on payment of Rs. 1,165-5-0 plus Rs. 8,559 7-3 in all The appellant will be entitled to his costs throughout.

Appeal accepted.

(1) 48 Ind. Cas. 1; 124 P. R. 1918; 35 M. L. J. 614; 16 A. L. J. 905; 23 C. W. N. 233; 25 M. L. T. 55; 180 P. W. R. 1918; 29 C. L. J. 165; 1 U. P. L. R. (P. C.) 25; 21 Bom. L. R. 558 (P. C).

SIND JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

MISCELLANEOUS APPEAL No. 35 OF 1918.

December 23, 1918.

Present:—Mr. Fawcett, J. C., and Mr. Kincaid, A. J. C.

Haji ABDULLAH HAROON—APPELLANT

versus

MESSRS. E. D. SASSOON AND CO.—RESPONDENTS.

Arbitration Act (IX of 1899), s. 19—Agreement to refer dispute to arbitration—Suit, institution of—Stay of suit—Duty of Court—Onus—Questions of law and fact, competency of arbitrators to decide—"Merchant," meaning of—Broker, whether merchant.

Where there is an agreement to refer matters in dispute to arbitration, and one of the parties institutes a suit relating to those matters, it is the prima facie duty of the Court, on receiving an application under section 19 of the Arbitration Act, to stay the suit, the onus being on the plaintiff to show why he should not be bound by his agreement to refer to arbitration. [p. 77, col. 1; p. 79, col. 2; p. 80, col. 1.]

Arbitrators are competent to decide questions of law and fact; the fact that a difficult question of law is involved is not ordinarily a good ground for refusing to stay a suit. [p. 77, col. 2.]

The term "merchant" according to Karachi mercantile usage is synonymous with a member of the mercantile community of Karachi and covers the case of brokers as well as those dealing in the actual sale and purchase of goods. [p. 79, col. 1.]

Appeal from the order of Mr. Kemp, Additional Judicial Commissioner, Sind.

Mr. Rupchand Bilaram, for the Appellant.

Mr. Dipchand Chandumal, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.

FAWCETT, J. C.—This is an appeal from an order under section 19 of the Indian Arbitration Act, staying a suit which had been brought by the appellant Haji Abdullah Haroon against the respondents Messrs. E. D. Sassoon and Co. On the 22nd of June 1917 the parties entered into a contract by which the appellant agreed to purchase from the respondents some 1300 tons of Java sugar of various shipments between the months of July and December 1917. The sugar (except a small quantity) had not as a matter of fact arrived at Karachi in January 1918, and a dispute then arose between the parties as to whether the respondents had committed a breach of contract in failing to deliver this sugar or whether on the other hand the appellant was bound to wait till the expected arrival of the sugar in February or later. The communications between the parties about this dispute did not result in any settlement of it, and on the 31st of January 1918 the respondents wrote to the appellant saying that as no useful purpose would be served by carrying on the discussion any further, they named Mr. Ellinger of Messrs. Ellinger Mohatta and Co. as arbitrator on their behalf and called upon the appellant to name a European merchant as arbitrator on his behalf within seven days from receipt of their letter. This was in accordance with the arbitration clause in the contract, by which disputes of whatever nature arising out of the contract were to be referred to the arbitration of two European merchants in Karachi one to be chosen by each party, with a proviso that such European merchants should either be themselves personally members of the Karachi Chamber of Commerce or else be representatives or assistants of firms which are members of the Karachi Chamber of Commerce. The appellant did not, however, nominate an arbitrator and on the 7th of February 1918 instituted his suit against the respondents claiming damages for breach of contract.

I take it as now settled law, so far as this Province is concerned, that in view of this agreement to refer to arbitration there was a prima facie duty of the Court below to stay the suit and that the onus is on the plaintiff to show why he should not be bound by his agreement to refer to arbitration. Cf. Kodumal v. Volkart Bros. (1). The objections, he has raised, have all been considered in the judgment of the Court below and rejected, and we have now to determine whether the view taken by the learned Judge is sustainable or not.

The first objection that I shall consider is the one that the matters in suit involve difficult questions of law which should more properly be decided by Courts of law than by two arbitrators of the kind who are to be appointed under the arbitration clause. In considering this objection the Court must necessarily treat with great respect the decision of another Bench in the case of Kodumal v. Volkart Bros. (1), which has already been referred to, where the subject-matter of the suit was of a similar nature to the subject-matter of the suit now under discussion. In that decision it was held that the arbitrators are competent to decide questions of law and fact and the fact that a difficult question of law is involved is not ordinarily a good ground for refusing stay. It was also held in that judgment that the questions of law arising in that case were not such as the arbitrators would be incompetent to decide. I understand that the contract in that case was similar to the contract in this case, and it follows that the ruling is one which must press heavily on this Court in deciding this particular case.

Mr. Rupchand for the appellant has, however, disputed the correctness of that decision and I must, therefore, notice the arguments he has addressed to us. I think his main point is the one which is stated in paragraph 10 of the memorandum of appeal. There it is said that the learned Judge has erred in holding that because under the Indian Arbitration Act an arbitrator cannot be compelled to state a case, the Courts in India would not stay a case where stay on similar grounds would be granted in England, and it is urged that in the absence of such a safeguard there is a greater obligation on Indian Courts to exercise their discretion in favour of refusing stay in India than there is in England. Mr. Rupchand, in my opinion, has considerably weakened the force of his contention by going on to argue that the Court could interfere with an award on the ground that the arbitrator had come to an erroneous decision on a point of law. I think he is very bold in putting forward such a contention in the face of the Privy Council decision in Ghulam Khan v.

(1) 48 Ind. Cas. 434; 12 S. L. R. 34.

Muhammad Hassan (2), where it was laid down that arbitrators are judges of law as well as judges of fact and an error in law certainly does not vitiate an award. It was also stated that the time had long gone by since the English Courts showed any disposition to sit as Courts of Appeal on awards in respect of matters of fact or matters of law. Inspite of this Mr. Rupchand attempted to support his argument by reference to various decisions in the English Courts. I do not, however, propose to go into a detailed consideration of these cases, because the point raised is not one which we have to decide in this case. I will content myself with referring to the recent decision in Madepalli Venkataswami v. Madepalli Suramma (3), where Mr. Justice Seshagiri Aiyar reviewed most of these particular decisions and came to the conclusion that there is only one case which supports the contention, viz., Landauer v. Asser (4), and which stands by itself. It is also pointed out that the case of British Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Company, Limited v. Underground Electric Railways Company of London, Limited (5), on which Mr. Rupchand strongly relied, is quite distinguishable. In my opinion the most that can be said is that the Court may interfere with an award in cases of the kind specified in paragraph 14 of Schedule II of the Civil Procedure Code, namely, where an objection as to the illegality of the award is apparent on the face of it. It was by holding that there was such an objection that the Court interfered in the case last cited. It is also to be remarked that paragraph 12 of the Code does not authorise the Court to set aside an award on such a ground but merely to remit the award for reconsideration. It would be absurd to say that an arbitrator any more than a Judge is guilty of misconduct because he had erroneously decided a point of law. But coming back to the original point under discussion, I am not prepared to accept the view that a dispute merely because it raises difficult or complicated questions of law is one that should necessarily be taken out of the hands of arbitrators and preferentially decided by the Court. As I have already mentioned, that contention has been overruled in Kodumal v. Volkart Bros. (1) and I see no sufficient reason to differ. I think that having regard to the whole object of arbitration very much more weight must be attached to the desirability of obtaining a speedy and final decision in trade disputes than to that of obtaining a nice adjudication of any question of law that may be raised in the dispute. In mercantile disputes common sense and business experience may enable a merchant to decide such questions just as well as a lawyer; and arbitrators have the power to invoke the assistance of the Court for a decision of a question of law, if they so desire. In the present case the contract contains specific provisions which at any rate prima facie cover the main point in dispute and I can see no sufficient reason why the two arbitrators should not be able to decide correctly whether those provisions do or do not justify the respondents' failure to deliver in terms of the contract. Some cases have been cited by Mr. Rupchand where different judicial opinions have been given on somewhat similar disputes, but in the latest one of these, viz., Blackburn Bobbin Co., Ltd. v. Allen & Sons Ltd. (6) it appears that there was no force majeure clause such as is contained in this contract.

The next objection that has been urged is that when the contract was signed, it was never in the contemplation of the parties that the existing state of affairs would arise so that all the European sugar importing firms are interested on one side and all the Indian purchasers of sugar are interested on the other. I do not myself think that there is any real force in the objection. The contract was entered into in June 1917 after the war had been going on for nearly three years, and I think it is absurd to say that the parties could not have contemplated that difficulties might arise from the requisition of ships or other causes of a similar kind con-

(2) 29 C. 167; 6 C. W. N. 226; 29 I. A. 51; 12 M. L. J. 77; 4 Bom. L. R. 161; 8 Sar. P. C. J. 154; 25 P. R. 1902 (P. C.).

(3) 45 Ind. Cas. 644; 41 M. 1022; 34 M. L. J. 323; 24 M. L. T. 60; 8 L. W. 202; (1918) M. W. N. 482.

(4) (1905) 2 K. B. 184; 74 L. J. K. B. 659; 93 L. T. 20; 53 W. R. 534; 10 Com. Cas. 265; 21 T. L. R. 429.

(5) (1912) A. C. 673; 81 L. J. K. B. 1132; 107 L. T. 25; 56 S. J. 734.

(6) (1918) 1 K. B. 540; 118 L. T. 222; 87 L. J. K. B. 1085.

nected with the war. I also do not think that there is any substance in the contention that the parties could not have contemplated the interest of sellers and purchasers of Java sugar being on different sides. I think I am correct in saying that there have been trade disputes in which there have been such divided interests, for instance, in regard to the question of the liability of war risk insurance. We have in this connection to bear in mind the fact that the arbitration clause is expressed in the widest terms and requires disputes of whatever nature arising out of the contract to be referred to arbitration.

The third objection which has been raised is that for one reason or another there are no sufficient European merchants members of the Karachi Chamber of Commerce available to the appellant for selection of his arbitrator. This is a point which has been gone into fully in the lower Court's judgment, and I am satisfied that there are no sufficient objections in the case of the six firms which are specifically mentioned as available in that judgment as well as in the case of the firm of Samuel Fitz and Company. Nor do I think that there is any real substance in the objection of the appellant to the representatives of Messrs. Anderson and Company and Messrs. Cooper and Company on the ground that they are brokers and not merchants. The word 'merchant' has varied in meaning very considerably from time to time, for instance, in former days it used to be restricted to persons trading beyond the sea, and it is a term the meaning of which in a contract depends a good deal on the particular usage of the place of contract. Thus Bouvier's Law Dictionary shows that it has been held in America to include a hotel keeper, a banker, a saloon keeper, a commercial traveller, a theatrical manager and a speculator in stocks. It seems to me clear that in this particular contract the word 'merchant' is meant to be synonymous with a member of the mercantile community of Karachi which would cover the case of brokers as well as those dealing in the actual sale and purchase of goods. This is in accordance with past practice, under which the representatives of those firms have been frequent arbitrators and this is, I think, a case where such usage can be legitimately referred to (cf. Halsbury's Laws of England, Volume 10, Article 486 at page 264 and Article 791 at page 450). Also I can see no sufficient reason for saying that a firm like Messrs. Mackinon Mackenzie and Co., who are agents of a shipping line, are not merchants. In support of this I can cite Bouvier's Law Dictionary, which shows that in America the superintendent and treasurer of a steam boat corporation has been held to be a merchant.

I think, therefore, there are no sufficient grounds for interfering with the discretion of the lower Court and would accordingly dismiss this appeal with costs.

KINCAID, A. J. C.—I have little to add to the judgment of the learned Judicial Commissioner. The parties in this case entered into an agreement that they would refer "disputes of whatever nature arising out of the contract to the arbitration of two European merchants in Karachi, one to be chosen by each party, whose decision shall be final and binding on the parties," but should the two arbitrators be unable to agree, they shall refer the case to an umpire whose decision should be final. There was a further provision that the European merchants who would be appointed to act as arbitrators should either be themselves personally members of the Karachi Chamber of Commerce or else be representatives or assistants of firms who were members of the Karachi Chamber of Commerce. Disputes have now arisen which have been given in detail in the judgment of the learned Judicial Commissioner, and the question before the Court is whether the suit should be stayed so that the parties should be able to submit their disputes to the arbitration of two European merchants as laid down in their contract of the 22nd of June 1917. The lower Court held that the matters in dispute should be referred to arbitration. Against this decision the present appeal has been lodged by Haji Abdullah Haroon to this Court.

In my opinion it is of the utmost importance that when two parties agree to refer their disputes to arbitration, they should be held bound by their agreement. In this view I am supported by the case of Kodumal v. Volkart Bros. (1), where Pratt, J. C., observed: "It is a prima facie duty of the Court to stay a suit and the onus is on the plaintiff to show why he should not be bound by his agreement to refer to arbitration." The reason why such contracts are entered into by the parties is that members of the mercantile community have learnt by bitter experience to avoid the waste of time and money often incurred by litigation; and Mr. A. Sassoon, Manager of Messrs. Sassoon and Co., Ld., in his affidavit (page 2 of the typed book) says: "to the best of my information and belief no European firm in Karachi undertakes or would undertake import business in Karachi on the terms contained in the indent forms which they use, unless the indent form contained a binding submission that all the disputes would be referred to the arbitration of two European merchants of Karachi. If the indent did not contain a submission of all disputes to arbitration my firm and I believe all other European firms would only do this import (including sugar) business on very much stricter terms than those contained in the indents now in use, the indents would have to be much more elaborate and detailed and would bind the buyers much more closely." In other words, lightly to set aside agreements to refer disputes to arbitration would cramp commerce. The learned Pleader for the appellant, however, has urged that in this case it is impossible for his client to refer the dispute between him and Messrs. Sassoon and Co. to arbitrators, as they are not available either because they are interested or refuse to arbitrate and do not come within the terms "European merchant." I shall shortly examine this point.

The appellant has first of all mentioned 12 firms who are sugar men and are interested in sugar disputes. But the 12th, Messrs. Mackinon Mackenzie and Co., do no business in sugar. Another, Messrs. Fleming Shaw and Co., have not imported any sugar since 1917. There is no reason why the representatives of these firms should not be appointed as arbitrators. The learned Judicial Commissioner has shown that Messrs. Mackinon Mackenzie should be considered as merchants. I do not wish to recapitulate his reasons but I agree that Messrs. Mackinon Mackenzie and Co. do come within the terms of "European merchant." I see no reason why the manager of that firm should not be nominated as an arbitrator.

The next class mentioned by the appellants consists of 8 firms. These, I admit, do not come within the definition of the word 'European' firms, for they are Indian firms. I need not refer to them in my remarks. The next class contains 10 more members. Of these the Bombay Steam Navigation Co., Ltd, who are shipping agents, might certainly be included within the category of "European merchants." The next class consists of five banks. They do come within the category of merchants, but I understand that by the rules of the Banks the staff are not allowed to act as arbitrators. Then comes a class of two brokers. The other side contends that they do not fall within the category of merchants, I, however, entirely agree with the learned Judicial Commissioner that a broker is a merchant. I see no reason why the appellant should not nominate an arbitrator out of this class. The two firms contain two gentlemen Mr. Nicholas and Mr. Price, who admittedly are gentlemen of great experience and probity. The next class includes 17 firms. Of these, it is said that No. 3 has been nominated by the respondents as their arbitrator and Nos. 2, 7, 8, 10, 11, 13 to 17 have refused to be arbitrators. No. 5 Messrs. Gaddum and Co. and No. 6 have not replied to the letter of appellants. No. 5 it is said to have ceased to exist. It is not, however, correct to say that Nos. 2, 7, 8, 10, 11, 13 to 17 are unwilling to act as arbitrators. Messrs. Gaddum and Co. (who are now called Messrs. Gill and Co.), the Bombay Co., Messrs. Lyon Lord and Co., Messrs. Steiners and Co., Ltd., have declared by their managers that they are willing.

As regards Messrs. Samuel Fite and Co., the learned Pleader for the appellant says that this firm are wine merchants. But I see no reason why the manager of such a firm should not be appointed as arbitrator to decide a sugar dispute.

It is thus clear that there are no less than 9 or 10 persons from whom the appellants are able to choose an arbitrator. In these circumstances the appellant's contention that it is impossible for his client to nominate an arbitrator falls to the ground. I, therefore, agree with the learned Judicial Commissioner in dismissing this appeal with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

JAMUNABAI v. JUHARMAL.

NAGPUR JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

FIRST CIVIL APPEAL No. 33 OF 1918.

November 25, 1919.

Present:—Sir Henry Drake-Brockman, Kt., J. C.

Musammat JAMUNABAI—APPELLANT

versus

JUHARMAL—RESPONDENT.

Hindu Law—Adoption—Jains—Adoption of married man, validity of—Religious ceremony, whether necessary—Giving and taking, whether essential.

Among Jains a married man can lawfully be adopted, adoption amongst Jains being a purely secular matter. [p. 83, col. 1.]

Manohar Lal v. Benarsi Das, 29 A. 495; 4 A. L. J. 407; A. W. N. (1907) 121, Asharfi Kunwar v. Rup Chand, 30 A. 197; 5 A. L. J. 200; A. W. N. 1908) 79, Rup Chand v. Jambu Parshad, 6 Ind. Cas. 272; 32 A. 247; 14 C. W. N. 545; 7 A. L. J. 312; 12 Bom. L. R. 402; 11 C. L. J. 454; 18 M. L. T. 3; 20 M. L. J 433; (1910) M. W. N. 432; 37 I. A. 93 (P. C.), followed.

No religious ceremonies are essential to the validity of an adoption among Jains, inasmuch as they do not believe in the Hindu doctrine of the spiritual efficacy of sons. But the secular ceremony of giving and taking cannot be dispensed with. [p. 83, cols. 1 & 2.]

Appeal against the decree of the Additional District Judge, Narsinghpur, in Civil Suit No. 53 of 1916, dated the 20th December 1917.

Dr. H. S. Gour, for the Appellant.

Messrs. M. Gupta and J. C. Ghosh, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—The parties to this litigation are Oswal Jains of the Sitambari sect and the relationship between them is indicated by the following table:—

KASTURCHAND

- Juharmal (defendant No. 1)
  - Bachhraj (defendant No. 2.)
  - Mohanlal (defendant No. 3)
  - Hirchand (defendant No. 4.)
- Hazarimal
  - Hansraj
  - Hamirmal
  - Tikaram (adopted by Khubchand.)
  - Motilal
  - Chunilal.
- Tulsiram.
- Pirthiraj
  - Jamna Bai (plaintiff.)
- Khubchand
  - Tikaram.

Bachhraj died shortly before the case was closed, leaving no representative except his co-defendants. It is common ground that the five sons of Kasturchand were separate from each other, that Pirthiraj's wife predeceased him and that Pirthiraj himself died on the 11th August 1916.

The plaint was filed on the 16th October 1916 by Jograj, the husband of the plaintiff, Jamna Bai, as her next friend, she being aged 12 years only. The suit was brought to recover the property listed in two schedules annexed to the plaint, schedule A relating to property left by Pirthiraj of which the plaintiff claimed to be his sole heir, and schedule B including only gold and silver ornaments said to be the plaintiff's own property which had been placed by Pirthiraj in the iron safe figuring in schedule A shortly after her marriage in 1914.

The defendants Juharmal, Bachhraj and Mohanlal filed one written statement and the defendant Hirchand another, but the two are identical in terms although drawn up by different Pleaders. The main contention in both is that Hirchand was adopted by Pirthiraj on the 25th June 1915, the wording employed being as follows:—

"On Jeth Sudhi 13 Sambat 1972=25th June 1915 Hirchand, defendant No. 4, was duly adopted by Pirthiraj and the necessary ceremonies were performed, but subsequently some of the relatives of the parties having objected to sign the entry in the panchayat bahi regarding the adoption, they and the other people who were present left the place. In order that there might be no hitch about the adoption, Pirthiraj executed a deed on the 2nd July 1915 with the advice of Mr. Maniklal Pleader and got it registered. Juharmal, defendant No. 1, father of Hirchand, attested the document as a token of his consent to the adoption. On Bhadon Sudhi 10 Sambat 1973=7th September 1916 after the death of Pirthiraj the caste ceremony of putting on the turban on the head of the adopted son Hirchand was performed and Jograj, plaintiff's husband and guardian, performed the arti ceremony of Hirchand and he thereby recognised that Hirchand was the adopted son of Pirthiraj."

It was admitted that Pirthiraj had an iron safe which is now deposited in the defendants' shop known as Juharmal Bachhraj, but it was denied that Pirthiraj kept any jewellery therein or that the defendants are in possession of any of the ornaments mentioned in the plaint's schedule B. Certain contentions regarding other items of the claim were raised which will be sufficiently apparent from the issues framed.

The plaintiff in an oral statement denied the alleged adoption. The genuineness of the document (Exhibit D-1) purporting to have been signed by Pirthiraj on the 2nd July 1915 was admitted, but it was said to do no more than lay down the terms under which Pirthiraj desired to adopt the defendant Hirchand. The ceremonies necessary to the validity of an adoption were said to be (1) giving and taking (2), putting a turban on the head of the adopted boy, (3) distribution of cocoanuts or sweets, and (4) giving a present to a Jain temple, and it was alleged that none of these were ever performed.

With regard to the adoption the following rejoinder was made for all the defendants jointly:—

"Gift and acceptance are the only necessary ceremonies in case of adoption. The other ceremonies are merely done to give publicity to the adoption. The giving and taking as also the ceremonies for publicity were performed."

The following issues were framed:—

"1 (a) Was Hirchand (defendant No. 4) adopted as a son by Pirthiraj?

(b) Was the adoption valid?

(c) What is the nature of the deed dated the 2nd July 1915 produced by the defendants?

2. (a) Was the deed dated the 2nd July 1915 executed by Pirthiraj intended to be his Will and does it operate as a Will?

(b) Is defendant No. 4 entitled to the estate left by Pirthiraj under the deed?

3. Was the rate of interest on the deposit of Rs. 1,800 enhanced to 10 annas per cent. per mensem from Kartik Sudhi 1 Sambat 1972=8th November 1915?

4. Was the rent of the portion of Pirthiraj's house leased to defendants enhanced to Rs. 90 a year from the same date?

5. Are the defendants or any of them in possession of the moveable properties, other than those admitted, included in list A; if so of what value?

6. Is plaintiff the owner of jewellery mentioned in list B and are defendants or any of them in possession of the same? What is the value of the jewellery so in possession of the defendants?

7. Did Pirthiraj withdraw Rs. 154-2-3 out of the deposit of Rs. 1,800 with defendants?

8. Did defendants spend Rs. 440-1-6 for the medical treatment and funeral expenses of Pirthiraj; and are they not liable for the sum so spent?

9. Are defendants liable to be ejected from the portion leased out to them by Pirthiraj?

10. What reliefs plaintiffs are entitled to and against whom?

The trial Judge held that Pirthiraj adopted Hirchand and that the adoption is valid according to Jain custom, giving and taking being the only essential ceremony. In view of the fact that Hirchand was about 20 years old and that Pirthiraj was suffering from leprosy, the omission to place Hirchand in Pirthiraj's lap was held to be immaterial, the symbolical, delivery consisting in the admission made by Pirthiraj and Juharmal in the presence of the panchas being regarded as sufficient. Exhibit D-1 was held to be a deed of adoption, not a Will, and Hirchand was declared to be entitled to take all Pirthiraj's property, that property, however, not including the ornaments mentioned in schedule A as these had been given by Pirthiraj to Jamna Bai. The plaintiff's allegations, that the rate of interest on Pirthiraj's deposit of Rs. 1,800 and the rent of so much of his house as had been leased to the defendants were increased with effect from Kartik Sudhi 1 Sambat 1972=8th November 1915, were found not proved. On the fifth issue the defendants were held not to be in possession of the utensils included in schedule A but of certain ornaments mentioned in the plaintiff's deposition taken on commission, and it was further held that she was the owner of those ornaments included in schedule B which she spoke of in that deposition. The total value of the ornaments to which the plaintiff was thus found entitled was put at Rs. 1,500. The Court also allowed as proper deductions from Pirthiraj's deposit (a) Rs. 154-2-3 withdrawn by Pirthiraj himself and (b) Rs. 440-1-6 spent in treating him during his last illness and in performing his obsequies. On the ninth issue the plaintiff's claim to eject the defendants from the premises mentioned in her schedule A was disallowed, the title to them being in the defendant Hirchand. The plaintiff thus obtained a decree for Rs. 1,500 with proportionate costs of the suit against the defendants Juharmal and Hirchand only, the rest of the claim being dismissed. The decree includes the following directions:—

"The defendants shall get from the plaintiff costs in proportion to that part of the claim which fails. The sum of Rs. 660 should be paid by the defendants to the plaintiff on account of costs of this suit and the plaintiff shall pay to the defendants costs amounting to Rs. 465-8-0."

The plaintiff has preferred this appeal and the defendants have filed cross-objections.

The fourth ground of appeal embodies the contention that Hirchand could not have been legally adopted, inasmuch as he was 25 years old, married and the father of a child when the alleged adoption took place. This, however, was not pressed at the hearing, It may now be taken as settled law that among Jains a married man can lawfully be adopted, adoption being amongst the Jains a purely secular institution. See Manohar Lal v. Benarsi Das (1), Asharfi Kunwar v. Rup Chand (2) and Rup Chand v. Jambu Parhsad (3), the last authority being the decision of the Privy Council on appeal in the second case.

That no religious ceremonies are essential to the validity of an adoption among Jains, inasmuch as they do not believe in the Hindu doctrine of the spiritual efficacy of sons, was laid down by Ismay, A. J. C., in Second Appeal No. 330 of 1895, where the following propositions were taken as admitting of no doubt:

"(1) The customs of the Jains, where they are relied upon, must be proved by evidence just as other special customs and usages varying the general law should be proved, and

(2) In the absence of proof the ordinary law must prevail."

The last proposition was based on the Privy Council decision in Chotay Lall v. Chunnoo Lall (4). That personal law of the Jains is the ordinary Hindu Law of the place where they are settled was laid down in Ambabai v. Govind (5), which is also authority for treating Oswal Jains as Vaishyas. It may, therefore, be safely said that the secular ceremony of giving and taking cannot be dispensed with.

The appellant's contentions include one to the effect that a physical gift and acceptance is essential and has not been proved. It is also contended that the tying of a turban on the head of the adopted boy is shown to be indispensable, but not to have been effected, and that the other ceremonies mentioned in her oral pleadings, namely, the distribution of cocoanuts and sweets and offering a gift to a Jain temple, are equally indispensable and are not proved.

The point that there was no actual corporal gift and acceptance of Hirchand does not, in my opinion, call for serious consideration. The actual placing of the adopted son in the lap of one of his adoptive parents cannot reasonably be regarded as essential to an actual gift of him. In Shoshinath Ghose v. Krishnasunderi Dasi (6) their Lordships of the Privy Council expressed the opinion that according to Hindu usage the giving and taking in adoption ought to take place by the father handing over the child to the adoptive mother, and the adoptive mother declaring that she accepts the child in adoption. In that case a widow

(1) 29 A. 495; 4 A. L. J. 407; A. W. N. (1907) 121.
(2) 30 A. 197; 5 A. L. J. 200; A. W. N. (1908) 79.
(3) 6 Ind. Cas. 272; 32 A. 247; 14 C. W. N. 545; 7 A. L. J. 349; 12 Bom. L. R. 402; 11 C. L J. 454; 8 M. L. T. 3; 20 M. L. J. 439; (1910) M. W N. 432; 37 I. A. 93 (P. C.).

(4) 4 C. 744; 3 C. L. R. 465; 6 I. A. 15; 3 Sar. P. C. J. 880; 3 Suth. P. C. J. 572; 3 Ind. Jur. 175; 2 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 473.
(5) 23 B. 257; 12 Ind. Dec (N. S) 171.
(6) 6 C. 381; 7 I. A. 250; 7 C. L. R. 313; 4 Sar. P. C. J. 191; 3 Shome L. R. 231; 3 Suth. P. C. J. 812; 4 Ind. Jur. 589; 2 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 248.

was said to be the adoptive parent. In Bireswar Mukerji v. Ardha Chander Roy (7) the Judicial Committee accepted the necessity for giving and taking but gave no indication of the precise way in which these acts would be performed, and it appears that the latest adoption set up was treated as invalid because there was no giver, the natural mother having been mentally incapable when the ceremony relied upon was performed. Sir Thomas Strange in his Elements of Hindu Law at page 83 of the first edition lays down that there must be gift and acceptance manifested by some overt act, but no examples of adequately overt acts are given. In the Dattaka Mimansa, section 5, paragraph 15, (page 590 of Stokes' Hindu Law Books, 1865) taking the boy by both hands, kissing him on the forehead and adorning him with clothes are mentioned, and in paragraph 21 the boy is required to be seated in the middle of the house. The same acts are mentioned in paragraphs 7 and 9, section 2, of the Dattaka Chandrika (page 638 of Stokes' Hindu Law Books). Pirthiraj was a leper and it seems clear that Pirthiraj's wife was already dead, for she is not mentioned in the bahi of the panchayat which records what happened on the 25th June 1915 in connection with Hirchand's adoption, while Exhibit D 2, bearing date a week later, expressly refers to her as no longer alive. The account in the bahi leaves no room for doubt that the express assent of Juharmal and his wife to give and that of Pirthiraj to take Hirchand as also Hirchand's assent to being adopted were taken and that cocoa-nuts were then distributed in accordance with the caste custom. There is also evidence which I see no reason to disbelieve that after the aforesaid declarations Hirchand was made to sit on a wooden stool (pata) evidently as a recognition of a change in his status. The witnesses who mentioned this sitting upon the stool are the defendant Juharmal (D. W. No. 1), Punamchand (D. W. No. 12), Budhmal (D. W. No. 13), Bindraban (D. W. No. 14) and the defendant Hirchand himself (D. W. No. 16). There is certainly some evidence for the plaintiff which indicates that the boy to be adopted, no matter how old, should sit in the lap of the person who adopts him: see for instance the depositions of Kaniram (P. W. No. 2), Juharmal (P. W. No. 3), Chhitarmal (P. W. No. 5), Bahadarmal (P. W. No. 6), Nanhuram (P. W. No. 7), Hansraj (P. W. No. 8) and Chhogmal (P. W. No. 11). The last mentioned person is the head of one section of the local Jains, while the defendants belong to another, and most of the witnesses just mentioned belong to Chhogmal's faction. But of the 12 witnesses examined for the plaintiff on commission not one asserts the placing of the adopted son in the lap of the adoptive parent to be essential, nor was any such act expressly mentioned in the plaintiff's pleadings. On the other hand Chhogmal himself (P. W. No. 11) his relative and Gumashta Magniram and Rupchand, who reside respectively in Bombay and a village in that Presidency, mention that after the declaration of giving and taking and willingness to adopt have been taken, the adopted son is made to sit on a wooden stool. It is also important to observe that the entry in the panchayat's bahi (Exhibit P-2), which records the admittedly complete adoption of Hazarimal's son Tikaram by Khubchand, makes no mention of placing Tikaram in the lap of either adoptive parents. I would add that the translation of the Bhadrabahu Sanhita, a sacred book of the Jains, which was published by J. L. Jaini, a Jain Judge at Indore, and is much relied on by the appellant, gives a detailed list of essential ceremonies as making up giving and taking, but does not include in them the sitting of the adopted son in his new parent's lap. In Jiwraj v. Sheokuvar Bai (8) it was held by Mittra and Prideaux, A. J. Cs., that the adopted person, being 25 or 26 years old, could not be placed on his adoptive mother's lap and that in the circumstances his being placed near her constituted a sufficient delivery of possession, and this view entirely coincides with my own. The parties to that case were Jains of Nimar, and it was admitted that giving and taking alone would constitute a valid adoption. My conclusion then is that such overt act of giving and taking as the law applicable to Jains requires was performed.

I turn now to the second ground of appeal in connection with which the plaintiff-appellant's case is that all the ceremonies mentioned in her pleadings are essential but were not performed. As already mentioned, those ceremonies in addition to giving and taking are (1) putting a turban on the head of the adopted boy, (2) distribution of cocoanuts and sweets, and (3) giving a present to a Jain temple. The extract from Exhibit P-2 regarding Hirchand's adoption suffices to dispose of the plea that cocoanuts were not distributed, as this distribution is expressly mentioned therein. The same extract is strongly indicative of an opinion on the part of the panchas that Hirchand's adoption was really completed, for after mentioning the express assent of the four persons immediately concerned the document as translated proceeds thus:—

(7) 19 C. 452; 19 I. A. 101; 6 Sar. P. C. J. 171; 9 d. Dec. (N. s) 746.

(8) 56 Ind. Cas. 65.

"From this day Pirthiraj shall be considered to be the father of Hirchand and Hirchand to be the owner of Pirthiraj's moveable and immoveable property."

The document next mentions the distribution of cocoanuts and proceeds thus:—

"One writing was given to Pirthiraj and one to Juharmal on obtaining signature. The customary dues amounting to ...* may be sent to the temple at Kandali and Narsinghpur."

Then follow the signatures of the defendant Juharmal, Pirthiraj and four panchas namely, Punamchand, Chhogmal, Maniklal and Gulji. A hitch then occurred, the nature of which appears from the evidence of Kaniram (P. W. No. 2) and Nanhuram (P. W. No. 7) who were both present on the occasion. Their account is that Pirthiraj's brother Tulsiram objected to sign the bahi on the ground that Hirchand had been promised to him, and this story is corroborated by the defendant Juharmal himself and by Punamchand (D. W. No. 12), Budhmal (D. W. No. 13), Bindraban (D. W. No. 14), Nandram (D. W. No. 15) and the defendant Hirchand (D. W. No. 16). Tulsiram refused to sign the entry in the bahi and his nephew Hansraj (P. W. No. 8) also declined. Tulsiram was not examined as a witness and Hansraj in cross-examination professed not to know why Tulsiram raised a dispute. The entry in the bahi was then completed as follows:—

"Tulsiram and Hansraj refused to sign hence the ceremony of tying a turban and adoption did not take place. The adoption was cancelled."

This postscript is signed by all the four panchas who signed the first entry and 10 others, but not by the defendant Juharmal or Pirthiraj. One additional signature, that of Lachmichand, was added on the 26th March 1917. This man was not examined and we are without an explanation of his signature being taken nearly two years after the occasion.

The contemporary writing then appears to support the theory of the defence that there was a completed adoption. The statement in the postscript that the adoption had not taken place because a turban had not been tied on the boy's head, is incompatible with the further decision that the adoption was cancelled and the conclusion I come to after carefully perusing all the evidence is that the Jains of these Provinces are themselves in doubt as to what ceremonies should be regarded as legally indispensable. Had the tying on of a turban been really regarded as essential by the panchas, it is difficult to understand why a declaration that Hirchand had already become the son of Pirthiraj was ever entered in the bahi. The extract relating to Tikaram's adoption indicates that the procedure is by no means settled, for there the turban was tied before the announcement of the adoption was made and there is no mention of any distribution of cocoanuts or sweets. The offering to a temple is evidently a mere trifle and in view of the Jain theory of adoption very strong evidence is required to establish its essentiality.

I am not at all impressed by the appellant's argument that Tulsiram's objection would necessarily be put forward before the adoption was complete. It seems to me quite possible that Tulsiram's real objection was to signing an entry which might be used against him if he should subsequently endeavour to assert his own right to take Hirchand in adoption. As already remarked, Hansraj was unable to say why Tulsiram raised a dispute and Tulsiram himself was not put into the witness-box to explain his attitude.

The appellant's learned Counsel places much reliance upon the wording of the adoption deed (Exhibit D-1) executed by

*No amount is mentioned.

Pirthiraj on the 2nd July 1915, i.e., exactly a week after the incident recorded in the bahi. This point is embodied in the third ground of appeal. It appears from the evidence of the defendants Juharmal and Hirchand and Punamchand (D. W. No. 12) and Nandram (D. W. No. 15) that when the panchayat broke up on Tulsiram's objection, Pirthiraj expressed his intention of placing the adoption beyond dispute by executing and registering a document. Exhibit D-1 was the outcome of this determination, and it is urged for the appellant that its wording is inconsistent with an adoption having already taken place. This document certainly makes no mention of what happened a week previously, but this point is not really important, inasmuch as what happened on the earlier occasion is undisputed and indisputable. The portion of Exhibit D-1, which is material for the present purposes has been translated as follows:—

"Therefore by virtue of this deed I today adopt Hirchand, son of Juharmal my elder brother, and make him my son. Juharmal and his wife agree to this deed and they give Hirchand to me in adoption willingly. And Hirchand, who is a major, is willing to be adopted. Hirchand is now my son, and he and his wife shall live with me in my house * * *

The ceremonies of adoption customary in our sect have not yet been performed. They will be performed on some auspicious day during this very year. I have, therefore, executed this adoption deed in the possession of my full senses and in the enjoyment of sound health so that it may stand as evidence."

The defendant Juharmal attested this deed as a witness along with three other persons who were not examined and appear from their descriptions not to be members of the Jain community. In her pleadings the appellant contended that Exhibit D-1 merely laid down the terms upon which Pirthiraj was willing to adopt Hirchand and that subsequently Juharmal declined to give Hirchand in adoption on those terms. This account of the document seems to me altogether unsatisfactory. Juharmal was not likely after what had occurred before the panchayat to give up the advantageous position which his son would occupy as prospective heir to a well to-do man like Pirthiraj who evidently could not live long, nor can I see how any useful purpose would be served by executing and registering a document declaratory of mere intention to adopt later. According to the defendant Juharmal Exhibit D-1 was drafted by the Pleader Maniklal, who signed both parts of the entry in the panchayati bahi regarding Hirchand's adoption. This Maniklal is a cousin of Chhogmal (P. W. No. 11) and the maternal uncle of the plaintiff's husband and is said by the plaintiff's witness Kaniram to belong to Chhogmal's faction, while the defendant Hirchand as D. W. No. 16 deposed that he is not on good terms with Chhogmal and Maniklal. Therefore, it may well be that Maniklal omitted reference to what had occurred previously on account of his own view of the position as indicated by the postscript announcing the adoption to have been cancelled. Moreover, if I am right in holding that giving and taking had already been effected, the legal position would not be altered by any misapprehension on Pirthiraj's or Juharmal's part as to the date from which Hirchand's adoption would operate. The fact that Pirthiraj did not perform any further ceremonies, although he undertook to do so and lived 13 months after executing Exhibit D-1, may be explained by the nature of his illness and in any view of Exhibit D-1 it cannot reasonably be concluded that Pirthiraj considered the further ceremonies as essential to the validity of the adoption. My view of Exhibit D-1 is that it does not really assist the plaintiff appellant's case.

The evidence as to the necessity for tying a turban on the adopted son's head on the occasion of his being given and taken in adoption has been analysed at considerable length by the lower Court, and after a careful perusal of it I am not satisfied that the plaintiff has established her plea. I concur with the learned Additional District Judge in attaching special weight to the evidence of Rai Bahadur Seth Lakshmichand (D. W. No. 19), an Honorary Magistrate of Balaghat, who is himself a Jain and was chosen by the parties as an arbitrator to settle this very dispute. This gentleman, who is now over 50 years old, was himself adopted but no turban was tied on his head at the time of the adoption, this ceremony taking place after the death of his adoptive father. Two witnesses for the plaintiff, namely, Lakshmandas and Pemraj, both of whom belong to Jalgaon in the Bombay Presidency and appear to be quite impartial, mention putting on of a turban as a ceremony to be performed after the adoptive father's death. I understand both these witnesses to have expressly asserted that gift and acceptance of the boy constitute the only ceremony which is indispensable, the putting on of a turban and distribution of cocoanuts being merely methods of giving publicity to the transaction.

For the plaintiff-appellant much stress was laid on the list given by the defendant Juharmal as D. W. No. 1 of the ceremonies necessary for effecting a valid adoption. The list was given in cross examination and runs as follows:—

"According to the usage of my caste the following things are necessary for effecting a valid adoption. The panchas assemble and ask the giver and taker of the boy about the adoption. The giver says that he gives the boy and the taker says that he takes the boy in adoption. The turban is also tied and the cocoanuts are distributed and *tilak is made and the presents are made by the adoptive boy and arti† is performed."

Juharmal immediately went on to say that at the time of Hirchand's adoption the turban was not tied and cocoanuts were not distributed. It is difficult to understand this statement, for Juharmal certainly meant to support the adoption and followed up the statement just quoted by adding that Hirchand's adoption was in fact complete on the 23rd June 1915. The lower Court remarked in paragraph V (1) of its judgment that this witness is an "aged person" and appears to have treated him as supporting the theory of a complete adoption and to have believed his story. This defendant was unable to explain the language of Exhibit D-1 which certainly describes the adoption as effected on the day (2nd July 1915) of its execution, and I can only regard his evidence as that of a somewhat stupid person who does not really know what his law requires and could not actually remember what had happened 18 months previously.

Chhomanlal (D. W. No. 2) had been present at two adoptions in his caste and deposed that at each a turban was tied round the head of the adopted boy, but could not say whether this was an essential part of the ceremony. Lachhmandas (D. W. No. 4) was not present at the adoption of Hirchand and admitted that it is usual to tie a turban on the adopted boy's head, though he added that he had heard of adoptions at which this had not been done, his own opinion is that giving and taking is the only essential ceremony and he corroborated Arjundas (D. W. No. 3), another witness from Balaghat, in deposing that Pirthiraj's turban was eventually tied on Hirchand's head at the funeral ceremony of Bhadon Sudi 10 Sambat 1973=7th September 1916.

Punamchand (D. W. No. 12) is another witness who admitted that in the ordinary course of things the adoptive boy has a turban tied on his head, but he also stated that this and other acts are simply done to make it clear that the adoption is complete. This witness was present at the adoption, and his evidence is important in that he explains that the tying of the turban was delayed firstly at his own suggestion that the ceremony should be put off till the marriage of Tikaram and secondly by the final illness of Pirthiraj which began in April or May 1916. He took a boy in adoption himself and did not have a turban tied till 12 months after the adoption. He was present at Pirthiraj's final funeral ceremony and while deposing that a turban was then tied on Hirchand's head, explained that this had no connection with the ceremony of adoption. This witness, as already stated, signed the panchayati bahi on the 29th June 1915: his age is 60 and he appears to be unbiassed.

Of the plaintiff's witnesses a number of those who professed to know the essential customs are members of Chhogmal's faction or specially interested in him. For example Kaniram (P. W. No. 2) who lives at Mansinghpur belongs to that faction, Juharmal (P. W. No. 3) is the father of Chhogmal's son-in-law and Nanhuram (P. W. No. 7) is indebted to Chhogmal, while the son of Lakshmichand (P. W. No. 10) is married to Chhogmal's daughter. With regard to Hansraj (P. W. No. 8), one of Kasturchand's grandsons, who was present at the panchayat of the 25th June 1915 it is to be observed that his relations with the defendant Juharmal as described in his cross examination appear to be unfriendly.

*A mark on the forehead.

†Waving of a Candle.

It is urged on behalf of the plaintiff-appellant on the authority of Sutroogun v. Sabitra Dye (9) and Diwakar v. Chandanlal (10) that burden of proving an adoption lies very heavily on the person who puts it forward where there is a wife or a daughter to be supplanted. In both those cases an outsider was alleged to have been adopted and the position generally was far from being comparable to that of the defendant Hirchand, whom Pirthiraj is admitted to have at least endeavoured to adopt. The burden is doubtless on the defence to establish a valid adoption, but as already stated, I consider the evidence to justify a conclusion that the necessity of tying a turban on the adopted son's head is sufficiently shown not to be an essential ceremony. In this connection I would observe that none of the plaintiff's witnesses give a list of the essential ceremonies corresponding at all closely with the description of the correct procedure given in the Bhadrabahu Samhita. That description mentions acts not included in the category of essentials give in the plaintiff's pleadings, and the plaintiff's witnesses Juharmal (P. W. No. 3) and Chhitarmal (P. W. No. 5) declare to be essential such acts as making an arti and marking the forehead with a tilak which those pleadings do not mention at all.

I conclude with the lower Court that a simple giving and taking suffices to effect a valid adoption, that this act was duly done in the present case and that the defendant Hirchand must, therefore, be regarded as having been validly adopted by Pirthiraj. The appellant's appeal accordingly fails.

(9) 5 W. R. 109 (P. C.).

(10) 39 Ind. Cas. 6; 12 N. L. R. 164 at p. 169; 18 Bom. L. R. 992; 25 C. L. J. 17; 21 M. L. T. 6; 5 L. W. 103; (1917) M. W. N. 50; 21 C. W. N. 314; 44 C. 201; 32 M. L. J. 636 (P. C.).

It remains to deal with the objections preferred by the defendants to the findings of the lower Court regarding the ornaments for which two of them have been held responsible and to the order allowing the plaintiff proportionate costs against those defendants.

The plaintiff's claim for ornaments was divided into two parts, namely, (1) those which belonged to Pirthiraj and so were inherited by the plaintiff on his death and (2) some which belonged to the plaintiff and were deposited by her father in his iron safe in Aghan Sambat 1971 soon after her marriage. The first lot, described in schedule A annexed to the plaint, includes only a pair of gold earrings, some gold phuls (flowers) and a nose ring set with pearls valued respectively at Rs. 100, 50 and 60. Of the second lot details are given in schedule B, which comprises 11 kinds of gold ornaments valued at Rs. 1,359 and 5 kinds of silver ornaments valued at Rs. 174 5-0, the total claim under this head being valued at Rs. 1,533 5-0. The defendants admitted that Pirthiraj had an iron safe of his own which he kept in the shop of Juharmal, but made no allegation as to what ornaments, if any, belonged to Pirthiraj's estate, contenting themselves with the general plea that Pirthiraj's property belonged to his adopted son Hirchand who is in actual possession. It was denied that Pirthiraj placed any ornaments in his iron safe and that any of the defendants were in possession of any of the ornaments entered in schedule B. The fifth and sixth issues which have already been set out were framed in connection with ornaments. The findings of the lower Court on these issues are to be found in paragraphs XIII and XIV of its judgment which run as follows:—

"XIII. Finding of the lower Court on issue No. 5 is that the defendants Juharmal and Hirchand are in possession of ornaments referred to by the plaintiff in her deposition before the Commissioner and that it is not proved that the defendants are in possession of the utensils mentioned in list A. Plaintiff was the very best person to know all about her ornaments and the ornaments belonging to her mother and father and she has given a list of the said ornaments, and she also swears that her father got ornaments made for her and he also gave his ornaments to her. This story given by the plaintiff is quite natural and the Court believes it, and the said story is also proved to be true by the evidence given by the other witnesses, viz., Kaniram (P. W. No. 2) and Hansraj (P. W. No. 8.)

XIV. Finding of the Court on issue No. 6 is that the plaintiff is the owner of jewellery mentioned by her in the witness-box out of those included in list B and that Juharmal and Hirchand are in possession of the said jewellery. This finding is supported by the evidence given by the plaintiff's witnesses Nos. 2 and 8 and the plaintiff herself in the witness-box."

In order to understand these findings it is desirable to set out at length what the plaintiff's witnesses Kaniram and Hansraj and the plaintiff herself deposed on the subject. Kaniram, who was not cross-examined about ornaments, deposed in examination in-chief as follows:—

"Wife of Pirthiraj had ornaments. Pirthiraj had presented ornaments to plaintiff at the time of her marriage:—

One ad of gold worth more than or above Rs. 200, one timania of gold worth about Rs. 75 one necklace of putli, one nose-ring of gold, one pair of gold jhumkas, one pair of gold todars, two or three gold rings, one pair of silver bichhori, two kardoras of silver.

Pirthiraj said that the other ornaments belonging to him would also be owned by his daughter."

"Pirthiraj gave the following ornaments to Jamna Bai at the time of her marriage:—

One gold nath worth about Rs 40, one ad of gold worth about Rs. 200, one necklace of putlis worth about Rs, 125. Pirthiraj had promised to give one pair of bazuband worth Rs. 300 to his daughter. Pirthiraj had given one gunj to the son in-law. The ornaments were prepared through me. Pirthiraj had got accounts with me. I noted the ornaments in the accounts of Pirthiraj. Juharmalji has got the ornaments belonging to the plaintiff including the bazu bands. The ornaments were left in the iron safe of Pirthiraj which was in the house of Juharmalji. Juharmalji has got the key of the safe. Jamna Bai demanded the ornaments from Juharmalji and she complained to me that Juharmalji was not giving the ornaments to her. Pirthiraj used to have disputes with Juharmalji. I used to make arrangements for the meals of Pirthiraj during his illness. Pirthiraj has got his own ornaments worth about Rs. 700 and these ornaments included the ornaments of his wife also."

In cross-examination he added:—

"I had seen the other ornaments which were presented to Jamna Bai. The price of the ornaments was set off against the money due by me to Pirthiraj. Jamna Bai was married about one year before the death of Pirthiraj. I cannot specify all the ornaments which were given to Chhogmal's daughter at the time of her marriage. The marriage of Chhogmal's daughter was performed about one year ago. Pirthiraj had sent for his iron safe and from that the time it remained with Juharmal. Pirthiraj had sent for his iron safe at the time of the marriage of his daughter. After her marriage Jamna Bai went to the house of her father-in-law and she returned to the house of Pirthiraj twice. Jamna Bai also arrived 5 or 7 days aftar the death of Pirthiraj.

Pirthiraj was ill for about a month. When Jamna Bai returned at the time of the performance of ausor she complained that Juharmal was not returning her ornaments."

The plaintiff was examined on commission at Raipur on the 15th July 1917, her age being then put at 13. Her examination in chief was confined almost entirely to the subject of ornaments and may, therefore, be reproduced in extenso:—

"At the time of marriage my father gave me the following ornaments of gold:—

One armlet 12 tolas, one ad (next ornament) weight 8 tolas, 16 putlis (weight unknown), one nath (nose ring) valued at about Rs. 50, two rings (weight unknown), one sankla (weight unknown), one pair of toti jhungra angni (ear ornaments), one long and one gold patri.

The aforesaid were all gold ornaments. My father also gave me at my marriage the following silver ornaments:—

Ten bichhoris of foot fingers, sic. one silver kardora (waist ornament).

JAMUNABAI v. JUHARMAL.

The aforesaid ornaments were kept by my father in the iron safe previous to his death as I had also gone there during my father's illness. I stayed with my father for about three months, but had returned here some ten days previous to his death, I could not take the ornaments back from my father as I returned in a hurry owing to the serious illness of my mother-in-law. When I was married here three years ago I had seen the following ornaments with my father:—

One phul of gold weighing 1½ tolas, one pair of murki sankaliya and one kardora of silver.

My mother had the following ornaments with her during her lifetime and after her death my father had custody of them:—

One gold timania, one nose ring, one long, one toti, six auganias, one bor.

These were all of gold. One pair of kadia, one pair of satis, one pair of newri, one pair of toda, and one pair of nakhalia were all of silver. The aforesaid ornaments were kept in a metal box and deposited inside an iron safe. When I went back to Narsinghpur after my father's death, I saw the iron safe which contained these ornaments in the house of my uncle Juharmal. Hirchand is my uncle Juharmal's son. During his lifetime my father did not adopt anybody as his son. During his illness I and Hansraj, my uncle's son, used to attend upon my father. I used to cook food for him. During my father's lifetime my uncle Juharmal, Bachhraj, Mohanlal and Hirchand lived separate from my father. They had separate business and messed separately. When I went back to Narsinghpur after father's death and went to sit at his house, I saw Juharmal open the iron safe of my father which was then at his house."

In cross-examination she stated that all the ornaments belonging to her father, her mother and herself were put by her father in the iron safe in the presence of herself and the defendants Juharmal and Mohanlal about two years back and that Pirthiraj entrusted the key to the defendant Juharmal 12 months before his death in the presence of herself, the defendant Mohanlal and her cousins Hansraj and Hamirmal. All the ornaments were said to have been shown to those present on this occasion, but no list was prepared, though Pirthiraj said at the time that on his death those ornaments were to be given to the plaintiff and the defendant Juharmal agreed to comply with this direction. It appears clear from the following passage in the plaintiff's cross-examination that Hansraj was for some time siding with Pirthiraj against the defendants Juharmal and Bachhraj:—

"There was takrar and hence Bachhraj and Juharmal did not come to see my father during his illness for two years. I asked my father to get back the key from the defendants but he said that I was a minor. I did not ask my father to take the key back and make it over to Hansraj. There was no dispute between Hansraj and my father. There is takrar between Hansraj and defendants Juharmal and Bachhraj for the last two years. The dispute arose from the fact that my father did not like to take anybody in adoption and defendants Bachhraj and Juharmal wanted to give a boy in adoption."

It is certain that Pirthiraj must have given his daughter some ornaments at her marriage and I can see no reason to discredit so much of the evidence above set out as indicates that she got at least the following items:—

One gold bazuband,
" ad,
" nose-ring,
one necklace of gold mohars, two sets (10) silver bichhoris (toe ornaments), one silver kardora (waist ornament).

In schedule B of the plaint the ad and bazuband were described as each weighing 11 tolas and I would accept this weight, which allowing Rs. 25 per tola, the rate claimed, gives a value of Rs. 275 for each of these ornaments. I would also accept the plaintiff's statement that there were 16 mohars on the gold necklace. As she could not give the weight of this ornament I would accept Hansraj's estimate of Rs. 125 as its value. The nose-ring may also be taken at Hansraj's valuation, which is Rs. 40. In schedule B Rs. 29-5-2 is entered as the value of the two sets of bichhoris (10 in all), their weight being put at 39 totas: I would accept this valuation as toe-rings are comparatively heavy articles. Rs. 25 may safely be taken as the value of one silver kardora, i. e., one-half of the value of the two ornaments of this class mentioned in schedule B. Kaniram mentions two or three gold rings as among the wedding presents while the plaintiff gives the number as two, neither witness mentioning the weight. I would allow two gold rings and put their combined value at Rs. 25. Kaniram must be wrong in including a pair of gold todar, for the plaintiff does not mention todar at all and schedule B includes only a pair of silver articles of this class. As to valuation it may generally be remarked that the defendants did not question any of the values entered in schedules A and B.

Reading together Kaniram's and the plaintiff's depositions it appears that Kaniram has treated as a wedding present one article (a gold timania) which used to be worn by the plaintiff's mother. It is also clear from a comparison of the plaintiff's deposition with schedule B that some of the ornaments worn by her mother have been included in that schedule. The plaintiff's pleadings do not explain the basis of her title to any of the ornaments, nor does her deposition suggest that the ornaments worn by her mother were her mother's stridhan and descended to her by operation of law. Her own evidence is rather directed to show that Pirthiraj ordered all the ornaments put in the safe to be given to her on his death. On the whole I think the only safe finding as to title will be that the plaintiff is the owner only of those which were given to her by Pirthiraj at her marriage, namely.

one gold bazuband worth	Rs.	275 0-0
" ad	"	275-0-0
" nose-ring	"	40-0-0
one necklace of gold mohars worth	"	125-0-0
two sets of silver bichhoris worth	"	29-5-9
ore silver kardora worth	"	25-0-0
two gold rings worth	"	25-0-0
TOTAL	Rs.	794-5-0

Any ornaments belonging to Pirthiraj's estate necessarily passed on his death to Hirchand as his adopted son, and I am not prepared to accept the plaintiff's uncorroborated statement that he gave any special directions regarding any ornaments other than her wedding presents.

It is contended for the objectors that the defendants Juharmal and Hirchand were wrongly found to have been in possession of any ornaments whatever belonging to the plaintiff. In this connection I notice as a curious feature in the conduct of the case that neither Juharmal nor Hirchand was asked any questions whatever about the plaintiff's ornaments or even about the delivery of the key of Pirthiraj's safe to Juharmal. The objectors also point out that Hansraj did not represent himself as being present at the handing over of the key. It is also urged that the omission to make a list at the time of the deposit throws suspicion on the plaintiff's story as the relations between Pirthiraj and Juharmal were on the plaintiff's own showing unfriendly. It is no doubt difficult to say which way the truth lies, but on the whole I think the lower Court was right in accepting the plaintiff's story about the deposit of the ornaments in the safe and the transfer of the key. She was too young then to stay permanently with her husband and returned home twice after first going to her husband at Raipur. Pirthiraj and Juharmal were at any rate on good terms in June and July 1915 when the adoption of Hirchand took place and if the plaintiff really took away the ornaments to her husband's house, it would have been an easy matter for the defence to establish this fact. Electing to believe the plaintiff, I hold that her wedding presents were left in Pirthiraj's safe and that the defendant Juharmal was entrusted with the key. The objections succeed to the extent of reducing the value of the ornaments which the plaintiff is entitled to recover from the defendant Juharmal from Rs. 1,500 to Rs. 794-5 0.

With regard to the plaintiff's costs in the lower Court it is urged on behalf of the objectors Juharmal and Hirchand that she should not have been allowed proportionate costs in respect of witnesses in view of the fact that none but Kaniram, Hansraj and the plaintiff herself gave evidence on the subject of ornaments. This contention appears to me to be reasonable. The lower Court's order regarding the plaintiff's costs will accordingly be modified so as to throw upon the defendants Juharmal and GADADHARADOSS v. SURYANARAYANA PATNAIK.

Hirohand the following items only of the plaintiff's costs.

	Rs.
Court-fee on a claim for Rs. 794-5 0	60-0-0
Vakalatnama	0-8-0
Pleader's fee on Rs. 794-5-0	39-11-2
Expenses of witnesses Kaniram and Hansraj ...	as actually paid
one-fifth of the fee paid to the Commissioners who examined the plaintiff and other witnesses at Raipur ...	15-0-0
Service of process ...	3-0-0

For the rest the lower Court's order as to costs is maintained.

It remains to deal with a representation made on behalf of the respondent Mohanlal that he should get separate costs for the hearing in this Court, inasmuch as he was unnecessarily joined as a respondent, no decree having been passed in the plaintiff's favour against him. No argument on the merits was addressed to this Court on behalf of this respondent and his defence in the lower Court was identical with that of his father Juharmal. Moreover, he has taken the opportunity afforded by his joinder as a respondent to prefer objections to the decree of the lower Court. In these circumstances I consider that it was quite unnecessary for Mohanlal to appear by a separate practitioner and I decline to allow him any separate costs.

The plaintiff will pay all the costs of the appeal to this Court and the costs of the objections will follow their result.

Appeal dismissed.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 859 OF 1918.

December 1, 1919.

Present:—Sir John Wallis, KT., Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Sadasiva Aiyar.

Sri GADADHARADOSS BAVAJI MAHANT OF BALAJI MUTT —DEFENDANT No. 3—APPELLANT

versus

SURYANARAYANA PATNAIK AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS AND DEFENDANTS NOS. 1 AND 2—RESPONDENTS.

Madras Estates Land Act (I of 1908), s. 3 (2), (5), (11)—Minor inamdar—Grantee of lands in permanently settled estate, whether 'land-holder'—'Rents, in cl. (5), meaning of.

Per Wallis, C. J.—An inamdar to whom lands were granted by the zemindar after the settlement out of the lands included in the permanently settled estate is not a 'land-holder' within the definition of clause (5) of section 3 of the Madras Estates Land Act. [p. 96, col. 1.]

Sivini Appalanarasimhulu v. Murada Sanyasi, 17 Ind. Cas. 120; 38 M. 33, not followed.

There is no sufficient reason for refusing to apply the definition of 'rent' in clause (11) to the word 'rents' in clause (5) of section 3 of the Madras Estates Land Act, and full effect can be given to that definition by reading the latter part of it as intended to include, as it says, persons entitled to collect the rents due to the owner of the estate, such as farmers or assignees of such rents by way of mortgage, etc. Inams and under-tenures in larger estates which do not consist of one or more villages but are of lesser extent are not within the operation of the Act. [p. 96, col. 1.]

Per Sadasiva Aiyar, J—'dissenting'.—An inamdar to whom lands were granted by the zemindar after the settlement out of lands included in the permanently settled estate is not a 'land-holder' within the the definition of clause (5) of section 3 of the Madras Estates Land Act. [p. 96, col. 2.]

Second appeal against the decree of the Court of the Temporary Subordinate Judge at Berhampore, in Appeal Suit No. 20 of 1918, preferred against the decree of the Court of the Additional District Munsif, Berhampore, in Original Suit No. 284 of 1916.

This second appeal coming on for hearing on the 21st February 1919 and on the 30th April 1919, upon perusing the grounds of appeal, the judgments and decrees of the lower Appellate Court and the Court of first instance and the material papers in the suit and upon hearing the arguments of Mr. M. S. Ramanuja Aiyangar, for Mr. C. S. Venkatachariar, for the Appellant, and of Mr. A. C. Sampath Aiyangar, for the 1st Respondent. and the 2nd and 3rd respondents having been given up, the Court (Sadasiva Aiyar and Phillips, JJ.) made the following ORDER.—The lower Appellate Court has not given findings on the following questions,

1. Whether the sadjan deed Exhibit A is genuine and whether on the right construction of that deed it was a grant also of the Kudivaram interest besides part of the Melvaram interest in the plaint lands ?

2. On the evidence taken as a whole, what is the correct conclusion on the question whether the inam is a post-settlement inam or a pre settlement inam?

As we consider it desirable to have definite findings on these points, we remand the case to the lower Appellate Court for submission of such findings on the evidence on record within four weeks of the re-opening of this Court after recess. Ten days will be allowed for filing objections.

In compliance with the above order the Temporory Subordinate Judge at Berhampore submitted the following FINDINGS—I am directed by the High Court to submit findings on the following issues, viz.

(1) Whether the cadjan deed, Exhibit A, is genuine and whether on the right construction of the deed it was a grant also of the Kudivaram interest besides part of the Melvaram interest in the plaint land?

(2) On the evidence taken as a whole, what is the correct conclusion on the question whether the inam is a post-settlement inam or a pre settlement inam?

My findings are as follows :—

2. 1*st Issue* :—As regards the first part of this issue, viz., whether the cadjan deed Exhibit A is genuine, this deed is said to have been granted to plaintiff's great-grandfather, Sanyasi Patnaik, by a former Zamindar of Surangi in 1794. It is produced by plaintiff, but beyond producing it, plaintiff does not know anything personally about its execution. To prove that it is genuine, plaintiff relies on certain facts contained in the 3 documents Exhibits B, C and D. Exhibit B is a certified copy of Kyfiat given by plaintiff's father before the Inams Alienation Inspector of Surangi Estate on 23rd July 1895, when that estate was under the management of the Court of Wards and enquiry made regarding the resumability of certain inams including the inam now in question. In this Kyfiat plaintiff's father made a statement that the inam in question was granted to his grandfather Sanyasi Patnaik in 1794, and he also then produced the cadjan deed, Exhibit A. Exhibit C is a certified extract from the list of inams, the right to which is barred. The suit inam is therein shown as one of such inams. This list is dated 9th April 1896 and signed by the Collector. It was prepared after the abovesaid enquiry Exhibit D is a printed copy of the judgment in Original Suit No. 690 of 1909 on the file of the Sompeta District Munsif's Court. It was a suit brought by the present Zamindar of Surangi after he had attained majority and the Court of Wards ceased to manage the estate. Seeing that the Court of Wards did not take any action against the present plaintiff to resume the suit inam, the Zamindar brought that suit against the present plaintiff for its resumption on the ground that it is a subsequent inam granted to plaintiff's father for personal services. In that suit also the present plaintiff put forward the same contention which he has now put forward, viz., that the inam was granted to his great-grandfather absolutely in 1794. But I do not attach any weight to these documents. Exhibit A is a cadjan document and can be easily brought into existence at any time. No one attested this document. It does not contain the name and signature of the writer. It does not contain the signature of even the grantor, or of the person authorized by him to execute it. The first time it was produced by plaintiff's father was only before the Inams Alienation Inspector in 1895, and had not seen the light of day before. As regards plaintiff's father's statement in Exhibit B it is a self-serving statement made after the Court of Wards wanted to resume the inam. With respect to Exhibit C, it does not contain any further information about the origin of the grant than what is contained in Exhibit B; and the Collector never expressed his opinion thereon. (The remark column 8 was left blank.) From the fact that the Collector included the inam in question in the list of those which cannot be resumed, it cannot be said that he believed the genuineness of Exhibit A and the plaintiff's father's statement in Exhibit B. He might have thought that the inam was granted to plaintiff's family absolutely subsequent to the Permanent Settlement and, therefore, inadvisable to sue for resumption. The judgment Exhibit D also does not help plaintiff. In that judgment the Court did not decide whether Exhibit A was genuine or when the inam was granted. The suit was dismissed merely on the ground that the Zamindar failed to prove his allegation that the inam was granted to plaintiff's family on service tenure. For the above reasons I am not inclined to believe that Exhibit A is genuine.

3. As regards the second part of this issue, it is not necessary to express any opinion in view of my finding that Exhibit A is not genuine. I shall, however, express my opinion on the assumption that it is genuine. The deed Exhibit A recites as follows:—"The following lands, viz, Poithihita wet 30 Bharanams and Suro billo 30 Bharanams in Koitho Bati of Thandipur Kasba and 8 Bharanams of dry land in Thandipur and 4 Bharanams of dry land in Ambogam, thus 72 Bharanams of lands wet and dry have been granted. You shall be, therefore, from this day onwards enjoying the aforesaid lands as far as their boundary limits hereditarily and paying through the Kaji of our Kasba a Kattubadi of Rs. 15 on the wet lands at Re $\frac{1}{4}$ per Bharanam and obtaining receipts." From the language used, viz, that the lands have been granted and that the grantee shall be enjoying those lands, it is clear that the lands themselves, and not merely a part of the Melvaram interest, were granted as inam.

4. 2nd Issue:—In support of his contention that the inam is a pre-settlement inam plaintiff relies on the cadjan deed, Exhibit A, and also [on the documents Exhibits B, C and D which are already referred to. But I have found that Exhibit A is not genuine. With respect to Exhibits C and D, there is nothing in those 2 documents which goes to show that the Collector or the District Munsif ever held the inam to be a pre-settlement inam. As regards the Kyfiat Exhibit B given by plaintiff's father, it is a self-serving statement made after disputes had arisen. Except these 4 documents there is no other evidence on the part of the plaintiff to prove his allegation. In my opinion plaintiff has failed to prove that the inam is a pre-settlement inam. It must, therefore, be considered as a subsequent inam.

This second appeal coming on for final hearing after the return of the findings of the lower Appellate Court upon the issue referred by this Court for trial, the Court delivered the following

JUDGMENT.

WALLIS, C. J.—We accept the finding that the cadjan deed, Exhibit A, is not proved. There is, however, in this case nothing to rebut the presumption recently laid down by the Privy Council that the grant to the inamdars was a grant of the proprietary right in the suit land including the Kudivaram as well as the Melvaram interest. There is, also, no sufficient reason to interfere with the finding on the second additional issue, assuming it to be material, that the inam in question was created after the permanent settlement of the estate.

The suit lands are situated in the village of Thandipuram in the permanently settled Zamindari of Surangi and are held of the Zamindar by the inamdar at a Kattubadi or quit rent of Rs. 15 payable to the Zamindar. If the whole village had been granted, it would itself have constituted an estate within the meaning of the Madras Estates Land Act, as coming within the words "one or more villages" of a permanently settled estate in section 3 (2) (e), and the Act would have been applicable to Ryots holding under the inamdar. It has, however, been contended before us that although the lands, which are only part of a village, are not made an estate in themselves by virtue of this clause, the Act is rendered applicable because the inamdar is "a land holder" within the meaning of clause V. Before coming to the wording of this definition, it is desirable to examine the general scheme of the Act, in the light of which the definition in clause V of section 3 (2) must be interpreted, with a view of seeing if it was really the intention of the Legislature to apply the provisions of the Act as between the inamdar and his tenants, where the land is situated in a permanently settled estate and consists of any part of a village and the inamdar is the owner of the Kudivaram as well as the Melvaram. Now the Act is called the Madras Estates Land Act and its general scope is limited by the definition of estate in section 3 (2). That definition is reproduced, with one important modification, from Madras Acts XI of 1894 and IV of 1897 where it had been found convenient to answer the purposes of these Acts; but, whereas clause (d) in that Act ran "any village of which the grant was made or had been confirmed by the British Government," this appears in the present Act as "any village of which the land revenue alone has been granted in inam to a person not owning the Kudivaram thereof, provided that the grant has been made, confirmed or recognised by the British Government or any separated part of such village." Therefore, as regards inams outside the large estates coming under clauses (a), (b) and (c), it is clear that the Legislature did not wish the Act to apply between the inamdar and his tenants where the inamdars owned the Kudivaram as well as the Melvaram, or where land was only part of a village unless it had been separated from the rest of the village. This being the policy of the Act as regards inams outside large estates as defined in clauses (a), (b) and (c), the next question is whether it was the intention of the Legislature that the Act should apply to such inams when the lands were situated within these large estates. Looking at the matter as between the inamdar and his tenants, there seems no strong reason for making the Act inapplicable where the quit rent is payable directly to the Government, and applicable where it is payable to the Zemindar or Poligar as in clauses (a), (b) and (c). It is prima facie unlikely that the Legislature should have intended to apply a different rule in these two cases and if it did, it would have so provided expressly. In one class of cases it has so expressly provided, because clause (e) constitutes any portion of one of the larger estates dealt with in clauses (a), (b) and (c), an estate of itself within an estate for the purposes of the Act where it consists of one or more villages and is held on a permanent under-tenure, whether the tenure-holder or inamdar owns the Kudivaram or not. The Legislature having thus expressly made the Act apply as between the inamdar and his tenants in the case of certain inams in these large estates by virtue of the definition in clause (e), the next question is whether it intended to nullify that definition and render it altogether nugatory by adopting a few lines lower down a definition of "land-holder" wide enough in terms to include holders of inams and other under-tenures in the larger estates, where the inam in question did not consist of one or more villages, but as here of a lesser extent. The onus of showing that the definition of land-holder had this extraordinary result is strongly on those who affirm it.

To come now to the definition itself, 'land-holder' is defined in the first part of clause V as meaning "a person who owns an estate or part thereof". Stopping here, an inamdar who holds under a Zemindar subject to the payment of quit rent to him is not the owner of the inam land in the ordinary legal meaning of the word owner, as held in Raja of Vizianagaram v. Collector of Vizagapatam (1) where the authorities are cited. So long as a full owner in making a grant reserves an interest to himself, as by way of rent, he and his successors continue to be the owners, no matter how insignificant may be the interest he reserves for himself. There is no reason for attributing a different meaning to the term owning an estate in the present definition. No doubt where an inam is an estate within an estate by virtue of the definition in clauses (c), (d), section 3 (2), as the object of the inclusion is to apply the Act between the inamdar and his tenants, the inamdar must be held to be the land-holder for the purposes of the Act, but that is, not because he comes within the definition as owning an estate, but because it would be repugnant to the subject or context to apply the strict definition of "land-holder" to such a case.

The main contention, however, was that in a case such as the present the inamdar comes within the definition of land-holder, not because he is a person "owning an estate or part thereof," but because the clause proceeds to include in the term land-holder "every person entitled to collect the rents of the whole or a portion of the estate by virtue of any transfer from the owner or his predecessor-in-title or of any order of a competent Court or of any provision of law." What are to be collected here are "the rents of the whole or any portion of the estate" and rent is defined in clause (ii) as meaning "whatever is lawfully payable in money or in kind or in both to a land-holder for the use or occupation of land in his estate for the purpose of agriculture." It is a payment to a land-holder for the use or occupation of land in his estate, and cannot, therefore, include a payment by tenants to an inamdar for use and occupation of land in an estate which is not the inamdar's estate but in the estate of the superior land-holder. Not only then is the construction contended for opposed to the scheme of the Act, and the apparent intention of the Legislature as I have already endeavoured to show, but it cannot be arrived at without disregarding the definition of "rent" which itself has been framed to fit into the general scheme of the Act. There is, in my opinion, no sufficient reason for refusing to apply the definition of "rent" in clause (11) to the word "rents" in clause (5), and full effect can be given to that definition by reading the latter part of it as intended to include, as it says, persons entitled to collect the rents due to the owner of the estate, such as farmers or assignees of such rent by way of mortgage, etc. Whatever construction be put upon it, it affords, in my opinion, no justification for bringing inams, such as that with which we are dealing within the operation of the Act contrary to the intention of the Legislature as sufficiently indicated in the definitions of "estate," "rent" and "ryot" which are correlative and must be read together.

(1) 25 Ind. Cas. 780; 38 M. 1128; 27 M. L. J. [illegible] (1914) M. W. N. 610; 1 L. W. 635.

The contention now put forward is no doubt supported by the decision in Sivini Appalanarasimhulu v. Murada Sanyasi (2) which has been followed in several cases. In that and the subsequent decisions many of the considerations I have set out were not dealt with and were apparently overlooked. I am unable with great respect to follow them, as I am satisfied that it was not the intention of the Legislature to apply the Act to this class of cases, and it appears to me to be of great importance that an Act of this kind should not be extended by strained construction to cases not contemplated by the Legislature. If cases such as this are to be brought under the Act, it should be by an amendment of the existing Act. For these reasons I agree with the Subordinate Judge and would dismiss this second appeal with costs.

SADASIVA AIYAR, J.—I regret that I have the misfortune to differ from my Lord the Chief Justice in this case. I agree that, after the recent decisions of the Privy Council, we must hold that the post settlement grant made to the inamdar (the plaintiff's ancestor) was a grant of both Warams. It is also clear that the inam not being a whole village or part of a permanently settled estate separately registered, the lands themselves do not form an estate within the definition of section 3, clause 2 (b), (d) or (e) of the Estates Land Act.

The decision in this case, therefore, depends solely upon the answer to the question whether an inamdar to whom lands were granted by the Zamindar after the settlement and out of the lands included in the permanently settled estate is a land-holder within the definition of clause 5 of section 3. If an inamdar can be said to own part of an estate, he clearly comes under the definition of land-holder. If, again, he can be called a person "entitled to collect the rents of any portion of an estate by virtue of" the inam grant (which is clearly a transfer), then also he comes under the definition of land-holder and section 6 applies in favour of the ryots holding lands under him. Now, the inamdar of a whole village is admittedly a land-holder, because the whole village itself is an estate and he owns it as an inamdar even though he might be paying some Kattubadi or Jodi to the higher owner, the Zamindar. Thus the words "persons owning part of an estate" in clause 5 of section 3 admittedly include several classes at least of inamdars also, notwithstanding that their ownership is accompanied by the recognition of a higher owner, the Zamindar, through their payment of Jodi or Kattubadi to the Zamindar. Hence it seems to me that a minor inamdar also, though he may not own a whole village in an estate as part of an estate, does own in the very same sense his inam lands which are undoubtedly part of the permanently settled estate and hence he comes under the definition of land holder even within the first portion of the definition of land holder. If, again, "rents" in the second portion of the definition mean "rents and profits," he is included in the second portion of the definition also, where he usually lets the lands to tenants and obtains rents from his tenants. Some inamdars no doubt would still escape falling under the definition of "land-holder," that is, those inamdars to whom inams had been granted before the Permanent Setttement without reservation of Kattubadi or Jodi. I, therefore, think that the construction placed by the uniform decisions of this Court on the definition of "land-holder" does not render altogether nugatory the definition of an "estate" in clause 2 (e) of section 3, as it does exclude some inamdars from the provisions of the Act, that is, many pre settlement inamdars. As regards all post-settlement inams, their grants were grants of land out of an estate and such grants cannot prevent those lands from continuing to be "part thereof," that is, part of the estate, whether that part forms a whole village (in which case the inamdar admittedly does own it) or only defined lands not forming a whole village.

(2) 17 Ind. Cas. 120; 33 M. 33.

Again the Madras Estates Land Act came into force in July 1908. It naturally took about 3 years for the question, whether a Dharmila minor inamdar is or is not a "land-holder", to arise before the High Court for direct decision after contest in a lower Court or Courts. The earliest direct decision on this point I have come across is the one in Civil Revision Petition No. 895 of 1910 dated 9th November 1911, where Abdur Rahim, J, held that a minor Dharmila inamdar is a "land-holder." For more than eight years now, that view has held the ground. Sundara Aiyar, J, and myself followed it in Sivini Appalanarasimhulu v. Murada Sanyasi (2) and I find that a majority of the Judges of this Court have followed the same opinion. I am, therefore, unwilling to depart from this catena of decisions, especially as it is very difficult to get at the real and final intention of the Legislature from the words of an Act whose language was added to and modified during its long progress through the Legislative Council in various ways, according as the party favourable to the land holder or the party favourable to the tenants got the upper hand in debates from time to time. I would, therefore, allow the appeal and dismiss the suit as the tenants had obtained full occupancy right under section 6, on the date of this suit. As regards costs, I would give costs in this second appeal to the appellant (3rd defendant), but as section 6 was not relied on in the Court of the District Munsif, I would order the parties to bear their respective costs in the lower Courts.

RESULT—the appeal is dismissed with costs.

M. C. P.

Appeal dismissed.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

APPEAL FROM ORIGINAL DECREE No. 151 OF 1917.

February 6, 1920.

Present:—Mr. Justice Richardson and Justice Sir Syed Shamsul Huda, KT.

BEJOY SINGH HAZARI—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

Srimati MATHURIYA DEBYA, WIDOW OF RAMDIN HAZARI, AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XXXII, rr. 4, 7—Next friend of minor having interest in conflict with that of minor, effect of—Compromise, when binding upon minor—Fraud and collusion, effect of—Hindu Law—Mitakshara—Adoption—Infant, whether can be adopted.

If in a suit the personal interest of the next friend of a minor conflicts with his duty towards the minor, then, unless the next friend shows uberrima fides, he is not competent to act as the minor's next friend. In such a case the minor is not properly represented and the decree in the suit would not be binding upon him. [p. 105, col. 2; p. 106, col. 1.]

Unnoda Dabee v. Maria Louisa Stevenson, 22 W. R. 290, followed.

It is no dereliction of duty on the part of a guardian to refuse to litigate on his ward's behalf a claim which he knows to be false and unfounded in fact. [p. 106, col. 1.]

In giving permission to compromise a suit on behalf of a minor, it is usual and desirable that the Court should record an order stating that it considers the compromise to be for the benefit of the minor, but such an order is not essential to the validity of the compromise. The addition of the words "expressly recorded in the proceedings" in Order XXXII, rule 7, of the Code of Civil Procedure has not changed the pre-existing practice under section 462 of the Code of 1882. [p. 107, col. 1.]

Manohar Lal v. Jadu Nath Singh, 33 I. A. 128; 8 Bom. L. R. 489; 10 C. W. N. 898; 4 C. L. J. 8; 16 M. L. J. 291; 3 A. L. J. 710; 28 A. 585; 9 C. C. 219; 1 M. L. T. 210 (P.C.), followed.

Under the Mitakshara the order of performing sradh ceremony has no necessary relation to the order of succession to property. [p. 109, col. 1.]

BEJOY SINGH v. MATHURIYA DEBYA.

It is not illegal to adopt an infant in arms, but it is very unusual for a child to be formally taken in adoption at the early age of thirteen days. [p. 109, col. 1.]

Apart from fraud or collusion or any vitiating circumstance, a question settled by a compromise cannot afterwards be revived in Court for judicial determination. [p. 112, col. 1.]

Miles v. New Zealand Alford Estate Co., (1886) 32 Ch. D. 266; 55 L. J. Ch 801; 54 L. T. 582; 34 W. R. 669, Rameswar Pershad Singh v. Ram Bahadur Singh, 34 C. 70; 11 C. W. N. 178; 5 C. L. J. 175; 17 M. L. J. 59; 2 M. L. T. 165 (P. C.), followed.

The family to which the plaintiff belonged was governed by the Benares School of Mitakshara Law. One or other of its members acquired considerable properties in the Chittagong District which devolved on three brothers, Kamala Prasad, Kanta Prasad and Bhagirath. The only living representatives of Kamala Prasad's branch were defendants Nos. 4 and 5 who were the widows of his two sons. Ramdin and defendant No 2 were two sons of Bhagirath. Ramdin was taken in adoption by Kanta Prasad. Defendants Nos. 1 and 3 were the widows of Ramdin and Kanta Prasad respectively and the plaintiff was the son of defendant No. 2. In 1909 defendant No. 2 on behalf of himself and as next friend of his minor son, the present plaintiff, instituted a suit as members of a joint undivided Mitakshara family and prayed for a declaration of their title as such to the Chittagong properties and as against defendant No. 1 for recovery of possession. In this suit a compromise was arrived at by which the defendant No. 2 and his son, the present plaintiff, got a moiety of the properties in dispute, and the other moiety went to defendant No. 1. After attaining majority the present suit was brought by the plaintiff for a declaration that as the adopted son of Ramdin he was entitled to an 8-annas share of the Chittagong properties and that the consent decree in the previous suit was not binding on him:

Held, (1) that in order to determine whether the plaintiff was bound by the compromise, it was necessary first to ascertain whether he was or was not adopted in fact; [p. 105, col. 1.]

(2) that if the plaintiff was adopted by Ramdin and the adoption was sedulously kept from the knowledge of the Court, then the leave or consent of the Court to the previous suit being compromised would be no true consent and the minor would not be bound by the compromise; [p. 105, col. 2.]

(3) that if the plaintiff was not adopted by Ramdin, he was bound by the compromise decree. [p. 106, col. 2.]

Appeal against the decree of the Additional Subordinate Judge, Chittagong, dated the 22nd of March 1917.

FACTS appear from the judgment.

Mr. S. R. Das (with him Babus Chandra Sekhar Sen, Mukunda Behari Mullick and Narendra Kumar Das), for the Appellant.—The plaintiff is the appellant. The appeal arises out of a suit for declaration that the defendant No. 6 is not the adopted son of one Ramdin, that plaintiff is his adopted son and as such he is entitled to 8 annas of the Chittagong properties belonging to his adoptive father, Ramdin, and lastly plaintiff prayed for the setting aside of a deed of compromise in a previous suit in which he was represented by his father, he being a minor at that time. The learned Subordinate Judge dismissed the suit, holding that the plaintiff was not the adopted son of Ramdin, neither was defendant No. 6 the adopted son of Ramdin and that the plaintiff was bound by the compromise decree. My appeal is directed against the decision of the learned Subordinate, on the two main grounds that he ought to have held that the plaintiff was the adopted son of Ramdin and that he was not bound by the compromise decree. The defendants' appeal No. 145 of 19 7 need not be gone into if I succeed in this appeal. The properties originally belonged to Bhagaban Singh Hazari, who died leaving a son Anup Singh. Anup had four sons Ganga Prosad, Bhola Singh, Lachman Singh and Bahuri Prosad. Bhola Singh had a son Kamala who left three sons, Raghobar whose widow is defendant No. 4, Ramdas who died unmarried and Ramnath whose widow is defendant No. 5. Lachman Singh had one son Kanta Prosad, whose widow Chhatan Kumari is defendant No. 3. Bahuri Prosad, the fourth son of Anup, had one son Bhagirath who died leaving Ramdin whose widow is Mathuriya defendant No. 1; Sheodayal who is defendant No. 2 whose son is Gajaraj alias Bejoy Singh, the plaintiff in this suit; the third and fourth sons of Bhagirath are dead and we are not now concerned with them in this appeal.

The Hazari family belongs to the Banda District in the United Provinces and is governed by the Benaras School of Mitakshara Law. It is an undivided joint Hindu family. The properties which were at some time acquired by some of the members have been looked after and managed ever since by one of the most competent of the members. Our case is that Kanta Prosad had managed these properties and lived at Chittagong for that purpose.

My case is that Kanta Prosad adopted Ramdin. Plaintiff was born on November 18th, 1895, and was adopted on December 1st, 1895. On the day of his birth he was made over to defendant No. 4. At that time Sheogobin, the eldest son of Sheodyal, was alive. He died a few months after plaintiff's adoption. When plaintiff was 8 or 9 months old, he was brought to Chittagong and was taken back after 2 years. He came back to Chittagong when he was 6 or 7 years of age and was put in a school and was treated as the son of Ramdin. Kanta Prosad died on the 25th September 1904. Sheodyal all the while had been living at Banda while the plaintiff had been living at Chittagong under the care of Ramdin. The family consisted of Ramdin, Sheodayal and the plaintiff. Ramdin as the eldest male member took the management of the Zemindary in his hands. Kanta Prosad had no power to give away by Will the property which belonged to all the joint members of the family. Ramdin died on 5th November 1905. Sheodayal was then at Banda while the plaintiff was at Chittagong. The plaintiff performed the Sradh of Ramdin and the learned Subordinate Judge has found it to be true. I submit that if the plaintiff was not the adopted son of Ramdin as the other side contend, then Sheodayal as the nearest Sapinda should have performed Ramdin's Sradh which he did not do. After the Sradh defendant No. 1 got her name registered, the exact date of which is not known. However, it is in evidence that plaintiff, Sheodayal and defendant No. 1 continued to live jointly, Sheodayal's principal residence being at Banda. About the year 1908 defendant No. 2 came to Chittagong and went to his Zemindary and there he discovered that defendant No. 1 was registered as the owner of the Zemindary. That was about September or October 1908. In February 1909 defendant No. 2 instituted Suit No. 223 on behalf of himself and his son.

[SHAMSUL HUDA, J.—There was no mention of the adoption in that suit?]

Mr. Das.—No. The suit was compromised on the 6th July 1910. Sheodayal compromised because he had no sufficient funds to carry on the litigation. By the terms of the compromise the plaintiff and his father got half of the properties while the defendant No. 1 obtained the other half. Sheodayal consented to defendant No. 1's taking a son in adoption in the compromise. We challenge the compromise decree because it is not for the benefit of the minor. Then the partition was made according to the terms of the compromise decree and possession was given to the parties. In 1913 defendant No. 1 was trying to adopt defendant No. 6. Upon that the mother of the plaintiff attempted to prevent the adoption by applying for an injunction to restrain defendant No. 1 from adopting defendant No. 6. On 30th April 1913 the application was refused.

Now I will give your Lordships some important dates for the period subsequent to that. The defendant No. 6 was adopted on the 1st of May 1913. The plaintiff attained majority on the 19th of November 1913. The Suit No. 17 was withdrawn on the 19th of May 1914. The present suit was instituted on the 12th June 1914. (Reads the plaint.) My case is that the properties are joint family properties and that I am entitled to 8-annas share of them by virtue of my being an adopted son of Ramdin. Therefore, the first point for consideration is whether the family is a joint Hindu family. The next point is whether the family is governed by the Mitakshara School of Hindu Law. If the plaintiff be the adopted son he is legally entitled to 8 annas share of the properties. If he is not an adopted son, then even as a member of a joint Mitakshara family the plaintiff is entitled to one-third of the properties with defendant No. 2 and his son, the brother of the plaintiff. If the plaintiff is the adopted son, he is not bound by the compromise as it is not at all beneficial to his interests. If he is not an adopted son, then also he would not be bound as the terms of the compromise are unreasonable. The question whether the compromise was for the benefit of the plaintiff or not would involve another question, viz, whether the properties in dispute were properties of a joint Hindu family. But the learned Sub-Judge did not consider the question at all. His decision was mainly that the plaintiff was not an adopted son and that he was bound by the compromise decree. My point is that if there was no adoption, then the plaintiff would get an equal share with defendant No. 2. Defendant No. 1 would in that case be entitled to maintenance only. By defendant No 1's adoption the plaintiff's share would be reduced to one-third. By the compromise defendant No. 1 has got 8 annas, which is against the benefit of the plaintiff.

If the compromise is not binding, then the following questions would arise for consideration, viz., (1) whether the plaintiff is or is not an adopted son, (2) if not, whether the properties in dispute belong to the joint family or not. (Reads the judgment.)

The Subordinate Judge has found that the parties are governed by the Mitakshara School of Hindu Law. The natural presumption would be that the family was joint unless it be rebutted. The onus of proving that the family was not joint but separate would be on the other side and not on the plaintiff.

I shall now take up my first question, viz., whether the plaintiff has or has not been adopted. From the judgment it seems as though the learned Judge had made up his mind from the very beginning and then proceeded to adjudicate upon the question. (Reads the evidence.) The evidence on the point is one-sided. We have mentioned the names of the men whom defendant No. 1 should have called. But she did not venture to call them although she had ample opportunity to do so. The plaintiff on the other hand has called in the Lambardars, the most respectable people of the village, who could be naturally expected to have been present on such occasions. Why Sheodayal did not mention the fact of adoption in the previous suit cannot be explained. I do not rely on Sheodayal's evidence. His interests would be affected if plaintiff's adoption be proved as in that case his share would diminish. I will now deal with the probabilities and the conduct and treatment of the plaintiff in the family. (Reads evidence.)

Then as to the compromise Mathuria has been given half for her life. Sheodayal's interest was adverse to that of the plaintiff; hence there was sufficient reason for him to compromise. After the compromise several plaints were filed in which the plaintiff was described as the son of Sheodayal. But after the attainment of majority of the plaintiff there is nothing to show that I adopted that position.

Then as to my other point I will show from the evidence that the properties had never been separated and that the family had all along been in joint possession of them. (Reads documentary evidence.) From the evidence it is clear that the family was joint in mess, joint in worship and joint in properties. There is no evidence except that of defendant No. 1 to prove separation. There is absolutely no documentary evidence to prove separation.

Then as to Kanta Prosad's Will, its object was to provide for Chhattan Kumari. He could execute the Will to give a status to his adopted son. By his Will he did not make any disposition of his properties, neither was then any schedule of properties annexed to the Will. I would contend that once your Lordships find that the properties are joint, the onus would be heavily on the other side to prove separation. The compromise decree is not binding on me, as it was obtained by the fraudulent suppression of the fact of adoption and the terms of the compromise were prejudicial to my interests. Refers to Virupakshappa v. Shidappa (1), Rameswar Pershad Singh v. Ram Bahadur Singh (2), Biku Halwai v. Mohesh Halwai (3), Kidnapore Zemindari Co., Ltd. v. Gobinda Mahto (4) per Woodroffe, J., Ganesha Row v. Tulja Ram Row (5); Order XXXII, rule 7, Civil Procedure Code.

Sir Rashbihari Ghosh (with him Babus Charu Chandra Sen, Paresh Chandra Sen and Probhat Chandra Dutt), for the Respondents.—The plaintiff is not entitled to raise the question of adoption unless the compromise decree is set aside. He is bound by the compromise. He ratified the terms of the said compromise on attaining majority. He himself said so in his deposition in the case. Further he effected a mortgage of the 8-annas share of a certain property to meet the expenses of this very suit. The compromise cannot be set aside now. The

(1) 26 B. 109, 3 Bom. L. R. 565.
(2) 34 C. 70; 11 C. W. N. 178; 5 C. L. J. 175; 17 M. L. J. 59; 2 M. L. T. 165 (P. C.).
(3) 8 C. L. J. 266.
(4) 8 C. L. J. 31 at p. 33.
(5) 19 Ind. Cas. 515; 40 I. A. 132 at p. 139; 17 C. W. N. 765; 11 A. L. J. 589; 18 C. L. J. 1; 15 Bom. L. R. 626; 14 M. L. T. 1; (1913) M. W. N. 575; 25 M. L. J. 150; 36 M. 295 (P. C).

parties to it cannot possibly be restored to their original position. The compromise was effected to the full knowledge of the Court which gave its consent thereto. The natural presumption would, therefore, be that the compromise was for the minor's benefit.

Then, as to the plaintiff's adoption, the learned Subordinate Judge's finding is clear, which ought not to be disturbed by the Appellate Court unless it is satisfactorily proved that he was wrong. The trial Court is the best judge of the credibility and veracity of the witnesses whose demeanour it had the opportunity to watch. The story of adoption as set out by the plaintiff is absolutely improbable and false. The fact that Bejoy performed the Sradh of Ramdin is not of much avail to the plaintiff. The performance of Sradh is not a matter of right but a matter of duty. It has no connection with the law of succession of the Mitakshara School. (Discusses evidence on adoption and compromise.) In support of my contention I would refer your Lordships to Miles v. New Zealand Alford Estate Co., (6), Jayawickreme v. Amarasuriya (7), Upendra Nath Bose v. Bindeshri Prosad (8), Birbhadra Rath v. Kalpataru Panda (9), Ganesha Row v. Tulja Ram Row (5), Biku Halwai v. Mohesh Halwai (3), Midnapore Zamindari Co. Ltd. v. Gobinda Mahto (4); Order XXXII, rule 7, Civil Procedure Code; section 147, Civil Procedure Code. The learned Subordinate Judge, having fully gone into the merits of the case, has arrived at right and just findings which should not be disturbed.

Mr. S. R. Das replied in brief.

JUDGMENT.—In the suit out of which this appeal arises, the plaintiff seeks for a declaration that as the adopted son of one Ramdin he is entitled to an eight-annas share of certain properties situated in the District of Chittagong and for a further declaration that the defendant No. 6 has not been validly adopted to Ramdin by the latter's widow. The plaintiff also seeks to set aside a consent decree in a previous suit to which he was a party as a minor represented by his father.

The Subordinate Judge has arrived at the following conclusions:—

(1) that the plaintiff is not the adopted son of Ramdin;

(2) that Ramdin's widow had no authority to adopt a son and that the adoption by her of the defendant No. 6 is, therefore, invalid; and

(3) that the plaintiff is bound by the consent decree.

In the appeal before us (No. 151) the plaintiff appeals from the first and third of these findings.

The defendant No. 6 has also preferred an appeal (No. 145), the hearing of which we deferred at the instance of the parties.

(6) (1886) 32 Ch. D. 266; 55 L. J. Ch. 801; 54 L. T. 592; 34 W. R 669.

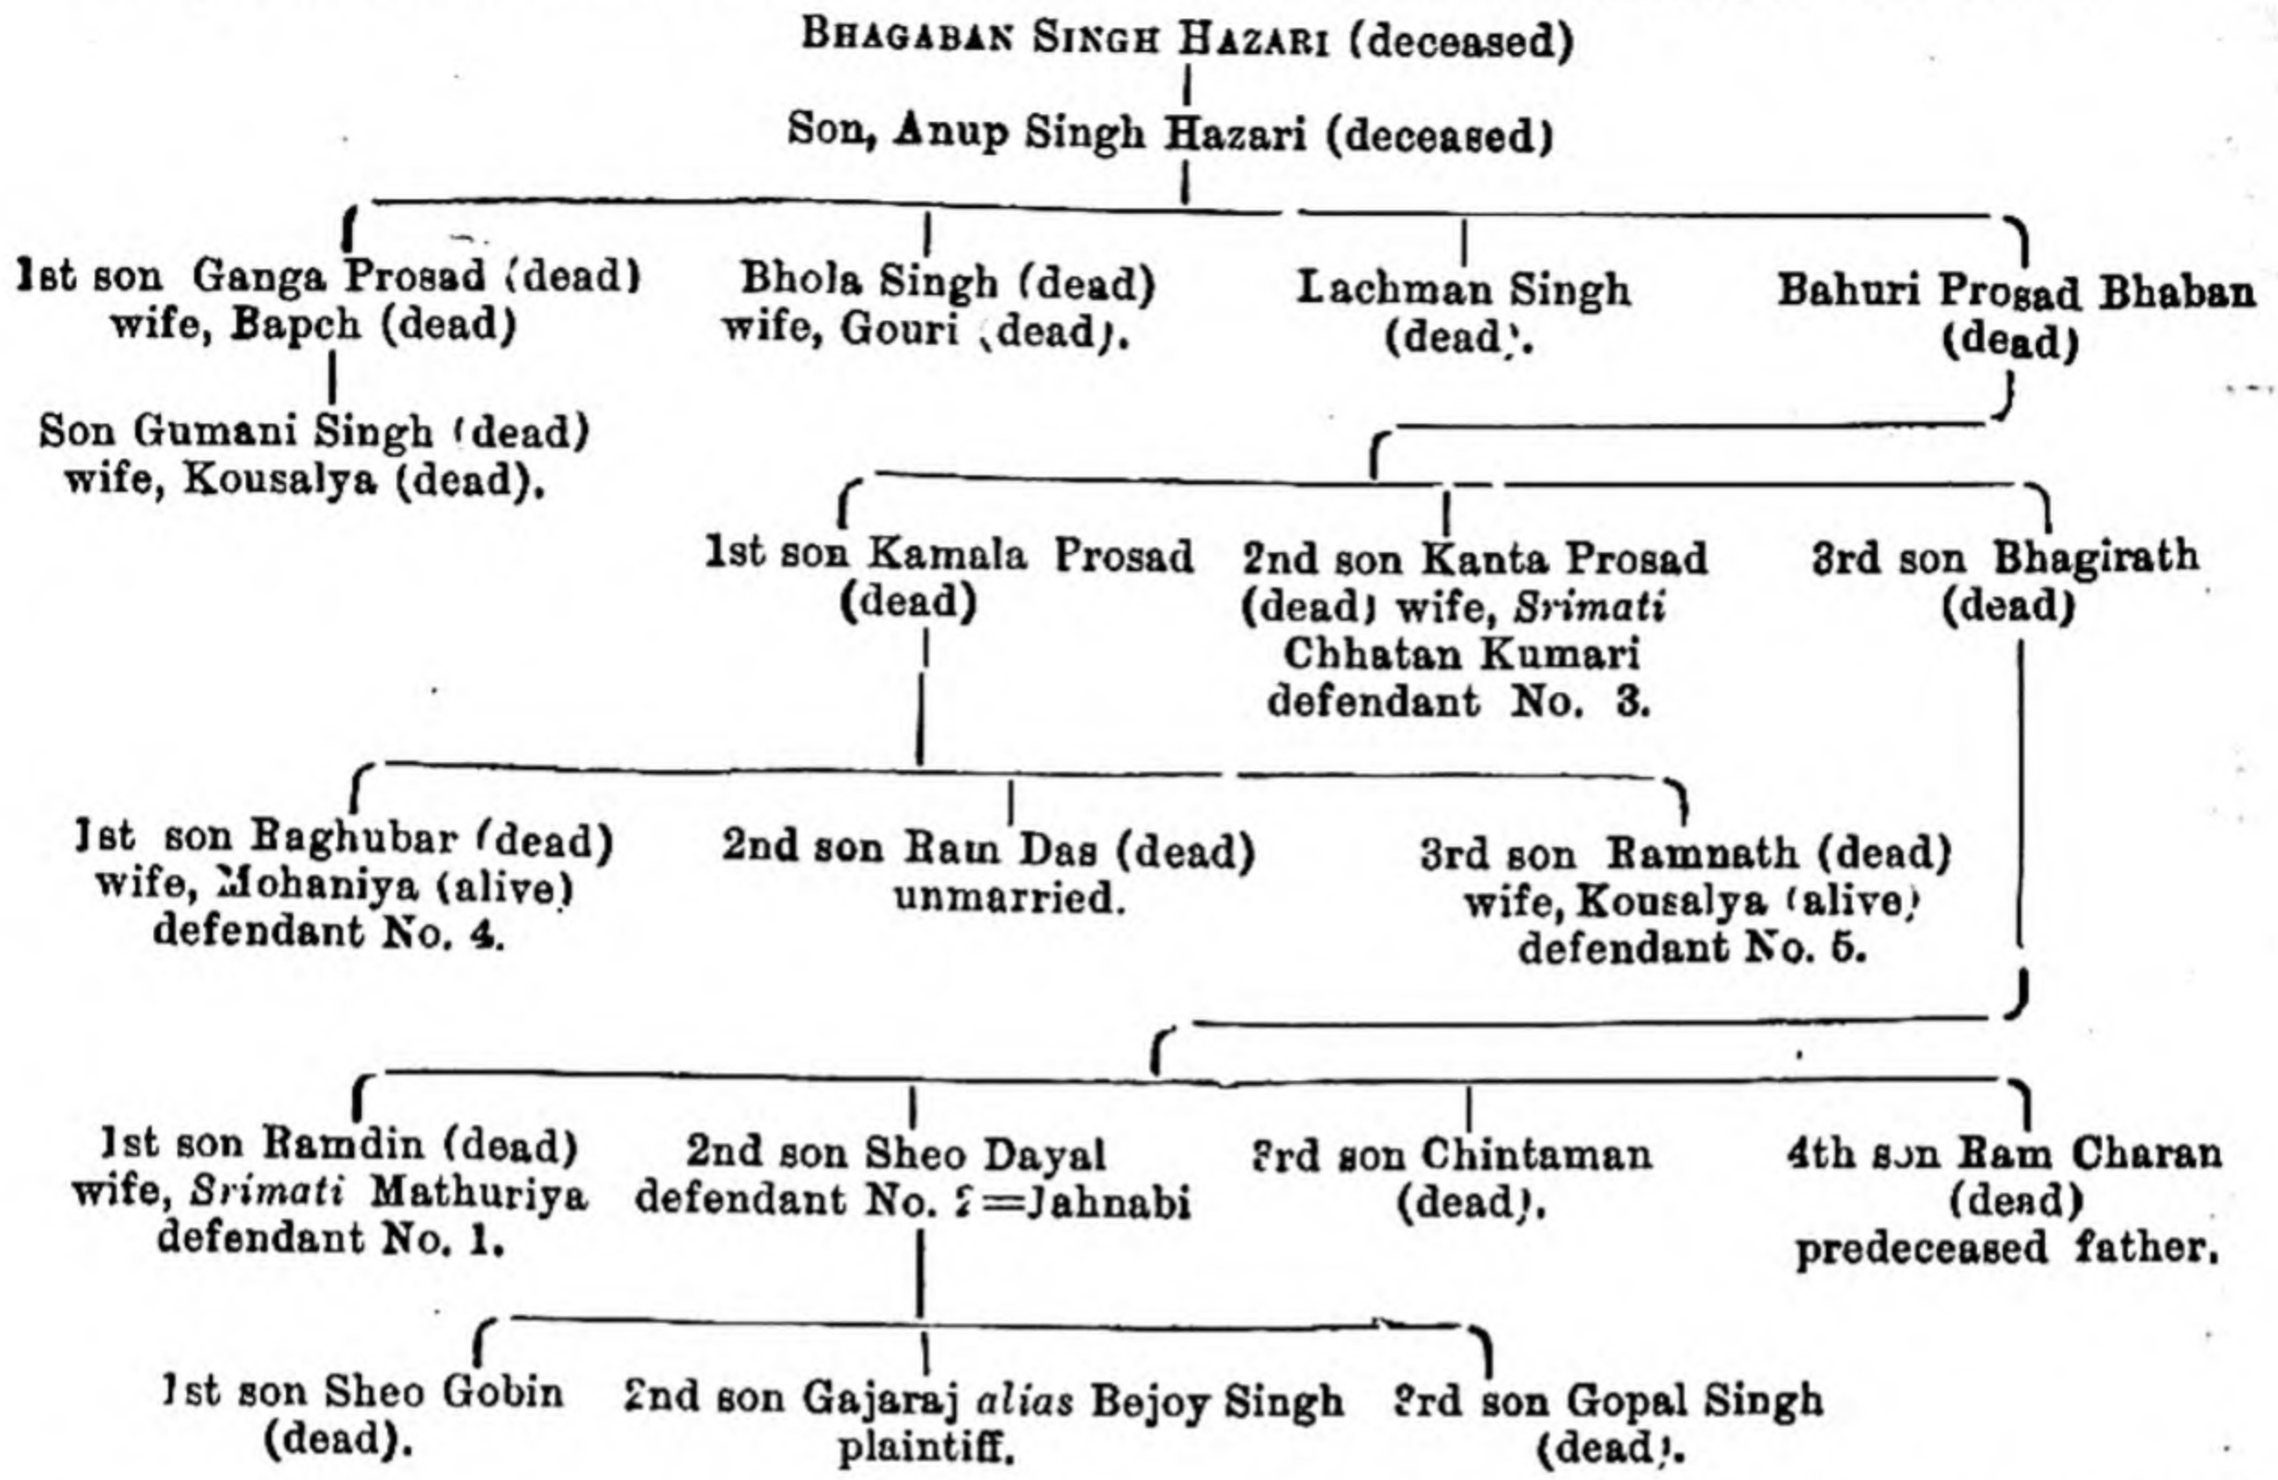
(7) (1918) A. C. 869 at p. 873; 87 L. J. P. C. 165; 119 L. T. 499.

(8) 32 Ind Cas. 463; 22 C. L. J. 452; 20 C. W. N. 210.

(9) 1 C. L. J. 388 at p. 397.

BEJOY SINGH v. MATHURIYA DEBYA.

The genealogical table which follows will be found convenient for reference:—



The Hazari family to which the plaintiff belongs originated in the village of Bisenda (the name is variously spelt) in the Banda District of the United Provinces, and is governed by the Benares School of Mitakshara Law. The family for the most part still lives there, but one or other of its members acquired considerable properties in the Chittagong District, which, according to the plaintiff's case, devolved on the three sons of Bahuri Prosad Bhabani, by name Kamala Prosad, Kanta Prosad and Bhagirath. The only living representatives of Kamala Prosad's branch are the widow of his eldest son, and Kousalya, the widow of his third son, Ram Nath, these ladies being the defendants Nos. 4 and 5 in this suit. Kanta Prosad's widow, the defendant No. 3, is an old lady. Bhagirath, like his brothers, is dead. The principal defendant is the defendant No. 1, Mathuriya, the widow of his eldest son Ramdin. His second son, Sheodayal, is the defendant No. 2 and Sheodayal's son, Bejoy or Gajaraj Singh, is the plaintiff.

There seems to be no question that the family possessions at Bisenda are joint undivided family property. According to the plaintiff, the much more valuable properties at Chittagong are also joint properties, and it is the family practice to send an intelligent member to Chittagong to manage them in the interests of the family as a whole. This post, the plaintiff says, was filled by Kanta Prosad Hazari, and though it is disputed whether he acted as manager or as proprietor, it is common ground that, in one capacity or the other, he controlled the Chittagong properties in his lifetime. It is also common ground that, having no son of his own, he adopted his brother's son, Ramdin.

Kanta Prosad died on the 25th September 1904 leaving a Will dated a few days earlier (18th September), by which he gave all his properties, moveable and immoveable, to Ramdin to be 'Malik thereof', the properties being described in comprehensive terms, but not in detail. The gift was subject to certain bequests to his widow and other persons. Whether it was in consequence of the Will or in consequence of the family practice or in consequence of both combined, Ramdin succeeded to the control of the Chittagong properties.

The plaintiff was born at Bisenda on the 18th November 1895 and he alleges that some 13 days later, on the 1st December 1895 (17th Aghran 1302 B. S.), he was adopted by Ramdin, who had been summoned by telegram from Chittagong. Shortly afterwards, it is said, Ramdin took his wife Mathuriya and the plaintiff and his natural mother to Chittagong. It may be mentioned that Sheodayal's eldest son died at the age of three or four years, a few months after Bejoy's birth. After spending, say, two years at Chittagong with Ramdin, the plaintiff and his mother returned to Bisenda where Sheodayal had been living. The plaintiff remained there for some years and was then sent back, when he was 8 or 9 years old, to Ramdin at Chittagong, where he was admited to the Upper Primary School in April 1906. The admission register describes him as Bejoy, son of Sheodayal, and refers to Ramdin as his "guardian". It may well be that he was destined to succeed Ramdin, much as Ramdin had succeeded Kanta Prosad, but the main question in the case is, whether Ramdin had actually adopted him.

On the 5th November 1906 Ramdin died suddenly. His Sradh was performed by the plaintiff, though Sheodayal had arrived before the ceremony. It was Mathuriya, however, who stood forth as her husband's heiress. She had her name registered in the Collectorate in place of Ramdin's and assumed the management not on behalf of the plaintiff as Ramdin's adopted son, but on her own behalf and in her own right. Sheodayal and the plaintiff lived with her, and the evidence shows that Sheodayal was cognizant of her proceedings and raised no finger in protest. After some months at Chittagong he returned to Bisenda.

He was back in Chittagong about the spring of 1908. Meanwhile, he had married a second wife, by whom, we are told by Kausalya, he has a daughter. His statement is that it was not till September or October 1908 that he discovered, while visiting estates in the Mufassal, that Mathuriya had had her name registered as proprietor. The discovery, he adds, led to a quarrel. The statement is disingenuous and untrue, but the question whether the Chittagong properties were joint family properties or not probably entered the stage of serious controversy about this time.

It also appears that Chhattan Kumari and Mathuriya were not on good terms. The elder lady was dissatisfied because her allowance for maintenance was irregularly paid, or not paid in full. In a suit instituted in 1910 against Mathuriya, Sheodayal and Bejoy, she obtained a decree for arrears of maintence which is referred to in the plaint of a similar suit instituted in 1912 (Exhibit 21).

The time was, therefore, ripe for the inevitable litigation, and in February 1909 Sheodayal, on behalf of himself and his son, whom he represented as next friend, instituted Suit No. 223 against Mathuriya and Chhattan Kumari. The plaint asserted the rights of the plaintiffs as members of a joint undivided Mitakshara family and prayed for a declaration of their title as such to the Chittagong properties in suit, and as against Mathuriya for recovery of possession. There was also a prayer for the appointment of a Receiver pendente lite. The adoption of Bijoy by Ramdin was not mentioned or suggested. The two ladies filed separate written statements. Chhattan Kumari insisted on her right to maintenance and had no objection to the properties being managed by Sheodayal. She went on to say that Bejoy had been adopted by Ramdin, and that statement, so far as we know, is the earliest reference in writing to the adoption. In her plaint of 1912, to which we have just referred (Exhibit 21), she made a similar statement. Mathuriya's written statement has not been printed, but the case she made is succinctly stated as follows in her deposition taken by a Commissioner in June 1910:—

'Previously my father-in-law was owner of the properties that are in Chittagong. Before the death of my father-in-law he gave the properties to my husband by a Will. My husband having left no issue, I have become the owner. During my father in law's lifetime he was Malik Dakhilkar of these properties: After my father-in law my husband became the Dakhilkar. After my husband I have become the Dakhildar. My father-in-law had been in possession for 40 or 50 years (volunteers). He had adverse Maliki possession..... .....I did not see any one in the same mess with my father-in-law. In our family there was no one except my father-in law. My husband worked under orders of my father-in-law.

Q. Excepting this, was there any one in joint estate with your father-in-law or not?

A. No."

Such being the cases set up by the parties respectively, a compromise was arrived at which is embodied in a petition dated 6th July 1910. Sheodayal and his son were to have a decree for a moiety of the properties in dispute, and Mathuriya was to have a life-interest in the other moiety. The properties were to be partitioned on that footing. Mathuriya was also to be "entitled to adopt a son," and if she adopted a son, that son was to get her moiety of the properties "in absolute right from the date of adoption." Provision was made for the payment of maintenance to Chhattan Kumari at the rate of Rs. 1,000 a year, such maintenance to be paid by the plaintiffs and Mathuriya in equal shares. It was further provided that Mathuriya should have no claim to the properties in the Banda District which were to belong to the plaintiffs. The leave of the Court was obtained to compromise the suit on behalf of the minor plaintiff, Bejoy, on these terms, and a decree was drawn up accordingly. The partition was carried out by Commissioners appointed by the parties, and their award was confirmed by the Court with certain modifications in a final decree dated 19th January 1911.

The names of Sheodayal and his son were duly registered in the Collectorate in respect of the moiety assigned to them by the compromise, and after the partition, they entered into possession and enjoyment of that share.

It is this compromise which the plaintiff Bejoy now seeks to set aside, and the circumstances immediately leading to the present litigation may be shortly stated.

In April 1913 Mathuriya announced her intention of taking a son in adoption. Upon that a suit (No. 17 of 1913) was instituted by Bejoy, represented by his natural mother as his next friend, for an injunction to restrain Mathuriya from carrying out her intention. The plaint asserted the adoption of Bejoy by Ramdin. The temporary injunction for which the application was made was refused by the Court and on the 1st May 1913 Mathuriya purported formally to adopt her brother's son, the defendant No. 6. The suit, therefore, became infructuous, and on the 19th May 1914 it was withdrawn by Bejoy himself, who had come of age in November 1913.

The present suit was filed on the 12th June 1914.

Before dealing with the questions discussed at the Bar, it will be convenient to take stock of the plaintiff's position from the death of Ramdin to the compromise of 1910. During this period Sheodayal and the plaintiff were the only surviving male representatives of the family.

If the Chittagong properties were the separate and self-acquired properties of Kanta Prosad, which devolved on Ramdin, and if Ramdin adopted the plaintiff, then the latter was exclusively entitled to the properties as Ramdin's heir and the compromise was undoubtedly injurious to his interests, which, in such case, were in direct conflict with those of his father.

But it is not, and never has been, the plaintiff's case that the properties belonged exclusively to Kanta Prosad. It would have been a dangerous case to put forward, because, if he failed to prove the adoption, he and his father would have had no part or parcel in the properties at any rate during Mathuriya's lifttime.

His case is that the properties are joint family properties. If so, and if Ramdin adopted him, his title was to an eight-annas share on partition, the other eight annas going on partition to Sheodayal and any other sons Sheodayal might have. On this hypothesis the disparity of interests between the plaintiff and his father would be less, but there would still be conflict. The plaintiff would have a vested right to an eight annas share on partition, a share not liable to be diminished by the birth of other sons to his father. Though before partition Sheodayal might well claim to be manager or Karta of the whole in succession to Ramdin, nevertheless, the fact of the son's adoption would require consideration in connection with any compromise that might be arrived at on his behalf. It would confine the father and his other son or sons to an eight annas share on partition, and it would leave to Mathuriya only the right to maintenance.

If the properties were joint and the plaintiff was not the adopted son of Ramdin, then the interests of father and son coincided and in any dispute that arose there could be no conflict between Sheodayal's personal interest and his duty to his son.

Now it was contended by Sar Rash Behari Ghose, appearing for Mathuriya, that until the compromise was set aside the plaintiff was not at liberty to raise the question of his adoption. In our opinion that is not so, because the main question agitated in the suit of 1909 was whether the Chittagong properties were joint or not. It is that question which formed the subject of compromise and the question of the plaintiff's adoption was not brought into discussion. (See the evidence of the Pleader Prasanna Kumar Das.) In order to determine whether the compromise binds the plaintiff, it is necessary first to ascertain whether he was or was not adopted in fact. The point possibly requires a little amplification in connection with what we have said as to the plaintiff's position.

It seems clear that nothing was said about the adoption when the leave of the Court to compromise the suit on Bejoy's behalf was obtained. There was no doubt the assertion made by Chhattan Kumari in her written statement. But, though a defendant, she was not a principal actor in the suit. She was mainly concerned with her allowance for maintenance and there is every reason to suppose that her reference to the adoption was not brought to the notice of the Court. The principal actors were Sheodayal and Mathuriya. No hint of any adoption is to be found in the plaint filed by the former, and the adoption is entirely inconsistent with the case made by the latter. No issue was framed on the subject. Chhattan Kumari was examined at length on commission. No question was put to her regarding the adoption, though she did say, when asked how Mathuriya had been managing the properties, that Sheodayal and Ram Narayan (a dependent of the family and salaried manager also known as Bara Baccha) were managing the properties on Bejoy's behalf, and that she had heard that they were being managed in his name. Both statements were untrue, and even assuming that this evidence was read to the Court it would not have attracted attention. There were interlocutory proceedings in the suit. The trial Court by order appointed a Receiver. There was an appeal to the High Court which discharged the order. The judgment of the learned Judge dated 6th December 1909 begins by saying that for the purposes of the case "the contest may be taken to be limited to be one between the plaintiff No. 1 Shibdayal Singh and the defendant No. 1 Mathuriya Debya." Bejoy is not even mentioned. The decision rests on the ground that Mathuriya was in exclusive and bona fide possession of the estate. If there had been any question of Bejoy's adoption, the learned Judges would hardly have spoken of the lady's bona fides in terms so positive.

If Bejoy was adopted by Ramdin, no one knew the fact better than Sheodayal, his natural father, or Mathuriya, his adoptive mother, and if they did not put the Court in possession of a fact so pertinent to the interests of the minor, they were guilty of a deliberate suppression of the truth, which could only be attributed to interested and unconscientious motives. The terms of the compromise would be grossly misleading not only by way of concealment but also in the clause stating that Mathuriya "shall be entitled to adopt a son," by active suggestion of the falsehood that there was then no adopted son in being.

If, then, Bejoy was adopted by Ramdin, the adoption was sedulously kept from the knowledge of the Court. That being so, the leave or consent of the Court to the suit being compromised would be no true consent and the minor would not be bound. Moreover, the obvious inference from the facts is that the case was presented and dealt with on the footing that Sheodayal and his son were sailing in the same boat, that their interests were identical. If that was not so and Sheodayal's position was such that his personal interest conflicted with his duty to his son, then, unless at any rate he showed uberrima fides, he was not competent to act as his son's next friend. The result would be that Bejoy was not properly represented and that the decree would not be binding upon him [Order XXXII, rule 4 (1); Unnoda Dabee v. Maria Louisa Stevenson (10)].

On the other hand, if there was no adoption of Bejoy by Ramdin, though it might have been better if Chhattan Kumari's statement to the contrary had been openly and candidly denied, Sheodayal's conduct of the suit on his son's behalf would not be open to serious criticism. It is even possible that the statement was not brought to his notice or that of Mathuriya. Or he or Mathuriya might pass the statement by as a mere invention designed for use as a possible weapon against both or either of them, or at best, as the translation of what might or would have happened if Ramdin had lived into a fact accomplished before he died. Certainly Bejoy was not entitled to have a false claim put forward on his behalf. Minority has its privileges but that is not one of them, and it is no dereliction of duty on the part of a guardian to refuse to litigate on his ward's behalf a claim which he knows to be false and unfounded in fact. We may add that there is no reason for supposing that any attempt was made by Sheodayal or Mathuriya to persuade Chhattan Kumari to hold her tongue about the adoption. The maintenance provided for in the compromise does not exceed the amount assigned to her as widow in Kanta Prosad's Will. Mathuriya seems to have been as irregular in her payments after the compromise as before.

On the hypothesis of no adoption, the interests of father and son would coincide, and the latter could not successfully challenge the compromise decree. If there was no adoption, we are not prepared, on the materials before us, to say that Mathuriya's claim as her husband's heiress was not an honest and bona fide claim, or to pronounce it frivolous or vexatious. In that case, regard being had to such circumstances as Kanta Prosad's Will and the position which Mathuriya assumed, unchallenged, on Ramdin's death, Sheodayal might well consider it wise, as much in his son's interests as in his own, to come to terms with her. The agreement arrived at, sanctioned as it was by the Court on the minor's behalf, would be a valid and binding family arrangement.

We repeat, therefore, that the disputed adoption lies at the threshold of the case, and that the dispute must be determined on the available evidence before the Court can pronounce on the validity of the compromise which affects the plaintiff.

The plea that whether the compromise bound him or not, the plaintiff ratified it after he came of age, may be dismissed in a few words. The plea rests (1) on a statement by the plaintiff in the witness-box and (2) on a mortgage which he effected of an eight-annas share in a certain property for the purpose of raising money required to carry on this litigation. As to the former, the plaintiff in the course of his evidence quite correctly stated his claim in accordance with his plaint which no doubt was settled for him by his legal advisers, but he went on to say that he claimed a twelve-annas share of the entire properties made up apparently of the eight-annas share to which he would be entitled as adopted son of Ramdin, together with four annas of the eight annas share to which he and his father became entitled under the compromise decree. The claim is fantastic and inconsistent and can only be due to some confusion in his mind as to his legal rights. As to the mortgage, the property mortgaged is item No. 94 in the 1st schedule of the plaint. The plaintiff's case is that the properties listed in that schedule are in the joint possession of his father and himself (plaint paragraph 14). The schedule includes the entirety of certain properties among which is No. 94. This appears from Mathuriya's written statement, in which she denied that the plaintiff and his father were in possession of the whole of these properties and asserted possession of a moiety on behalf of the defendant No. 6. For the present purpose, therefore, the mortgage can be explained as a mortgage of the moiety of No. 94, to which the plaintiff would be entitled in his own right as adopted son of Ramdin. Differing from the learned Subordinate Judge we are opinion that these materials are not sufficient to justify the conclusion that the compromise was ratified by the plaintiff.

(10) 22 W. R. 290.

The further plea that the compromise cannot be set aside because the parties cannot be restored to their original position, rests on a foundation even more slender. The question is not one between Sheodayal and Mathuriya. If the plaintiff is not bound by the compromise, it is voidable at his instance and if he is Ramdin's heir, he is entitled to his legal rights as such, whatever those rights may be. The suit constitutes an election to substitute those rights, if established, for the rights obtained under the compromise.

On the other hand we cannot accede to the contention of Mr. Das for the appellant that the order of the Court giving leave to compromise on his behalf was insufficient in point of form. The terms agreed upon by Sheodayal and Mathuriya were put in writing and then a special application was made by Sheodayal asking for the leave of the Court to compromise the suit on behalf of Bejoy. The application stated that the suit was a heavy one, and that there would be great difficulty and loss in carrying it on. Upon that the Court made an order, dated 6th July 1910, in the following terms:—

"Read the petition on behalf of plaintiff No. 2, minor, for permission to enter into the compromise proposed. Heard the Pleader. The permission is granted."

Exception was taken because the order does not state in so many words that the Court considered the compromise to be for the benefit of the minor. It is usual and perhaps desirable in giving leave to use words to that effect, but it is not essential. All that Order XXXII, rule 7, requires is that the leave of the Court should be "expressly recorded in the proceedings." The rule corresponds to section 462 of the Code of 1882 in which the words italicised were not included, but their addition has not changed the pre-existing practice [Monohar Lal v. JaduNath Singh (11).] The Courts had insisted on the leave being recorded. The existing rule is express but no set incantation or formula is prescribed for utterance [Virupakshappa v. Shidappa (1).] The order in question distinctly states that the Pleader was heard, and it must be presumed that the Court on the materials placed before it considered that in the intrests of the minor leave should be given.

So far we have not had much difficulty, but when we come to the question of fact, the ground is more debateable. In support of the adoption there is a considerable body of direct and positive evidence coming from witnesses who for the most part are persons of respectable position in the village to which they belong. There is no direct evidence on the other side, except that of Mathuriya, to rebut these witnesses, but the story which they tell is attended by improbabilities, inherent and extraneous, which cannot be lightly brushed aside. Apart from Chhattan Kumari's written statement in the suit of 1909 and her plaints of 1910 and 1912, the adoption is not supported by any scrap of paper, formal or informal. The question depends almost entirely on oral evidence.

For the plaintiff nine witnesses were examined on commission in the District of Bande, who all speak to the adoption. In addition Chhattan Kumari was examined on commission in Chittagong and gives corroborative evidence. Sheodayal was examined in Court, but owing to the part which he had played, he cuts a sorry figure in the witness-box, and his evidence can count for little or nothing.

It is true that we are in as good a position to judge of the credibility and veracity of the witnesses examined on commission as the learned Judge in the Court below. It does not, however, necessarily follow that we shall not accept his valuation of their testimony. We ought not to differ from him unless we are satisfied that he is wrong or that justice was miscarried. It will appear that we are far from being so satisfied.

It may be again that some of the reasons by which the learned Subordinate Judge supports his conclusion are weaker than others, but weak reasons are sometimes offered in support of a right conclusion. In its broad aspects we concur in his reasoning.

The story of the adoption in its main outlines is as follows:—

(11) 33 I. A. 128; 8 Bom. L. R. 489; 10 C. W. N. 898; 4 C. L. J. 8; 16 M. L. J. 291; 3 A. L. J. 710; 28 A. 585; 9 C. C. 219; 1 M. L. T. 210 (P. C.).

BEJOY SINGH v. MATHURIYA DEBYA.

When Bijoy was born, Ramdin was at Chittagong. His wife had been for two years at Bisenda, where Sheodayal and his wife Jahnabi had also been living. Six months before the child's birth, Ramdin had expressed the intention of adopting him if he should prove to be a son. Very shortly after the birth, before the umbilical cord was severed, the mother placed the child in Mathuriya's lap. A telegram was then sent to Ramdin who hurried forth. The necessary arrangements were made and when the child was thirteen days old, he was adopted by Ramdin in the presence of a multitude of people with the usual ceremonies and concomitants, such as the feeding of Brahmins and so forth. On the occasion the plaintiff's name was changed from Gajaraj, the name given him on his sixth day, to the name by which he is now generally known, Bejoy. The sequel has already been set out.

The Subordinate Judge was criticized for first making up his mind that the story was improbable and then disbelieving the witnesses. But the order cannot be inverted. A story is disbelieved because it is improbable, not improbable because it is disbelieved. Not every probable story is true, nor every improbable story untrue, but improbability at least suggests untruth and compels scrutiny. No doubt a story is best appreciated in its setting. But there are two tests applicable. There are the internal merits or demerits of the story and the relation it bears to external and known facts. Both tests in the present case lead to the same result, that the story is artificial.

If we take first the course of the family affairs after Ramdin's death, it is not, and cannot be, disputed that the main current of those affairs is totally inconsistent with the adoption. Sheodayal stood by in complete silence while Mathuriya assumed the position of proprietor of the Chittagong properties in her own right as heiress of her husband. Her name was registered as proprietor in the Collectorate. The management of the properties became a matter of almost public concern. Mathuriya appointed a committee of five respectable citizens to advise and assist her. It does not seem to have occurred to any of them that she was a usurper, robbing an adopted son of his rights. By an instrument dated 12th November 1907 she also appointed Sheodayal her Am Mukhtar and one of the plaintiff's witnesses, Kailas Chandra Das, a Pleader and a member of the committee, states that the committee "worked for one year" and that Sheodayal "was a servant under the committee" (see also the evidence of the Pleader Narendra Nath Sen). Sheodayal may have done little, but we cannot accept his assertion that he knew nothing of the Am Mukhtarnama.

As to the suit of 1909 and the compromise in which it resulted, we have already said enough and we need not go over the ground again.

Much reliance was placed on the fact, as found by the Subordinate Judge, that it was Bejoy who performed the Sradh ceremonies for Ramdin. Sheodayal was not in Chittagong when Ramdin died, but he arrived before the Sradh, and it is argued that as the nearest male Sapinda in blood, he had a prior right to officiate at that ceremony unless Bejoy was Ramdin's son by adoption. It would seem that according to the Bengal ritual in default of a son the widow would ordinarily precede both the brother and the brother's son (Sastri's Hindu Law, 3rd Edition, page 202). If that had been the rule of this family, which was not suggested, it would have strengthened the argument for the appellant. In the suit of 1909 Chhattan Kumari speaking of the family usage said this: "If anybody in our family dies leaving a wife and a son, then his son performs the Sradh, not the wife. In default of sons, nephews do it. In default of them wife does it." That statement, if accepted and if it means that a nephew would come before his own father, would explain why Bejoy took precedence of Sheodayal. The deposition was exhibited in the present suit by the plaintiff, but in the course of her long examination for the purposes of this suit, Chattan Kumari's attention was not called to the point, and we cannot say that it is free from obscurity. We can only say that Bejoy's conduct of the Sradh is by no means conclusive in his favour. Regard being had to what followed, we have no doubt that it is capable of explanation in a manner consistent with his natural relationship to Ramdin. The performance of the Sradh is not, properly speaking, a right of the performer but a pious duty to the deceased, and if the person on whom the duty first falls, fails for any reason to discharge it, we presume that the duty devolves on the person next in order according to the rule observed. Under the Mitakshara at any rate that order has no necessary relation to the order of succession to property.

If we turn back to the story of the adoption as narrated by the witnesses, it is on the face of it improbable. The Subordinate Judge, a Hindu, describes it in stronger terms as "extremely absurd and very much opposed to common experience of human affairs." It is not illegal to adopt an infant in arms, but there is no Hindu who would not be surprised or startled to hear that a child had been formally taken in adoption at the early age of thirteen days. It may be that, so far as the father was concerned, the period of ceremonial impurity terminated on the twelfth day, or one or two days before the adoption. But by family usage at least the mother remained ceremonially impure till the thirtieth day. It is idle to say that she took no part in the ceremony. She is said to have handed the child to the natural father who passed him on to the adoptive father.

The child moreover was still in need, and would continue for many months longer to be in need, of the services of his natural mother. The facts would be in daily conflict with the convention that the adopted child became from the moment of adoption the child of his new parents. According to the story, the two mothers with the child accompanied Ramdin to Chittagong. After two years the natural mother rejoined her husband at Bisenda, taking the child with her, and it was some years before he returned to Chittagong.

Where was the necessity for all the haste displayed, which might well be characterised as unseemly or indecent? It is true that Ramdin had been married for twelve or fifteen years and had no issue. It is suggested that he was impotent, though the suggestion was carefully safeguarded at the Bar. He was impotent, but not from birth. There is no evidence when he began to suffer, if he ever did suffer from this affliction, and there are other ways of accounting for lack of offspring. There is no evidence that Ramdin was in bad health or that he anticipated an early death. We were reminded more than once that he was an adopted son himself, though we were not told that the precedent extended to his being adopted in infancy or at Bisenda or to his name being changed at the time. He may well have contemplated or spoken of adopting his brother's son. In all likelihood, however, he would not commit himself to an actual or formal adoption, while any reasonable possibility remained that he might have a son of his own to succeed him.

Further, as the Subordinate Judge remarks, Kanta Prosad was still alive. Ramdin had not yet succeeded him in the control of the Chittagong properties. Even from the point of view which Sheodayal would naturally take, the time for the adoption had not yet come.

We may add that if anything was said or done between the two ladies principally concerned, at or about the time of Bejoy's birth, bearing on his future destiny, that would not by itself constitute a legal adoption

As to the name of Bejoy given to the plaintiff in substitution for, or in addition to, the name originally given to him, we are of opinion that the new name has no necessary connection with his adoption, at any rate his formal adoption, by Ramdin. It is true that the documents to which the Subordinate Judge refers in this connection came into existence after the compromise of January 1910 and that while he was at school he seems to have been known as Bejoy, but we have heard before of Hindus having two names. The Subordinate Judge evidently thought that the change might be accounted for otherwise than by supposing an adoption.

It may be objected that the narrative of the adoption which we have given is too brief and bald. In our opinion no artifice of language would remove the difficulties which lie in the way of accepting it.

It is said that the witnesses are not shaken in cross-examination. That is subject to qualifications which we will mention. But the story, though it might be spun out, is simple in its details. It follows the regular and known procedure of a formal adoption. The scene is set, as far back in time as possible, at a place remote from the place where the suit was tried. The conditions multiply the difficulty of testing the veracity of the witnesses by cross-examination.

It is said again that the story is not rebutted. Well, it is contradicted by Mathuriya, who knows as much about the matter as Sheodayal or any one else. She is, no doubt, a partisan in her own cause, and she is not supported by any witness from Bisenda. The latter comment at first sight seems to possess considerable force, but on examination it narrows down and ceases to have much, if any, constructive value on the plaintiff's behalf.

The respectability of the witnesses may be conceded. The learned Subordinate Judge may have done them some injustice in treating them as mere villagers of little or no account in comparison with the professional men to be found at the head-quarters of a district. They were not examined before him, and the ground on which he ascribes ignorance in a matter of religion to one of them may be misconceived. It cannot be said that if the facts were true, witnesses of a higher social status could have been found to speak to them. Unfortunately, however, truthfulness does not always go with respectability of position and after careful consideration we have come to the conclusion, with the Subordinate Judge, that the evidence from Bisenda must be rejected. Sheodayal had lived there, and no doubt possessed some influence with his neighbours. The course, which Ramdin would have taken, or might have been expected to take had he lived, fell in with their views of the fitness of things and of the interest of an old family, well known in its original home. The witnesses rose to the requirements of the occasion. It is not necessary to postulate bribery. In neighbourly kindliness they treated that as done which in their opinion ought to have been done but which in fact was not done. We are not defending their conduct, which is nonetheless lamentable and wicked because it was dictated by good nature. We are endeavouring to find the reason which induced them to give evidence which we regard as false.

Concluding, as we do with the Subordinate Judge that there was no adoption of the plaintiff by Ramdin and that no reason is shown for setting aside the compromise decree in the suit of 1909, we are glad to find at any rate that the conduct of that suit by Sheodayal was not so unnatural as he and his son would now have us believe.

We might stop there, but it is perhaps desirable that we should gather up some of the arguments addressed to us with which we have not dealt or not fully dealt.

As to the witnesses cited on the plaintiff's behalf, Kausalya is the widow of Kamala Prosad's son, Ramnath, and resides at Bisenda. Her interests are on the side of Sheodayal. If the evidence of Mathuriya is to be discarded or discounted as interested and unreliable, much the same exception may be taken to the evidence of Kausalya and Chhattan Kumari. The latter, in her desire to thwart Mathuriya, goes so far as to deny that Ramdin was adopted by Kanta Prosad, a fact which is not disputed by any one else.

Gayadin Pandit says that the adoption was the only occasion on which he was invited to be present at a ceremony of the Hazari family. Yet he says he saw Ramdin's wife on the day of Bejoy's birth and was present when Ramdin explained his reason for adopting a son, a reason which, even if true in fact, he would hardly care to publish to strangers.

Ramnath Pandit says he was 23 or 24 years old at the time of the adoption. His grandfather was Kanta Prosad's Guru but died, he says, some years before the adoption. Jugal, who was also the Purohit of Ramdin and Sheodayal, was present but took no part in the ceremony.

Ramnath Misser is another priest on whose evidence no great stress was laid.

Mahi Pal is the family Bhat whose duty it is to invite people to the house on occasions of ceremony. He succeeded his father in that office.

Bela Bhadra Prosad is a Khas Darbari and a member of the District Board. He puts the ceremony in Sheodayal's new house. The other witnesses place it in the old house. The new house apparently was not in existence at the time of the adoption.

Baldeo Singh says that he has litigation with Mathuriya.

Hanuman Singh is invited to almost all ceremonies at Sheodayal's house, and Sheodayal is invited to ceremonies at his house. Ram Adhin Singh and Ramnath Misser are also friends and neighbours.

These observations are intended merely to supplement the reasons we have already given for not crediting the story of the adoption.

As to the Banda witnesses, which it was suggested Mathuriya might and should have examined, only three names were ultimately insisted or, Raghunanda, Jagad Lambardar and Sheodayal, not the plaintiff's father but the husband of Mathuriya's cousin. Raghurandan is no doubt Mathuriya's priest, but Bala Bhadra Prosad says that he was not present at the ceremony. As to Sheodayal, Baldeo Singh says that "no relation of Mathuriya through her father or any villager of her father's village was present at the time of adoption of Bejoy." It would not, therefore, be of much moment if Mathuriya's relations came forward to say that they were present at no ceremony of adoption. Then remains Jagad Lambardar and he might be deterred from giving evidence by the number of witnessés on the other side coming from his neighbourhood. As the Subordinate Judge remarks, Mathuriya had lived long in Chittagong and was out of touch with the people at Bisenda. She was not likely to have many, if any, friends in the village on whom she could count.

Something was said of Mathuriya's failure to produce Ramdin's books of account. We are not satisfied that any serious attempt was made to have the books in Court. If there was anything in the accounts which threw light on the plaintiff's claim, the fact would probably have been known and the production of the accounts would have been insisted on.

Some, but not all, of the Chittagong witnesses say that Ramdin spoke of the plaintiff as his adopted son. We may refer to Kali Sankar Chakerbutty, the Editor, Kailas Chandra Das, the Pleader, and Joyanta Kumar Das, the Kabiraj, on the one hand and the Pleaders Narendra Nath Sen and Soshi Bhusan Sen on the other. Narendra Nath Sen was very intimate with Ramdin, and his statement that Ramdin never had occasion to tell him that he had adopted the plaintiff is, though of a negative character, significant. He saw Ramdin after he was seized by his last illness and before he lost consciousness and died. If the adoption were a fact, we should have expected more conformity in the witnesses and a much more certain and confident tone in the evidence. If Ramdin treated his nephew kindly and generously, that is not in itself proof of a formal adoption. It would be dangerous and unwise to treat the display of natural affection as proof of any such thing.

We do not attach much importance to the plaintiff being described in various documents as the son of Sheodayal. It appears that Ramdin himself was smetimes so described and most of the documents produced relate to the period after the compromise of 1910.

There was some argument about the precise nature of the plaint in Suit No. 17 of 1913. In paragraph (3) the statement occurs "the late Babu Ramdin Hazari brought the minor plaintiff and adopted him as his son." For the respondent it is urged that the words imply that the plaintiff was brought to Chittagong before he was adopted. The other side points to the first sentence of paragraph (5) which correctly and literally translated runs:—"The minor plaintiff is the adopted and brought son of the late Ramdin Hazari". Paragraph (5), it is said, rectifies paragraph (3). That may be so but the point is not one of any importance. Words are sometime loosely strung together.

There remains one matter with which we conclude. If the compromise decree were set aside, it would no doubt be open to the plaintiff to re-open the question whether the Chittagong properties were joint or not. The learned Subordinate Judge, holding that the plaintiff was not adopted by Ramdin and that he was bound by the compromise decree, advisedly refused to come to a finding on that issue. Having come to the same conclusions on the main questions involved, we have followed his example. While the compromise was in the balance, it was inevitable that our attention should be invited to various matters bearing on the character of Kanta Prosad's possession. But if the compromise is binding, the issue cannot be raised. It is closed by agreement. The whole purpose and value of such settlements would be destroyed if, apart from fraud or collusion or any vitiating circumstance, the question settled could afterwards be revived in Court for judicial determination. Miles v. New Zealand Alford Estate Co. (6), Rameswar Pershad Singh v. Ram Bahadur Singh (2).

In the result this appeal is dismissed with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.
SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 449 OF 1918.
March 16, 1920.
Present:—Mr. Justice Piggott and Mr. Justice Walsh.

MOJIZ FATIMA AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS—APPELLANTS
versus
Saiyad ALI AKBAR—DEFENDANT—RESPONDENT.

Agra Tenancy Act (II of 1901), s. 194 (1)—Lambardari mahal—Lambardar, duty of, to realise arrears of rent, extent of.

In a lambardari mahal the lambardar is, from the date of his appointment, the agent appointed to act on behalf of the co-sharers and he is the only person who has a right to institute a suit against a defaulting tenant for the recovery of any arrears of rent not statute-barred, whether of his time or prior to his appointment as such. [p. 113, col. 2.]

Second appeal from the decision of the District Judge, Aligarh, dated the 17th January 1918.

Dr. S. M. Sulaiman, for the Appellants.

Mr. Panna Lal, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—This was a suit by three co-sharers against a Lambardar for profits. One minor complication we may dispose of at once. While the second appeal was pending in this Court, one of the three plaintiffs, by name Musammat Amir Begam, has compromised with the defendant Lambardar. In the compromise it is stated that Musammat Amir Begam's claim on account of the profits of her share has been completely settled out of Court and she is content that the appeal, in so far as it relates to her share, be dismissed without any order as to costs. This order will be noted when we come to pass the final decree of this Court. The remaining two plaintiffs, who are entitled each to a one tenth share in the divisible profits of this Mahal, have elected to proceed with their appeal and it will have to be decided in respect of the shares of these two plaintiffs. We have come with reluctance to the conclusion that it is impossible for us to decide the appeal without more specific findings from the Court below upon certain issues of fact. In this connection we may point out that the tabular statement filed by the Patwari, on the strength of which the Court of first instance arrived at certain figures as representing the divisible profits of the Mahal, is full of palpable mistakes. We have made an attempt to use it for the purpose of arriving ourselves at a final determination of the suit, but have found it impossible to do so because of the errors above mentioned.

We now proceed to consider the questions raised by the appeal. The suit was on account of the profits of the agricultural years 1321, 1322 and 1323 Fasli. It is admitted that this is a Mahal for which ordinarily a Lambardar is appointed to collect rents from tenants and otherwise to act on behalf of the other co-sharers under section 194 of the local Tenancy Act (II of 1901). The Lambardar who preceded the defendant respondent died in the month of July 1913, that is to say, slightly before the commencement of the agricultural year 1321 Fasli. It is admitted that there was an interregnum. The learned District Judge says at the commencement of his order that the defendant, Saiyad Ali Akbar, was appointed Lambardar on the 30th of August 1914. If we could accept this as a clear finding of fact, we should certainly have to recast the account on the basis of which the lower Appellate Court has framed its decree. It is true that the agricultural year 1322 Fasli had commenced before the 30th of August 1914, but not a single instalment of rent on account of the Kharif of the said year had yet fallen due; consequently the realisation of all rents falling due during the agricultural year

1322 Fasli would be the duty of the Lambardar and there would be no basis whatever for the procedure adopted by the learned District Judge in limiting the Lambardar's liability to the Rabi instalment, that is to say, to the second half of the agricultural year 1322 Fasli. When, however, this was pointed out in argument, the learned Counsel for the defendant-respondent pressed it upon us that there was nothing on the record that he could discover to warrant the learned District Judge's statement as to the date of the defendant's appointment, but that on the contrary the Patwari had distinctly stated that Ali Akbar only entered upon his duties as Lambardar from the Rabi of 1322 Fasli, that is to say, from the commencement of the second half of the said agricultural year. As the learned District Judge has recorded a finding of fact in one sense and then worked out his decision in a different sense, we are not prepared to accept either as a finding of fact binding upon this Court. We must, therefore, in any case remit the following issue and we do so accordingly.—

1. From what part of the agricultural year 1322 Fasli did the defendant enter upon his duties and responsibilities as Lambardar? Was it from the commencement of the said year, or from the commencement of the second half of the year?

When this point has been finally settled, a further question will arise with regard to the arrears of rent due on account of the period preceding the defendant's appointment as Lambardar. There was, as we have already pointed out, an interregnum during which the Mahal was not in charge of any Lambardar. The duration of this interregnum was either one year or one year and a half. During that period there was a dispute as to the right of succession to the share of Saiyid Amir Haider, the Lambardar, who had preceded the present defendant. As might be expected under the circumstances, collections during this period of interregnum were low and considerble arrears of rent accumulated. The learned District Judge has found, though we are unable to say on what precise evidence, that the defendant Ali Akbar as a matter of fact realised Rs. 300 on account of arrears of rent which had fallen due before his appointment as Lambardar. He has very properly treated this sum as part of the divisible profits and framed his account accordingly. The contention of the appellants is, however, that from the date of his appointment, it became the duty of the new Lambardar to realise all arrears of rent due from tenants which had accrued due during the period immediately preceding his appointment and the right to recover which was not yet barred by limitation. Further, the appellants contend that if the defendant-respondent was guilty of negligence or misconduct in consequence of which these arrears still remained uncollected, he is liable to account to the co-sharers for the same by reason of the second clause of section 164 of the Local Tenancy Act (II of 1901). The learned District Judge has disposed of this matter by holding that the Lambardar, after the date of his appointment, could not have maintained a suit against any single tenant in respect of arrears of rent which had fallen due prior to the date of the defendant's appointment. If this is a correct proposition of law, it is obvious that no duty lay upon the defendant in respect of these arrears and that it cannot be said that he had been guilty of any negligence in failing to realise the same. We are satisfied, however, that the learned District Judge is wrong on this point. This is a Lambardari Mahal, in which a Lambardar is ordinarily appointed, not merely to collect rents from tenants, but, as is stated in the Board of Revenue's Circular on the subject, to act on behalf of the other co-sharers under section 194 of the Agra Tenancy Act. Under clause 1 of this section the obligation imposed upon all co-sharers to sue jointly for any arrears of rent due to them jointly is made subject to this exception, that if they have appointed an agent to act on behalf of them, the suit may be maintained by the said agent. In a Lambardari Mahal the Lambardar is, from the date of his appointment, the agent appointed to act on behalf of the co-sharers, and he is the only person who under section 194, clause (1), aforesaid has a right to institute a suit against a defaulting tenant for the recovery of any arrear of rent not Statute-barred. To hold otherwise would involve practical consequences of a very undesirable nature. In the present case, for instance, assuming for the sake of argument that the appointment of the defendant Ali Akbar as Lambardar took effect from the middle of the agricultural year 1322 Fasli, and that arrears of rent were due from a tenant on account of the first half of that year, the result would be that, before that tenant could be compelled to discharge his just liabilities, there would have to be separate suits, by the co-sharers for the first half of the year and by the Lambardar for the second half of the year. It does not seem to us that any such intention on the part of the Legislature is to be deduced from the wording of section 194 of the Tenancy Act. Under the former Tenancy Act the contrary was clearly held by a Bench of this Court in Ganga Sahai v. Ganga Lakksh (1). In a recent case, that of Bharat Indu v. Syed Mohammad Mustafa Khan (2), this Court in remitting an issue to the Court below clearly implied that a Lambardar could obtain decrees under the Tenancy Act on account of arrears of rent which had accrued due prior to the date of his appointment. We are satisfied that this is a correct view of the law. As regards the present case, however, it requires to be considered what sort of evidence of negligence or misconduct on the part of the defendant Lambardar would be required to discharge the burden of proof laid upon the plaintiffs by section 164, clause (2), of the Tenancy Act. It is easily conceivable that a distinction might require to be drawn in many cases between the degree of responsibility attaching to a Lambardar in respect of arrears of rent which had accummulated during an interregnum prior to his appointment and his responsibility for the realisation of the current demand as it fell due after the date of his appointment. If there were no other reasons for drawing such a distinction, it would be a sufficient reason to note that during the interregnum the power to realise rents, and consequently the responsibility for doing so, had reverted to the entire body of co-sharers. It will be necessary for us, therefore, before this appeal can be determined, to remit two further issues. We want to know what were the accummulated arrears due from tenants of this Mahal on the date on which the defendant assumed the office of Lambardar and we must also have a finding from the lower Appellate Court as to whether any of those arrears, and if any what portion, remained uncollected owing to negligence or misconduct on the part of the defendant. At present we have no real finding of fact on this point by the lower Appellate Court, because the learned District judge has brushed the question aside upon his view of the law as to the rights of a Lambardar to maintain suits for arrears of rent, from which view we have been compelled to dissent. We, therefore, remit the following further issues.—

2. What arrears of rent were due from tenants of this Mahal on the date on which the defendant entered into possession as Lambardar? (The arrears referred to in this issue are rents not paid by the tenants to any person.)

3. What portion, if any, of the said arrears remained uncollected owing to negligence or misconduct on the part of the defendant?

We should have preferred to direct that these issues should be determined on the evidence already on the record, as it is not suggested that either party was precluded from laying before the Court below any evidence which he thought desirable; but it seems to us that the Patwari will have to be recalled, if only to explain the statement of account which we have found ourselves unable to make practical use of. We are also of opinion that either party should be permitted to produce documentary evidence as to the date of the formal order appointing Saiyid Ali Akbar to be Lambardar of this Mahal. To this extent the lower Appellate Court may admit fresh evidence at the request of either party. Ten days will be allowed for objections.

Issues remitted.

(1) A. W. N. (1890) 3.
(2) 52 Ind. Cas. 836; 17 A. L. J. 167; 41 A. 316.

DARBARI LAL v. WASU MALIK.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

FIRST CIVIL APPEAL No. 603 OF 1917.

April 19, 1920.

Present:—Mr. Justice Shadi Lal and Mr. Justice Broadway.

Seth DARBARI LAL AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS—APPELLANTS

versus

WASU MALIK—DEFENDANT—RESPONDENT.

Arbitration—Award embodying agreement between parties, validity of—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O VI, r. 17—Amendment of pleadings, when should be allowed.

The fact that an award embodies an agreement arrived at between the parties does not prevent it being a valid and binding award. [p. 116, col. 1.]

Gobardhan Das v. Jai Kishen Das, 22 A. 224; A. W. N. (1900) 52 9 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 1180, followed.

An award when delivered is binding upon the parties. [p. 116, col. 1.]

The law relating to the amendment of pleadings, as contained in Order VI, rule 17 of the Civil Procedure Code, confers a plenary authority upon the Court to allow a party to alter or amend his pleadings in such manner and upon such terms as may be just, and the amendment may be allowed at any stage of the proceedings. [p. 116, col. 2.]

An amendment should always be allowed if thereby the real substantial question can be raised between the parties and multiplicity of legal proceedings avoided. [p. 116, col. 2]

Plaintiffs sued their quondam partner for rendition of accounts of the partnership and for recovery of money due to them. It appeared that the dispute had been referred to the arbitration of one L. who had given an award on 30th September 1914, which award was accepted by the parties and signed by them in token of their assent. The suit was instituted on 1st October 1914:

Held, (1) that the award was binding on the parties and the suit could not be maintained; [p. 116, col. 1]

(2) that the plaint could be amended so as to embody a prayer for a decree in accordance with the award and that such decree could be passed. [p. 116, col. 2.]

First appeal from the decree of the Subordinate Judge, 1st Class, Multan, dated the 17th November 1916, decreeing the claim for Rs. 5,000 in strict accordance with the terms of the award.

Mr. Gokal Chand Narang, for the Appellants.

Lala Jagan Nath, for Bakhshi Tek Chand, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—The plaintiffs, Darbari Lal and his two brothers, brought this action against their quondam partner, Wasu Malik, for a rendition of the accounts of the partnership and for the recovery of the money due to them. The partnership was dissolved on 24th September 1911, and the suit, which was instituted on 1st October 1914, the first day on which the Courts re-opened after the summer vacation, was undoubtedly within time.

In answer to the claim the defendant pleaded that the dispute between the parties had been referred to the arbitration of one Lorinda Ram, who had given his award on 30th September 1914, which award was accepted by the parties and signed by them in token of their assent. The defendant consequently contended that the award operated as a bar to the suit for the rendition of accounts which could not, therefore, be maintained. The Subordinate Judge holds that the arbitrator delivered a valid award according to which a sum of Rs. 5,000 was due to the plaintiffs, and that in the face of this award the suit for the rendition of accounts does not lie. The learned Judge has, however, granted the plaintiffs a decree in terms of the award. Both parties are dissatisfied with this decree and have appealed to this Court.

The sole question raised in the appeal preferred by the plaintiffs is whether a valid award was given by the arbitrator Lorinda Ram. Now, the evidence of a large number of witnesses, including the arbitrator himself, shows that on 30th September 1914 an award was written on a stamp paper of the value of Rs. 5 and that it was signed not only by the arbitrator and witnesses but also by all the three plaintiffs and the defendant. The document was then taken to the office of the Sub-Registrar for registration, but on account of some defect it could not be registered on that day. The evidence shows that the plaintiff Badhu Ram then seized the document and made an attempt to snatch it away from Lorinda Ram, with the result that it was torn into two pieces, one of which remained with the arbitrator and the other was taken away by Badhu Ram. The portion which remained with the arbitrator has been produced in evidence and the whole of the award has, in so far as the material terms are concerned, been re-constructed with the help of an entry in the scribe's register containing the purport thereof.

We may say at once that there is no longer any dispute as to the terms of the award, but the plaintiffs, while admitting their signatures to the document, relate a curious story as to how it was destroyed. They state that the document, which they signed, contained blanks which were subsequently to be filled up after obtaining the consent of both the parties. The arbitrator, however, without consulting the plaintiffs, fixed the amount due to them at Rs. 5,000 and asked the plaintiffs' agent, Kanhya Lal, to enter that amount in the deed and to fill up the blanks accordingly. The plaintiffs further state that when they learnt of it they protested, and the arbitrator in disgust said that he was not going to settle their dispute and himself tore up the document into two pieces.

Now this version, which depends entirely upon the testimony of the plaintiffs and their agent Kanhya Lal, receives no support whatsoever from any independent witness. On the other hand, the defendant's account of the affair is not only a probable one, but is borne out by a large number of reliable witnesses. It is difficult to believe that the plaintiffs, who are men of business, would sign a document which contained blanks and did not specify the amount due to them. At any rate, it is clear that the onus rested on them to establish their version, and they have entirely failed to discharge it.

It appears that the arbitrator did not make any independent enquiry into the matter in controversy between the parties, but the fact that the award embodies an agreement arrived at between the parties does not prevent the award being a valid and binding award between the parties, vide, inter alia, Gobardhan Das v. Jai Kishen Das (1).

Upon an examination of the evidence adduced by the parties we have reached the conclusion that the arbitrator delivered an award, which was agreed to by the parties and was signed by them in token of their consent. An award when delivered is binding upon the parties, and it is not, therefore, necessary to determine whether it was the arbitrator himself or the plaintiff Budhu Ram who destroyed the paper containing the terms of the award. The defendant has succeeded in proving the essential terms of the award, and we concur in the conclusion of the learned Subordinate Judge that the suit for rendition of accounts cannot be maintained. This finding disposes of the appeal preferred by the plaintiffs.

On behalf of the defendant it is contended that as the action was for a rendition of accounts, and as the plaint did not put forward any claim for a decree in accordance with the award, the Subordinate Judge should not have granted a decree in terms of the award, but should have dismissed the suit in toto. Now, it is true that the plaint does not expressly contain any alternative claim, but the omission is probably due to the fact that though presented to the Court on 1st October, it was really drafted before the 30th September 1914 when the award was delivered. There can, however, be no doubt that if the plaintiffs had added a prayer for the grant of a relief in terms of the award, which the defendant himself had set up to defeat the claim for rendition of accounts, the latter could have no possible answer to it. It is to be observed that what the plaintiffs wanted was to recover such sum of money as may be found due to them from the defendant, and the only question was whether that sum had already been determined by the arbitrator or should be determined by the Court after a scrutiny of the accounts.

The law relating to the amendment of pleadings, as contained in Order VI, rule 17, of the Civil Procedure Code, confers a plenary authority upon the Court to allow a party to alter or amend his pleadings in such manner and upon such terms as may be just, and the amendment may be allowed at any statge of the proceedings. The Courts do not exist for the sake of discipline but for the sake of deciding matters in controversy, and an amendment should always be allowed if thereby the real substantial question can be raised between the parties and multiplicity of legal proceedings avoided. It was probably for this reason that the learned Subordinate Judge acceded to the request for a decree in accordance with the award, and Mr. Gokal Chand Narang for the plaintiffs, in order to avoid all possible objections, has made an oral application to amend the plaint. There is absolutely no reason why this request should be refused, and why we should not affirm a decree, to which the defendant himself could have no real objection, considering that it proceeds upon a document upon which he himself placed his reliance. Viewing the plaint as embodying a prayer for a decree in terms of the award we uphold the judgment of the lower Court and dismiss both the appeals. We leave the parties to bear their own costs in this Court.

(1) 22 A. 224; A. W. N. (1900) 52; 9 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 1180.

Appeal dismissed.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

CIVIL REVISION PETITION No. 735 OF 1919.
(ORIGINALLY CIVIL APPEAL No. 1851 OF 1919.)
April 19, 1920.

Present:—Mr. Justice Wilberforce.

HARI SINGH—PLAINTIFF—PETITIONER

versus

FAZAL—DEFENDANT—RESPONDENT.

Limitation Act (IX of 1908), Sch. I, Art. 67—Book entry, whether bond—Suit for recovery of money due on book entry—Limitation.

A book entry containing a promise to pay at a certain rate of interest and attested by witnesses is a bond, and a suit for recovery of the money due thereon is governed by Article 67 of Schedule I to the Limitation Act.

Petition for revision of the decree of the Senior Subordinate Judge, Jhelum, dated the 14th June 1919, affirming that of the Munsif, 2nd Class, Chakwal, District Jhelum, dated the 25th April 1919, dismissing the claim with costs.

Pandit Bindraban, for the Petitioner.

Mr. Devi Dayal, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—The petitioner in this case sued for Rs. 300, the price of wheat due on a book entry which contained a promise to pay at a certain rate of interest and was attested by two witnesses. The learned Senior Subordinate Judge held that the entry was a bond as defined in the Stamp Act but that it was not a bond for the purposes of limitation, a decision which Counsel for the respondent was unable to support and is obviously indefensible. The Subordinate Judge went on to hold that as the entry was not a bond, the period of limitation was three years, apparently under Article 115. Even so he did not show how the case was time barred as he did not state when the express or implied contract was broken. The entry obviously amounts to a bond and the period of limitation is governed by Article 67. I accept the petition for revision and remand the case to the first Court for a trial on the merits. Costs will follow the result and the Court-fee on application will be refunded.

Petition accepted.

PRIVY COUNCIL.

APPEAL FROM THE MADRAS HIGH COURT.

December 15, 1919.

Present:—Lord Shaw, Lord Phillimore, Sir John Edge, Mr. Ameer Ali and Sir Lawrence Jenkins.

M. R. SETURATNAM AIYAR AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS—APPELLANTS

versus

VENKATACHALA GOUNDEN AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 103, O. XLI, r. 25—Appeal—Finding on particular issue, absence of—High Court, power of, to remit issues for trial and to determine questions of fact—Burden of proof, question of, when not pertinent—Landlord and tenant—Ryotwari holding, suit for possession of—Permanent tenancy, claim of, by defendant—Misjoinder of causes of action against separate defendants—Objection to use of irrelevant evidence not taken in trial Court, effect of.

Where a Court from whose decree an appeal is before the High Court omits to determine a question of fact essential to the right decision of the suit on the merits, the High Court has jurisdiction, under Order XLI, rule 25 of the Civil Procedure Code, to frame issues and refer them for trial by that Court. [p. 120, col. 2.]

Where a lower Appellate Court fails to determine an issue of fact, the High Court in second appeal has power to deal with it under section 103 of the Civil Procedure Code. [p. 121, col. 1.]

Where in a suit for the recovery of possession of agricultural land in a ryotwari tract the defendant claims a right of permanent tenancy, it is for him to establish permanency, and this may be done by proving a custom, a contract or a title, or by other means; and where in such a case custom is out of the question, and contract is negatived by the trial Court, but that Court leaves the question of title untouched, it is open to the High Court, in appeal, to make a pronouncement on that question. [p. 121, col. 2.]

Where in a controversy the relevant facts are before the Court, and all that remains for decision is, what inference should be drawn from them, the question of the burden of proof is not pertinent [p. 121, col 2]

Where a plaintiff in disregard of the provisions of the Civil Procedure Code unites in the same suit, not merely several causes of action, but several causes of action or suits against separate defendants, with the result that in effect the litigation is conducted and treated throughout as though the defendants are a community with common interests, he cannot be heard to object to the use of evidence against him as irrelevant, but to which the irregularity of his procedure has given relevance and to which he took no exception when it was tendered at the trial. [p. 122, col. 1.]

Consolidated appeals from three decrees of the Madras High Court (Sir Ralph Benson, J., and Sundara Aiyar, J.), dated the 18th February 1913, modifying in second appeal three decrees passed by the District Court, Trichinopoly, on appeal from the District Munsif, Kulitalai.

FACTS of the case will sufficiently appear from their Lordships' judgment and from the judgment of the Madras High Court reported as 20 Ind. Cas. 374.

Mr. De Gruyther, K. C., and Mr. Kenworthy Brown, for the Appellants, submitted that the defendants-respondents had no right of permanent occupancy in the lands. If they had such right, it must be either by the permanent settlement or by contract. The lands here were divided into three classes, (1) dry land, (2) garden, (3) pasture. As to the third there is now no dispute. The High Court has decided in our favour and there is no appeal. As to the other two classes we do not object to pay compensation for improvements, but we contend we are entitled to ejectment. The High Court ought not to have remanded the case. In a second appeal the District Judge's findings of fact are final. The High Court practically say that there is a presumption in favour of occupancy rights, arising from long occupation and payment of a uniform rent. We say the burden of proof was on the cultivators and they failed to discharge it. The District Judge found as a fact that there was no occupancy right.

[SIR LAWRENCE JENKINS referred to section 103 of the Code of Civil Procedure.

That section does not apply: the lower Appellate Court had determined the issue. Its finding of facts is final: Durga Chowdhrani v. Jewahir Singh Chowdhri (1).

There is no question here of expectation or encouragement. If the tenant makes a well without leave he does it at his own risk: but here the cultivators applied for licences, which the landlord gave. If he ejects them he must compensate them: but no question of estoppel as to permanent occupancy arises.

LORD PHILLIMORE.—Your case is that though they may have held for a great many years, it is a mere matter of contract and they have no right to continue?]

The matter has been confused by a mass of authorities which have little bearing: the crucial question is to determine what were the rights of the parties when the permanent settlement was made in 1812. Custom is not alleged. If these people's predecessors had occupancy rights in 1802, cadit quæstio: if not, we took the land then free of occupancy right: it was we who had the occupancy right, the Kudivaram. Now have they acquired the right since? We say not.

[SIR JOHN EDGE.—You say that continuous occupation since 1803 raises no presumption?]

If all you have to go on is a uniform rent and long holding, those are elements to be considered. If you know nothing about the origin of the tenancy, you must deal with it on such materials as you have: but here you do know the origin. All that is established here is that some, not all, of these holdings have been held by the present tenants for a very long time. Uniformity of rent is not so clear; it is merely a uniform rate for the quality of the land: the rate changed if the land were converted. The plaintiffs' predecessors here were the "ryots or cultivators" mentioned in the Fifth Report of 1812 (Madras Presidency), page 61: being Brahmins they could not and did not cultivate themselves, but they had the tenant right. Reference was made to the following:

Secretary of State for India in Council v Luchmeswar Singh (2), Seena Pena Reena Seena Mayandi Chettiyar v. Chokkalingam Pillay (3), Chidambara Pillai v. Tiruvengadathiengar (4), Rangasami Reddi v. Gnana Sammantha Pandara Sannadhi (5), Cheekati Zamindar v. Ranasooru Dhora (6), Seshamma Shettati v. Chickaya Hegade (7), Muna Muhammad Rowther v. Muthu Alagappa Chettiar (8),

(1) 17 I. A. 122; 18 C. 23; 5 Sar. P. C. J. 560; 9 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 16.

(2) 16 I. A. 6; 16 C. 224; 5 Sar. P. C. J. 275; 13 Ind. Jur. 10; 8 Ind Dec. (N. S.) 147.

(3) 31 I. A. 33; 2 M. 21 (P. C.); 8 C. W. N. 345; 14 M. L. J. 200; 8 Sar. P. C. J. 587.

(4) 7 M. L. J. 1.

(5) 22 M. 264; 8 Ind. Dec (N. S.) 188.

(6) 23 M. 318; 8 Ind. Dec (N S) 624.

(7) 25 M. 507; 12 M. L. J. 119.

(8) 44 Ind. Cas. 814; 34 M. L. J. 234; 23 M. L. T. 161; 7 L. W. 380.

Ponniah Nadan v. Deivanai Ammal (9). Fifth Report (Madras Presidency), pages 178, 459—461, 615, 790, 797, 808.

The ruling in Veeranan Ambalam Peria Karuppan v. Annasawmi Iyer (10) is merely that the mere fact of the landlord being Pattadar is not conclusive; that case does not decide that there is any presumption against him. The tenants here have no right, except to compensation.

Messrs. E. B. Raikes and Palat, for the Respondents.—The District Judge here took an altogether erroneous view of the law applicable to the case.

There was evidence on which he could have come to a finding on the issues framed by the High Court, but he failed to do so and under section 103 the High Court had jurisdiction to determine the issue itself. The burden of proof was on the plaintiff: he alleged he had the right to eject, and must prove it. The mere fact that he is Pattadar does not shift the burden. The Fifth Report shows that the Mirasdar always had the first right to the issue of Patta whether there were occupancy rights or not.

In Secretary of State for India in Council Luchmeswar Singh (2) the circumstances under which Government, who were in that case the tenants, came into possession were known: that is not so here.

The decision in Seena Pena Reena Seena Mayandi Chettiyar v. Chokkalingam Pillay (3) turned upon the terms of the contract in that case.

The High Court have rightly inferred from the facts in this case that the cultivators have permanent rights: there is nothing in any of their own previous decisions which conflicts with that view, and it is supported by Veeranan Ambalam's case (10), Muna Muhammad Rowther v. Muthu Alagappa Chettiar (8), Krishnasami Pillai v. Varadaraja Ayyangar (11).

Reference was also made to Trichinopoly Manual, page 178. Fifth Report (Madras) pages 104—106, 489, 615, 622, 625, 750-1, 785, Suryanarayana v. Patanna (12), Afzal-unnisa v. Abdul Karim (13).

Mr. DeGruyther, K. C., in reply.—If there had been any independent tenant with occupancy rights at the time of the permanent settlement, the Fifth Report shows that the settlement would have been made with him direct. There were wet lands included in the original Patta, but it is not suggested that the cultivators of these lands had occupancy rights. The only right which the tenants here have is to be compensated for the wells made in the garden (or wet) lands.

JUDGMENT.

SIR LAWRENCE JENKINS.—These consolidated appeals are from three decrees of the High Court at Madras, dated the 18th February 1913. The decrees had modified three appellate decrees of the District Court of Trichinopoly, which in turn had modified three original decrees of the Court of the District Munsif of Kulitalai.

The three suits thus came before the High Court in second appeal, so that the Court had no jurisdiction to interfere with any finding of fact by the District Court; its only power to determine issues of fact was that created by section 103 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908.

Each of the suits is for the recovery of possession of agricultural land in a ryotwari tract, and has been instituted by the plaintiff as the Government Pattadar.

The number of the defendants in the several suits is 165, 103 and 30. They are not, however, in joint possession; on the contrary, they have separate holdings and should have been separately sued.

The plaintiff's title is conceded, and he alleges that the defendants are tenants under him and that their several tenancies have been determined by notice. The defendants plead in answer to his claim for possession (1) that they severally have a permanent tenancy or right of occupancy

(9) 52 Ind. Cas. 247; 36 M. L. J. 463; 9 L. W. 453; 26 M. L. T. 311.

(10) 12 Ind. Cas. 1; 21 M. L. J. 845; 10 M. L. T. 185; (1911) 2 M. W. N. 162.

(11) 5 M. 345 at pp. 355, 356; 2 Ind. Dec (N. S.) 240.

(12) 48 Ind. Cas. 689; 45 I. A. 209; 36 M. L. J. 585; 41 M. 1012; 25 M. L. T. 30; (1918) M. W. N. 859; 23 C. W. N. 273; 9 L. W. 126; 29 C. L. J. 153; 1 U. P. L. R. P. C.) 11; 21 Bom. L. R. 547; (1919) M. W. N. 463 P. C.).

(13) 50 Ind. Cas. 749; 46 I. A. 131; 17 A. L. J. 60; 36 M. L. J. 580; 26 P. W. R. 1919; 1 U. P. L. R. P. C.) 47 & 71; 26 M. L. T. 55; 81 P. R. 1919; 23 C. W. N. 966; (1919) M. W. N. 494; 30 C. L. J. 152; 21 Bom. L. R. 891; 65 P. L. R. 1919; 47 C. 1; 11 L. W. 173 (P. C.).

and (2) that they are protected from ejectment by the doctrine of estoppel.

The land in suit is of three classes, garden, dry, and pasture. In the Court of the Munsif it was held that the plaintiff's claim to recover the garden land was barred by the plea of estoppel, but that his claim to the rest must succeed as no right of permanent tenancy was established.

From this decision cross appeals were preferred. At the first hearing of the appeals the District Judge disallowed the plea of estoppel, and also held that the defendants had not established their right to a permanent occupancy. It is important to observe how he dealt with this last aspect of the case:—

"The question for consideration in this case," he said, "is whether the defendants have shown that the plaintiff or his predecessor-in-title had contracted the right of tenancy (which) should be changed into a right of permanent occupancy."

His finding on this was as follows:—

"In these circumstances it is, I think, clear that the defendants have not established any contract on the part of the plaintiff or his predecessor-in-title to convey to them a right of permanent occupancy."

Ultimately he passed decrees in the plaintiff's favour for possession of all the suit lands. The defendants appealed to the High Court, and the learned Judges expressed the view that the mode in which the District Judge had dealt with the question of a permanent tenancy was not satisfactory. And after quoting the proposition as formulated by him they observe that:—

"The real point for determination before the learned Judge was whether on the admitted and undoubted facts of the cases and the evidence of both sides the defendants held the lands in their possession as tenants from year to year or as persons having a right of permanent occupancy."

The distinction between the two propositions is manifest. In the result the learned Judges asked the District Judge to return revised findings on the following questions:—

"1. Whether the appellants in these appeals are tenants from year to year, or whether they have a permanent right of occupancy in the lands in dispute?

"2. Whether the plaintiff is estopped from denying that the appellants in these appeals have a permanent right of occupancy?

"3. What compensation, if any, the appellants in these appeals are entitled to for effecting improvements on the land by digging wells and ponds?"

It has been contended that the Court acted without jurisdiction. But this proceeds on a misapprehension of what the High Court did. It did not remand under rule 23 of Order XLI of the Civil Procedure Code but merely framed issues and referred them for trial to the District Court as provided in rule 25, and for this reason.

In the opinion of the learned Judges of the High Court, the District Judge had omitted to determine a question of fact which appeared to them essential to the right decision of the suit on the merits; he had failed to consider whether, apart from the particular contract to which his attention was exclusively directed, there was evidence on which to hold that from their inception the holdings of the defendants were permanent or in the nature of occupancy rights.

It is perhaps to be regretted that the learned Judges of the High Court did not give a fuller and clearer explanation of the reasons which influenced them, for the result was that the District Judge failed to grasp the true meaning of the issues framed by the High Court, and again dealt with the question in the same incomplete manner.

He treated the long duration of the tenancy and the uniform and unvarying rate of the rent as a circumstance by itself not sufficient "to raise a presumption of an implied contract that the right of tenancy should be changed into a right of permanent occupancy."

The District Court's findings were returned to the High Court, and the learned Judges pointed out that the District Judge in his order submitting his findings had, notwithstanding the caution given by the High Court, again assumed that the defendants' original right was that of tenants from year to year, and that it lay on them to prove an express or implied contract by which the right of tenancy from year to year was changed into a right of permanent occupancy.

Instead of a further reference the High Court proceeded to determine this issue and, if and so far as this was an issue of fact—a point on which it is not necessary to express a definite opinion in the circumstances of this case—the Court had power to deal with it under section 103 of the Civil Procedure Code, 1908.

The conclusion at which it arrived was that the defendants had occupancy rights.

This finding, however, is attacked on the ground, first, that the burden of proof was wrongly thrown on the plaintiff, and secondly, that in any case the facts did not justify the inference.

To determine on whom the burden of proof lay it is necessary to ascertain with precision upon what propositions of fact or of law the parties were at variance, and how matters stood when the cases reached the High Court.

The plaintiff's title was conceded, and the notice by which he purported to terminate the defendants' tenancy was not disputed. It was also admitted that the defendants held under, if not from, the plaintiff. To resist the plaintiff's claim the defendants set up a permanent tenancy or an occupancy right in themselves. If this was not established then the defendants must fail, and, to adopt the language of section 101 of the Evidence Act, as the defendants were bound to prove the existence of their permanent tenancy or occupancy right, the burden of proof as to it lay on them. This view as to the incidence of the burden has been repeatedly recognised in the series of Madras decisions cited in argument and is, in their Lordships' opinion, not open to doubt.

There are passages in the High Court's final judgment which unquestionably invite the comment that the learned Judges misapprehended the proper incidence of the burden of proof. Thus the learned Judges say :—

"We hold that the mere fact of the plaintiff being Pattadar does not entitle him to any presumption in his favour."

This proposition is open to the construction that the burden lay on the plaintiff not only to establish his title but also to negative the defendants' claim to permanency, and if this is what was meant it was wrong. But the sentence that immediately follows shows a truer perception of the position. The learned Judges there say:—

"We also hold that even if that fact could be of any use to him, the various circumstances proved, unrebutted by anything in the plaintiff's favour, necessarily raise a presumption that the defendants have occupancy rights."

The controversy had passed the stage at which discussion as to the burden of proof was pertinent; the relevant facts were before the Court, and all that remained for decision was what inference should be drawn from them.

In the end the learned Judges drew the inference—they speak of it as a presumption—in favour of the defendants' occupancy rights, and as finally expressed their determination was unvitiated by any error as to the burden of proof.

Nor is their inference contradictory of any finding of fact by the District Court; on the contrary, it rests on the findings of that Court and in the shape it took in the High Court it certainly had not been negatived by the District Court.

A word of explanation will make this evident. Permanence is not a universal and integral incident of an under-ryot's holding; if claimed, it must be established. This may be done by proving a custom, a contract, or a title, and possibly by other means. Custom is out of the question here; there is no suggestion of it. Contract has been decisively negatived by the finding of the District Court. Title was left untouched, and it was on title that the High Court pronounced in the defendants' favour; for the meaning of their finding is not that there was a subsequent change in the relations of the parties, but that at the inception of those relations the defendants' predecessors possessed occupancy rights.

Conflict with any finding of the District Court being eliminated, it next has to be seen whether there were materials on which the High Court could come to its conclusion. They are minutely indicated in the judgment under appeal, and, in the absence of all information as to the origin of the defendants' holdings, it cannot be said that there is no evidence to support the High Court's finding. It may be that regarded even as a finding of fact—and it has been so treated throughout—it is not conclusive, though curiously enough it would have had that character had it been pronounced by the District Judge and not by two Judges of the High Court. But after due consideration of the evidence brought to their notice and of all the circumstances, their Lordships see no sufficient reason to interfere with the High Court's conclusion; nor is it in their opinion to be regretted that effect has been given to the very long possession—"immemorial" in the High Court's view—of the defendants and their predecessors.

It has been objected by the appellant that much of the evidence that has been used against him is not relevant, as the long possession, the alienations and the improvements to which it relates have not been traced to the several defendants or their predecessors-in-title. But the plaintiff, in disregard of the provisions of the Code, has united in the same suit not merely several causes of action, but several actions or suits against separate defendants, with the result that in effect the litigation has been conducted and treated throughout as though the defendants were a community with common interests. The plaintiff, therefore, cannot now be heard to object to the use of evidence to which the irregularity of his procedure has given relevance and to which he apparently took no exception when it was tendered at the trial.

The objection might have been formidable had the plaintiff sued the several defendants in separate suits, and their Lordships recognise that in view of the exceptional and irregular character of this litigation this case cannot in this respect be a satisfactory precedent in a properly constituted suit. As it is, however, the objection must fail and the High Court's finding as to the permanence of the defendant's rights in the garden and dry lands must stand.

Following on this finding the High Court, while confirming the decree for possession of the pasture land passed by the lower Courts, ordered that the plaintiff's suits, so far as they sought delivery of possession of the garden and dry lands, be dismissed.

The plaintiff alone has appealed from the High Court's decree, and the present appeals are limited to the garden and dry lands. For the reasons already indicated they must fail.

Their Lordships, therefore, will humbly advise His Majesty that the appeals should be dismissed. The appellant must pay the costs of the appeals.

Appeals dismissed.

Solicitor for the Appellant:—Mr. Douglas Grant.

Solicitors for the Respondents:—Messrs. T. L. Wilson & Co.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

APPEAL FROM ORIGINAL DECREE No. 222 OF 1917.

August 25, 1919.

Present:—Mr. Justice Chatterjea and Mr. Justice Newbould.

RADHARAMAN CHOWDHURI AND OTHERS—APPELLANTS

versus

GOPAL CHANDRA CHAKRAVARTY —RESPONDENT.

Will—Probate—District Judge, order of, holding that objector has no locus standi —Appeal, whether lies—Revision—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 115—Hindu Law—Dayabhaga—Person interested, right of, to oppose application by stranger for Probate.

An order by a District Judge, holding that the objector to the grant of Probate of a Will has no locus standi to object and that the applicant is entitled to Probate on proof of the Will in common form, is not open to appeal but the order can be revised by the High Court upon an application made to it under section 115 of the Civil Procedure Code. [p. 123, col. 1.]

Where a person applying for Probate of the Will of a Hindu governed by the Dayabhaga School of Hindu Law is a stranger to the family of the deceased testator, a person having some sort of relationship with the family of the deceased has some interest to appear and oppose the application for Probate and is, consequently, entitled to be present at the hearing of the application. [p. 126, col. 1.]

Appeal against the decree of the District Judge, Burdwan, dated the 17th August 1917.

Babus Bepin Behary Ghose and Mohesh Chandra Banerjee, for the Appellants.

RADHARAMAN CHOWDHURI v. GOPAL CHANDRA.

Babu Satindra Nath Mookerjee, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—This appeal arises out of an application for Probate of a Will. The respondent Gopal Chandra propounded a Will said to have been executed by one Krishna Chandra. The appellants Radha Raman and others, who are the grandfather's daughter's son's sons of the deceased, opposed the application. The learned District Judge held that the appellants had no locus standi to oppose the grant, and that Probate would be granted to the respondent on proof of the Will in common form. Radha Raman and others have appealed to this Court and an application also has been made under section 115, Code of Civil Procedure, against the order of the Court below.

It has been held in several cases that no appeal lies against such an order. The order, however, can be revised upon the application under section 115, Code of Civil Procedure.

The opposite party being the brother of the sister's husband of the deceased is a perfect stranger to the family, but the Court below held that the petitioners were not heirs and, therefore, had no locus standi to oppose the grant of Probate. The question for consideration, therefore, is whether the petitioners have any locus standi to oppose the application.

It is contended on behalf of the petitioners that they are heirs. Under the Mitakshara a daughter's son's son in the absence of other heirs succeeds as a bandhu. See Krishnayya v. Pichamma (1) and Shecbarat Kuari v. Bhagwati Prasad (2). A grandfather's daughter's son's son stands on the same footing. But the question is whether a daughter's son's son is an heir under the Dayabhaga, because if he is not, a fortiori the grandfather's daughter's son's son cannot be held to be in the line of heirs.

A daughter's son's son offers no oblation to the maternal grandfather of his own father, and it is accordingly contended on behalf of the opposite party that he is no heir according to the test laid down in the case of Gooroo Gobind Shaha v. Anund Lall Ghose (3).

That the principle of spiritual benefit governs the law of inheritance in the Dayabhaga was laid down by the Full Bench in the above case, and again by another Full Bench in the case of Digumber Roy Chowdhry v. Moti Lal Bundopadhya (4).

Attempts have been made from time to time to induce the Court to have the matter reconsidered by the Full Court on the ground that spiritual benefit is no test, at any rate not the only test, of heirship, and that the Full Bench took an erroneous view of the fundamental principles which underlie the Dayabhaga and consequently arrived at an incorrect conclusion. These attempts have, however, been unsuccessful, and this Court has held that the matter should not be re opened. See Kedar Nath Roy v. Amritalal Mookerjee (5) and Kailash Chandra Adhikary v. Karuna Kantha Chowdhury (6).

It must now, therefore, be taken as settled that the principle of spiritual benefit is the test of heirship under the Dayabhaga, whatever view might have been taken of the matter had it been res integra. It is to be observed that in all the cases cited above, the question was who was the preferable heir, according to the principle of spiritual benefit. In the present case no question of preference arises as between the petitioners and the opposite party, and, therefore, there is no question as to the superiority of spiritual benefit to be conferred on the deceased by one as compared to that by the other. The opposite party is a perfect stranger to the family and in no circumstances can he be in the line of heirs, whereas the petitioners are the daughter's son's sons of the grandfather of the deceased. As stated above, their position is similar to that of a daughter's son's son, and the question, therefore, is whether a daughter's son's son is excluded from inheritance under the Bengal School even where there is no other heir at all.

The Dayabhaga (Chapter XI, section 11, verse 2) in discussing the right of the daughter's son to succession, says: "It is the daughter's son who is the giver of

(1) 11 M. 287; 4 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 200.
(2) 17 A. 523; A. W. N. (1895) 117; 8 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 660.
(3) 18 W. R. 49 (F. B.); 5 B. L. R. (F. B.) 15.
(4) 9 C. 562; 12 C. L. R. 204; 7 Ind. Jur. 529; 4 Ind Dec. (N. S.) 1023.
(5) 17 Ind Cas. 283; 16 C. L. J. 342; 17 C. W. N. 492.
(6) 19 Ind. Cas. 677; 18 C. W. N. 477.

the funeral oblation not his son, nor the daughter's daughter for the funeral oblation ceases with him." The daughter's son's son is, therefore, expressly excluded from inheritance.

On behalf of the petitioners, however, reliance is placed upon the arguments advanced by Raj Kumar Sarvadhikari in his Tagore Lectures in favour of the heritable right of a daughter's son's son. The first is that the mere fact that a daughter's son's son is not a Sapinda heir does not show that he is excluded altogether from inheritance. It is pointed out by him that in the verse cited above Jimutavahana is discussing the preferable right of a Sapinda to succession. The daughter's son is a Sapinda heir but his son is not so; he is not in the line of Sapinda heirs because he is not competent to offer an oblation. A great-grandson's son is not a Sapinda and, therefore, cannot succeed as a Sapinda, but he succeeds as a Sakulya. The mere fact, therefore, that a person cannot succeed as a Sapinda does not show that he is excluded altogether.

The next and the main ground which Raj Kumar Sarvadhikari urges in support of his view is that a daughter's son's son is a Samanodaka and a Sakulya and, therefore, is entitled to inherit on failure of nearer heirs even on the principle of spiritual benefit.

The reason given by him may be summarised as follows:—The Dayabhaga, after dealing with the succession of Sapindas ex parte paterna and ex parte materna and that of Sakulya (distant kinsman), in Chapter XI, section 6, verse 23, states: "If there be no such distant kindred the Samanodakas or kinsmen allied by a common libation of water must be admitted to inherit as being signified by the term Sakulya (conformably with Budhayana's explanation of it).

After the near Sakulyas, therefore, the Samanodakas come in, and these Samanodakas are also mentioned by Jimutavahana as Sakulyas, they are, therefore, the remote Sakulyas. Though every person who presents water is, properly speaking, a Samanodaka of the deceased, the law of inheritance has given a limited significance to the term. Every Samanodaka cannot be heir because every person is competent to offer libation of water to every other person, and in fact in making Tarpan water is offered to every created being. In order that he may inherit the Samanodaka must be also a Sakulya, i. e, must belong to the Kula or family.

If the word Kula be understood as meaning only the agnatic family, then the daughter's son's son would not belong to the same Kula, but Jimutavahana has not confined the expression to the agnatic family alone. The male descendants of the daughters of the family known as bandhus in the Mitakshara have been included by him in the expression Kula (family) of the deceased. "Such kinsman, having sprung from his family though of different male descent as his own daughter's son or his father's daughter's son or having sprung from a different family as his maternal uncle or the like, is heir." It appears, therefore, that not only those who bear the same Gotra or family name, but also those who, though they do not bear the family name, are sprung from the same line, i. e., cognatic kinsmen known as bandhus have been treated as belonging to the same Kula.

Jimutavahana has not stated who these Somanodakas are. Srikrishan Tarkalankar has treated them as "remote Sakulyas or persons who are sprung from the same family, but whose right of inheritance is postponed to the near Sakulyas who confer a larger amount of benefit on the deceased." Sarbadhikari, pages 842—843.

Raghunandan has not mentioned the Samanodakas as a class of heirs, but the three classes of bandhus (under the Mitakshara) are stated by him to be entitled to the inheritance. Most of them are heirs being connected by Parvana oblations. The rest must, therefore, come in as Samanodakas (as conferring spiritual benefit). He has mentioned the near Sakulyas. The Samanodakas, therefore, must be taken to be the remote Sakulyas.

"As the author of the Dayabhaga has not given us any interpretation of the term Samanodaka himself, we shall be justified in consulting other writers of the Bengal School who have followed in the footsteps of Jimutavahana for an explanation of the term. We have seen that Srikrishna takes it to mean remote Sakulyas or persons who are sprung from the same family but whose right of inheritance is postponed to the near Sakulyas who confer a larger amount of benefit on the deceased. Let us now see what Raghunandan says on the subject. "We have the authority of Harita for saying that the relation of Samanodaka ends only where birth and family name are no longer known. Samanodakas are kinsmen who came in after the partakers of the divided oblations. If the details regarding the descent of a given person from a common ancestor are known or if it is known in a general manner that he is simply sprung from the family, he is reckoned as a Samanodaka.... If our interpretation of the word Samanodaka be correct, it would follow that certain male descendants of the daughters of the family are entitled to inheritance. It would follow, I mean ,that according to the Dayabhaga, the daughter's son's son and similar cognate kinsmen are also heirs"..... "Only two conditions then are necessary to entitle a kinsman to be ranked as a Samanodaka heir. He must present the water and be 'allied by the family.' Both these conditions are met with in the daughter's grandson. On what ground then can he be excluded from succession? Even by the principle of spiritual benefit he ought to take his natural place as heir of his father's maternal grandfather."

It was also argued on behalf of the petitioners that we should follow the Mitakshara in matters not expressly dealt with by the Dayabhaga, and reliance was placed on a passage in the judgment of Mitra, J., (sitting singly) in the case of Akshay Chandra Bhattacharya v. Hari Das Goswami (7), where he observed that in cases not contemplated by Jimutavahana or his followers the law should be interpreted on rational lines consistently with principles in similar cases, and the decisions of our Courts should not be based on a blind adherance to the principle of spiritual efficacy, as it may lead to the violation of other recognised principles consistent with natural justice, and that in all cases of absence of any express texts or precedents under the Dayabhaga Law, Courts should have recourse to the theory of propinquity and natural love and affection as adopted by Vijnaneswara and the commentators of the more ancient and orthodox schools of Hindu Law.

It is also pointed out on behalf of the petitioners that the Dayabhaga lays down that on failure of heirs, the spiritual preceptor or a fellow pupil succeeds; and in default of them the King gets the property. That under the Bengal Tenancy Act in the case of an occupancy holding it goes to the Zemindar, who may be a Muhammadan or a Christian; and that it is difficult to see how it would be consistent with the doctrine of spiritual benefit that the estate should devolve upon a person belonging to a different religon than upon a daughter's son's son or a grandfather's daughter's son's son.

On the other hand the respondents rely upon the view taken by Banerjee, J., in the case of Dino Nath Mchunto v. Ohundi Koch (8), viz., that "the scheme of the Dayabhaga is radically distinct from and to some extent incompetible with the scheme of the Mitakshara and the one cannot well be made to supplement the other so far as the law of inheritance is concerned. Nor can it be said that the Dayabhaga is silent upon this point, seeing that although the Dayabhaga may be silent so far as express enumeration goes, it is not silent so far as the indication of general principle according to which heirship is to be determined is concerned, that general principle being clearly the principle of spiritual benefit" and which is settled by authority.

Now the question whether the daughter's son's son or the grandfather's daughter's son's son can come in as an heir, on failure of heirs, depends upon whether Raj Kumar Sarvadhikari has taken a correct view as to the meaning of the words Sakulya and Samanodaka upon which he bases the right of the daughter's son's son to succession on the principle of spiritual benefit under the Dayabhaga; or whether the view that the Dayabhaga should be supplemented by the Mitakshara, in cases where there is no heir according to the principle of spiritual benefit, is correct. The question, however, cannot be finally decided in the present proceedings which arise out of an application for Probate, and when the persons who would be entitled to get the property (on intestacy) on failure of heirs, viz., the Crown or the Zemindar (if the property is an occupancy holding) are no parties to the proceedings.

(7) 35 C. 721; 12 C. W. N. 511.

(8) 16 Ind. Cas. 349; 16 C. L. J. 14.

RAHIT SAHU v. MAHADEO CHAUDHURI.

As already stated, the opposite party is a perfect stranger to the family, whereas the petitioners claim some sort of relationship (however distant) with the family of the deceased and if the Will is disproved, the questions stated above may have to be decided in a title suit between the petitioners and the person entitled to the estate of the deceased on failure of heirs.

Without deciding any of the said questions, we think that in the particular circumstances the petitioners have some interest in appearing and opposing the application for Probate. We accordingly set aside the order of the Court below and direct that the application for Probate be heard in the presence of the petitioners as early as possible.

The appeal is dismissed on the ground that no appeal lies and the above order is made upon the application under section 115 of the Civil Procedure Code. We make no order as to costs. Let the records be sent down without delay.

Appeal dismissed;
Rule made absolute.

PATNA HIGH COURT.
APPEAL FROM ORIGINAL DECREE No. 55 OF 1917.
Feburary 9, 1920.
Present:—Mr. Justice Jwala Prasad and
Mr. Justice Das.
RAMHIT SAHU AND OTHERS—OPPOSITE PARTY—APPELLANTS
versus
MAHADEO CHAUDHURI AND OTHERS—RESPONDENTS.

Bengal Tenancy Act (VIII B. C. of 1885), s. 23—Tenant, right of, to cut trees—Landlord, right of, to timber—Land Acquistion Act (I of 1894), s. 18—Reference by Collector after money awarded withdrawn, legality of.

Although under section 23 of the Bengal Tenancy Act a tenant has the right to cut trees growing on his holding, the landlord is entitled to the timber of the trees when cut, unless the tenant can establish a custom to the contrary. [p. 126, col. 2.]

The fact that the compensation awarded under the Land Acquisition Act is withdrawn by the party to whom it was awarded does not affect the right of the party who is entitled to receive it to have a reference made to the Court under section 18 of the Act. [p. 127, col. 1.]

Appeal from a decision of the District Judge, Mozufferpore, dated the 13th June 1917.

Mr. Bimola Charan Singh, for the Appellants.

Mr. S. N. Palit, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—This appeal arises out of a reference under the Land Acquisition Act. The District Judge who heard the reference has awarded compensation, fixed by the Collector in respect of the trees, to the landlords-respondents. The tenants, who are appellants before us, contend that they were entitled to the said compensation inasmuch as the trees belonged to them. There is no substance in this contention. Under the Common Law the property in trees belongs to the landlord. Section 23 of the Bengal Tenancy Act relied upon by the appellants has nothing to do, for that section only declares the right of tenants, to cut the trees, but that does not entitle them to the timber of the trees when cut, unless a custom to the contrary is established, the onus whereof is upon the tenants. But upon the finding of the Court below there is no evidence of any custom supporting the tenants' right to the trees. This contention must, therefore, be overruled.

The next contention of the appellants is that the award by the Collector in respect of the trees having been withdrawn by them from the Land Acquisition Department, the reference to the District Judge was incompetent and that the District Judge had no jurisdiction to entertain the reference.

The award in this case was made on the 27th March 1915 and the objection to the apportionment or to the allotment of the compensation in respect of the trees to the tenants was made by the landlords on the 30th April 1915. This was well within the time prescribed by section 18 of the Act for an application by any person not accepting the award made by the Collector to refer the same for the determination of the Court. Reliance has been placed upon the case of Gobinda Ranee Dasee v. Brinda Ranee Dasee (1), in which a doubt was expressed by the learned Judges who decided that case as to whether section 18 or section 30 of the Act can have any application after money has actually been paid under section 31 (2). In that case one of the parties to the award was a Hindu widow and there was no dispute as to the amount of the compensation or to the interest of the persons in the amount awarded, or to any apportionment thereof, and the money awarded by the Collector was withdrawn according to the allotments made by him by the several persons entrusted therewith. Six months after the award, that is, long after the period prescribed for applying for a reference under section 18, an application for reference was made by a daughter of the widow who was not a party in the acquisition proceedings. The object of the reference was to have a determination as to the limited interest of the widow and as to her not having any power to alienate the land referred to in clause (2) of section 31. That case does not appear to have any bearing on the present case.

(1) 35 C. 1104; 12 C. W. N. 1039.

It does not stand to reason why the right of the respondent to have a reference made to the Court should be affected by the appellants having taken out the money from the Collector, behind the back of the respondents. The proviso to sub-section 2 of section 31 clearly provides for such an emergency and makes the person who may have received the whole or any part of any compensation under the Act to pay the same to the person lawfully entitled thereto. The Court below is, therefore, right in the view that it has taken. The appeal is dismissed with costs.

We may, however, observe that sub-section 2 of section 31 requires that the Collector shall, when making reference under section 18 and when the parties to the acquisition do not receive the amount tendered by him, deposit the amount of the compensation in the Court to which the reference is submitted. We fail to find out the circumstances under which the money was paid to the opposite party and why the Collector permitted the money to be withdrawn before the expiry of the term fixed by section 18 for objecting to the award and applying for reference. The District Judge had also a right to demand the deposit of the money in Court when the reference was made and to insist upon its being done, and in our opinion he ought to have done so before disposing of the reference so that the money could be ready for payment forthwith in pursuance of the decree made by him.

As to the cross-appeal, we think that the decree of the Court below is wrong in so far as it has not awarded the additional compensation of 15 per cent. on the value assessed in respect of the trees. That amount has been specified in the schedule attached to the award under section 11, pages 7—10 of the paper book. The decree of the Court below must, therefore, be amended and modified by awarding 15 per cent. of the compensation on the value of the trees. The cross-appeal is, therefore, decreed with costs.

Decree amended.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

APPEAL FROM APPELLATE DECREE No. 803 OF 1919.

January 12, 1920.

Present:—Mr. Justice Richardson.

HARICHARAN MANDAL—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

BIGHORE GAIN AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Bengal Tenancy Act (VIII of 1885), s. 49—Notice to quit—Mode of service—Tenants-in-common—Duty of Court—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. V, r. 15.

A notice to quit under section 49 of the Bengal Tenancy Act should be served in the manner prescribed in the Civil Procedure Code for the service of a summons. Where such a notice is issued to tenants-in-common, and one of the tenants receives the notice for all, the Court should, in deciding whether service has been properly effected on all, consider the facts with reference to Order V, rule 15, of the Civil Procedure Code, or with reference to the rule that service upon one joint tenant is prima facie evidence that it reached all. [p. 129, col. 1.]

Appeal against the decree of the Second Additional District Judge, 24-Pergunnahs, dated the 18th of February 1919, reversing that of the Munsif, 1st Court, at Basirhat, dated the 20th of March 1918.

FACTS appear from the judgment.

Babu Monomohan Banerjee (for Babu Saral Chandra Mukherjee), for the Appellants.—

HARICHARAN MANDAL v. BAIGHORE GAIN.

The appeal arises out of a suit for ejectment after service of notice under section 49 of the Bengal Tenancy Act. The defence, inter alia, was that there was no notice of ejectment under section 49 and that if there was any notice it was not served on the defendants. The learned Munsif found that notice had been duly served on the defendants who were members of a joint Hindu family and decreed the suit. On appeal the learned Second Additional District Judge reversed the judgment and decree of the first Court and dismissed the suit. The learned Judge found that the defendants, although not joint in mess, all lived in the same bari and held that service of notice on defendant No. 1 alone (as the other defendants could not be found) was not a proper or any service on the other defendants. Hence the appeal was allowed on this ground alone.

The sole question, therefore, that arises for consideration in this appeal is whether the service of notices to quit under section 49 of the Bengal Tenancy Act on one of the several defendants residing at the same house, is valid and in accordance with law.

My submissions are: The mode of service of notices to quit under section 49 of the Bengal Tenancy Act is to be in accordance with the provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure. (Reads rule 3 of the Government Notification, dated 31st October 1907 and refers to Tara Das Malakar v. Ram Doyal Malakar (1) and Babu Ram Roy v. Mahendra Nath Samanta (2).] In cases like the present service of notice may be made on any male member living in the same house. See Order V, rule 15, Civil Procedure Code. In other words, the living together of the defendants in the same house is the only essential element that is required by law. The evidence on the record, which the learned Judge ought to have taken into consideration, amply bears out that the notices were received by defendant No. 1 on his own behalf as well as on behalf of defendants Nos. 2—4 who were living in the same bari and that he gave his thumb impression on the receipt which has been found to be his by the expert who was examined. Further it is a well-known principle of English law that service of notice upon one joint tenant is prima facie evidence that it has reached the other joint tenants. Doe d. Macartney v. Orick (3), Doe d. Bradford v. Watkins (4) and Pollock v. Kelly (5).

The principles laid down in the above cases have been followed uniformly in India. See Rajoni Bibi v. Hafisonnissa Bibi (6); also the recent Privy Council ruling reported as Harihar Banerji v. Ramsashi Roy (7). In view of these cases I submit that the learned Sub Judge has erred in holding that the service of notice on defendant No. 1 alone, in the absence of the other defendants who were his nephews living in the same house, is invalid and illegal. The case ought to go back for trial on the merits on which the learned Judge did not decide the case at all.

Babu Pares Chandra Mitra, for the Respondent.—The learned Judge has distinctly found that the evidence on both sides would go to show that the defendants lived separately. The learned Judge has fully considered the evidence on the record. The other side cannot in second appeal go behind the finding of the learned Judge and rely on that of the Munsif to show that the defendants lived in joint mess. The defendants did not form a joint Hindu family inasmuch as they lived in separate mess. The case in Harihar Banerji v. Ramsashi Roy (7) is rather in my favour (Reads the judgment of Fletcher, J.)

The case is wholly concluded by findings of fact. The other side has not made out a case for remand. The appeal should be dismissed.

Babu Monomohan Banerjee replied in brief.

JUDGMENT.—The plaintiff, who is the appellant to this Court, is said to be a raiyat and the defendants are said to be his under-raiyats. The suit was brought for ejectment of the defendants after service of notice to quit under section 49 of the Bengal Tenancy Act. The Munsif gave the plaintiff a decree. The learned District

(1) 2 C. W. N. 125.
(2) 8 C. W. N. 454.
(3) (1805) 5 Esp. 196; 8 R. R. 848.
(4) (1806) 7 East 551; 103 E. R. 213; 3 Smith. 517; 8 R. R. 670.
(5) (1856) 6 Ir. C. L. R. 367.
(6) 4 C. W. N. 572.
(7) 48 Ind. Cas. 277; 29 C. L. J. 117 at p. 135; 23 C. W. N. 77; 16 A. L. J. 969; 35 M. L. J 707; 9 L. W. 148; 46 C. 458; (1919) M. W. N. 471; 1 U. P. L. R. (P. C.) 56; 45 I. A 222; 25 M. L. T. 159; 21 Bom. L. R. 522 (P. C.).

Judge has dismissed the suit on the sole ground that the notice to quit served on defendant No. 1 does not affect the other defendants and that there has been no proper or any service of notice on them. The defendants are four in number. Defendants Nos. 2 and 3 are the nephews of the defendant No. 1 and defendant No. 4 is his brother's widow.

It is not disputed that the defendants are tenants-in-common of the holding in question. Under the rules framed by the Government notices under section 49 of the Bengal Tenancy Act have to be served in the manner provided in the Code of Civil Procedure for the service of a summons. It is said that the notices to quit on the defendants Nos. 2, 3 and 4 were in fact issued by the Court and that they were left with the defendant No. 1 who gave a receipt for them. In arriving at his decision the learned Subordinate Judge does not appear to have considered the facts with reference to the provisions of rule 15 of Order V of the Code of Civil Procedure or with reference to the observations regarding the service of notice to quit on tenants-in-common made in the case of Rajoni Bibi v. Hafizonessa Bibi (6). The ruling of the Privy Council in the case of Harihar Banerjee v. Ramsashi Roy (7) may also be referred to in the latter connection.

In my opinion, the judgment and decree of the lower Appellate Court must be set aside and the case be remitted to that Court for a fresh decision whether there was a valid service of notice to quit on the defendants and for the determination of the other questions which arise in the case. It will be for the lower Appellate Court to make a decree in accordance with the conclusions at which it may arrive when the appeal is reheard.

Costs will abide the result.

Case remanded.

NAGPUR JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

FIRST CIVIL APPEAL No. 94 OF 1918.

October 9, 1919.

Present:—Sir Henry Drake-Brockman, Kt., J. C., and Mr. Findlay, A. J. C.

PADAMRAJ AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—APPELLANTS

versus

GOPIKISAN AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS—RESPONDENTS.

Account, settled, when can be re-opened—Hindu Law—Joint family—Business carried on by co-parcener, whether family business—Presumption—Minor, liability of—Burden of proof—Ancestral trade—Manager, acts of, whether binding on minor—Minor, when can be partner—Evidence—Account books, withholding of—Presumption.

A settled account cannot be re-opened without specifically charging at least one definite and important error and supporting that error with evidence confirming it. [p. 135, col. 1.]

Moulvi Nizamuddin v Kasturchand, 15 C. P. L. R. 61, Parkinson v. Hanbury, (1867) 2 H. L. 1 at pp. 11, 19; 36 L. J. Ch. 292; 16 L. T. 243; 15 W. R. 642, Williamson v. Barbour, (1878) 9 Ch. D. 529; 50 L. J. Ch. 147; 37 L. T. 698, relied on.

There is no presumption that a Hindu family has any joint property or that a business carried on by a co-parcener is a family business. [p. 135, col. 2.]

Vithal v. Siwa, 15 Ind. Cas. 933; 8 N. L. R. 82, Ram Kishen Das v. Tanda Mal, 10 Ind. Cas. 543; 33 A. 677; 8 A. L. J. 723, followed.

If a plaintiff seeks to impose upon a minor in a joint family any liability as a member of a family partnership, it is for him to show how the minor's liability arises. [p. 135, col. 2.]

Vadilal Lallubhai v. Shah Khushal Dalpatram, 27 B. 157; 4 Bom. L. R. 968, Baldeodas v. Manekchand, 3 Bom. L. R. 144, followed.

A minor member of a joint family upon whom an ancestral trade has descended is bound by all acts of the manager, or the adult members acting as managers, which are necessarily incidental to and flowing out of the carrying on of that trade. But where a business is not ancestral, a minor member is not necessarily interested in a business carried on by the major members of the joint family to which he belongs. [p 135, col. 2.]

A minor member of a joint family cannot become a partner in an ancestral business unless on attaining full age he takes active steps to be recognised as such [p. 135, col. 2.]

Lutchmanen Chetty v. Siva Prokasa Mudaliar, 26 C. 349; 3 C. W. N. 190; 13 Ind Dec (N. S.) 826, Bishambhar Nath v. Fateh Lal, 29 A. 176; 4 A. L. J. 94; A. W. N. (1907) 13, Lalji Nensey v. Keshowji, 17 Ind. Cas. 193; 37 B. 340; 14 Bom. L. R. 840, followed.

A minor member of a joint family firm can only be liable to the extent of the assets of the business, i. e., the property which has been used by the family for the purpose or which has been acquired therefrom. [p. 135, col. 2.]

Where a party persistently omits to produce his books of account, there is a justifiable presumption that they are not produced because they do not support him. [p. 137, col. 2.]

Appeal against the decree of the District Judge, Nimar, in Civil Suit No. 11 of 1915, decided on the 31st of August 1918.

Mr. M. V. Joshi, for the Appellants.

Dr. H. S. Gour, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—The suit out of which this appeal arises was filed at Khandwa on the 27th April 1915 to recover Rs. 19,001 with interest at 7 annas 9 pies per cent. per mensem from the 15th July 1912. This claim has been decreed in full and interest at the aforesaid rate has been allowed from the date of the suit to the date of the decree (31st August 1918). The defendants have preferred this appeal.

The plaintiffs constitute a firm known at Khandwa as Radhakishan Jaikishan which has three shops, one at Khandwa in the Nimar District, one at Harda in the Hoshangabad District and one at Sanawad in the Indore State. In addition to other business the firm works as Arhtia or commission agent and in that capacity began business in October 1910 with the defendants, who are described in the plaint as members of a joint family carryig on business at Amraoti and also in Calcutta under the style "Phulchand Padmraj", the defendant Padamraj being the manager. The other defendants are Dharamchand and Hariram, the brother and son of Padamraj respectively, of whom Hariram is still a minor.

The plaintiffs bought cotton for the defendants and consigned it as directed from time to time. The plaintiffs' case is that in July 1912 Radhakishan, father of the plaintiff Sunderlal and head of the firm at the time, but since deceased, went with the plaintiff Ranchoddas and two clerks (Amolakchand and Ramkishan) to Calcutta, to settle their account with the defendants whose principal shop is at Calcutta where Padamraj himself resides. On the 11th July 1912 Padamraj agreed to be responsible for Rs. 7,000 out of the sum due to the plaintiffs from the local firm D. B. Mehta, for whom the plaintiffs had bought cotton on commission in the Mahajani year beginning with Diwali 1910 and ending with Diwali 1911. On the 13th idem accounts were made up between the plaintiffs' firm and the defendants' firm, when the following amounts aggregating Rs. 17,875-7-9 were found due:—

(1) Rs. 8,075-0-6	on account of purchases made at Khardwa on behalf of a third party.
(2) Rs. 3,480-7-3	on account of purchases made at Khardwa for the defendants.
(3) Rs. 5, 105	on account of purchases made at Sanawad for the defendants.
(4) Rs. 215	on account of purchases made at Harda for the defendants.
(5) Rs. 1,000	being the share of the loss sustained on 505 bales of cotton which had been bought and sold by the two firms in partnership.

Padamraj as the manager of the defendants' firm accepted liability for Rs. 19,001 in all, the plaintiffs relinquishing Rs. 5, 874-7-9. Two days later Padamraj signed an acknowledgment (Exhibit P-9) in the plaintiffs' account books and at the same time agreed to pay the balance with interest at 7 annas 9 pies per cent. per mensem at Khandwa.

Padamraj refused to act as guardian ad litem for his minor son and three written statements were put in for the defence. It was admitted in all that the defendants are members of a joint family having shops at Calcutta and Amraoti, but it was denied that Padamraj is the manager of the family firm and that he agreed to pay the plaintiffs Rs. 7,000 out of the sum alleged to be due by Messrs. D. B. Mehta and Co. or that accounts were made up and the balance acknowledged at Calcutta in July 1912. The defendant Dharamchand further pleaded that he was not bound by any settlement or acknowledgment made by Padamraj. Hariram went further and repudiated all liability to the plaintiffs, on the ground that he never took any part in the business of the defendants' firm which he alleged to consist of his co-defendants alone.

Certain preliminary issues were framed on the 1st November 1916 after the plaintiffs had successfully moved this Court in Civil Revision No. 202 of 1915, decided on the 3rd August 1916 [Gopikisan v. Padamraj (1)], to set aside an order passed by the District Judge on the 7th August 1915 staying the suit under section 10, Civil Procedure Code. On the preliminay issues another District Judge decided on the 11th August 1917 that the original contract of Arhat was made in Khandwa and that the defendants were to make payments there, the suit being, therefore, maintainable at that place. The followig issues were then framed:—

"1. Did the defendant Padamraj in Calcutta on the 15th July 1912 on account stated between the parties acknowledge a liability for Rs. 19,001 as alleged?

"2. Did he promise in consideration of being released from a further liability of Rs. 5,874 and odd to pay the same in Khandwa with interest at 7 annas 9 pies per cent. per mensem?

"3. If issue No. 1 be proved, but not issue No. 2, what interest should be allowed, if any?

"4. Had Padamraj power to bind the other defendants (1) by his acknowledgment, and (2) by his novation of contract?

"5. Relief and costs."

The judgment was written by the Fourth District Judge who handled the case. This officer recorded the evidence of five witnesses of the plaintiffs including the plaintiffs, Ranchoddas and Deokishan, themselves and the evidence of the defendant, Padamraj, for the defence besides completing the evidence of the plaintiffs' sixth and eighth witnesses, Amolakchand and Ramkishan, who had been examined in April and May 1917 by one of his predecessors. Three witnesses for the plaintiffs and two for the defendants were examined on commission in Calcutta; another commission was issued to Amraoti on which one witness for the defence was examined. The plaintiffs formally closed their case on the 8th May 1918 and the defendants theirs on the 20th August following, but the plaintiffs were allowed on the last mentioned date to examine Amolakchand and Ramkishan further and to put into the witness-box the plaintiff Deokishan and three other persons, named Tejkaran, Goverdhandas and Bansidhar, to formally prove their account books which the plaintiff Deokishan produced in original for the purpose. The defendant then asked for permission to produce their account-books and to prove them, but the District Judge refused permission on the ground that the defendant had so far filed no accounts or extracts from accounts.

The District Judge found that accounts were made up at Calcutta and an acknowledgment signed as alleged by the plaintiffs; that in consideration of being allowed a short time to pay the amount due, Padamraj agreed to pay the same at Khandwa with interest; and that Padamraj was the manager of the family firm and had authority to bind the other defendants both by his acknowledgment and fresh promise to pay. As already stated, the claim with interest up to the institution of the suit was decreed in full; future interest was, however, refused.

The main question raised in this appeal is whether the plaintiffs' evidence justified the finding that Padamraj signed Exhibit P 9 and promised to pay the balance due within a short time. The witnesses relied on in this connection are Amolakchand (P. W. No. 6), Ramkishan (P. W. No. 8), the plaintiff Ranchoddas (P. W. No. 9), Jiwandas (P. W. No. 14) and Makundlal (P. W. No. 15), of whom the last two were examined on commission. Before dealing with the reasons put forward by the appellants for discrediting the story of the settlement, it seems desirable to quote the following from the defendant Padamraj's deposition recorded by the District Judge on the 20th August 1918.

Examination-in-chief.—"I had cotton dealings with the plaintiffs I had dealings with the plaintiffs on behalf of D. B. Mehta and Co. and some on my own account. No account has been made between the plaintiffs and me. There was an account made of the dealings between D. B. Mehta and Co. and the plaintiffs. The account was made at Calcutta. No other account was made at that time. No account of my dealings was made."

Cross examination.—"Dharamchand is 3 or 4 years younger than I. Hariram is my son.

(1) 37 Ind. Cas. 510; 12 N. L. R. 174.

Our family is joint. The Amraoti business is managed by Dharamchand and I manage the Calcutta business. We have two shops, one at Calcutta and one at Amraoti. The head office is at Calcutta. None of the Amraoti business is done at Calcutta. I am in charge at Calcutta. An account of both the Calcutta and Amraoti shops of the profit and loss for the year is made at Calcutta by Dharamchand and myself. Some accounts are made at Diwali and some are not made. An account is made every year to see what is the profit and loss of each shop. We keep accounts of both shops according to the Mahajani system. In 1966-67 and 1967-68 I had dealings with the plaintiffs on behalf of D B. Mehta and Co..... Kachcha accounts were rendered to me before the suit but not pacca accounts. I did not state or inform the plaintiffs that there was anything wrong in these accounts. These accounts were sent with the consignments. These accounts are still in my shop. I never compared them with my own accounts.

"The account of D. B. Mehta and Co. was made at Calcutta in my presence. Radhakishan, Ranchoddas and a munim had come on behalf of the plaintiffs for the account. The munim was perhaps Singa. (Ram Singh Singai here produced in Court.) I do not know whether Amolakchand came or not.

"The accounts of D. B. Mehta and Co. and my own accounts with the plaintiffs were closed in the same season. If my account-books had been present, my account would have been settled at the same time as D. B. Mehta and Co.'s."

The admissions thus made are very important, inasmuch as they show that the defendant Padamraj at Calcutta was not without facilities for checking there the accounts of both the Calcutta and Amraoti shops and that the representatives of the plaintiffs' firm did visit Calcutta to come to a settlement with D. B. Mehta and Co.

As the District Judge remarked in the ninth paragraph of his judgment, it is most improbable that the opportunity of the visit to Calcutta was not taken to come to some settlement with the defendants, with whom transactions had ceased for about a year. The persons said by the plaintiffs to have gone to Calcutta are Radhakishan, the then head of the plaintiffs' firm and the manager of the Khandwa shop, the plaintiff Ranchoddas who managed the Harda shop and Amolakchand and Ramkishan, gomashta and munim of the Sanawad and Khandwa shops respectively. As already shown, Padamraj, while admitting that Radhakishan, Ranchoddas and Ramkishan were of the party, was not prepared to deny that Amolakchand also came. The story told by Amolakchand (P. W. No. 6), Ramkishan (P. W. No. 8) and Ranchoddas (P. W. No. 9) is supported to some extent by the evidence of Jiwandas (P. W. No. 14) and Makundlal (P. W. No. 15) examined at Calcutta and seems to us both consistent and probable. The principals put up in a dharamsala and after settlement with Mehta and Co. the two clerks went to the defendant Padamraj's shop and there made up the accounts with the aid of Padamraj's account-books and extracts from the plaintiffs' account books which the party had brought with them. Padamraj, being unable to pay the entire balance of Rs. 24,875, offered to pay Rs. 19,001 in cash, if the balance was relinquished and two days' time given him. These terms were accepted, but two days later Padamraj confessed his continued inability to pay and then executed in the plaintiffs' hisab bahi the acknowledgment (Exhibit P. 9), promising to send the money to Khandwa in a short time.

Our attention has been called to some discrepancies between the statements of some of these witnesses and it is urged that Radhakishan would have brought all the account-books of the firm with him if he had intended to come to a settlement with the defendants. As for the alleged discrepancies we can find no substantial difference between the accounts given. It is true that Amolakchand said that there was some bargaining at the dharamsala regarding the amount which Padamraj was to pay. All that Ramkishan said in cross-examination on the point was:—

"Padamraj offered to pay Rs. 19,001 and the plaintiffs agreed to this at once. There was no bargaining."

The statement quoted, however, should be read with the one made by Ramkishan in his examination-in chief, which indicates that Rs. 19,001 was not reached without some discussion and that when Padamraj offered this sum his offer was promptly accepted. Ramkishan's words were as follows:—

"The account was made at the defendants' shop. Some Rs. 24,800 was found due. After the account was made, we went back to the place where Radhakishan and Ranchoddas were staying and told them. They told us to go and that they would see the defendant. On the same day a little later Padamraj himself came and said that the account had been made and that Rs. 24,800 had been found due. He said that he had suffered loss in the transactions and so he asked the plaintiffs to remit some of the amount. After some discussion it was settled that the defendant should pay Rs. 19,001 in cash and that the balance should be remitted."

In this connection it is to be remembered that though Amolakchand and Ramkishan were old servants of the firm, they are not related to any of the plaintiffs and were not much concerned with the actual amount, if any, to be relinquished by their principals.

It is also urged that Amolakchand did not speak of any tallying of the plaintiffs' accounts with the defendants' accounts, though Ramkishan deposed on this point as follows:—

"Amolakchand and I went together to the defendants' shop. Padamraj was sitting there and the account was checked in his presence by Biharilal. The books of the defendants' Calcutta firm were tallied. The Amraoti account was checked with the Calcutta books."

Ramkishan's evidence is certainly more detailed than that of Amolakchand, but there seems to be no real inconsistency as to the accounting. Amolakchand said that he and Ramkishan went to Padamraj's shop to make the account and gave a summary of the result reached: he does not appear to have been questioned as to the method followed.

With regard to the absence of the plaintiffs' original books we would observe that if they were essential at all they would have been required in connection with the settlement with Mehta and Co. The journey to and return from Calcutta as well as the stay at that city must have occupied not less than a week and the removal of the account-books from three shops at different places would have entailed considerable inconvenience, to say nothing of the risk of losing those important records. Moreover, we are satisfied from the evidence of Amolakchand coupled with the admission of Padamraj that the latter was already in possession of extracts from the plaintiffs' accounts besides having books of his own firm to go by.

It is also pointed out that Amolakchand did not mention any promise by Padamraj to remit the balance agreed upon to Khandwa, although both Ramkishan and Ranchoddas speak of such an express undertaking. We are not prepared on the strength of such a discrepancy as this to disbelieve Ranchoddas and Ramkishan on the question whether there was a promise to remit to Khandwa or not. Amolakchand was the gumashta of the Sanawad shop and was, therefore, little concerned with an undertaking which directly concerned the Khandwa shop only.

The appellants' Advocate in view of Padamraj's wholesale denial of the settlement and his signature on Exhibit P.9, asked us to treat the balance of wholly independent witnesses as a matter for suspicion. We cannot, however, think that complete outsiders would have been admitted to the scrutiny of accounts or to the negotiations for a settlement. Jiwandas Puglia (P. W. No. 14), who professes to have been present when Padamraj signed Exhibit P-9, is not altogether an outsider: he was in 1912 and for more than a year afterwards the munim of Lakhmichand Kanhayalal of Calcutta, who worked as the plaintiffs' commission agents and under instructions from his employers attended Radhakishan and Ranchoddas daily. Another person said to have been present on the occasion is Sheodas who, however, was Radhakishan's brother-in law and might have been present on the strength of this connection. The plaintiffs endeavoured to secure the attendance of Sheodas, but were unable to trace him.

Our attention has also been drawn to the fact that Biharilal, who was examined on commission at Calcutta on the 2nd March 1917, was not asked any question regarding the settlement of accounts in July 1912, though according to Ramkishan (P. W. No. 8) Biharilal acted in the matter on the defendants' behalf. This Biharilal is the munim of the firm Phulchand-Padamraj, but he was examined at a time when the preliminary issues only were under inquiry. This witness was not questioned about the final settlement. The plaintiffs were represented by a Pleader before the Commissioner who recorded Biharilal's evidence, and it is not likely that his cross-examination regardig the settlement would have been omitted had its existence been in issue at the time. If the appellants wished to rely on Biharilal to contradict Ramkishan, they should have had him further examined after the final issues were framed. Such evidence as Biharilal actually gave includes some particulars which support the plaintiffs' case; for instance, he said that the head office of the firm is at Calcutta, the Amraoti office being a branch only, and that the firm's books are regularly kept in Calcutta, though sometimes filed in Court.

It is a necessary part of the appellants' case that the signature of Padamraj on Exhibit P-9 is a forgery and it is said that satisfactory evidence is lacking to show from the signature itself and admitted signatures of Padamraj that the one on Exhibit P-9 is genuine. Makundlal (P. W. No. 15), the Head Munshi of the Bank of Bengal, Calcutta, was examined in Calcutta and asked to compare some signatures of Padamraj and the alleged signature on Exhibit P-9 with what is admitted to be a genuine signature in one of the Bank's books. Much is made by the appellants of the fact that Makundlal noticed a slight difference between the signature on Exhibit P-9 and that in the Bank's books. Against this, however, must be set the Munshi's opinion as to the admitted signiture of Padmaraj slightly differing from those in the Bank's books and his final opinion that the signature on Exhibit P-9 is that of Padamraj. The appellants made some show of securing the attendance of Mr. Hardless, an expert in handwriting, but gave him up after the plaintiffs had applied for permission to photograph the specimen of signature of Padamraj in the book produced by the Head Munshi. No attempt has been made in this Court to convince us that the lower Court was wrong in seeing a distinct resemblance between the signature on Exhibit P-9 and that on Exhibit P-13, and from our own observation we are disposed to agree with the District Judge in considering the evidence afforded by the signature itself to be unfavourable to the defence.

It is urged for the appellants that the plaintiffs' delay of nearly three years in suing points to their story being false. It is, however, certain from Exhibit P-33, a letter written by the defendants' Pleader at Amraoti in answer to a notice sent by the plaintiffs' Pleader at Khandwa, that the plaintiffs were already in September 1913 relying upon a signature of Padamraj. The plaintiffs had in the previous August addressed the Amraoti shop regarding payment of their money, as appears from the defendant Dharamchand's reply (Exhibit P 29), the signature on which Padamraj in his deposition admitted to be his brother Dharamchand's. In this connection it is significant that the appellants are still unable to point to any inaccuracies in the plaintiffs' accounts and never put in their own accounts at all, although their failure to produce them was adversely commented on by the District Judge in his findings of the 11th August 1917 on the preliminary issues. Padamraj as D. W. No. 3, when questioned on the 20th August 1918 regarding the omission, could give no reason for it and we think it a fair inference that if his accounts were forthcoming they would support the plaintiffs.

The probabilities of the case have been well considered by the lower Court and after criticising the evidence for ourselves, we have no hesitation in concluding that Padamraj executed the acknowledgment (Exhibit P 9) of the 15th July under the circumstances alleged by the plaintiffs. We also accept as true the evidence that Padamraj agreed to pay Rs. 19,001, with interest at Khandwa within a short period, though when the amount was originally fixed the undertaking was to pay it in a day or two; the respite thus granted was sufficient consideration for the new promise. The suit was, therefore, rightly instituted at Khandwa in view of clause (c), section 20, Civil Procedure Code. The first, second, fifth, eighth and ninth grounds of appeal are thus disposed of.

In the fourth ground of appeal objection is taken to the permission the plaintiffs obtained on the 20th August 1918 to formally prove their accounts. In this connection we need only say that no objections having been taken to any of the numerous extracts filed on the 29th April 1915, the necessity to formally prove the original books of account is not apparent. The major defendants in their written statement impeached no particular item, but contended themselves with a general statement of belief that if accounts were made up the plaintiffs would be found indebted to them. This is not a suit based on a mere acknowledgment but on a definite promise to pay following upon an acknowledgment. In July 1912 no part of the plaintiffs' claim could have been time-barred, inasmuch as their dealings with the defendants began only 11 months previously. The settlement of the accounts having been proved, the rule that a settled account cannot be re-opened without specifically charging at least one definite and important error and support that error with evidence confirming it applies: see Moulvi Nizamuddin v. Kasturchand (2), Parkinson v. Hanbury (3), Williamson v. Barbour (4) and Boo Jinatboo v. Sha Nagar Valab Kanji (5). It is unnecessary to consider the question raised on behalf of the respondents whether the settled account amounted to an "account stated" in the more technical sense of that expression or not: that question could be of importance only if we had to determine whether Article 64 of the Limitation Schedule is or is not applicable.

In the sixth ground of appeal it is urged that neither the defendant Dharamchand nor the minor Hariram can be bound by the acknowledgment or the subsequent promise to pay. On this point we consider that no case for treating the minor appellant as a member of the so-called family firm and so liable for its debts has been made out. It is neither admitted nor proved that the trade carried on by the appellants Padamraj and Dharamchand was an ancestral one and confined as it was, so far as the plaintiffs are concerned, to buying and selling cotton for a single season it may have been of very recent origin. There is no presumption that a Hindu family has any joint property or that a business carried on by a co-parcener is a family business: see Vithal v. Siwa (6) and Ram Krishen Das v. Tanda Mal (7). And if the plaintiffs sought to impose any liability on the minor's interest, they should have shown how his liability arises: see Vadilal Lallubhai v. Shah Khushal Dalpatram (8) and Baldeodas v. Manekchand (9). In Ramlal v. Lakhmichand Muniram (10), a case which has frequently been followed, it was laid down by Sausse, C. J., that a minor member of a family upon whom an ancestral trade has descended will be bound by all acts of the manager, or the adult members acting as managers, which are necessarily incidental to and flowing out of the carrying on of that trade. But where a business is not ancestral, a minor member is not necessarily interested at all in a business carried on by the major members of the joint family to which he belongs, and there is authority for the proposition that a minor cannot become a partner even in an ancestral business unless on attaining full age he takes active steps to be recognised as such: see Lutchmanen Chetty v. Siva Prakasa Mudaliar (11) and Bishambhar Nath v. Fateh Lal (12), both of which cases were decided under the Mitakshara Law, and also Lalji Nensey v. Keshowji (13). In Sanka Krishnamurthi v. Bank of Burma (14) it was held that a minor of a joint family firm can only be liable to the extent of the assets of the business, i. e, the property which has been used by the family for the purpose or which has been acquired therefrom. A

(2) 15 C. P. L. R. 61.
(3) (1867) 2 H. L. 1 at pp. 11, 19; 36 L. J. Ch. 292; 16 L. T. 243; 15 W. R. 642.
(4) (1878) 9 Ch. D. 529; 50 L. J. Ch. 147; 37 L. T. 698.
(5) 11 B. 78 at p. 85; 6 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 51.
(6) 15 Ind. Cas 933; 8 N. L. R. 82.
(7) 10 Ind. Cas. 543; 33 A. 677; 8 A. L. J. 723.
(8) 27 B 157; 4 Bom. L. R. 988.
(9) 3 Bom. L R. 144
(10) 1 B. H. C. R. App. 51 at p. 71.
(11) 26 C 349; 3 C. W. N. 190; 13 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 823.
(12) 29 A 176; 4 A. L. J. 94; A. W. N. (1907) 13.
(13) 17 Ind. Cas. 193; 37 B. 340; 14 Bom. L. R. 840.
(14) 11 Ind. Cas. 79; 35 M. 692; (1911) 1 M. W. N. 385; 21 M. L. J. 620; 11 M. L. T. 56.

similar view was taken in Raghunathji Tarachand v. Bank of Bombay (15), where the business was ancestral. A like liability is imposed upon a minor partner by section 247, Indian Contract Act: See Sanyasi Charan Mandal v. Asutosh Ghosh (16). It is admitted for the respondents that the lower Court's decree which makes the minor personally liable must be modified accordingly. We think, however, that having regard to the authorities cited the plaintiffs have made out no case for treating Hariram as a member of the firm at all. It is not suggested that the minor has ever been held out as a member or that the plaintiffs gave credit to the firm on the strength of any joint family assets whatever. On the other hand the evidence adduced by the plaintiffs themselves indicates that the contract with Phulchand Padamraj was entered into on the strength of its working as agent for Mehta and Co. The minor appellant will accordingly be discharged from all responsibility.

As regards the defendant-appellant Dharamchand the contention that he is not liable for the cotton actually supplied by the plaintiffs as commission agents for Phulchand-Padamraj is not seriously pressed. We think it perfectly clear on the evidence that Padamraj was the managing member of the firm and as such competent to bind his adult brother. We have no doubt that the Calcutta shop was regarded as the headquarters of the firm and that the accounts of both shops were regularly made up there. The plaintiffs' behaviour in going to Calcutta is realy explicable only in this basis, for if there was an entirely separate contract as to the Amraoti shop, it would have been a simple matter for them to visit Amraoti also, that place being reached by a short railway journey from Khandwa.

With regard to the question whether Dharamchand can be bound by the hawala for Rs. 7,000 said to have been due to the plaintiffs from Mehta and Co., it is necessary to consider the evidence regarding this transaction. We observe in the first place that the defendant Padamraj was admittedly present at the settlement between the plaintiffs and Mehta and Co., and that according to him the plaintiffs gave up Rs. 10 or 12, receiving the balance: thus we have no evidence but that of the plaintiffs to explain this transaction. Amolakchand merely stated that Mehta and Co.'s liability was fully discharged by payment and gave no particulars of the reason why the hawala was arranged. Ramkishan was more explicit and deposed as follows:—

"The 1st item of Rs. 7,000 in the account (Exhibit P-9) is for a hawala of Rs. 7,000 which the defendant undertook to pay on behalf of D. B. Mehta and Co. to us. We were commission agents for D. B. Mehta and Co. and the defendant was their agent. This hawala was given at Calcutta in the office of D. B. Mehta and Co. on Asarh Badi..... .....After the account of D. B. Mehta and Co. had been ascertained, the defendant Padamraj agreed to pay the sum of Rs. 7,000 to us out of the amount due. This hawala was entered in D. B. Mehta and Co.'s books. In our books also this sum has been credited to D. B. Mehta and Co. and debited to Padamraj. The sum of Rs. 7,000 must have been credited to D. B. Mehta and Co. in the books, though this is not shown in the account submitted with the plaint. The account of D. B. Mehta and Co. has been settled. We have given them a receipt in full satisfaction. The hawala of Rs. 7,000 is mentioned in this receipt."

Ranchoddas in examination-in-chief said:—

"We had to recover about Rs. 36,000 in all from D. B. Mehta and Co. Padamraj had purchased cotton on behalf of D. B. Mehta and Co. and it was on this account that they owed Rs. 36,000."

And in cross examination added:—

"I myself went to D. B. Mehta and Co. Except the Rs. 7,000 for which a hawala was taken, the balance due from D. B. Mehta and Co. has been paid. The account was made in D. B. Mehta and Co.'s office. I do not remember whether the money was paid then or later. Padamraj told me that he had overdrawn from D. B. Mehta and Co. to the extent of Rs. 7,000. If I agreed to accept hawala of this sum, he said he would get my account settled with D. B. Mehta and Co. The gumashtas were present when Padamraj said this."

There is no suggestion from Padamraj that any dispute took place between the plaintiffs and Mehta and Co. at their settlement, and we find it very difficult to believe that Padamraj would have taken over any liability in addition to his own unless it suited the convenience of his firm as a matter of business. In the absence of any documentary evidence for the defence to indicate that Padamraj discharged the firm's debt to D. B. Mehta and Co. by actual payment, we think it a fair conclusion from the plaintiffs' evidence that the hawala was given in connection with a debt due by Phulchand-Padamraj to D. B. Mehta and Co. We are not at all impressed by the suggestion offered by the appellants' Counsel that Padamraj's overdraft upon Mehta and Co. represented cash taken by him for his private purposes. As explained by Ramkishan (P. W. No 8), overdrafts occur in the cotton business by reason of the impossibility of knowing the exact amount which should be drawn at a given stage. We would further observe that the defence actually set up, consisting as it does of a wholesale denial of the plaintiffs' story, does not properly admit of the suggestion which has been put before us. We hold then that Radhakishen and the plaintiff Ranchoddas should be taken to have dealt in the matter of hawala with Padamraj as representatives of Phulchand-Padamraj.

(15) 2 Ind. Cas. 173; 34 B 72; 11 Bom. L. R. 255.
(16) 26 Ind. Cas. 836; 42 C. 225 at p. 233.

We have no doubt that Padamraj had implied authority to change the creditor of his firm in the manner alleged by the plaintiffs. Section 25[1], Indian Contract Act, is in the following terms:—

"Each partner who does any act necessary for, or usually done in, carrying on the business of such a partnership as that of which he is a member binds his co-partners to the same extent as if he were their agent duly appointed for that purpose."

In this way Padamraj should be regarded as having an implied authority to assent to a transfer of a debt due by the firm. Such transfers are exceedingly common in this country and it is not difficult in the present case to assign a motive for Padamraj's act: Mehta and Co. being at Calcutta were favourably situated for pressing their claim, whereas the plaintiffs' firm in Nimar would have more difficulty. In Lindley on Partnership (8th Edition) at page 171, Lacy v. M'Neale (17) is cited as authority for such an assignment and Briggs & Co., In re; Wright, Ex parte (18) as authority for a partner's power to assign a debt due to the firm.

With regard to the persistent omission of the defendants to produce their account-books we desire in conclusion to cite the important remarks of their Lordships of the Privy Council in Muruges.m Pillai v. Gnana Sambanda Pandara Sannadhi (19):—

"A practice has grown up in Indian procedure of those in possession of important documents or information lying by, trusting to the abstract doctrine of the onus of proof, and failing accordingly to furnish to the Courts the best material for its decision. With regard to third parties, this may be right enough, they have no responsibility for the conduct of the suit; but with regard to the parties to the suit it is, in their Lordships' opinion, an inversion of sound practice for those desiring to rely upon a certain state of facts to withhold from the Court the written evidence in their possession which would throw light upon the proposition."

In that case their Lordships felt free to conclude that if the defendants' account books had contained entries confirmatory of the defence, the defendants would have brought them into Court and we consider that a similar view may properly be taken here.

We hold that the appellant Dharamchand is bound by Padamraj's hawala. The result of the appeal then is that the minor appellant Hariram will be wholly discharged from liability on the ground that he is not a member of the firm Phulchand Padamraj. In other respects the appeal is dismissed. The plaintiffs will pay to the minor defendant one-third of the fee for the defendants' Pleader in both Courts and will also bear the costs (Rs. 50) of providing the minor Hariram's guardian ad litem with means to conduct his defence. All other scheduled costs in both Courts will be paid by the major defendants.

Decree modified.

(17) (1824) 4 D. & R. 7.

(18) (1906) 2 K. B. 209; 75 L. J. K. B. 591; 95 L. T. 61.

(19) 39 Ind. Cas. 659; 40 M. 402 at pp. 408, 409; 21 M. L. T. 288; 32 M. L. J. 369; 15 A. L. J. 281; 1 P. L. W. 457; 5 L. W. 759; 21 C. W. N. 761; 19 Bom. L. R. 456; 25 C. L. J. 589; (1917) M. W. N. 487; 44 I. A. 98 (P. C.).

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

APPEAL FROM APPELLATE DECREE No. 1042 OF 1919.

January 14, 1920.

Present :—Mr. Justice Beachcroft.

BANAMALI PAUL AND OTHERS —DEFENDANTS NOS. 1 TO 5—APPELLANTS

versus

SATIS CHANDRA DUTT AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS—RESPONDENTS.

Batwara map prepared in partition proceedings between proprietors, admissibility of, as evidence against tenants—Objection as to admissibility, time for taking.

A batwara map prepared in a partition proceeding between the proprietors of an estate is no evidence against tenants of the estate, if it was prepared after their tenancy was created. But where a Commissioner is appointed to make an inquiry with reference to the map and no objection is taken to its admissibility, it is too late to object after he has made his report. [p. 139, col. 1.]

Appeal against the decree of the Subordinate Judge, 2nd Court, Pabna and Bogra, dated the 22nd of January 1919, reversing that of the Munsif, 1st Court at Pabna, dated the 27th of June 1918.

FACTS appear from the judgment.

Babu Mohini Mohon Chakravarty (with him Babu Bansori Lal Sarkar), for the Appellants.—The defendants Nos. 1 to 5 are the appellants. The appeal arises out of a suit for establishment of title and recovery of possession. The first Court dismissed the suit, holding that the plaintiff had no possession. The lower Appellate Court decreed the suit. The points are that the Courts ought not to have admitted certain evidence which was inadmissible in evidence according to law. Secondly, there is no finding as to possession. As to my first point, my client was no party to the partition proceedings with the plaintiff's landlord who is also my landlord. These proceedings were initiated after the creation of my tenancy. But I would not be bound by anything done by the landlord. These partition papers were tendered in evidence by the plaintiff against the defendant No. 6 and the other defendants. The case in Baleswar Bagarti v. Bhagirathi Dass (1) relied on by the learned Subordinate Judge seems to have no bearing on the point. The learned Judge's finding on the question of possession is based on the Commissioner's report, which is also made with reference to the batwara papers. Wasilat cannot be decreed unless the Courts find that the plaintiffs were actually dispossessed.

Babu Dinesh Chandra Roy, for the Respondents.—The case is one of bondary dispute. The Court below has relied on the Commissioner's report which it has found to be correct. The batwara papers were admitted without objection which was, however, taken at a late stage. The report cannot now be challenged in second appeal. As regards mesne profits the decree was that they would be settled at the time of execution when they were applied for. I do not press that point now. The appeal is concluded by the findings of fact.

JUDGMENT.—This appeal is by defendants Nos. 1 to 5 in a suit for title and possession. The plaintiffs claimed that the land in dispute was a part of their homestead in Touzi No. 98. The defendants alleged that the land was situated in Touzi No. 67. They also pleaded limitation and denied that the plaintiffs had ever been in possession and that they had dispossessed them. The Munsif dismissed the suit, but it was decreed on appeal by the Subordinate Judge, who relied mainly on the report of a Commissioner who had been appointed to make a map and report.

Two points have been taken in this appeal. The first is that the Subordinate Judge relied on evidence which was not admissible, and secondly, that there had been no finding as to the date of dispossession of the plaintiffs and, therefore, the decree for Wasilat which the learned Subordinate Judge gave to the plaintiffs was ineffective.

As regards the first point the evidence which is objected to is a map which was prepared in a batwara proceeding, which took place in 1905. That partition proceeding was between the proprietors under whom the respective parties in this suit claimed. The objection is that the tenants were no parties to that proceeding and, therefore, they are not bound by the batwara map and in fact that the map is no evidence at all against them. The learned Subordinate Judge held that even though the map might not be conclusive as against the tenants it was at any rate evidence against them, relying on a decision of this

(1) 7 C. L. J. 563; 35 C. 701; 12 C. W. N. 657.

Court reported as Baleswar Bagarti v. Bhagirathi Dass (1). The case to which the learned Subordinate Judge refers to my mind has no real bearing on the question before me. Generally speaking the argument is correct that this batwara map would not be evidence against the tenants because it was prepared after their tenancy was created. But when the facts of this case are looked into, I do not think I can give effect to the first argument advanced. It appears that the commission was issued to the Commissionor on the 2nd February 1918 and he was ordered to make enquiry and relay the land with reference to documents filed by the parties. One of the documents filed by the plaintiffs was this map. At the time when the commission was issued no exception was taken to the instructions given to the Commissioner to make the enquiry with reference to this map. That might perhaps be explained by the fact either that the defendants were not aware of this map or that the map was not filed till late. There seems to be some reason to think that the map was only filed before the Commissioner sometime in March. The Commissioner was examined on the 21st June 1918, and objection to this map was taken for the first time on the 24th June after the Commissioner's examination, and there is an order by the Munsif that the map would be accepted in evidence only as against defendant No. 6 who is not one of the present appellants. It appears, however, that while the Commissioner was carrying on his proceedings, based at least to some extent on this map, no objection was taken at that stage by the defendants who were present, and in fact such an objection could hardly have come from them with good grace, considering that they also at the same proceeding relied on a batwara map in a partition made in 1888 in respect of Tonzi No. 67. However, the fact remains that they made no objection while the Commissioner was proceeding on the basis of this map. So I think the objection taken to its admissibility subsequently, when they found that the Commissioner's report was against them, came too late.

As regards the second point it is quite clear that the learned Subordinate Judge has come to no finding as to the date of dispossession by the defendants and the effect of that would ordinarily be that the case would have to go back to the Subordinate Judge for a finding as to that date, because in the absence of it, it is clear that there could be no execution of the decree. That course will, however, now be unnecessary, as the learned Pleader who appears for the respondents says that he gives up all claim to Wasilat.

The result, therefore, is that this appeal is dismissed subject to this that so much of the decree of the Subordinate Judge as directs that the plaintiffs are to get Wasilat will be expunged.

The respondents will get their costs of this appeal.

Appeal dismissed;
Decree modified.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 377 OF 1919.

April 16, 1920.

Present:—Mr. Justice Tudball and Mr. Justice Sulaiman.

DARBARI MAL—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

MOOLA SINGH AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1903), O. XXXIV, r. 6—Mortgage suit—Decree for sale unexecuted—Mortgagee, whether entitled to obtain decree over.

A mortgagee who obtains a decree for sale, but fails to execute it, is not entitled to come into Court under rule 6 of Order XXXIV of the Civil Procedure Code, to obtain a decree over, as that rule contemplates that the property should be put to sale in execution of the decree before an application under its provisions can be made. [p. 141, col. 1.]

Second appeal from the decision of the Judge, Moradabad, dated the 7th December 1918.

Mr. Panna Lal, for the Appellant.

Messrs. G. L. Agarwala and Radha Kant Malaviya, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—The facts of this case are very simple. The appellant is a puisne mortgagee. He sued and obtained a decree for the sale on the basis of his mortgage-deed, which was dated the 4th of April 1906, on the 22nd of April 1912. His suit was brought within six years of the mortgage. He obtained a final decree for sale on the 20th January 1915. He has now made the present application for a decree over under Order XXXIV, rule 6. In the meantime he has not put his decree into execution in any way whatsoever, nor has he attempted to bring the property to sale. The reason for this is that there was a prior mortgage upon the estate. The prior mortgagee sued and obtained a decree on the 21st of January 1913. The whole of the property was sold in satisfaction of the prior mortgage. The present appellant made no attempt to pay off the prior mortgage at any time. He has come into Court, as we have said above, asking for a decree under Order XXXIV, rule 6. Order XXXIV, rule 6, runs as follows:—

"Where the net proceeds of any such sale are found to be insufficient to pay the amount due to the plaintiff, if the balance is legally recoverable from the defendant otherwise than out of the property sold, the Court may pass a decree for such amount."

The rule runs immediately after rule 5, clause 2, which says:—

"Where such payment is not so made the Court shall, on application made in that behalf by the plaintiff, pass a decree that the mortgaged property, or a sufficient part thereof, be sold and that the proceeds of the sale be dealt with as is mentioned in rule 4."

Rule 6, therefore, clearly contemplates that the property should have been put to sale in execution of the decree before an application under rule 6 could be made. Both the Courts below have held that in the circumstances the plaintiff is not entitled to a decree as asked for and they have based their decision on a ruling of this Court to be found in Kanta Prasad v. Syed Ahmad (1). That was a decision of a Division Bench of this Court sitting in Letters Patent Appeal, and the Court upheld the decision of a single Judge of this Court in that case. It will be seen on a perusal of the judgment in that case that Mr. Justice Banerji who delivered the judgment referred to the case of Muhammad Akbar v. Munshi Ram (2) and also to the case of Badri Das v. Inayat Khan (3). All those rulings clearly apply to the facts of the present case, which it is impossible to distinguish from the facts of the cases concerned in those judgments. Our attention has been called to certain other decisions of this Court to be found in Kedar Nath v. Chandu Mal (4) and in Pirbhu Narain Singh v. Amir Singh (5), and it is suggested that these later rulings have deviated from the rulings in the former decision, but on a careful examination it will be seen that these cases were clearly distinguished from the older cases. In each of these the property for which the decree for sale had been passed had actually been sold and it was after such sale had taken place that an application was made for a decree over under section 90 of the Transfer of Property Act, with which Order XXXIV, rule 6, coincides. Our attention was also called to the decision of their Lordships of the Privy Council in Jeuna Bahu v. Parmeshwar Narayan (6). That case also does not help the present appellant. Its facts were very different. There a compound decree was given for the sale of the mortgaged property and for the recovery of the balance due thereafter by the sale of other property belonging to the mortgagor. There as a matter of fact the mortgaged property was sold, and it was in execution of the decree as it then stood that an attachment of other property was made and that property was subsequently sold. In a subsequent suit it was contended that the second attachment and sale were null and void because no decree for the balance due could be passed until the mortgaged property had been sold. Their Lordships of the Privy Council pointed out that in such cases where a compound decree had actually been passed and had become final, the attachment and sale in execution of that decree could not be held to be invalid. At the utmost it cannot be more than a decision that a compound

(1) 1 Ind. Cas. 799; 6 A. L. J. 451; 31 A. 373.
(2) A. W. N. (1899) 208.
(3) 22 A. 404; A. W. N. (1900) 132; 9 Ind. Dec. (N S) 1305.
(4) 26 A. 25; A. W. N. (1903) 179.
(5) 29 A. 369; A. W. N. (1907) 83.
(6) 49 Ind. Cas. 620; 17 A. L. J. 207; 36 M. L. J. 215; 23 C. W. N. 490; 25 M. L. T. 278; 29 C. L. J. 443; 21 Bom. L. R. 589; 10 L. W. 26; (1919) M. W. N. 347; 12 Bur. L. T. 80 (P. C.).

decree is binding if final. In the present case we have a decree for sale that has been obtained but has never been executed; no sale has taken place and yet the mortgagee has come into Court under the Order and rule mentioned to obtain a decree over. It is urged that it is very hard lines upon him that he cannot obtain it because the property has been sold in execution of the prior mortgagee's decree. We do not think it is at all hard lines for a foolish man. He took the second mortgage with his eyes open. He could have redeemed that mortgage; he could have obtained a decree on the basis of both mortgages and have put the property to sale and if the sale proceeds were insufficient, he could have applied for a decree under Order XXXIV, rule 6. He might, if he had liked, have dropped his mortgage completely, and brought a suit to recover his decree as against the person of the mortgagor in the beginning. He has done none of these things and he has merely his own foolishness to thank for being in the position in which he now finds himself. We think that it would be quite wrong to differ from the former rulings of this Court which have been consistently followed for many years. Our attention has been called to a ruling of the Oudh Court which is to the opposite effect. We do not think that the reasons therein are sufficiently strong to entice us to strike out a new line and confuse the law as it is well understood in this Court. In our opinion the decision of the Court below is correct. We, therefore, dismiss the appeal with costs including fees on the higher scale.

Appeal dismissed.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

APPEAL FROM APPELLATE DECREE No. 215 OF 1918.

June 24, 1919.

Present :—Mr. Justice N. R. Chatterjea and Mr. Justice Duval.

GOVINDA CHANDRA BHATTACHARJEE—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

DINA NATH ACHARJEE AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Adverse possession between tenants-in-common—Non-participation in rents and profits, effect of.

In order to establish adverse possession by one tenant-in-common against his co-tenants, there must be exclusion or ouster of the co-tenants and the possession subsequent to that must be for the statutory period. What is sufficient evidence of exclusion must depend upon the circumstances of each case. Mere non-participation in rents and profits would not necessarily of itself amount to adverse possession but such non-participation or non-possession may, in the circumstances of a particular case, amount to adverse possession. Regard must be had to all the circumstances, the most important element being the length of time. [p. 142, col. 2.]

Appeal against the decree of the District Judge, Chittagong, dated the 6th of June 1917, affirming that of the Subordinate Judge, 2nd Court of that District, dated the 28th of February 1916.

Babu Bepin Behari Ghose (with him Dr. Sarat Chandra Basak, Babus Khitish Chandra Sen, Panchanan Ghose, Chandra Sekhar Sen, Promotha Chandra Dutt and Nripendra Chandra Dass), for the Appellants.

Babu Khitish Chandra Chakravarti, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—This appeal arises out of a suit for establishment of the plaintiff's right to, and recovery of possession of a 2-annas share in, a certain estate which originally belonged to one Ram Kishore Bidyabhusan.

It appears that Ram Kishore had two sons, Daibaki Nandan, defendant No. 5, and Ram Lochan. Ram Lochan had four sons of whom Lakhi Bhattacharjee was one. Lakhi left a daughter Udaytara and the plaintiff is the son of Udaytara.

It was alleged by the plaintiff that Lakhi and, after him, Udaytara and, after her death, the plaintiff himself were in joint possession of the property with the defendants. In the plaint it was stated that the plaintiff was born on the 31st

March 1893, that his mother died on the 6th August 1897, and that the plaintiff attained majority on the 31st March 1911. The suit was instituted on the 26th February 1913. There was no express denial of the date of the plaintiff's birth and of his attaining majority in the written statement.

The main defence, so far as it relates to the question raised in this appeal, was that the suit was barred by limitation.

The Courts below have apparently considered the question of limitation on the footing that Article 141 of the Limitation Act applied, and although there was no express denial of the date of the birth of the plaintiff and of his attaining majority as given in the plaint, the learned District Judge went into that question and came to the conclusion that the suit had been instituted more than three years after the plaintiff attained majority.

Now, Article 141 of the Limitation Act would apply only if Udaytara was dispossessed; in that case the plaintiff as the reversioner would have 12 years from the date of the death of his mother and the question whether the suit was brought within three years of his attaining majority would then arise. The plaintiff, however, did not sue on the ground that his mother had been dispossessed. His case was that the properties were joint family properties, that after Lakhi's death his mother was entitled to a 2-annas share and that on her death he was similarly entitled to that share. If the properties were joint, then it would be a case between co-sharers. The learned District Judge says: "There was indeed some mention of the suit being among co-sharers, but how any question of co-sharers will affect limitation in this case, was not made out by any satisfactory argument".

If, however, as stated above, the property was a joint property, it would be a case between co sharers and in such a case it must be shown that there was exclusion or ouster of Lakhi or of his daughter more than 12 years before the suit.

The principle upon which the question of limitation as between co-sharers is to be determined, has been laid down in various cases and we may refer to the case of Ayennennessa Bibi v. Sheikh Isuf (1), where Jenkins, C. J., observed: "The law on the subject I take to be well settled. In order to establish adverse possession by one tenant-in common against his co-tenants there must be exclusion or ouster and the possession subsequent to that...must be for the statutory period,.....What is sufficient evidence of exclusion...must depend upon the circumstances of each case...Mere non-participation in rents and profits would not necessarily of itself amount to an adverse possession, but such non-participation or non-possession may in the circumstances of a particular case amount to an adverse possession. Regard must be had to all the circumstances, and a most important element is the length of time." Reference may also be made to the cases of Lokenath Singh v. Dhwakeshwar Prosad Narayan Singh (2), Hardit Singh v. Gurmukh Singh (3) and Chintamani Pramanik v. Hriday Nath Kamila (4).

It has been contended before us by the learned Pleader for the respondent that the defendants' case was that Lakhi himself had no right or possession of these properties.

Now, the questions whether these properties were joint properties and whether Lakhi or Udaytara was in joint possession, have not been gone into by the learned District Judge. He observed in his judgment that the Subordinate Judge's decision on the question whether the properties were joint or not, was not exhaustive and it would probably have been necessary to remand the case for findings on the point had not the question of limitation disposed of the case. There is no doubt that the first thing the Court had to decide was whether the properties were joint and whether Lakhi or Udaytara was in possession as a co-sharer. The learned Pleader for the respondent says that some of the properties were sold away more than 12 years before the suit. None of these questions has been gone into by the Courts below.

(1) 14 Ind. Cas. 722; 16 C. W. N. 843.

(2) 27 Ind. Cas. 465; 21 C. L. J. 253; 20 C. W. N. 51.

(3) 47 Ind. Cas. 626; 28 C. L. J. 437; 58 P. W. R. 1918; 64 P. R. 1918; 24 M. L. T. 389; 20 Bom. L. R. 1064; (1919) M. W. N. 1; 9 L. W. 123; 1 U. P. L. R. (P. C.) 8 (P. C.).

(4) 51 Ind. Cas. 123; 29 C. L. J. 241.

The decrees of the Courts below must, therefore, be set aside and the case sent back to the Court of first instance in order that the questions mentioned above may be gone into and the case decided according to law.

Costs to abide the result.

Case remanded.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 609 OF 1916.

May 12, 1920.

Present:—Mr. Justice Scott-Smith and Mr. Justice Leslie Jones.

UMED ALI—DEFENDANT—APPELLANT

versus

THE MUNICIPAL COMMITTEE, JHANG MAGHIANA—PLAINTIFF—RESPONDENT.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 149, applicability of—Revision converted into appeal—Court-fee made up after expiry of limitation—Appeal, whether barred—Order in Chambers allowing Court-fee to be made up, effect of.

An appeal must be taken to be filed on the date on which the memorandum of appeal is properly stamped. [p. 145, col. 2.]

An appeal was decided by a District Judge on 3rd March 1915. A petition for revision against that decision was filed on 4th June 1915. On 7th February 1916, after hearing both parties, the Judge in Chambers held that an appeal lay in the case and gave time to the appellants to make up the deficiency in Court-fees on the memorandum of appeal. The deficiency was made up on 11th February 1916. On the appeal coming on for hearing before a Division Bench, the respondent objected that the appeal was barred by time:

Held, (1) that the order of the Judge in Chambers must be taken to have been made subject to all just exceptions; [p. 146, col. 1.]

(2) that the memorandum of appeal must be taken to have been filed on the date on which the deficiency in Court-fees was made up, and was, consequently, barred by time; [p. 145, col. 2.]

(3) that section 149 of the Civil Procedure Code was inapplicable to the case. [p. 145, col. 2.]

Second appeal from the decree of the District Judge, Jhang District at Sargodah, dated the 3rd March 1915, affirming that of the Subordinate Judge, 2nd Class, Jhang, dated the 30th March 1914, decreeing the claim.

FACTS.—Plaintiff obtained a decree for possession of a vacant site against the defendant and the latter's appeal to the District Judge was dismissed on 3rd March 1915. Defendant filed a petition for revision in the Chief Court on 4th June 1915. On 20th November 1915 the Judge in Chambers made the following order:—

"MR. MUHAMMAD ALAM, WITH RECORDS.

I sent for the records, though this case is apparently one for appeal and not for revision, as Council now admits, because I wanted to see whether substantial justice had been done. Having seen the records, I have grave doubts as to the soundness of the decision, and petitioner's Counsel asks for leave to pay in Court-fee for appeal. I cannot allow this ex parte. I order notice to opposite party and will decide the point at next hearing. Petitioner to be ready with Court-fee. If admitted as an appeal, I will hear the case on the merits at next hearing.

(Sd.) D. C. JOHNSTONE,
20-11-15. Chief Judge."

On 7th February 1916 after hearing both parties the Chief Judge made the following order:—

"The question for me is whether this petition, filed as a revision, should be allowed to be treated as a second appeal subject to payment of necessary Court-fee. Mr. Nanak Chand admits that the case is one for appeal, not revision, and this is quite clear, and as to the question aforesaid I have considered the circumstances and have paid attention to the rulings Sultan Singh v. Nidhan Singh (1), Sridharan Somayajipad v. Puramathan Somayajipad (2), Udai Ram v. Court of Wards, Aligarh (3) (decided by the Board of Revenue, U. P.), with the result that in my opinion the question should be answerd in the affirmative. There is no reason to suppose that the mistake was anything but a bona fide one.

(1) 31 P. R. 1899.
(2) 23 M. 101; 9 M. L. J. 350.
(3) 29 Ind. Cas. 678.

Mr. Nanak Chand shall pay in Court-fee within a week. The case will then go before a Division Bench as its value is Rs. 2,110 and respondents ask that it be heard by such a Bench."

The deficient Court-fee was accordingly made up on 11th February 1916. The case came on for hearing on 10th May 1920 before Scott-Smith and Leslie Jones, JJ.

Mr. Nanak Chand, for the Appellant.

Mr. Gokal Chand Narang, for the Respondent, raised a preliminary objection that the appeal was barred by time.

The lower Appellate Court's judgment is dated 3rd March 1915. A petition for revision was filed in this Court on 4th June 1915. But at the hearing in Chambers the Judge pointed out that an appeal was competent in this case and after notice to the respondent he permitted the petitioner to make up the Court-fees on his petition and admitted the petition as a second appeal. Court-fee was made up on 11th February 1916, long after the limitation for filing the appeal had expired. The appeal must be considered as having been filed on the day on which the memorandum was properly stamped. Resal Singh v. Shadi (4). It was, therefore, barred by time. In Ram Tahal Singh v. Dubri Rai (5) a plaint was filed upon insufficient Court-fee and the mistake was discovered after the period of limitation for the suit had expired. It was held that the suit was barred by time.

In Satto v. Amar Singh (6), a case similar to the present one, Court-fees were not allowed to be paid.

When the petition for revision was filed, the office pointed out to the Counsel for the appellant that an appeal would be more appropriate. He nevertheless persisted in filing the petition. I submit that under the circumstances the appellant is not entitled to any indulgence from the Court and that the appeal should be dismissed as barred by time.

(4) 43 Ind. Cas. 317; 95 P. R. 1917; 174 P. W. R. 1917; 13 P. L. R. 1918.
(5) 28 A. 310; 3 A. L. J. 838; A. W. N. (1906) 21.
(6) 53 Ind. Cas. 256; 62 P. L. R. 1919.

Mr. Nanak Chand, for the Appellant.—I admit that a revision was not competent in this case. But the learned Judge who admitted the appeal allowed Court-fees to be made up after hearing the respondent. No objection as to limitation was raised by the respondent and it does not now lie in his mouth to raise this objection. The order was not an ex parte one, and is, therefore, binding on the respondent who had full opportunity of being heard. The learned Judge must be taken to have extended the time for paying the Court-fees under section 149 of the Civil Procedure Code and the exercise of his discretion cannot now be called into question. He had jurisdiction to act as he did and to permit the payment of Court fees as on an appeal. Jhanda Khan v. Bahadur Ali (7) Ganda Mal v. Thakur Harkishen (8), Tara Singh v. Muhammad (9).

Ram Tahal Singh v. Dubri Rai (5) was quite a different case. It related to a suit and does not apply to the facts of the present case. In Resal Singh v. Shadi (4) it does not appear whether Court-fee had been allowed to be made up and whether the respondent was heard before the order was made.

As regards Satto v. Amar Singh (6) your Lordships will observe that in that case Court-fee was not allowed to be made up. Had the Court allowed the deficiency to be made up, the order could not have been objected to. This is the distinction which I want to emphasise: that the learned Judge in Chambers having after hearing both sides extended the time for payment of Court-fees, the respondent cannot now object to that order.

Mr. G. C. Narang, in reply :—Jhanda Khan v. Bahadur Ali (7) is distinguishable. In that case the relief had been undervalued and on the relief being properly valued the Court had power to allow Court-fees to be paid

[SCOTT-SMITH, J.—The learned Judge in Chambers extended the time under section 149 of the Civil Procedure Code and converted the revision into an appeal.]

Section 149 of the Civil Procedure Code does not apply to this case. That section

(7) 3 P. R. 1893.
(8) 3 P. R. 1900; P. L. R. 1900, p. 10.
(9) 74 P. R. 1903.

applies only to cases when a document has been insufficiently stamped. In this case the petition for revision was properly stamped. Subsequently the character of the petition was changed and this necessitated levy of additional Court-fees. These were not paid till after limitation had expired and so the appeal is barred by time.

Where a petition for revision is sought to be converted into an appeal, two things must concur. The petition must have been filed within the limitation allowed for an appeal and it must bear the stamp which would be required in the case of an appeal, so that no additional levy of Court-fees would be necessary. In such cases the difference is only one of nomenclature and the revision can be treated as an appeal. Where, however, additional Court-fees become necessary, then unless they are paid within limitation, the appeal must be dismissed as time-barred. Resal Singh v. Shadi (4) leaves no room for doubt on this point. In that case time must have been extended in the same way in which it has been extended in this case.

[SCOTT-SMITH, J.—We shall send for the record of that case to see what actually happened in that case.]

Great stress has been laid upon the fact hat the question of limitation was not raised before the learned Judge in Chambers. I submit that the objection could not be taken before the learned Judge as he had no power to dispose of the appeal finally. This is a case which under the rules could be heard only by a Division Bench. The appeal could not be dealt with piecemeal, and the learned Judge's order must be taken to have been made subject to all just exceptions. The whole case is now before your Lordships and your Lordships can dispose of it finally.

[SCOTT-SMITH, J.—The record of Resal Singh v. Shadi (4) shows that the same learned Judge made a similar order in that case and allowed Court-fees to be made up. Nevertheless the objection of the respondent was given effect to at the hearing and the appeal was dismissed as time-barred. That case concludes the matter.]

JUDGMENT.—This is a second appeal from an order decreeing plaintiff's claim against defendant-appellant. Mr. Narang raises a preliminary objection that the appeal is barred by time. The case was decided by the lower Appellate Court on the 3rd of March 1915 and an application for revision was filed in the Chief Court on the 4th of June 1915, i. e, within ninety days. When the case came before a Judge in Chambers, he held that no revision lay as the defendant could file a second appeal. After hearing the respondent's Counsel he allowed the petition for revision to be treated as a second appeal subject to the payment of the necessary Court-fees and gave the appellant a week within which to make up the Court-fee on Rs. 2,110, the value of the suit. It is admitted that no revision was competent in the present case, but it is contended that the effect of Sir Donald Johnstone's order allowing the petition for revision to be treated as an appeal was to make it as if the appeal had been filed on the 4th of June 1915, in other words, within time. The Court-fee was, however, not paid until the 11th of February 1916 and Ram Tahal Singh v. Dubri Rai (5) is an authority for holding that when by a mistake of the plaintiff a plaint was filed upon insufficient Court-fee and this was not discovered until after the period of limitation for the suit had expired, the suit was barred by time. Resal Singh v. Shadi (4) is exactly on all fours with the present case. There it was held that an appeal was filed on the date on which the memorandum of appeal was properly stamped. We have sent for the paper-book of that case and we find that there also a petition for revision was filed and the Judge in Chambers allowed it to be considered as an appeal and granted the petitioner ten days within which to pay the necessary Court-fee. The Court fee having been paid within that time, the appeal was admitted to a hearing. It was argued here that the Judge in Chambers who allowed the petition for revision to be treated as an appeal in reality extended the time for payment of the Court-fee within the meaning of section 149, Civil Procedure Code. The appeal, however, was one which under the rules of the Court had to be heard by a Division Bench, and we are of opinion that the Judge who admitted it did not intend to decide any question of limitation He could not admit the appeal at all until it was properly stamped, and his order of admission was of course subject to all just exceptions and to anything which might be urged at the hearing. We see no ground in the present case for holding that there was sufficient cause for presenting the appeal after time within the meaning of section 5 of the Limitation Act. When it was pointed out to Counsel who filed the revision that an appeal lay, he merely stated that he had filed the revision instead of an appeal because he relied mostly on facts and not on law. Even then he had time, if he had chosen, to make up the Court-fee but he did not do so. He knew perfectly well that he ought to have filed a second appeal and still he filed an application for revision. Under the circumstances we do not think sufficient cause has been shown within the meaning of section 5. The appeal was clearly barred by time and we dismiss it with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.
SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 1144 OF 1918.
November 3, 1919.
Present:—Mr. Justice Seshagiri Aiyar and Mr. Justice Moore.
P. V. AR. KR. ARUNACHELLAM CHETTIAR—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT
versus
MADASWAMI AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Chose-in-action, mortgage of—Mortgagee, right of, to sue Mortgagor, whether necessary party—Liability of mortgagee—Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), s. 134.

The mortgagee of a chose-in-action is entitled to institute in his own name a suit to recover the amount due, and he is bound in such suit to implead the mortgagor as a party defendant If the mortgagee, owing to his default, fails to recover the money, he will be liable to the mortgagor to account for his failure [p. p 147, cols. 1 & 2.]

Second appeal against the decree of the Court of the Subordinate Judge, Tinnevelly, in Appeal Suit No. 10 of 1917, preferred against the decree of the Court of the District Munsif, Tinnevelly, in Original Suit No. 373 of 1915.

FACTS appear from the judgment.

Messrs. E. S. Chidambaram Pillai and P. N. Marthandam Pillai, for the Appellant.—The mortgagee has a right to sue on the security given to him, for the recovery of the amount due under the Chit. He is even liable to the mortgagor for default of prosecution of the claim. The mortgagor cannot sue the holder but may be impleaded in the mortgagee's suit. Muthukrishna Aiyar v. Veeraraghava Aiyar (1).

The suit against the holder of the Chit is not barred. Time runs not from the date of the mortgage but from the date when the money accrues due.

Messrs. A. Swaminatha Aiyar and A. Subbarama Aiyar, for the Respondents.—The suit against the defendants Nos. 1 to 3 having become barred, the claim against 4th defendant is also barred.

JUDGMENT.—The father of the defendants Nos. 1 to 3 mortgaged in 1906 to one Sankaralingam certain immoveable properties and his rights in a Chit transaction. Sankaralingam assigned the mortgage to the plaintiff. The suit is to enforce the mortgage. The 4th defendant is the manager of the Chit Fund. The Munsif gave a decree against defendants Nos 1 to 3 for the sale of the immoveable properties and against the 4th defendant for the amount of the Chit Fund. The Subordinate Judge has reversed the latter portion of the decree. We are unable to agree with him. He has proceeded on the assumption that the Chit transaction was a chose in-action. He seems to be right: however that may be, we shall also deal with the second appeal on that assumption without deciding the point.

The first question for consideration is whether the mortgagee of a chose-in action is entitled to institute in his own name a suit to recover the amount due under it. So far as this Court is concerned, that question is covered by authority. In Muthukrishna Aiyar v. Veeraraghava Aiyar (1) a Full Bench of thisCourt held that by mortgaging a chose-inaction a complete assignment of it was effected. The learned Chief Justice says that, after the mortgage, the only party who can sue to recover the amount due is the mortgagee. The same view is taken in Bombay; vide Ardesir Bejonji Surti v. Syed Sirdar Ali Khan (2). The decision of the Judicial Committee in Mulraj Khatau v. Vishwanath Prabhuram Vaidya (3), although the language of the Committee suggests that the assignments in that case may not have been by way of mortgage, has been understood in the Full Bench in this Court as holding that a mortgage operates as a transfer of the right of action in the chose-in-action. We do not want to refer to English authorities on this subject because, as pointed out is Durham Brothers v. Robertson (4), the matter was complicated in England to some extent by the conflicting jurisdictions of law and equity although, after the Judicature Acts, the question had been settled. It is clear from the decision of the Court of Appeal in the case referred to by us that, although the mortgagor should be made a party to prevent him from subsequently suing the promisor under the chose-in-action the right to recover on the chose-in action is in the mortgagee. Language of section 134 of the Transfer of Property Act indicates the same conclusion. The section speaks of the transferee of a chose-in action, to whom it has been assigned "for the purpose of securing the existing or future debt," being entitled to recover the amount due under it and as being bound to apply the money in a particular manner, in other words, although there is the duty of accountability on the part of the mortgagee, he is the only person whom the Court of law would recognise as entitled to maintain an action for the recovery of the amount due. That being the position of a mortgagee of a chose-in action, we are wholly unable to understand the somewhat hazy notion which seems to have guided the Subordinate Judge in dealing with this matter. If we understand him rightly, he seems to hold that, if a suit is brought on the chose-in-action against the mortgagor it would be barred by limitation, having been instituted more than six years after the date of the mortgage, the claim against the holder of the Chit is barred. He speaks of a principal right and of a subsidiary right and concludes that as the principal was barred, the subsidiary right cannot be enforced. The learned Vakil for the respondent used similar language before us. We are wholly unable to understand the idea which underlies this contention. As we pointed out, the only person who can sue upon the chose in-action is the mortgagee. No suit by the assignee of a chose-in-action against the assignor to recover money is contemplated, consequently there is not a principal right and an accessory right. If the mortgagee, owing to his default, failed to recover the money, as pointed out by the learned Chief Justice in Muthukrishna Aiyar v. Veeraraghava Aiyar (1), he will be liable to the mortgagor to account for his failure. It follows that the mortgagor has no right to prosecute his claim against the holder of the Chit. It is for that very reason that the mortgagee is compelled, as was pointed out in Durham Brothers v. Robertson (4), to implead his mortgagor as a party defendant so that the matter may be settled in his presence.

(1) 21 Ind. Cas. 316; 38 M 297; 25 M. L. J. 356; (1913) M. W. N. 839; 14 M. L. T. 411.

We must, therefore, reverse the decree of the Subordinate Judge. The learned Vakil for the respondent suggested that there are questions of limitation and that he also intends to raise the question that the Chit right is not a chose in action. We express no opinion upon these contentions. On remand, the Subordinate Judge will deal with them. He must also deal afresh with the necessary objection. Costs will follow the event. Refund of Court-fee allowed.

M. C. P.

Appeal allowed.
Case remanded.

(2) 4 Ind. Cas. 804; 33 B. 610; 10 Bom. L. R. 1146.
(3) 17 Ind. Cas. 627; 37 B. 133; (1912) M. W. N. 1247; 12 M. L. T. 652; 11 A. L. J. 7; 24 M. L. J. 60; 17 C. W. N. 209; 15 Bom. L. R. 9; 17 C. L. J. 162; 40 I. A. 24 (P. C.).
(4) (1898) 1 Q. B. 765 at p. 774; 67 L. J. Q. B. 494; 78 L. T. 438.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.

FIRST APPEAL FROM ORDER No. 37 OF 1919.

April 9, 1920.

Present:—Mr. Justice Tudball and Mr. Justice Rafique.

BHAGWAN DAS AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—APPELLANTS

versus

TEJ RAM AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS AND DEFENDANT—RESPONDENTS.

Custom—Pre-emption—Preferential right—Relationship—Burden of proof—Wajib-ul-arz, entry in, construction of—Hissadar qaribi, whether denotes blood relation.

If a person claims a preferential right of pre-emption over another co-sharer by reason of relationship, it is for him to prove that fact.

The expression "hissadar qaribi" in a wajib-ul-arz does not necessarily indicate a blood relation.

Appeal from the order of the Subordinate Judge, Moradabad, dated the 22nd January 1919.

Dr. S. M. Sulaiman and Mr. K. N. Katju, for the Appellants.

Messrs. Jang Bahadur Lal and S. P. Sinha, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—On the 15th of February 1918 the defendant No. 4 sold certain property to defendant No. 1. On the 25th of February 1918 defendants Nos. 2 and 3, who were co-sharers, sent a notice to the first defendant claiming a right of pre emption in the property, whereupon on the 12th of March 1918 defendant No. 1 re-sold the property to defendants Nos. 2 and 3. After that the present plaintiff brought a suit to enforce the right of pre-emption out of which the present appeal from order has arisen. He claimed that he was own brother of the original vendor defendant No. 4; that he had a right of pre-emption as against the defendant No. 1; that the transfer by defendant No. 1 in favour of defendants Nos. 2 and 3 was a fictitious transaction gone through with the object of defeating his right. In the alternative he pleaded that if it was a genuine transaction, he still had a right of pre-emption as he was nearer in blood to the original vendor defendant No. 4 and had a preferential right to the property as compared to defendants Nos. 2 and 3. The Court of first instance dismissed the suit, holding that the plaintiff's relationship gave him no advantage over the defendants Nos. 2 and 3 and also because the original vendor and the plaintiff and defendants Nos. 2 and 3 were all co-sharers in the same subdivision of the Mahal. The plaintiff appealed and in the lower Court it was held that the custom as set out in the wajib-ul-arz gave the plaintiff a preferential right because he was a blood relation of the original vendor defendant No. 4. The custom as set out in the wajib-ul-arz gives the first right to "hissadar qaribi" and then in case of his refusal to other co-sharers. The lower Court has held that the word "qaribi" here denotes blood relation. He does so because further on there is a sentence to the effect that if any person sells to his sons or to his near relations, then nobody else shall have a right of pre emption. This is entirely a separate statement in the wajib ul arz. It does not qualify that portion of the document where it states that a near co sharer will have the first right to take property on sale. It seems to us by no means clear that the word "qaribi" indicates a blood relation. It is equally open to the meaning of nearness in space as of nearness in blood. If the plaintiff comes into Court claiming a preferential right over another co sharer by reason of relationship, it is for him to clearly prove that fact. A doubtful document such as the one now before us cannot possibly be held to satisfactorily establish his right. We think that the Court of first instance was correct and the lower Court has made an error in interpreting this document. We, therefore, allow the appeal, set aside the order of the Court below, restore the decree of the Court of first instance. The appellants will have their costs in all Courts.

Order set aside.

KESARI SAHAI SINGH v. HITNARAYAN SINGH.

PATNA HIGH COURT.
FIRST CIVIL APPEAL No. 173 OF 1917.
March 11, 1920.
Present:—Mr. Justice Das and
Mr. Justice Adami.
Chaudhury KESARI SAHAI SINGH—APPELLANT
versus
Babu HITNARAYAN SINGH AND OTHERS—
RESPONDENTS.

Bengal Estates Partition Act (V B. C. of 1897), ss 65, 119—Partition—Deputy Collector, power of, to make order under s. 65—Jurisdiction of Civil Court to disturb.

A Deputy Collector can only pass an order under section 65 of the Bengal Estates Partition Act, during the making of a partition and before he has submitted the same for the sanction of the Collector. [p. 150, col. 1.]

Where a partition has been effected, the Civil Courts have no jurisdiction to disturb the same. [p. 150, col. 1.]

Appeal from a decision of the Subordinate Judge, Shahabad.

Messrs. P. K. Sen, C. C. Das, Kulwant Sahay and Raghunath Sahay, for the Appellant.

Mr. Susil Madhab Mullick, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.

DAS, J.—The dispute between the parties relates to two orchards plots Nos. 3090 and 2300, which were in the possession of the plaintiff but which in a Collectorate partition between the parties were allotted to the defendants. The plaintiff's case is that it was agreed between him and the defendants that he should retain possession of these two plots on paying rent for them to the defendants and that the defendants should likewise retain possession of two other plots which were in the possession of the defendants but which were allotted to the plaintiff on paying rent to the plaintiff. Accordingly on the 26th August 1913 a petition to that effect was filed before the Batwara Deputy Collector, who, however, failed to record an order on the petition. After delivery of possession had taken place in pursuance of the partition effected by the Deputy Collector, the parties realised that no order had been recorded on their petition of 26th August 1913, and accordingly on the 10th October 1914 the parties went to the Deputy Collector and asked him to pass the necessary order on their petition. The Deputy Collector on that day passed an order confirming the parties in possession of their respective plots. The plaintiff's case is that this order should have been noted in the Batwara papers under section 65 of the Estates Partition Act. After a decision against him under section 144, Code of Criminal Procedure, the plaintiff moved the Revenue Courts, without success, to have the order of the 10th October 1914 made part of the partition proceedings. He now asks that the compromise between the parties may be given effect to and that his possession over plots Nos. 3090 and 2300 may be confirmed and maintained. The learned Subordinate Judge, being of opinion that the Civil Court has no power to set aside the allotment made by the Revenue Courts under the Estates Partition Act, has dismissed the plaintiff's suit.

In this Court an ingenious attempt was made by Mr. P. K. Sen on behalf of the appellant to get rid of the effect of section 119 of the Estates Partition Act. He argued that the plaintiff in no way challenged the decision of the Revenue Courts, he merely invited this Court to maintain the order passed by the Deputy Collector on the 10th October 1914. In order to appreciate the futility of this argument it is necessary to see whether the Deputy Collector had any power under the Act to pass the order which he did on the 10th October 1914.

It appears that the making of partitions is the duty of the Deputy Collector under the Act. He has jurisdiction to make the partition under Chapter VIII of the Act and in making the partition he is to be guided by the provisions of Chapter IX. Under Chapter IX the Deputy Collector has power, if he finds it necessary to allot gardens and orchards belonging to one proprietor to another proprietor, to provide that the first mentioned proprietor shall retain occupation thereof upon agreeing to pay rent annually in perpetuity to the second mentioned proprietor. This he could do under section 65 of the Act and as part of the partition proceedings. Now it seems to me that once the Deputy Collector has made the partition and has submitted the same for the sanction of the Collector, he loses all control over the partition proceedings except for the purpose of making such alterations as may be necessary in the partition paper or map in accordance with the decision of the Collector under section 58 of the Act or preparing a new partition paper or map in accordance with the orders passed by the Collector. His further powers under section 59 of the Act are merely for the purpose of carrying into effect the partition already made, not for the purpose of altering anything already done by him. It will be seen that he submitted the partition proceedings to the Collector on the 26th August 1913. The Collector approved of them on the 1st October 1913 and the Commissioner sanctioned them on the 23rd February 1914 and the Board confirmed them on the 5th May 1914 and delivery of possession took place on the 25th September 1914. The only order which the Deputy Collector passed on the petition of the 26th August 1913 was this: "Put up to-morrow for orders." He clearly had no jurisdiction to deal with the matter after he submitted the partition proceedings to the Collector and in my view the order passed by him on the 10th of October 1914 was wholly without jurisdiction.

What does the plaintiff substantially seek in this suit? The allotment has been made and is without reservation of any kind. He now asks this Court to declare that though plots Nos. 3090 and 2300 have been allotted to the defendants, still he is entitled to retain possession of them upon agreeing to pay rent for them to the defendants. In other words, he is asking this Court to disturb the partition already effected between the parties. He relies upon the order passed by the Deputy Collector on the 10th October 1914. His argument is that the Deputy Collector is competent to pass an order under section 65 without limitation of time. In my view this is incorrect. He can only pass an order under section 65 during the making of partition and before he has submitted the same for the sanction of the Collector. In my view the plaintiff is clearly asking the Court to disturb the partition already effected. This Court has no power to do so.

The next argument of Mr. Sen was that the parties having agreed on the 10th of October 1914 that they should be tenants of each other in respect of the plots of which they were in possession, this Court can give effect to that agreement. In the first place it may be pointed out that this is not the suit of the plaintiff. In the second place the agreement between the parties is contained in the petitions which the parties filed before the Deputy Collector on the 6th August 1913. In my opinion no oral evidence is admissible to contradict or vary that agreement as contained in their petitions. The petition of the plaintiff was to this effect: "Your petitioner's two orchards whereof plot numbers are given below have been allotted to the Takhta of Babu Hit Narayan Singh, Malik. If the Takhtas (formed by your honour) be maintained, the rent of the aforesaid numbers (plots), i. e., of both the garden be fixed and proceedings under section 65 of the Estates Partition Act with respect to your petitioner's orchards may be taken and orders may be passed with respect to the same." It is clear, therefore, that the only agreement between the parties was that the Deputy Collector should take proceedings under section 65, which is something quite different from the agreement pleaded in the suit. The validity of that agreement would depend on the question whether the Deputy Collector had at that time power to take proceedings under section 65 of the Act. That question I have already decided. In my view, the plaintiff has not established that there was an agreement between them that they should be tenants of each other in respect of the orchards which are in their possession.

In my view the learned Subordinate Judge has taken an entirely correct view of the matter. I would accordingly dismiss this appeal with costs.

ADAMI, J.—I agree.

Appeal dismissed.

SIND JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

FIRST CIVIL APPEAL No. 33 OF 1916.

December 20, 1918.

Present:—Mr Kemp, A. J. C., and Mr. Raymond, A. J C.

RAMCHAND GURDASMAL—APPELLANT

versus

GOBINDRAM SON OF GURDASMAL AND ANOTHER—RESPONDENTS.

Arbitration Act (IX of 1899), s. 19—Agreement to RAMCHAND GURDASMAL v. GOBINDRAM.

refer suit filed after reference, maintainability of——Award after institution of suit—Reference and award, whether bar suit—Stay of suit.

Where the parties to a dispute agree to refer matters in dispute to arbitration, the fact that arbitration proceedings are pending is no bar to the entertainment of a suit relating to the matters referred to arbitration. The defendant's remedy in such a case is to apply for a stay of the suit, and if he fails to do so, the Court can proceed to adjudicate upon the matters covered by the reference and its jurisdiction is not taken away because the arbitrators proceed to make an award after the filing of the suit, even though such award may not have been made before any written statement is filed. [p. 152, col. 2; p. 153, cols. 1 & 2.]

Appeal from the judgment of Mr. Fawcett, Additional Judicial Commissioner, Sind.

Mr. Rupchand Billaram, for the Appellant.

Mr. Isaradas Oodharam, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.

KEMP, A. J. C.—The suit out of which this appeal arises was filed by the plaintiff-appellants against his two brothers and a widow of a pre-deceased brother Gokaldas, praying for a partition and separat possession of his $\frac{1}{3}$rd share in the joint family property of their deceased father Gurdasmal and for a declaration that an award, dated the 4th September 1913, is bad and unenforceable against plaintiff and for further and other relief.

The facts of the case are as follows:—Gurdasmal died in February 1912, leaving two sons (defendants-respondents Nos. 1 and 2) and the widow of a pre-deceased son Gokaldas who is defendant-respondent No. 3. By a reference to arbitration, dated 24th April 1913 (Exhibit 27), the scope of which is a matter of contention between the parties depending largely on the construction of the terms of the writing, plaintiff and his two brothers referred their disputes to the arbitration of three arbitrators. It may here be stated shortly that the plaintiff says that the reference was made in respect of the joint property, and on the assumption that his 1/3rd share in the property was not disputed. Defendants deny this and contend that the terms of the reference covered all the disputes between the parties and provided that whatever award the arbitrators might give would be accepted without demur by the parties.

The arbitrators appear to have interviewed the parties in a desultory fashion up to August 1913, and on some of these occasions in the absence of the opposite party. Ultimately on 26th July 1913 the plaintiff wrote to one of the arbitrators, Mr. Virumal Begraj, the letter Exhibit No. 29, calling upon him to make the award by 1st August 1913 and intimating that in default he would regard the reference as cancelled.

In his reply on 5th August 1913 (Exhibit 28), Virumal promised to expedite the matter. The next day plaintiff wrote (Exhibit 41), saying he did not wish the arbitrators to trouble any further and suggesting that he (plaintiff) might adopt legal proceedings. Mr. Virumal replied on the 18th August 1913 saying the plaintiff could not legally prevent the arbitrators giving their award and hoping to settle the matters with his co-arbitrators next time he went to Shikarpur.

On 27th August 1913, the arbitrators wired for the plaintiff to come to Shikarpur. He says he went there in response to the summons but only for the purpose of objecting to the jurisdiction of the arbitrators. Defendants say there was a proper hearing on that occasion before the arbitrators and that plaintiff was examined regarding his claim. On 2nd September 1913, plaintiff filed his suit against defendants Nos. 1 and 2. On 4th September 1913, the arbitrators purported to give their award (Exhibit 37). On 1st October 1913, defendants Nos. 1 and 2 filed their written statements pleading in paragraph 1 that the suit was barred by reason of the reference and award between the parties and that the 3rd defendant was a necessary party. In consequence on 8th October 1913 plaintiff joined the 3rd defendant as a party defendant in the suit. She filed her written statement on 10th December 1913.

Issues were framed on 19th February 1914 It is to be noted that when defendants filed their written statement, they had not filed along with it the alleged award. They then obtained an order for the examination on commission and on the examination taken on the commission the reference and an award, dated 4th December 1913, on an unstamped paper were produced. In consequence plaintiff on 9th January 1915 amended his plaint by the addition in paragraph 3 (b).

The following issues were raised before the first Court:—

1. Is the suit barred by reference or award, if any, between the parties?

(1*a*) Is the award void or voidable as alleged in paragraph 3 (b) of the plaint?

(1*b*) Is the suit maintainable in the present form in view of the alleged agreement set up in paragraph 3*b* (f) of the plaint.

The learned Additional Judicial Commissioner dismissed the suit, holding that the reference and the award were a bar to the suit. He further disallowed all objections to the validity of the award. Against that decision the plaintiff has preferred the present appeal.

Now, although the agreement to refer was signed by plaintiff and 1st defendant at Shikarpur and by the 2nd defendant at Sukkur, it relates amongst other properties to an immoveable property at Karachi. By section 2 of the Indian Arbitration Act (IX of 1899) therefore, that Act applies to the arbitration proceedings take under the reference.

The 1st point for our consideration is whether the submission and award can be pleaded in bar of the suit. Now what were the facts here? Before the suit there was a reference. By section 4 (b) of the Indian Arbitration Act a 'submission' means an agreement to refer disputes, whether an arbitrator be named or not. A reference is made by a particular arbitrator being appointed under the agreement to refer. An agreement to refer and a reference are only distinguishable as separate transactions, where there is an agreement to refer in which no arbitrators are named and subsequently a reference is made to an arbitrator in pursuance of the agreement. In the present case there was an agreement to refer and a reference in one and the same document, i. e., a submission to named arbitrators. The case falls within the scope of cases to which section 19 of the Act applies. Section 5 of the same Act says a submission is irrevocable except with the leave of the Court. This section, however, has nothing to do with the matters provided for by section 19 of the Act. Section 5 merely takes away a party's rights to revoke a submission. It does not affect the right to apply under section 19 of the Act. Whether an arbitrator has been appointed or not, a defendant can apply under section 19 because it is the existence of the agreement to refer which gives the right to apply under that section. This is very clearly pointed out by Fletcher Moulton, L. J., in Doleman & Sons v. Ossett Corporation (1). It may be noted that if section 5 were a good answer to plaintiff's suit, there would be no point in enacting section 19 in cases where there is an agreement to refer, whether arbitrators are named in the agreement or not. Section 19 clearly covers the case of a reference. See also the decision of our Court in Khilloomram Lokuram v. Louis Dreyfus & Co. (2).

Bearing this in mind, the question is whether the award after the suit is a bar to the suit. Now the authorities clearly lay down that the jurisdiction of the Court is not taken away by the existence of arbitration proceedings pending before the suit. It is for the Court to decide whether the suit shall be stayed or not. If the defendant waives his right under section 19, Indian Arbitration Act, by pleading in the suit, or if he applies for a stay order under that section and it is refused, the Court is seized of the matter and an award passed subsequently thereto is invalid. The defendant's remedy when arbitration proceedings are pending when the suit is filed, is to apply under section 19 for a stay of the suit. If he fails to do so, the Court can proceed to adjudicate upon the matters covered by the reference. Its jurisdiction to do so is not taken away because the arbitrators proceed to make an award after the suit, even though such award may not have been made, before any written statement is filed. It is sufficient to refer in support of this proposition to the decisions in Doleman & Sons v. Ossett Corporation (1), Khilloomram Lokuram v. Louis Dreyfus & Co. (2), Appavu Kowther v. Seeni Rewther (3).

(1) (1912) 3 K. B. 257; 81 L. J. K. B. 1032; 107 L. T. 581; 76 J. P. 457; 10 L. G. R. 915.

(2) 52 Ind. Cas 120; 13 S. L. R. 8.

(3) 42 Ind. Cas. 514; 41 M. 115; 33 M. L. J. 177; 6 L. W. 243.

The last mentioned case was decided since the judgment in the present suit. In the present case there was no application by the defendants for stay of the plaintiff's suit and they further pleaded to it in their written statement. The reference before and the award passed after the suit cannot, therefore, in my opinion be pleaded in bar of the suit.

I wish, however, to guard against any suggestion that this decision would cover the case of a valid award having been given before a suit in respect of the matter agreed to be referred to arbitration. In such a case by the reference and award the original rights and liabilities of the parties are extinguished. If a suit were brought on the original cause of action, the answer to it would be that that cause of action has been extinguished before the suit by the award. There would be no necessity to apply under section 19, nor do I think section 19 could be employed by the defendants in such a case.

In this respect if the decision in Revision Application No. 2 of 1915 [Khillooram Lokuram v. Louis Dreyfus & Co. (2)] is intended to lay down that section 19 can be applied where the award is made before and not after the suit, I must respectfully beg leave to differ from the decision on that point.

Nor is this a case where a reference to arbitration is made a condition precedent to the right of action.

The finding on this point is, in my opinion, sufficient to dispose of the appeal. The appeal should be allowed and the suit ordered to proceed.

Costs of appeal to be costs in suit.

RAYMOND, A. J. C.—I concur. The suit out of which this appeal arises was filed on the 2nd September 1913, and the award which was held to have barred the suit, purports to have been made on the 4th September 1913. The reference is dated the 24th April 1913. Though it is not necessary to determine when the award was actually made, as it is admitted that it was made after the suit was filed, yet I have a strong suspicion that the award has been antedated, and that the respondents in collusion with the arbitrators rushed it through as soon as they had knowledge of the suit being filed. This action of the arbitrators affords a flagrant instance of an attempt to oust the jurisdiction of the Court. However, it being admitted that the award was made subsequent to the commencement of the action, the question that arises for determinatiom is whether the reference or the award can be pleaded in the action in bar to the claim. In Appavu Rowther v. Seeni Rowther (3) it was stated that the trend of recent legislation showed that the rights of a party to seek the assistance of the properly constituted Courts of the realm are unrestricted, and the right inherent in a suitor to sue is preserved intact. When, therefore, a party to a contract files a suit in respect of any matter that he has contracted to refer to a private tribunal, the Court is not ousted of its jurisdiction to try the suit. It is open to the other party to apply for stay of the suit on the ground of the contracted liabilities to refer the matters in dispute to arbitration; and the Court may in a proper case hold its hand and refuse to proceed with the trial of the case. But in the event of no application being made to the Court for a stay of the suit, the Court which has seizin of the disputes adjudicates upon them and its decision is binding upon the parties.

In the case of Sheobabu v. Udit Narain (4) the plaintiff, who had agreed to refer to arbitration a dispute between himself and the defendants, brought a suit against the latter in respect of the very dispute and it was held that a plaintiff is not debarred from bringing a regular suit upon his title. It was pleaded in this case that defendants had pleaded the agreement to refer to arbitration as a bar to the suit, but the suit had not been stayed.

In the present case, therefore, as soon as the filing of the suit came to the knowledge of the defendants, they should have applied for a stay of the proceedings under section 19, Indian Arbitration Act of 1899, but beyond pleading the reference and award as a bar to the suit they did not do so. Both section 18 of the 2nd Schedule of the Civil Procedure Code and section 19 of the Indian Arbitration Act are intended to serve the purpose of preventing a plaintiff, who has agreed to abide by the decision of a private tribunal, from the violation of his agreement. But if the remedy given by these sections is not availed of by the defendants, the Court will proceed with the trial of the suit in the same manner as it would in any ordinary suit.

(4) 24 Ind. Cas. 490; 12 A. L. J. 757.

In Appavu Rowther v. Seeni Rowther (3), which is a case analogous to the present one, the reference was signed on the 20th August 1912, a suit was filed ignoring the reference altogether on the 25th August 1913, and while the suit was pending, the arbitrators made their award on the 1st October 1913. The main contention raised on behalf of the appellant and upheld by the Court was that on the filing of the suit, the arbitrators became functus officio and that consequently their award was ultra vires. In arriving at this decision the Madras High Court adopted the view of Fletcher Moulton, L.J., in Doleman & Sons v. Ossett Corporation (1), where in a unanimous judgment the Lord Justice pointed out that as soon as an action is brought in respect of the subject-matter of the reference, the arbitrators become functus officio. Of course in both the cases there is this reservation that if an award is given prior to the suit, then the original rights of the parties have disappeared and it is the award that determines their rights and liabilities.

I may further add that in Doleman & Sons v. Ossett Corporation (1) the respondent had, as in the present case, referred to the existence of the agreement to refer, and to the award passed, in his written statement; but in the absence of any order for stay of the suit, the mere reference was declared valueless. I am, therefore, of opinion that the reference and award could not be pleaded in bar to the suit. After the conclusion of the arguments in appeal, Mr Isardas for the respondents has drawn our attention to the judgment of Fawcett, A. J. C., in the case of I. R. Affletrangera v. E. D. Sassoon & Co. Apparently the decision in Doleman & Sons v. Ossett Corporation (1) and the recent decision of the Judicial Commissioner's Court in the case of Khilloorrum Loluram v. Louis Dreyfus & Co. (2), where Mr. Crouch's decisions in Sawyer v. Louis Dreyfus & Co. (5) and Dhanpatmal v. Kishinlal (6), relied upon by Fawcett, A. J. C., have not been upheld, were not cited in argument. But further it would appear that the gist of the judgment under reference is the following passage:—"But in the present case the Court distinctly showed it and did not intend to repudiate the decision of the dispute entirely in its own hands, by refusing the application for a temporary injunction, and it impliedly hereby gave the arbitrators liberty to proceed." The circumstances of the case in appeal are wholly different. I, therefore, concur with my learned colleague in holding that this appeal should be allowed.

Appeal allowed.

(5) 20 Ind. Cas. 504; 7 S. L. R. 1.
(6) 35 Ind. Cas. 586; 10 S. L. R. 1.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

REFERRED CASE No. 3 OF 1919.

January 22, 1920.

Present:—Sir John Wallis KT., Chief Justice, Mr. Justice Oldfield and Mr. Justice Seshagiri Aiyar.

In re SECRETARY TO THE COMMISSIONER OF SALT AND ABKARI AND SEPARATE REVENUE, MADRAS—REFERRING OFFICER.

Stamp Act (II of 1899), s. 5—Sale-deed including mortgage of properties as security for performance of covenants—Stamp duty.

A deed of sale, which includes a mortgage of properties not included in the sale as security for the due performance by the vendor of his covenants, need not be stamped both as a sale and as a mortgage, as the sale-deed is not an instrument comprising or relating to distinct matters within the meaning of section 5 of the Stamp Act. [p. 155, col. 1.]

Palakkunnath Illath Govindan Nambudri v. Ottathayil Moidin, 42 Ind. Cas. 943; 41 M. 469; 33 M. L. J. 693, not followed.

Case No. 1 of 1876, 1 M. 133; 1 Ind. Jur. 128; 1 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 87, distinguished.

Case referred under section 57, Indian Stamp Act (II of 1899), by the Secretary to the Commissioner of Salt, Abkari and Separate Revenue, Madras, as to whether the three sale-deeds referred to in his letter are to be treated as relating to two distinct matters and chargeable to stamp duty both as sale-deeds and as mortgages.

Mr. V. Ramesam (Government Pleader), for the Referring Officer.

JUDGMENT.—After hearing the learned Government Pleader and considering the authorities cited, we are of opinion that the three sale-deeds in question, in each of which the vendor mortgages lands not included in the sale as security for the due performance of his covenants, need not be stamped both as sales and mortgages by virtue of the provisions of section 5 of the Indian Stamp Act, 1899, as the sale-deeds are not instruments comprising or relating to distinct matters within the meaning of the section. The decision in Case No. 1 of 1876 (1) is not in point, as the terms of section 14 of Act XVII of 1869, under which it was decided, are different from those of section 5 of the present Act, which was substituted for it in section 7 of Act I of 1879, which again is practically identical with section 4 (a) of the English Stamp Act, 1891. In the matter of a reference from the Board of Revenue under section 46 of the Stamp Act (2), a decision under section 7 of the Act of 1879, it was held that an instrument by which a debtor leased certain lands to his creditor and empowered the latter to apply a portion of the annual rent in satisfaction of the debt was both a lease and a usufructuary mortgage, but only required to be stamped as a mortgage as it did not relate to two distinct matters within the meaning of the section. In Reference under Act No. 1 of 1879, (Indian Stamp Act), section 49 (3) it was held that an instrument by which certain parties took lands on lease and hypothecated other lands as security for the rent did not relate to distinct matters, but only to the terms on which the lessors let the land and the lessees took the holding. In Reference under Stamp Act, section 57 (4) a lease which contained a covenant for renewal was held not to relate to two distinct matters, as the option to renew the lease was merely auxiliary to the lease and formed part of the consideration for entering into it. Similarly in Reference under Stamp Act, section 57 (5) though it was held that the agreement between the company and each of the ryot who were parties to it constituted distinct matters within the meaning of the section, the agreement with each ryot by which in consideration of a payment of one rupee, he was granted a license to prospect, agreed to sell if required and covenanted to indemnify the company against claims by other persons, was held not to relate to distinct matters so as to require separate stamps. The same test was applied in England in Price v. Thomas (6), where it was held that an instrument of lease in which both the lessee and a third party covenanted to pay the rent did not require to be stamped both as a lease and as a deed, Littledale, J, observing that the lease was the principal to which the covenants was an accessory and Parke, J., that the covenant was part of the consideration for granting the lease. In Palakkunnath Illath Govindan Nambudri v. Ottathayil Moidin (7), which was decided without argument, the answer would no doubt have been to the same effect if these authorities had been brought to the notice of the Court, and we think that that decision should not be followed in future cases.

M. C. P.

Reference answered.

(1) 1 M. 133; 1 Ind. Jur. 128; 1 Ind. Dec. (N. S) 87

(2) 8 C. 254; 10 C. L. R. 33; 4 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 162.

(3) 17 A. 55; A. W. N. (1894) 204; 8 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 860.

(4) 25 M. 8.

(5) 24 M. 176.

(6) (1831) 2 B. & Ad. 218; 109 E. R. 1125; 36 R. R. 550.

(7) 42 Ind. Cas. 943; 41 M. 469; 33 M L. J. 693.

PATNA HIGH COURT.

APPEAL FROM ORIGINAL ORDER NO. 143 OF 1918.

August 16, 1919.

Present :—Mr. Justice Atkinson and Mr. Justice Adami.

BRINDABAN CHANDER CHOUBEY—DEFENDANT 1ST PARTY—APPELLANT

versus

Babu GOUR CHANDRA RAY AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS—OPPOSITE PARTY—RESPONDENTS.

Government of India Act 1915, (5 & 6 Geo. V, C. 61), s. 167—High Court, power of superintendence of, extent of—Procedure—Duty of Court.

It is the privilege and prerogative of a High Court, once a record is before it which is erroneous and so erroneous as manifestly to amount to an injustice, to exercise its powers of superintendence to revise such order, or set it aside and direct such further proceedings to be taken as justice may require. [p. 157, col. 1.]

BRINDABAN CHANDER CHOUBEY v. GOUR CHANDRA RAY.

If the record is not before the High Court, but sufficient materials are before it to induce it to send for the record to correct a gross error apparent on the face of the record, it should accede to the application in exercise of the powers conferred upon it, not under section 115 of the Civil Procedure Code, but under the wider and larger powers conferred upon it under section 107 of the Government of India Act. [p. 157, cols. 1 & 2.]

Appeal against the order of the Subordinate Judge, Purnea, dated the 15th May 1918.

Messrs. Sushila Madhab Mullick and Shiveshwar Dayal, for the Appellant.

Mr. Sailendra Nath Palit, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—The petitioner applied to the Subordinate Judge of Purnea under Order IX, rule 13, to set aside an ex parte decree obtained against him in Suit No. 219 of 1917. The ex parte decree is dated the 11th June 1917.

The suit was instituted for the recovery of possession of a certain holding of which the defendant No. 1 was in possession. The defendant No. 1 acquired the interest of the defendant No. 2, who was the original tenant of this holding, by purchase; but it is alleged by the plaintiff, that the holding was a non-transferable holding and consequently the defendant No. 1 acquired no title by reason of his purchase from the defendant No. 2, that in effect the holding had been abandoned by the original tenant, and that the defendant was no better than a trespasser, and that the plaintiff was consequently entitled to recover possession of the property in suit.

In addition to the claim for recovery of possession of the aforesaid holding, the plaintiff also claimed to recover mesne profits in respect of the years in suit, and the mesne profits estimated in the prayer to the plaint were stated to be Rs. 5,195 odd. The learned Subordinate Judge disposed of the suit in the absence of the defendant No. 1, who failed to appear, and granted the plaintiff a decree for recovery of possession of the property in suit, and also awarded the plaintiff a decree for mesne profits measured at the sum of Rs. 1,200. The learned Subordinate Judge discarded the evidence adduced by the plaintiff with reference to the claim for mesne profits claimed by him; and as I gather from the observations of the learned Subordinate Judge, he was satisfied that the claim for mesne profits put forward by the plaintiff in his plaint was extravagantly absurd, and of a most suspicious character. The learned Subordinate Judge, however, having discarded the evidence of the plaintiff as to mesne profits, on his own responsibility and apparently without any principle as a guide and without any evidence, assessed the value of the mesne profits per annum at the valuation of the holding. The holding was valued at Rs. 400; consequently the learned Judge assessed the mesne profits for the three years in suit at Rs. 400 per annum, arriving at a conclusive figure of Rs. 1,200 in respect of the entire claim for mesne profits.

This is the history of the ex parte decree which was sought to be set aside under the provisions of Order IX, rule 13. The onus was no doubt on the plaintiff to establish in the first instance that the plaint or summons was duly served on the defendant. In support of that onus the plaintiff called the peon who served the summons, and the identifier who accompanied the peon; and upon their evidence we are satisfied that the plaintiff has discharged the onus primarily imposed upon him by law in proving due service of the plaint and summons on the defendant No 1. Once such evidence was adduced on behalf of the plaintiff, the onus was immediately shifted on to the defendant to establish that no notice of the plaint or summons was served upon him and that service of the plaint and summons had been fraudulently suppressed.

The main evidence adduced by the defendant in discharge of the onus which was cast upon him is the evidence of himself. Contrasting the evidence of defendant No. 1 with the evidence of the peon and the identifier whose reports appear endorsed upon the back of the summons, little doubt is left in our minds that the evidence of the peon as given before the Court, and as embodied in his report endorsed upon the back of the summons, is reliable. The peon tells what seems to me a very natural story, and the learned Judge who saw this witness was satisfied that he was a witness of credit and of truth, and his evidence brought conviction to the mind of the learned Judge that in fact the plaint and summons had been duly served.

The defendant's evidence as to the non-service of notice of the plaint, and of suppression of such notice, in my opinion, is wholly unconvincing, and weighing with considerable care the evidence on both sides, which is more or less oath against oath, we are satisfied that the evidence of the peon and the identifier deserves credit and carries conviction to our minds, and satisfies as that the plaintiff did in fact serve the summons on the defendants as alleged.

The defendant No. 1 states that he only became aware of the fact that an ex parte decree had been obtained against him on the 10th January 1918; although his house and garden and the other property connected therewith had been attached in pursuance of the ex parte decree on the 6th December 1917. The defendant No. 1 relates a rather peculiar story as to how he became aware of the fact of the ex parte decree; and in support of this version of his case he has to rely upon the evidence of P. W. No. 2, a man by the name of Fakir Chand Lal. The evidence of this witness, in my opinion, on its face, is incredible of belief, and obviously concocted and designed for the purpose of giving some plausible show of pretence to reality in support of the defendant's application. The evidence of this witness is quite unworthy of credence.

The learned Subordinate Judge adopted this view and with his expression of opinion we entirely concur. Accordingly this miscellaneous appeal against the refusal to set aside the ex parte decree under Order IX, rule 13, must be rejected.

I turn for a moment to consider the ex parte decree of the 11th June 1917. The record is before us and it is our privilege and prerogative, once a record is before us which is erroneous and so erroneous as manifestly to amount to an injustice, to exercise our powers of superintendence to revise such order, or set it aside and direct such further proceedings to be taken as justice may require.

If the record were not before us, but sufficient materials were before us to induce us to send for the record to correct a gross error apparent on the face of the record, we should accede to that application in the exercise of the powers conferred upon us, not under section 115 of the Civil Procedure Code, but under the wider and larger powers conferred upon us under section 107 of the Government of India Act.

In this case the record is before us, and it is transparent upon the face of that record that a wrong has been done by the learned Subordinate Judge in assessing the mesne profits payable by the defendant No. 1 to the plaintiff upon a totally wrong and erroneous principle, so erroneous and wrong as to amount to a want of a fair trial of the issue as to mesne profits as between the plaintiff and the defendant No. 1. We think that we should be erring in our duty if we avoided acting as we thought we ought to act.

Although we refuse the defendant No. 1's application as made, we think that in the exercise of our powers we should set aside that portion of the ex parte decree which was obtained by the plaintiff relative to the assessment of the mesne profits. This we accordingly do and the order of the learned Subordinate Judge with reference to the assessment of the mesne profits amounting to a sum of Rs. 1,200 is set aside. The rest of the order of the learned Subordinate Judge with regard to the recovery of possession of the holding in suit will stand.

It follows that the case must now be remanded in pursuance of our order to the learned Subordinate Judge for an enquiry as to the proper sum to be awarded for mesne profits payable by the defendant No. 1 to the plaintiff and of such enquiry the defendant No. 1 shall have due notice.

In the circumstances of this case no costs can be awarded to either party.

Case remanded.

In the matter of an application by DHOLAN DAS.

SIND JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

INSOLVENCY APPLICATION No. 20 OF 1918.

December 14, 1918.

Present:—Mr. Fawcett, J. C.

In the matter of an application by DHOLAN DAS AND OTHERS TO DECLARE THE FIRM OF WALBDAS-HOLARAM INSOLVENTS.

Provincial Insolvency Act (III of 1907), ss. 4 (c) (ii), 6 (4) (b —Contracts of sale and purchase—Difference, whether liquidated sum—Act of insolvency—Departure of debtor from dwelling house—Intention.

For the purpose of ascertaining the aggregate amount of debts owing to creditors in respect of an application under section 6 (4) of the Provincial Insolvency Act, the difference between contract rates of sale and purchase under a contract entered into by the debtor constitutes a liquidated sum within the meaning of clause (b) of the sub-section. [p. 159, col 1.]

In determining whether the departure of a debtor from his dwelling house or place of business amounts to an act of insolvency within the meaning of section 4 (c) (ii) of the Provincial Insolvency Act, the intention with which the debtor actually departed must be considered The mere fact that he returned having altered his intention would not affect a departure made with the intention to defeat or defraud his creditors [p. 160, col. 2.]

Mr. Dipchand Chandumal, for the Applicants.

Mr. E. Castellino, for the Opponents.

JUDGMENT.—This is an application by ten firms carrying on business in Karachi to declare the firm of Walbdas Hollaram, also carrying on business in Karachi, to be insolvent.

It is alleged that the applicants are creditors of this firm to the extent of over one lakh, that there are other creditors to the extent of about two lakhs and that the firm has committed an act of insolvency within three months of the filing of this application.

On behalf of Walbdas-Hollaram it is denied that the creditors are entitled to present an insolvency petition. The first objection urged is that there is no proof of there being a debt amounting to Rs. 500 or upwards of a kind specified in section 6, sub-section (4), clause (b), of the Insolvency Act, namely, a debt which is a liquidated sum payable either immediately or at some certain future time. This objection can be first considered.

The alleged insolvents are commission agents, who have dealt both on their own behalf and on behalf of constituents in forward contracts in sugar, cotton, wheat, gram, etc. The alleged debts are due mainly in respect of Sind cotton contracts and the greater part of the alleged liabilities is in respect of transactions for cotton deliverable in January 1918, about which disputes have arisen that are still pending decision in the Courts. Apart from these latter transactions it is no doubt the case that there is no proof of ascertained debts amounting to Rs. 500 due from the opponents. Those proved, would amount to only about Rs. 301, namely, Rs. 140 due to the firm of Dholandas-Kishendas in respect of cotton deliverable in July 1917, Rs. 50 due to the firm of Jethanand-Dayaldas in respect of cotton deliverable in May 1917 and Rs 111 due to the firm of Jhamandas Aildas in respect of cotton deliverable in July 1917. But it is urged for the applicants that there are differences payable in respect of cross contracts for sale and purchase of cotton deliverable in January 1918, which total considerably over Rs. 5,000 and which are liquidated sums of the kind required under section 6. Mr. Castellino for the opponents disputes there being any real cross-contracts and contends that these alleged differences cannot be treated as debts of the kind referred to. It is no doubt the case that the amounts of cotton sold and purchased by the respective parties are not exactly equal. Thus in the case of the witness Daryanomal 100 bales were purchased from his firm by the opponents against 500 sold to his firm by the opponents. Similarly in the case of witness Kishendas 75 bales were bought and sold between the parties and opponents sold his firm a further 250 bales, and in the case of witness Dayaldas 175 bales were bought and sold and a further 50 bales were bought from the opponents. But it is stated by witness, Kishendas that it is the practice among both European and Indian firms dealing in cotton at Karachi in such cases to set off the first transactions out of an excess of sales against the equivalent transactions in purchases or vice versa. Thus if 100 bales are bought against 50 sold, the first 50 are set off against the 100 sold. I think there is strong presumption that this practice exists. For if A has to deliver to B a thing which under another contract B has to deliver to A, it is obvious that among rational men the arrangement would be to set off the two transactions and not to go through the unnecessary expense and trouble of delivery from one to the other. In such a case there is obviously an implied term that actual delivery is dispensed with by the parties and even if each contract is treated as a separate one in which damages could be claimed by either party against the other for breach of contract to deliver, the result would mathematically be the same as if the difference of the contract rates were paid, because the same market rate on which the damages are calculated will apply in each case. Accordingly I think there can be no question that in such cases the difference between the contract rates does give an ascertained sum due by one party to the other, which is a liquidated sum within the meaning of clause (b), sub-section 4, section 6. There can also be no doubt whatever that in a suit by one party against the other it would be held that an equitable if not a legal set-off existed because the cross-demands if they do not arise out of one and the same transaction, at any rate are so connected in their nature and circumstances as to make it inequitable that the plaintiff should recover and the defendant be driven to a cross-suit. Cf. Stephen Clark v. Ruthnavaloo Chetti (1), Kishorchand v. Madhowji (2) Dobson & Barlow v. Bengal Spinning & Weaving Co. (3). I, therefore, hold that these differences do constitute a liquidated sum and that they amount to over Rs. 500. According to Exhibit 6 Rs. 697-3 0, according to Exhibit 7 Rs. 500 and according to Exhibit 8 Rs. 1,113-8-0 are so due and this evidence is, in my opinion, reliable.

In the matter of an application by DHOLAN BAS.

I now come to the question whether the opponents are proved to have committed an act of insolvency within three months before the presentation of this petition. In my opinion the evidence does establish that the firm of Walbdas Hollaram did lose heavily in respect of the speculation in cotton for January 1918. Thus Hollaram admits that he sold about 8,000 bales of cotton of this delivery at an average contract rate of Rs. 33, whereas the rate settled by arbitrators in June 1918 is Rs. 45-11-0 and the rate which has been claimed and decreed in this Court in some suits is as high as Rs. 59. It is also apparent from the notices Exhibits 10 and 15, which were issued on behalf of the opponents to the dealers claiming against them in respect of these transactions, that they were not desirous of paying unless a considerable lower rate was settled and that they have resorted to the dishonest course of pleading that the contracts were wagering ones. Further it is admitted that shortly after the arbitrators had fixed the rate, the opponent Hollaram reduced his staff from about 6 to 1 and embarrassing demands were made against him by his creditors. One of these by name Parumal had filed a suit against him and obtained an order of conditional attachment of certain debts due to the opponents. Subsequently he obtained a decree against opponents for about Rs. 4,895. There was also a debt due to Messrs. Gill and Co., in respect of which an award was passed for Rs. 77,500 and another one of Rs. 15,000 due to the firm of Tejbhandas-Hotchand. Hollaram sold his house at Karachi for a sum of one lakh on the 14th of September 1918 and settled these two debts out of the proceeds. He also admits having paid these two debts out of the proceeds. He also admits having sold three properties in Sukkur some five months back and to have paid certain creditors out of the proceeds. Hollaram admits he left Karachi on the 18th September 1918 and on the 28th of the same month he was at Calcutta, as is shown by the telegram Exhibit 22. The decree-holder already mentioned then obtained an attachment of Hollaram's moveable property at Karachi and information of this was wired to Hollaram by his friend and neighbour Doulatram on the 29th September. Thereupon he returned to Karachi and arrived here on the evening of the 6th October. A sale of his moveable property was actually commenced on the 5th October, but his Pleader obtained an adjournment to the 8th on which date a settlement was arrived at between Hollaram and the decree-holder and the attachment was withdrawn. The debtor admits that he took with him when he left Karachi the sum of Rs. 6,500 out of the sale-proceeds of his house, that he also obtained the sum of Rs. 1,200 from debtors in the Punjab which he took with him to Calcutta and that he had left no money with his agent Kishendas at Karachi. This is corroborated by the fact that when his moveable property was attached, no money was found in the safe or elsewhere in his house. It is also proved that the debtor secreted his horse and carriage so that though they had been attached, in execution they could not be taken by the interim Receiver. In these circumstances the Court has to consider whether the case falls under clause (b), (d) or (e) of section 4 of the Insolvency Act.

(1) 2 M. H. C. R. 296.
(2) 4 B. 407; 5 Ind. Jur. 320; 2 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 777.
(3) 21 B. 126; 11 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 86.

As regards the transfers of immoveable property, I do not think that it can be held proved that they were made with intent to defeat or delay his creditors for at any rate in regard to the Karachi property, the main bulk of the proceeds went to paying off creditors and I see no reason to disbelieve Hollaram's assertion that he also paid creditors out of the sale proceeds of the Shikarpur property. It is also to be taken into account that the debtor has other property at Karachi and Sukkur, which so far as the evidence goes is available for realization. It was contended by Mr. Dipchand for the applicants that the taking away of cash by the debtor amounts to a transfer of that property under clause (b), but I think the word "transfer" in that section is obviously used in the ordinary sense of a conveyance or other passing of possession or title to a third party. Nor does the case fall under clause (c), for though some of his property was put up for sale in execution of the decree against him none was actually sold. The section must be strictly construed and the mere fact that the garnishees paid into Court the debts attached cannot be held to be a sale of the property of the debtor.

The only real question, therefore, is, whether it is proved that Hollaram with intention to defeat or delay his creditors either departed from his dwelling house and usual place of business or secluded himself so as to deprive his creditors of the means of communicating with him. No doubt this intention must be properly proved, but at the same time it can be inferred from the surrounding circumstances and each case rests on its own facts. In this particular case I feel no doubt myself that Hollaram's departure was with the intention mentioned. The allegation that he went to the Punjab to collect debts may be true, but at the same time the admitted fact that he went to Calcutta where he says he wanted to see if he could start a new business, obviously points to an intention to leave Karachi and but for the fact of his moveable property having been attached, the probability is that he would have remained there. The question is with what intention the actual departure was made and the mere fact that he returned having altered his intention, does not, of course, affect a departure made with the intention to defeat or defraud his creditors. I believe the evidence that has been adduced, that no proper address was left behind by the debtor and that the creditors when they enquired could get no information of his actual whereabouts. The fact that the insolvent's firm is heavily embarrassed and the transfers already referred to support the allegation that his intention was fraudulent. I do not, of course, mean to prejudge in any way the question of the debtor's alleged non-liability for his admitted contracts in cotton of January 1918, but it is sufficient to say that the plea raised for his protection is one that is generally unsuccessful and in itself indicates a dishonest intention.

I accordingly hold that the debtor Hollaram had committed an act of insolvency within three months not only of the actual presentation of the petition but also of the application to amend that petition (so as to state this particular act of insolvency) which was made on the 8th December 1918. I am, therefore, satisfied that the petitioners are entitled to present this insolvency petition and hereby adjudicate the firm of Walbdas-Hollaram to be insolvents. The Official Receiver to take charge of the insolvents' property.

Opponents adjudicated insolvents.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.
FIRST CIVIL APPEAL No. 301 OF 1917.
March 22, 1920.
Present:—Sir Grimwood Meare, Kt., Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Rafique.
Maulvi NAZIR HASAN—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT
versus
BAKHTAWAR—DEFENDANT—RESPONDENT.

Malicious prosecution—Damages, suit to recover—Reasonable and probable cause, absence of—Burden of proof.

In order to succeed in a suit to recover damages for malicious prosecution, the plaintiff must prove, among other things, a that he was acquitted in the criminal proceedings, b that the defendant was actuated by malice in instituting the proceedings, c that damage was caused to him as a result of the prosecution and d that there was absence of reasonable and probable cause on the part of the defendant. [p. 161, col. 2.]

First appeal against the decree of the Subordinate Judge, Saharanpur, dated the 30th April 1917.

Mr. P. L. Banerji, for the Appellant.

Mr. Nihal Chand, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—This is an appeal by Maulvi Nazir Hasan against a decision of the Subordinate Judge of Saharanpur who dismissed his claim, he having sued one Bakhtawar for damages for malicious prosecution. Contrary to what we think is the general belief, these actions for malicious prosecution are extremely difficult to substantiate. The policy of the law is that a man shall be permitted to bring a criminal complaint against another man without incurring any serious risk if he acts in good faith and without malice or, to put it more accurately, if he acts with reasonable and probable cause and without malice. If every one who had been acquitted by a Magistrate was by the mere fact of that acquittal given a good cause of action against a complainant, complainants would be very shy of going into Court; and charges which ought properly to be preferred against people, would be abandoned for fear of the consequences. Now in this case Bakhtawar filed a complaint under sections 298 and 448 of the Indian Penal Code on the 12th of March 1915. Shortly, he alleged that Nazir Hasan had done acts offensive to his religious feelings in that he had caused bones to be thrown into his compound and had demolished a well. Nazir Hasan was the Zamindar of the village. That village was not ancestral property but he appears to have bought it as the result of a successful practice in law and he appears to have dealt with the villagers in a harsh and overbearing manner. Consequently there was ill feeling on both sides, and when the case came before the Magistrate he found it extremely difficult to come to a conclusion as to whether the charges made by Bakhtawar were proved or not. In the result he acquitted Nazir Hasan. Thereupon Nazir Hasan became the plaintiff in the present suit, and it was incumbent upon him, as he was seeking damages for what he alleged was a malicious prosecution, to prove amongst other things the fact that he had been acquitted, which was of course formally to prove malice which in the circumstances was not difficult, to prove special damage and general damage and also to prove that there was an absence of reasonable and probable cause for his prosecution. Now in all these cases the difficulty that lies in the way of the complainant is to prove that negative. We have given the case very careful attention, and we have considered the evidence given by the plaintiff and his witnesses, and we have also read the decision of the Magistrate and the judgment in the Court below, and we are of opinion that the plaintiff has not been able to show that the defendant in commencing this prosecution and carrying it through was acting without reasonable and probable cause. There may have been exaggeration in Bakhtawar's case when before the Magistrate, but we cannot say that he did not honestly believe that substantially all that he and his witnesses said was the truth. The Magistrate who was making the enquiry could not even say that, and he seems to have regarded the matter as one in which conviction or acquittal was on the border line. Now that is not at all the sort of case which the plaintiff should select who wishes to recover damages for malicious prosecution. Our attention has been called by Mr. Shiva Prasad to the case of Puttu Lal v. Ram Sarup (1). That case, in our opinion, very accurately sets out what is the state of the law which as regards these actions of malicious prosecution is as well settled as any thing can be. The reason why in that case the plaintiff was not burdened with the difficulty of proving the absence of reasonable and probable cause was that the lower Appellate Court came to the conclusion that the prosecution story in the criminal case was false to the knowledge of the man who was preferring it, and obviously if it was false to the knowledge of the man who was preferring it, he could not have had any reasonable or probable cause for prosecution. Now that is the position. The result is that without expressing the least view as to the merits or demerits of either side in the original prosecution, we dismiss the appeal on the ground that the appellant (who was the plaintiff in the Court below) has been unable to show the necessary absence of reasonable and probable cause. The appeal, therefore, is dismissed with costs. There being no certificate, we make no order as to the scale of fees.

(1) 43 Ind. Cas. 193; 16 A. L. J. 468.

Appeal dismissed.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 1544 OF 1919.

April 14, 1920.

Present:—Mr. Justice Wilberforce.

SOHAN SINGH—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

MUHAMMAD DIN—DEFENDANT—RESPONDENT.

Limitation Act (IX of 1908), Sch. I, Arts. 115, 120 —Suit for return of goods delivered with interest in kind—Limitation applicable.

Plaintiff sued for 24¾ manis of wheat, alleging that the defendant had signed a balance in his favour of 8¼ manis with interest payable in kind at the rate of 50 per cent per annum:

Held, that the suit was governed either by Article 115 of Schedule I to the Limitation Act, in which case limitation began to run when payment was demanded and refused, or by Article 120, and that in either case the suit was in time. [p. 16, col. 2; p. 6, col. 1]

Mengha Ram v. Hassu, 49 Ind. Cas. 231; 41 P. R. 1918, not followed.

Second appeal from the decree of the District Judge, Lyallpur, dated the 15th April 1919, affirming that of the Munsif, 1st Class, Wazirabad, District Gujranwala, dated the 15th August 1918, dismissing plaintiff's suit.

Mr. Kanwar Narain, for the Appellant.

Dewan Mehr Chand, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—The plaintiff stated that the defendant had signed in 1912 a balance in his favour of 8¼ manis of wheat with interest payable in kind at the rate of 50 per cent. per annum.

He sued for 24¾ manis of wheat in 1918 and valued his suit at Rs. 1,000. The suit is within time if the limitation is one of six years. The lower Appellate Court on the authority of Mengha Ram v. Hassu (1) held the suit to be barred under Article 115. Against this decision a second appeal has been preferred.

Counsel for the appellant argues that Mengha Ram v. Hassu (1), which contains little discussion of the subject, is a judgment of no value as against him. He contends that neither Article 65 nor 115, as held in that judgment, can apply to the present case. In the present case there was no definite promise of re-payment at any specified time. The implied contract between the parties was that the defendant should pay in kind when he liked, subject to the right of the creditor to demand payment when he wanted it. Counsel, therefore, contends that this implied contract can only be said to be broken when the creditor demanded payment and the debtor refused. Counsel urges that his suit is within time if Article 115 applies to the demand for payment which was made within three years of the suit. He urges otherwise that the only applicable Article can be 120 or 52. He cites a judgment of Rattigan, C. J., published in Lahore Law Journal on page 191 of part III of 1920, in which the facts appear to have been similar and it was held that Article 52 applied. In that case, however, it must be noticed that the plaintiff was suing for a sum of money as representing the price of certain articles sold, while in the present case the plaintiff sues for the return of the goods delivered with interest in kind Counsel for the respondent relies only on Mengha Ram v Hassu (1), which may be right on its particular facts but does not appear a good authority in the present case. I hold that either Article 115 is applicable and that if so, the case is within time, as the implied contract was broken only shortly before the suit, or else that Article 120 applies, in which case the suit is within time.

(1) 49 Ind. Cas. 231; 41 P. R. 1918.

I accept this appeal and remand the case to the first Court for a decision on the merits. Costs to follow the result. Stamp on appeal to be refunded.

Appeal accepted.

PRIVY COUNCIL.

APPEALS FROM THE MADRAS HIGH COURT.

December 8, 1919.

Present:—Viscount Finlay, Lord Sumner and Lord Parmoor.

S. D. KRISHNA AYYANGAR

APPELLANT

versus

S. V. NALLAPERUMAL PILLAI AND OTHERS—RESPONDENTS.

Companies Act (VI of 1882), s. 68—Charge in favour of officer of company—Non-registration, effect of—Charge, whether enforceable—"As such," effect of—Appeal—Enlargement of time—High Court, power of—Construction of Statutes—Speech in Legislative Council, whether can be referred to.

An officer of a Limited Company cannot avail himself of a mortgage or charge in his favour, which has not been registered in accordance with section 68 of the Companies Act, 1882. [p. 169, col. 1.]

The words "as such" in the Explanation to section 68 of the Companies Act of 1882 are superfluous. [p. 169, col. 1.]

The lower Court decided that want of registration did not prevent the enforcement of a charge against a Company by one of its officers. The debenture-holders, although bound by the judgment, did not appeal. More than a year after the time for appeal had elapsed, when it was sought to enforce the charge, the debenture-holders, on appeal to the High Court, were allowed by that Court to raise the point of non-registration:

Held, that the High Court had by implication enlarged the time for appeal [p 167, col. 2]

When the construction of an Act is in question, no statement made on the introduction of the measure or its discussion can be looked at as affording any guidance as to the meaning of the words. [p. 168, col. 1.]

Consolidated appeals from four decrees of the Madras High Court (Sir John Wallis, C. J., and Tyabji, J.), dated the 30th April 1915 and reported as 30 Ind. Cas 286, reversing an order of the District Judge, Tinnevelly, dated the 22nd December 1913.

FACTS of the case sufficiently appear from their Lordships' judgment, when the resolution creating the charge is set out in full. The first four of the present respondents were certain debenture-holders of the Company, and the fifth respondent was the Official Liquidator, who was winding up the Company as such. The 5th respondent had been a party to the proceedings before the District Judge in 1912: the other four respondents were not parties. These four respondents, however, intervened in 1913, when the plaintiff-appellant sought to enforce the order of 1912. The District Judge decided against them.

On appeal the High Court (Wallis, C. J., and Tyabji, J.) reversed this decision. The material part of the Chief Justice's judgment (in which Tyabji, J., concurred) was as follows:—

"The third point is that the charges having been created in favour of officers of the Company—one of them is Secretary and the other had been appointed, by resolusion, manager of the Company's office and not having been registered as required by section 68 of the Indian Companies Act of 1882, were not available to the claimants within the meaning of the Explanation to that section. This objection was taken by the Liquidator in the earlier case and was overruled by the District Judge, now Mr Justice Oldfield. It was again expressly taken in the lower Court in this case, but was apparently not argued in view of Mr. Oldfield's decision at an earlier stage. It is not expressly mentioned in the grounds of appeal to us, but as the facts are such as to bring the case prima facie within the terms of the statutory provision, we think that we ought to enforce the provisions of the section if they are applicable. The Companies Act of 1862, whilst providing penalties for failure to register mortgages and charges did not provide that unregistered mortgages and charges should be void, but then there were decisions that it would be inequitable to allow officers of the Company to enforce such charges when created in favour of themselves. The late Sir George Jessel criticised these decisions in several cases, pointing out that they imposed an additional penalty not warranted by the Statute and his view was finally upheld in 1867 by the House of Lords in Wright v.

Horton (1). At the time when the Indian Companies Act of 1 82 was being drafted and passed into law, the other view still prevailed and the Legislature endeavoured to give effect to it as nearly as possible in the words used in the decided cases. In Patent Bread Machinery Company, In re, Valpy & Chaplin, Ex parte (2) Lord Justice James, after observing that the mortgage was not void for want of registration went on: 'But as it is the duty of the officers of the Company to see that every charge specifically affecting property of the Company is registered, I am of opinion that no director, manager or other officer of the Company can avail himself of a charge which is not registered,' and he applied the doctrine to a person who had acted as solicitor to the Company. The same language was used by the Court of Appeal in South Durham Iron Company, In re, Smith's case (3), where Sir George Jessel interpreted the decisions as meaning that a director, manager or officer cannot avail himself of the security. These were all cases in which the officer had taken a charge in respect of advances made by him to the Company and not for arrears of salary due to him.

The Explanation to section 68, which appears to be intended to reproduce the ruling of Lord Justice James in Patent Bread Machinery Company, In re, Valpy & Chaplin, Ex parte (2) as far as possible in his own language, is as follows:—

'Omission to register under this section a mortgage or charge does not render it invalid, but the officers of the Company cannot avail themselves as such of a mortgage or charge specifically affecting the property of the Company and not so registered.' The words 'as such' present some difficulty. If they mean as 'officers of the Company,' it is difficult to see what is meant by the officers of the company availing themselves of a mortgage or charge as officers of the Company, unless it be that they cannot take such mortgages or charges when they are officers of the Company, which is what was laid down in the cases referred to. It is, I think, clear that the Legislature was anxious to reproduce not only the substance but as far as possible the very language of the decisions, and that this must be accepted as the meaning of the Explanation."

Hence this appeal.

Mr. Kenworthy Brown, for the Appellant, submitted that the appellant was entitled to enforce his charge. The High Court had misconstrued section 68 of the Indian Companies Act, 1862; instead of considering the terms of the Indian Statute, they had considered the effect of section 43 of the English Act (The Companies Act, 1862) as interpreted by decisions. The words "as such" in the Explanation to section 68 indicate that the disability imposed by the Act applies only so long as the holder is an officer of the Company. In this case, under section 137 of the Act, the appointment of the liquidator discharged all the officers of the Company. The effect of the section is not that the officer cannot take the mortgage, but that while he is an officer he cannot enforce it. The Chief Justice has erred in holding that the Explanation was intended to enact the principle laid down by James, L. J., in Patent Bread Machinery Company, In re, Valpy & Chaplin, Ex parte (2).

The view expressed by James, L. J., was strenuously contradicted by the Master of the Rolls in. In Globe New Patent Iron & Steel Company, In re (4) and again by the same learned Judge and Bramwell, J., in South Durham Iron Company, In re, Smith's case (3), both cases before the enactment of the Indian Companies Act, 1862, and was finally decided to be erroneous by the House of Lords in Wright v. Horton (1).

Further, the words of the Explanation to section 68 do not accurately follow the language used by James, L. J. The assumption that it was intended to express his view is erroneous. Secondly, and apart from the merits, the present question is res judicata. The debenture-holders left the liquidator to represent them in the proceedings before the District Judge who had this very point before him. They are stopped by Explanation VI to section 11 of the Code of Civil Procedure from raising the point again. The object of the winding up proce-

(1) (1887) 12 A. C. 371; 56 L. J. Ch. 873; 56 L. T. 782; 36 W. R. 17; 52 J. P. 179.

(2) (1872) 7 Ch. App. 289, 26 L. T. 228; 20 W. R. 347.

(3) (1879) 11 Ch. D. 579; 48 L. J. Ch. 480; 40 L. T. 572; 27 W. R. 845.

(4) (1879) 48 L. J. Ch. 295; 40 L. T. 580; 27 W. R. 424.

dure is that all matters should be disposed of quickly, and under section 144 of the Act the official liquidator represents the creditors.

Madras Irrigation and Canal Company, In re, Wood v. Madras Irrigation and Canal Company (5).

The District Judge was right not only under section 11 but because the application giving rise to this appeal was merely an application for execution of a previous order. Ram Kirpal v. Rup Kuari (6).

On the present application the question of priority was open to the debenture-holders: the question of the validity of the charge was not.

Thirdly, the appeal to the High Court was incompetent. Notice of appeal was not given within three weeks of the order as required by section 169 of the Act in winding up proceedings. There is no order of the High Court extending the time.

Messrs. Clauson K. C., and Dube, for the Respondents.—The High Court are right. The Explanation to section 68 prevents appellant from availing himself of the unregistered charge. The construction he urges involves substituting for "as such" the words "while being an officer of the company." We submit that the true construction is to refer the words "as such" to the words mortgage or charge: the person who has the charge cannot avail himself of it "as such", but he still has his rights as an unsecured creditor. The language of the Explanation substantially reproduces that of James, L. J., in Patent Bread Machinery Company, In re, Valpy & Chaplin, Ex parte (2) and it was intended to enact the principle laid down in that case, viz., that an officer of the Company whose duty it was to register the charge cannot avail himself of it if unregistered. This will be clear on reference to the proceedings in the Legislative Council on its enactment.

[Mr. Kenworthy Brown: No reference to such proceedings is admissible.

Craies on Statute Law, 2nd Edition, pages 133, 134; Administrator-General of Bengal v. Premlal Mullick (7)].

Those proceedings may be inadmissible to ascertain the intention of an enactment, but they are relevant to show the sense in which particular words, like the words "as such" here, are used.

(The Board ruled that the proceedings could not be referred to at all.)

The decision in 1912 did not constitute a res judicata against respondents, for they were not parties to the proceedings. They were entitled to intervene and appeal. The High Court had power to extend the time for appealing, and must be taken to have done so. The present appellants did not raise this objection in their memorandum of appeal to the High Court: and under Order XLI, rule 2, could not be heard on it without leave.

Mr. Kenworthy Brown replied.

JUDGMENT.

VISCOUNT FINLAY.—The question in the present case is whether a charge given to the Secretary of a Limited Company upon unpaid calls can be enforced by him although not registered as required by section 68 of the Act of 1882 (the Indian Companies Act). The difficulty in the case is occasioned by the Explanation appended to the section, which otherwise is on the same lines as the corresponding section in the English Act. It was held by the High Court of Madras that the terms of the Explanation rendered the charge not enforceable. Apart from the effect which the Explanation in the Indian Act may have in the case of a mortgage or charge to an officer of the Company, it is clear that a mere failure to register does not under either the English or the Indian Act render a mortgage or charge on the property of the Company unenforceable.

Section 68 of the Indian Act requires registration of all mortgages and charges specifically affecting property of the Company, and imposes a penalty upon any official of the Company who knowingly and wilfully authorises or permits the omission of such entry on the register. The performance of the duty to enter the mortgage or charge on the register may be compelled by order of the High Court. There is appended to this section in the Indian Act an Explanation in the following terms:—

"Explanation—Omission to register under this section a mortgage or charge does not render the same invalid. But the officers of the Company cannot avail themselves as such of a mortgage or charge

(5) (1883) 23 Ch D 248 at 252; 49 L. T. 225.

(6) 11 I. A. 37 at 41; 6 A. 259 (P. C.); 4 Saraswati's P. C. No. 489; 3 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 718.

(7) 22 I. A. 107; 22 C. 788 (P. C.); 6 Sar. P. C. J. 603; 11 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 522.

specifically affecting property of the Company and not so registered."

The appellant contends that the judgment of the High Court is erroneous, and that the question of construction has been conclusively settled in his favour by an order of the District Judge in 1912 which stands unreversed.

The appellant was the Secretary of the Swadeshi Steam Navigation Company, Limited. On the 27th June 1910 a resolution creating the charge in question was passed by the managing directors in the following terms :—

"Resolution III.—Resolved that, in consideration of the fact that the Honorary Secretary Krishna Ayyangar has worked for the Company without any salary, foregoing his own source of income, and of the fact that he has borrowed and advanced moneys to meet the urgent needs of the Company, the unpaid calls due to the Company from the share-holders are mortgaged for the amount advanced by the aforesaid person to the Company and for interest thereon, and for the money advanced to the Company by the late manager Kandasami Pillai and for the deposit money due from the Company to the late cash-keeper Gopalakrishna Pillai ; that the Secretary be authorised to collect the unpaid calls through Court if necessary under the power already given to him, and that out of the amounts collected the deposit money due to Gopalakrishna Pillai be paid first, and that the Secretary Krishna Ayyangar and the said Kandasami Pillai Avergal shall appropriate the balance amount in the proportion of the amounts due to each of them."

This charge was never registered.

An order was made on the 4th July 1911 that the Company should be wound up by the Court, and in the course of the winding up a petition was presented by the appellant to the District Judge, Mr. Oldfield, asking for an order recognising the validity of the charge. The liquidator relied on section 68, and contended that the charge not having been registered was not enforceable by the appellant, as he was an officer of the Company when it was taken. The District Judge rejected this contention on the ground that the Explanation refers to the contingency of the officers of the Company desiring to avail themselves as such of a charge, and that it was not as secretary but as an individual that the appellant sought to avail himself of this charge, and made an order on the 27th April 1912 allowing the claim for the reasons set out in his judgment on pages 8—10 of the Record. The liquidator further attacked the charge before the District Judge as a fraudulent preference, but the District Judge by the same order decided in favour of the appellant on this point also. No appeal was ever presented against this order. On the 25th September 1913 the appellant applied to the District Court for an order directing the official liquidator to pay to the petitioner the amount collected or to be collected for unpaid calls. This was opposed by debenture-holders and by the liquidator on the grounds (a) that the charge was void as a fraudulent preference; (b) that it had not been registered; and (c) that it was not entitled to priority over debentures previously issued. The District Judge, Mr. Waller, refused to entertain grounds (a) and (b) as they had been decided by the order of the 27th April 1912 but heard argument on ground (c), and on the 22nd December 1913 decided that the appellant was entitled to priority over the debenture-holders. On appeal against this decision to the High Court at Madras the judgment now under appeal was delivered on the 30th April 1915. The judgment deals with two points. The first was as to the claim of the debenture-holders to priority over the charge. On this the High Court decided in favour of the present appellant and against the debenture holders. The second point was that of non-registration, which the Court allowed the debenture-holders to raise on this appeal. The Chief Justice, in delivering judgment, referred to the conflict on the interpretation of section 43 of the English Act which had arisen between Sir George Jessel and James, L. J., as to mortgages and charges to officers of the Company, and said that the Explanation appeared to be intended to reproduce the ruling of James, L. J., in Patent Bread Machinery Company, In re, Valpy & Chaplin, Ex parte (2). He then proceeded as follows:—

"The words 'as such' present some difficulty. If they mean 'as officers of the Company,' it is difficult to see what is meant by officers of the Company availing themselves of a mortgage or charge as officers of the Company, unless it be that they cannot take such mortgages or charges when they are officers of the Company, which is what was laid down in the cases referred to. It is, I think, clear that the Legislature was anxious to reproduce not only the substance, but as far as possible the very language of the decisions and that this must be accepted as the meaning of the Explanation."

It is undoubtedly true that the very point which has now been argued before their Lordships was argued before the District Judge in 1912 and then decided in the appellant's favour, and there has been no appeal against that decision. Ought this, as the appellant contends, to make an end of the matter? The point is of considerable importance as a matter of practice. The order of the 27th April 1912, which was made after argument on behalf of the appellant and the official liquidator, decided that the want of registration did not prevent the enforcement of the mortgage. Their Lordships think that the official liquidator must be regarded as having represented on that application the debenture holders and creditors as well as the Company, and that so long as the decision stands it is conclusive in the winding up on all parties so represented. The official liquidator did not appeal. If any debenture holder or other person interested desired to attack the decision, it was open to him to ask that he should be made a party and should have leave to appeal. No such application was made. But when the appellant applied on the 28th September 1913 for enforcement of the order made on the 27th April 1912, the debenture-holders, on their appeal from the order of the 22nd December 1913, were allowed by the High Court to raise the point of non-registration which had been decided against them in 1912. (See the judgment now under appeal, Record, pages 96 & 97.) The proper course to have taken in order to raise this point would have been to get leave, notwithstanding the lapse of time, to appeal from the judgment of the 27th April 1912. But the matter is merely one of practice. The High Court could have regularised the proceedings by extending the time, and giving leave to appeal from the 1912 decision, and they considered the point without going through this process. Their Lordships are not prepared to reverse the decision of the High Court merely because the proper course in point of practice was not taken, and they propose to deal with this appeal on the footing that the respondents were entitled to raise in the High Court their objections under section 68. Whether leave should have been given to appeal would have been a matter of discretion, but the High Court appear to have had no doubt that they should allow the point to be raised. Their Lordships have, therefore, dealt with the case on this basis, and now proceed to consider the appeal on its merits.

The question of the effect of non-registration in cases where the charge was taken by an officer of the Company must be decided upon the terms of the Explanation to section 68, but in order to make the judgment of the Chief Justice intelligible it is necessary to refer shortly to the English decisions which he quotes in his judgment.

The English section—section 43 of the Companies Act of 1862—corresponds to section 68 of the Indian Act minus the explanation. In 1872 in Patent Bread Machinery Company In re, Valpy & Chaplin, Ex parte (2) (supra), James, L. J., held that, as the unregistered charge had been taken by a person acting as solicitor to the Company, he could not avail himself of it, and in 1876 in Native Iron Ore Company, In re (8) a mortgage in favour of directors of the Company was held not enforceable as the registration was defective, there being no description of the property. These decisions proceeded on the supposed principle that, as it is the duty of officers of the Company to see to registration of mortgages, if they fail to do so in the case of mortgages to themselves they cannot be permitted to enforce them. But in 1878 in the Globe New Patent Iron &

(8) (1876) 2 Ch. D. 345; 45 L. J. Ch. 517; 34 L. T. 777; 24 W. R. 503.

Steel Company, In re (4) Sir George Jessel expressed his dissent in the strongest terms from these two decisions, and in 1879 in the South Durham Iron Company, In re, Smith's case (3) Sir George Jessel and Bramwell, L. J. (dissentiente Baggallay, L. J.), adhered to the view that these two cases had been improperly decided. The whole Court, however, held that they were binding authorities, but distinguishable on the facts of the case then before the Court.

This was the state of the authorities when the Indian Companies Act became law. The High Court in the present case took the view that the Explanation was intended to reproduce the ruling of James, L.J., and must be construed accordingly. The construction of the Explanation must depend upon its terms, and no theory of its purpose can be entertained unless it is to be inferred from the language used. The controversy was terminated, so far as the English Courts are concerned by the decision of the House of the Lords in 1887 in Wright v. Horton (1), which is an express and final decision that Sir George Jessel's view was right. Of course this decision can have no effect upon the present case. If the effect of the Explanation in the Indian Act of 1882 was to adopt as law in India the view of James, L.J., there is an end of the matter in the absence of further legislation. If the Explanation has this effect it must be carried out, and the fact that the enactment was passed in consequence of what the subsequent decision of the House of Lords showed to be a misconception of the English Law would be quite irrelevant. The question is, What does the Explanation mean? No statement made on the introduction of the measure or its discussion can be looked at as affording any guidance as to the meaning of the words.

The question really narrows itself to this: What effect should be given to the words "as such" in the Explanation?

The appellant contended that the words "as such" relate to the words "the officers of the Company" and that the effect is to enact that the officers cannot avail themselves as such officers of unregistered mortgages or charges taken by them in their capacity of officers of the Company. This is the most natural meaning of the words; it was adopted by Mr. Oldfield, the District Judge, in his decision of the 27th April 1912 and in his judgment (Record, page 9) he suggested circumstances in which he thought the words so read would take effect. The contingency referred to by Mr. Oldfield was the retention by the company of redeemed debentures or charges in the name of an officer. Such a contingency, however, is remote even if possible and it appears to their Lordships that it would be a mistake to read the words as directed to it.

The respondents contended that the words "as such" refer entirely to the following words "of a mortgage or charge," and that their effect is that the officers of the Company cannot avail themselves of a mortgage or charge as such unless it has been registered. It was suggested that the words were introduced in order that it might be open to the officer of the Company to avail himself of the instrument as evidence of a debt or for some other purpose of that kind.

Their Lordships are unable to accept this construction. It seems to them to be at variance with the language of the Explanation The structure of the sentence is such that the words must be read as referring to what precedes and not to what follows them. To hold otherwise would be to put an unjustifiable strain upon the clause, which must be read according to the ordinary usages of the English language. Indeed, the intervention of the word "of" between the words "as such" and the words "a mortgage or charge" appears fatal to this theory.

Yet another construction has been put forward, viz., that "as such" means "while such" and prevents the enforcement of the security by an officer of the Company while he remains such officer. If this view be correct, the appeal would succeed, as, owing to the winding up of the Company, the appellant had ceased to be an officer of the Company before the claim was put forward. Their Lordships do not see their way to construing the words in this sense as relating merely to time.

There is a fourth possible construction of these much debated words and it is that which after much consideration their Lordships adopt. It is this. The words "as such" should not be read as denoting the capacity in which the officers take the mortgages or charges. They are introduced simply as giving the reason for the inability to take advantage of the securities. The reason underlying the judgments, which the Explanation appears to have been intended to crystallise into the form of an enactment, was that officers entrusted with a duty as to registration could not take advantage of a security to them as to which this duty had been neglected by them. The words "as such" relate simply to the prohibition under which they are as officers. The officers are forbidden as such because they are officers and were, therefore, bound to see to registration, to avail themselves of unregistered securities. The words in this sense are unnecessary but not insensible. The drafting is bad, but having regard to the extreme improbability that it was intended to meet such a contingency as that put by Mr Oldfield in his decision of the 27th April 1912, and to the fact that the construction now suggested would, as the Chief Justice in the Court below points out, embody the effect of the judgments of the Court of Appeal, which were in 1882 when this clause was enacted recognised as of binding authority, their Lordships think that this last construction should be adopted. The language of the Explanation is to some extent taken from these judgments, as the Chief Justice remarks, and this strengthens the probability that it was intended by the language used to reproduce their effect.

Their Lordships, therefore, are of opinion that the judgment of the High Court of Madras is right and will accordingly humbly advise His Majesty that these appeals should be dismissed with costs.

Appeals dismissed.

Solicitor for the Appellant.—Mr. John Josselyn.

Solicitor for the Respondent.—Mr H. S L. Polak.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 2610 OF 1919.

April 5, 1920.

Present:—Mr. Justice Chevis, Acting Chief Justice.

BALAK RAM AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—APPELLANTS

versus

KAURA AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS—RESPONDENTS.

Adverse possession between co-sharers—Sole possession and non-payment of rent, whether enough, effect of—Burden of proof.

In order to establish adverse possession as between co-sharers, there must be evidence of an open assertion of a hostile act on the part of the co-sharers setting up adverse possession with notice to the others, and mere non-participation in the profits by one party and exclusive occupation by the other party is insufficient. [p. 170, col. 2.]

Plaintiffs sued for a declaration that certain land belonged to them and that the entry in the revenue records showing defendants as owners of 1/3rd of this land was wrong. It appeared that the plaintiffs had been long in possession of the land in suit and had paid no rent:

Held, that the fact that the plaintiffs had held sole possession and had paid no rent was not sufficient to prove that defendants were not co-sharers, nor was it sufficient to establish the plaintiffs' adverse possession. [p. 170, cols. 1 & 2.]

Second appeal from the decree of the District Judge, Mianwali, dated the 31st October 1919, reversing that of the Munsif, 2nd Class, Bhakkar, District Mianwali, dated the 13th May 1919, dismissing the claim with costs.

Lala Amar Nath Chona, for the Appellants.

Lala Fakir Chand for Mr. Mukand Lal Puri, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—The plaintiffs are recorded as owners of 2/3rds of the land in suit and defendants as owners of 1/3rd. The defendants having applied to the Revenue Authorities for partition, the plaintiffs seek a declaration that they are sole owners of the land.

The first Court dismissed the suit, holding that plaintiffs had failed to prove any error in the Revenue Records. The learned District Judge on appeal decreed the claim, holding that the fact that plaintiffs had exercised sole possession over the land in suit for a period exceeding 12 years was, in the peculiar circumstances, sufficient to prove their claim.

The defendants appeal to this Court,

GIRINDRA CHANDRA SEN v. MAHESH RAM DEB.

In the first Regular Settlement plaintiffs are shown as holding 60 shares, the other 30 being held by

Khota	... 10	Shares
Niazi, etc.	... 12	"
Hasna	... 4	"
Isa	... 4	"

The entries in the last Settlement shew ownership thus:—

Plaintiffs	... 60	Shares
Ahmad, son of Isa, (defendant No. 6)	... 4	"
Balak Ram, etc., (defendants Nos. 1—5)	... 26	"

So the entries are the same as in the first Regular Settlement, except that the shares of Khota, Niazi and Hasna have now come to defendants Nos. 1—5. How this change came about is not known.

Six witnesses for plaintiffs say plaintiffs and their ancestors have always been in possession and have paid no rent. This may be true but is not sufficient reason for holding that defendants are not co-sharers. In the case of joint land it sometimes happens that some of the co-sharers leave the management and income of the land to their co-sharers. The plaintiffs allege that they are sole owners, and that the mistake has arisen because plaintiffs are only 2/3rds owners of some land on an adjoining well. This is plausible, but something more definite must be shewn before we can regard the entries made at Settlements as incorrect. It is easy enough for plaintiffs to be owners of 2/3rds of this and also of other land. In the absence of any proof of a mistake in the records I hold the entries in the records to be correct.

As to adverse possession or abandonment, I note that in the first Court plaintiffs seem to have relied simply on title. And in the next place I can find no proof of adverse possession, unless perhaps it be in a private partition made in 1913. That partition is recorded in the Revenue Records as a partition of 2/3rds only, but I do not understand how 2/3rds could be partitioned unless the 2/3rds were first separated from the 1/3rd. So I will assume that the plaintiffs partitioned the whole land in 1913, but this was only 6 years prior to suit. Before 1913 I can find no evidence of any overt act of adverse possession. That the plaintiffs held sole possession and paid no rent to their co-sharers is not sufficient to establish adverse possession. There are several rulings to this effect, and this rule holds good not only in the case of relations but in the case of co-sharers generally. So the learned District Judge has wrongly distinguished these rulings on the ground that plaintiffs are Muhammadan cultivators and the defendants Hindu shopkeepers. For the plaintiffs-respondents reliance is placed on Ahmad-ud-din Tamijud-din v. Amir-ud-din (1), but this judgment merely states that there have been cases where there has been long possession and the Court has come to the conclusion that the evidence in the circumstances warrants the finding that there has been an ouster of a co sharer without any express evidence of such ouster. I note too that in this case the Court held that there had not been any ouster. So this ruling does not help the plaintiffs. Over and over again it has been laid down that in order to establish adverse possession as between co-sharers there must be evidence of an open assertion of a hostile act on the part of the co-sharers setting up adverse possession with notice to the others and that mere non-participation in the profits by one party and exclusive occupation by the other party is insufficient; see cases cited in Rustomjee's Limitation, 2nd Edition, page 511. As to abandonment there is no proof whatever.

I accept the appeal and setting aside the District Judge's order, I restore the decree of the first Court dismissing the suit. The plaintiffs will pay costs in all Courts.

Appeal accepted.

(1) 44 Ind. Cas. 216.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

APPEAL FROM APPELLATE DECREE No. 2351 OF 1918.

January 5, 1920

Present:—Justice Sir N. R. Chatterjea, KT., and Mr. Justice Panton.

GIRINDRA CHANDRA SEN—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

MAHESH RAM DEB AND ON HIS DEATH HIS HEIRS AND LEGAL REPRESENTATIVES DASARATH CHANDRA DEB (DHAR) AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Will, construction of—Intention of testator—Estates taken by devisees.

GIRINDRA CHANDRA SEN v. MAHESH RAM DEB.

A testator by his Will gave full maliki rights in his estate to his sons and grandsons, but placed certain restrictions on their powers of alienation, and the question was what was the interest the sons got under the Will:

Held, that upon a construction of the Will as a whole the intention of the testator was to grant an absolute interest to the sons and grandsons. [p. 172, col. 1.]

Appeal against the decree of the Additional District Judge, Sylhet, dated the 29th of May 1916, affirming the decree of the Officiating Subordinate Judge, 2nd Court of that District, dated the 11th of May 1915.

FACTS material to the report will appear from the judgment.

Dr. Sarat Chandra Basak (with him Babus Hemendra Kumar Das and Benoyendra Nath Palit), for the Appellant.—The plaintiff is the appellant before your Lordships. The case of the plaintiff is that under the Will of his grandfather the sons of the testator had only a life interest in the property in dispute while the absolute interest was conferred upon the grandson. The expression used with reference to the sons is * * * * * (Futrogan Sattyadhukari Haiben) while the expression used with reference to the grandsons is * * * * (Poutrogan Nirburha Sathya Paibe). The intention of the testator must be gathered from the whole Will and not from a portion of it. Although the first portion of a Will may appear to have conferred an absolute interest, subsequent portions of the Will may qualify that interest. See Somasundara Mudaliar v. Ganga Bissen (1). The use of the word "Malik" is not sufficient to show that an absolute interest was meant. Reads the Will in Bengali.

See Amarendra Nath Bose v. Shuradhany Dasi (2).

Babu Brojolal Chuckerbutty (with him Babu Paresh Lal Shome and Babu Panchanan Ghose for Babu Biraj Mohan Mojumdar for Deputy Registrar), for the Respondents.—The nature of the estate conferred upon the sons is the same as that conferred upon the grandsons. Although the words * * * (Maliki Sattya) are used in the case of the sons and the words * * * (Nirburha Sattya) in the case of the grandsons, the same restriction is imposed on the power of alienation of either. The sons and the grandsons are, therefore, placed in the same category. If only a life-interest was intended to be given to the sons, appropriate words to convey that interest might have been used by the testator. If the gift is a limitable one, the restriction on alienation is void. See Sulochana Debi v. Jagattarini Debi (3), Kanhia v Mohin Lal (4). Refers also to Lala Ramiewan Lal v. Dal Koer (5) and Rameshwar Prosad Singh v. Lachmi Prosad Singh (6). I do not dispute the correctness of the decisions cited by my learned friend.

The general intention of the testator is that an absolute interest is given both to the sons and the grandsons, but restiction is imposed on the power of alienation by the legatees and the restriction is that there should not be unnecessary alienation. Reads the Will. The testator died in 1892. There were alienations by the sons of the testator between 1892 and 1904. It was only in 1904 that the daughter-in-law of the testator (mother of the plaintiff) took Probate of the Will and now the alienation by the father of the plaintiff is challenged.

Dr. Sarat Chandra Basak, in reply.—My learned friend's argument is based on the assumption that there is the same restriction imposed on the power of alienation by both the sons and the grandsons. I submit that although there are restrictions imposed on the power of alienation by either, the nature of the restrictions is not the same in both the cases.

JUDGMENT.—The question involved in this appeal is—what was the interest which the sons of Golak, the testator, got under his Will.

The Courts below have come to the conclusion that an absolute interest was given to them under the Will.

It appears that although there is some difference in the expressions used with reference to the right granted to the sons and to the grandson after the death of the sons, respectively, both the sons and the grandson were given full maliki right. It is true that restrictions were imposed on the

(1) 28 M. 386.
(2) 5 Ind. Cas. 73; 14 C. W. N. 458.
(3) 53 Ind Cas. 602; 30 C. L. J. 51.
(4) 10 A. 495; A. W. N. (1888) 181; 6 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 333.
(5) 24 C. 406; 12 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 938.
(6) 31 C. 111; 7 C. W. N. 688.

power of alienation, but these restrictions appear not only in the case of the sons, but also in the case of the grandson. We do not think, upon a construction of the Will as a whole, that the testator intended to give a life-estate to the sons and confer an absolute estate on the grandson, as contended for on behalf of the appellant. It seems to us that the intention of the testator was to grant an absolute estate to the sons and the grandson, though an attempt appears to have been made to restrict the power of alienation in the case of both.

On the whole, we are not satisfied that the Courts below have come to a wrong conclusion as regards the construction of the Will. The result is that the appeal is dismissed with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.

FIRST CIVIL APPEAL No. 357 OF 1917.

April 15, 1920.

Present:—Sir Grimwood Mears, KT., Chief Justice, and Justice Sir P. C. Banerji, KT.

Syed SHAH MAHDI HASAN—

PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

Syed ISMAIL HASAN AND OTHERS—

DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XXXIV, r. 5—Mortgage suit—Final decree—Sale not held—Mortgagor, right of, to redeem, whether extinguished.

The mere passing of a final decree in a mortgage suit does not extinguish the mortgagor's right to redeem, until a sale has actually taken place in pursuance of the decree. [p. 172, col. 2.]

First appeal from the decree of the Subordinate Judge, Aligarh, dated the 26th of June 1917.

Dr. S. N. Sen and Mr. Iqbal Ahmad, for the Appellant.

Mr. Mukhtar Ahmad, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—In our opinion the decision of the Court below refusing to decree the plaintiff's claim for redemption is erroneous. A mortgage was made on the 17th of February 1895 in the form of a zarpeshgi lease in favour of Muhammad Siddiq. The mortgagee paid a portion of the zarpeshgi money and took possession of three of the mortgaged villages, namely, Imamnagar, Rahmatpur and Bhasaura Khurd. The mortgage was in respect of the whole of Imamnagar and shares in the other two villages. The present suit is one for redemption of the three villages and it is alleged that the mortgage money has been discharged by the usufruct.

The Court below has dismissed the suit on the ground that the plaintiff's right of redemption in regard to all the three villages has become extinct. As regards Imamnagar the Court finds that a 2/5ths share has already been sold and the plaintiff does not own that share. As regards the remaining 3/5ths the learned Subordinate Judge was of opinion that the plaintiff's right of redemption had become extinct because a final decree for sale had been obtained by another mortgagee and that the said decree was in the course of execution in the Collector's Court. As for the two remaining villages, that Court was of opinion that the plaintiff had transferred his rights as regards one and in regard to the other such rights as he owned had also been transferred.

As regards Imamnagar we think the view taken by the learned Subordinate Judge is erroneous. The fact that a final decree for sale has been obtained by another mortgagee in respect of a 3/5ths share does not extinguish the rights of the mortgagor completely with regard to the aforesaid 2/5ths share. In Order XXXIV, rule 5, it is not provided, as was provided in section 89 of Act IV of 1882, that after the passing of a final decree or "order absolute" as it was called under section 89 of the Act of 1882, the right of the mortgagor to redeem becomes extinct. Even under section 89 of the Transfer of Property Act of 1882 the right became extinct only in regard to the mortgage the holder of which had obtained a decree for sale. If that decree is paid off, it cannot be said that the mortgagor's right has become extinct. Under the present Code of Civil Procedure which repeals section 89, the mere passing of a final decree does not extinguish the mortgagor's right until a sale has actually taken place in pursuance of the decree. In the present case it is admitted that no sale has taken place, and we are informed that the amount of the mortgage upon which the decree was obtained has been paid off by the plaintiff. In any case the plaintiff's right as regards the remaining 3/5ths in Imamnagar not having ceased to exist, he has the right of redemption as regards at least that share. If the plaintiff is entitled, as we hold he is, to redeem a part of the mortgaged property, he is entitled to redeem the whole upon payment of the whole of the mortgage money or if he can prove that the whole of the mortgage money has been realised by the mortgagee from the usufruct of the mortgage money.

As regards the remaining two villages we express no opinion on the question whether the plaintiff's right has or has not become extinct, inasmuch as by reason of our decision that he still owns a 3/5ths share in the village of Imamnagar, he is competent to sue for redemption of the mortgage.

We accordingly allow the appeal, set aside the decree of the Court below and remand the case to that Court with directions to re-admit it under its original number in the register and to dispose of it according to law. Costs here and hitherto will be costs in the cause, and the costs in this Court will include fees on the higher scale.

Appeal allowed.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

LETTERS PATENT APPEAL No. 12 OF 1919.

April 20, 1920.

Present:—Mr. Justice Shadi Lal and Mr. Justice Broadway.

Sardarni DATAR KAUR—JUDGMENT-DEBTOR—APPELLANT

versus

RAM RATTAN AND OTHERS—DECREE-HOLDERS—RESPONDENTS.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), ss. 2, 47—Execution of decree—Order made in execution proceedings, whether decree—Order negativing decree-holder's right to proceed against certain property, nature of—Appeal, whether lies.

It is not every order made in execution proceedings which is a decree. [p. 173, col. 2.]

An order granting or refusing a process for the examination of witnesses or an order merely determining a point of law arising incidentally or otherwise in the course of execution proceedings and not refusing or granting relief is not a decree and is, therefore, not appealable. [p. 173, col. 2.]

An order finally negativing the right of the decree-holder to proceed against the land of the judgment-debtor comes within the purview of section 47 of the Civil Procedure Code and is appealable. [p. 173, col. 2.]

Letters Patent Appeal against the order of Mr. Justice Bevan-Petman, passed on the 12th June 1919 in Miscellaneous Second Appeal No. 3169 of 1918 and printed as 52 Ind. Cas. 356.

Mr. Nand Lal, for the Appellant.

Lala Tirath Ram, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—The Full Bench has already decided the question that the agricultural land belonging to a member of an agricultural tribe can be alienated temporarily in execution of a decree passed against him, and the only other points, which Mr. Nand Lal for the appellant urges, are: —

(1) That the order passed by the Court of execution against the respondents did not amount to a decree, and consequently no appeal lay from that order to this Court: and

(2) that the decree holders did not, in their application for execution, expressly ask for a temporary alienation of the judgment-debtor's land, and are, therefore, not entitled to ask this Court to order a temporary alienation in their favour.

In support of his argument as regards the first point, Mr. Nand Lal has cited certain judgments, none of which is parallel to the present case. We fully recognise the principle that it is not every order made in execution which is a decree, and that an order granting or refusing a process for the examination of witnesses, or an order merely determining a point of law arising incidentally or otherwise in the course of a proceeding and not refusing or granting relief, is not appealable. But in the present case the Court of execution finally negatived the right of the decree-holders to proceed against the land of the judgment-debtor. We consider that that order finally determined the question relating to the execution of the decree against the land. It comes within the purview of section 47 of the Civil Procedure Code and cannot be treated as an interlocutory order. We are consequently of opinion that the single Judge rightly overruled the objection that no appeal lay to him.

As regards the second question, the application for execution fulfils all the requirements of Order XXI, rule 11, and expressly mentions the mode in which the assistance of the Court is required, namely, by the attachment and sale of the judgment-debtor's land. It is to be observed that Order XXI, rule 11 (2) (j), makes no mention of a temporary alienation of land, the reason probably being that the Court of execution, when refusing to order the sale of the property, is expected to direct instead a temporary alienation thereof without any specific prayer to that effect. Be that as it may, it is quite clear that this objection was not raised in the Court of first instance, and there can be no doubt that if an objection had been taken the Court would have, under Order XXI, rule 17, asked the decree-holders to amend their application, and that they would have complied with the order of the Court. Further, we find that an application was, as a matter of fact, made in which relief by way of a temporary alienation was expressly sought.

In these circumstances we consider that there is no substance in either of the contentions raised on behalf of the appellant. We accordingly dismiss the appeal with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.

FIRST CIVIL APPEAL No. 401 OF 1917.

April 8, 1920.

Present:—Mr. Justice Tudball and Mr. Justice Rafique.

MATHURA PRASAD—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

HARDEO BAKSH SINGH AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Muhammadan Law—Pre-emption—Shafi-sharik—Imperfect partition—Complete separation of rights—Co-sharer—Pattidar, right of, to pre-empt.

Where a plaintiff claims a right to pre-empt under the Muhammadan Law as a co-sharer, he must, in order to succeed, prove that he is one of the class of co-sharers within the meaning of that law. [p. 175, col. 1.]

In the case of an imperfect partition of a village, where there is a complete separation of all rights, the owner of a patti in that village cannot be regarded as a co-sharer and consequently he has no right to pre-empt. [p. 175, col. 1 & 2.]

First appeal from a decree of the Subordinate Judge, Shahjahanpur, dated the 9th May 1917.

Messrs. Lakshmi Narain Tewari and Haribans Sahai, for the Appellant.

Dr. S. N. Sen and Dr. S. M. Sulaiman, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—This is a plaintiff's appeal arising out of a suit for pre-emption. The plaintiff is a co-sharer in Patti Raghubir Singh in the village of Ainthpur. The defendants Nos. 5 to 7 were the owners of Patti Nityanand, and defendant No. 8 was the owner of Patti Shib Lal. Defendants Nos. 5 to 8 sold the whole of these two Pattis Nityanand and Sahib Lal and a house to the defendants Nos. 1 to 4, who were complete strangers, for the sum of Rs. 6,600. The plaintiff claimed a right of pre-emption on the basis of custom recorded in the wajib-ul-arz. Admittedly, none of the incidents of the custom are set out in the wajib-ul-arz. The plaintiff in his plaint distinctly stated that the rules of Muhammadan Law applied and that in accordance with those rules he made the two demands as laid down by the Muhammadan Law, the defendants vendees refused to return the land to him; hence the suit. There was a dispute as to the amount of consideration, but that has been settled by the decision of the Court below and is not challenged before us. We may mention that the learned Pleader is unable to point out to us anything which was jointly held by the parties. The six separate Pattis constitute the twenty biswas and the owners of the plaintiff's Patti have no right whatsoever in any of the other Pattis in the mahal. There is complete separation of all rights, but the partition being what is known in the Revenue Law as imperfect, there remains a joint liability to Government for revenue The Court below accepted the evidence proving that the plaintiff had made the necessary demands, but it dismissed his claim on the ground that he was neither a shafi i-sharik nor a shafi i khalik nor had any right as a shafi i jar. In the Court below the plaintiff's Pleader made a distinct statement which is to be found printed at page 3 R of the printed record, in which he clearly stated that his client was not a co-sharer in the holdings sold, hence he had not brought his suit as a shafi i-sharik fi nofsie mubee, (that is as a pre emptor being a partner in the substance of the thing sold) but that he based his right as being a shafi-i-khalik or a shafi i-jar mulasik. The Court below has held that the plaintiff is none of these three classes of co-sharers within the meaning of the Muhammadan Law, and he has dismissed his suit.

MADHORAO v. KESHEORAO.

Before us it is urged that the plaintiff's Pleader had no right whatsoever to make any such admission as he did make, and that the appellant is not bound by such an admission. As a matter of fact there is nothing in the plaint to show in what capacity the plaintiff claimed to pre empt, that is, whether as shafi-i-sharik or a shafi i khalik or a shafi i jar. That point was cleared up by the statement of his Pleader. It is pleaded before us that the plaintiff is a shafi-i-sharik inasmuch as the partition of the village is an imperfect partition and not a perfect one. The learned Pleader for the appellant is unable to point out to us that any portion of the village was jointly held or used by the owners of the various Pattis or that anything was left as the joint property of the owners of the various Pattis. He claims that as the Pattis constitute one mahal and there has not been a perfect partition, the plaintiff must be a shafi-i-sharik. In Muhammadan Law, vide Tyabji's Principles of Muhammadan Law, paragraph 541-A, by the word sharik or co-sharer is meant the owner of an undivided share in the property of which the subject of pre emption forms a part or share. Clearly on the facts of the present case the plaintiff is not the owner of an undivided share of the property which forms the subject of pre emption. He has no share in it whatsoever of any sort. Our attention is called to the decision of this Court in Munna Lal v. Hajira Jan (1), but if that judgment is carefully read, it is by no means in favour of the present appellant; in fact, it is dead against him. It is perfectly true that in that case there had been what is known in Revenue Law as a perfect partition and the two estates were entirely separate. In that case attention was called to certain decisions in cases of imperfect partitions of villages, but in each of those cases it was distinctly noted that there was still some portion of property which had been left joint and undivided. It is clear that within the meaning of the Muhammadan Law the plaintiff in the circumstances of the present case is not a shafi i sharik. His contention that he was a shafi-i khalik depended upon the oral evidence of one Kahar whose evidence was rejected by the Court below, and we consider rightly rejected. As for his claim on the basis of being shafi-i jar that is clearly defeated by the very ruling quoted by him in Munna Lal v. Hajira Jan (1), where it was distinctly held that in the case of Zamindaris and large landed properties pre-emption on the ground of vicinage was never allowed. On these findings the appeal must fail. We may note that we should find it very difficult indeed to agree with the Court below on the evidence which it accepted of the performance of the two demands according to the Muhammadan Law. If it were necessary for us to come to a finding on that point, that finding would be in favour of the opposite party.

The appeal fails and is dismissed with costs, including fees on the higher scale.

Appeal dismissed.

(1) 7 Ind. Cas. 404; 7 A. L. J. 879; 33 A. 28.

NAGPUR JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 60 OF 1916.

February 24, 1919.

Present:—Mr. Batten, A. J. C.

MADHORAO AND ANOTHER—PLAINTIFFS—APPELLANTS

versus

KESHEORAO AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS

Hindu Law—Parbhus in Central Provinces, law applicable to—Daughters, estate taken by.

The Parbhus of the Central Provinces, who originally immigrated from the Bombay Presidency, are governed by the Bombay School of Hindu Law as now known and judicially ascertained, and not by that law as it existed at the date of their immigration.

In those parts of the Bombay Presidency where the Mayukha Law is paramount authority, as well as in those parts governed by the Mitakshara Law, daughters succeed to an absolute estate.

Appeal against the decree passed by the Divisional Judge, Hoshangabad, in Civil Regular Appeal No. 60 of 1915, dated the 16th October 1915, arising out of Civil Suit No. 77 of 1914, decided by the District Judge, Chhindwara, dated the 10th May 1915.

Mr. M. Gupta, for the Appellants.

Messrs. H. S. Gour and M. B. Khinkhede, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—This is an appeal by the plaintiffs. The plaintiffs and defendants Nos. 1 and 2 are Prabhus resident in the Sausar Tahsil of the Chhindwara District. The plaintiffs are the sons of Sakkubai, the daughter of Anandrao, who died on 8th November 1893. The 1st defendant Kesheo Rao is the grandson of Anandrao's uncle Kashirao and defendant No. 2 is the widow of Khanderao, grandson of Anandrao's other uncle Trimbakrao. On the 6th December 1893 Sakkubai executed a deed of release in favour of Khanderao and Kesheorao, under which she gave up all claim to a certain specified portion of the property left by Anandrao. The plaintiffs pleaded that Anandrao was separate from Khanderao and Kesheorao, that Sakkubai under the ordinary rule of Hindu Law succeeded to a woman's life interest in the whole of the property, and that her sons, the plaintiffs, are entitled to succeed to it on her death. They sue for a declaration that the deed of release executed by their mother will not affect their rights after her death. The other defendants are transferees from Khanderao and Kesheorao. The pleas of the defendants that Anandrao was joint at his death and that Anandrao had executed an oral Will before his death in favour of Khanderao and Kesheorao were overruled. The defendants further pleaded that the parties are Parbhus who have migrated from the Bombay Presidency and that under the School of Hindu Law by which they are governed Sakkubai, as Anandrao's daughter, succeeded to the whole of his property absolutely and that her relinquishment of a portion of the property so inherited cannot be questioned by the plaintiffs. The following issue was framed :—

'Is the family of Anandrao governed by the Bombay School of Hindu Law as pleaded by the defendants and if so, what effect has this on the suit?"

On this issue the learned District Judge wrote as follows concerning the facts:—

"A number of leading members of the Parbhu community have been examined as witnesses by the defendants (D. W. No. 1, D. W. No. 2, D. W. No. 3, D W No. 7 and Mr. A. L. Dighe, who was examined on commission), from whose depositions the following facts emerge. The first Parbhus migrated to these Provinces about 200 years ago. There are now not more than about (sic) Parbhu families in the Central Provinces and these keep up intimate relations with the members of their community in the Bombay Presidency. The Central Provinces Parbhus still observe the basic customs of their community and worship the same family gods, marriages between the Central Provinces families and those of the Bombay Presidency frequently take place and migration is still going on. Cases of adoption by widows after the deaths of their husbands have been fairly numerous, but in no case can it be definitely affirmed that the husband had not given his consent to the adoption before his death. No case in which a daughter has succeeded absolutely to her father's estate has been cited. One witness quotes an instance in which a daughter took a life-interest only in her father's estate, and her husband put forward no objection to the succession of her father's relations on her death (vide D. W. No. 1). Some local customs have been adopted by the Central Provinces Parbhus, but these are mainly of minor importance. Of the witnesses the most prominent are Mr. S. M. Chitnavis, Deputy Commissioner (D. W. No. 7), and Mr. A. L. Dighe, District Judge. The statements of these gentlemen indicate that the Central Provinces Parbhus do not form a community apart, but are only a portion of one undivided Parbhu community, the bulk of which is still resident in the Bombay community and which is governed by the school of law prevalent there....." This evidence indicates that the Parbhus domiciled in these Provinces have not allowed themselves to become assimilated with other Hindus, but have continued to regard themselves as belonging to the same community as their caste follows who have continued to reside in the Bombay Presidency."

On these findings of fact the learned District Judge held that all Parbhus, whether domiciled in the Central Provinces or in Bombay, should be considered as governed by the same school of law, that of the Mayukha. The suit was accordingly dismissed. The learned District Judge held that the principle generally applicable is that laid down in Parbati Kumari Debi v. Jagadis Chunder Dhabal (1), namely, that if Hindu families migrate from one part of the country to another, the presumption is that they carry with them the laws and customs as to succession prevailing in the Province from which they come.

On appeal the learned Divisional Judge took the same view, saying that the parties are admittedly Parbhus coming from the Bombay Presidency and that the Calcutta ruling cited by the first Court was applicable. He quotes the following passage from Trevelyan's Hindu Law (2nd Edition, page 467):—

"In the Bombay Presidency, whether in places where the 'Mitakshara' or in places where the 'Mayukha' is paramount, property inherited by a woman from a male.....is her absolute and several property. She can deal with the property inter vivos or by Will;"

and he cites Gulappa v. Tayawa (2) where this rule has been applied to a woman inheriting as a daughter. He used the same ruling to dispose of the argument that the rule applies only to Gujarat and the Island of Bombay.

It was further argued before him that as the immigration took place 200 years ago, the custom and law applicable are those of the date of immigration and not the subsequent interpretation of the High Courts. Reference was made to the ruling of Drake-Brockman, Judicial Commissioner, in Narayan Vithal v. Govind Narayan (3) in which it was held that among Maratha Brahmins, also immigrants from the Bombay side, a daughter does not inherit an absolute estate from her father, and it was remarked: "the parties admittedly migrated to Chanda about the year 1800 and it is highly improbable that their family has ever been influenced by the Bombay decisions of 1859 and onwards." In Dawlatrao v. Govindrao (4) Skinner, Aditional Judicial Commissioner, quoted the above remark but held as regards Berar that the Bombay School of Hindu Law had always been followed and should be applied there. The learned Divisional Judge sums up the case of the appellants as follows:—

"So far then the thesis would appear to be that the customary law of the country of origin must be presumed to govern a migrating Hindu family, but that customary law would be the law as it existed at the time of migration, seeing that the family would not be influenced by the interpretations and rulings subsequently given effect to in the country of origin but it might be expected rather to be influenced by the customs of the Hindus amongst whom it has come to live. We are to presume in this case that the customs of 1700 continued, but we are to be receptive of evidence that these customs were assimilated to the customs of the surrounding Hindus, and we are to remember that the influence of rulings of the land of origin will be nil." The learned Divisional Judge goes on:—

"It seems to me that such a thesis goes a good deal beyond the more or less obiter dicta of the High Court of these Provinces, that it reduces to very little the Privy Council ruling quoted, and that it tends to conceal the fact that if we have to go back to 1700 for our customs, we must throw over the ruling of 1905 equally with that of 1909, and it places an almost impossible task on the parties of ascertaining the customs of 200 years ago.

"In this case there is no need to do either. The evidence produced by the defence is clear on the point of the close relations of the Parbhus of the Central Provinces with those of Bombay, and the

(1) 29 C. 433 (P. C.); 29 I. A. 82; 6 C. W. N. 490; 4 Bom. L. R. 365; 8 Sar. P. C. J. 205.
(2) 31 B. 453; 9 Bom. L. R. 834.
(3) 1 N. L. R. 154.
(4) 1 Ind Cas. 243; 5 N. L. R, 13.

failure of the Parbhu caste on the whole to assimilate itself to the customs of surrounding Hindus. It seems to me to make little difference that the witnesses are unable to cite an instance of a Parbhu daughter in the Central Provinces inheriting an absolute estate from her father. With a community of 50—200 families this is natural enough. What is important is that the Parbhu community has always remained apart and always kept up its Bombay connections. This being the case, it is not possible to say that the Bombay decisions of recent years have not been known to or influenced the Central Provinces Parbhus. The vast majority of the fellow caste people, viz., those who have retained their Bombay residence are governed by these laws of inheritance, and with these they have constant communion and intermarriage."

In an earlier part of his judgment the learned Divisional Judge says that on the law as laid down in the Calcutta case cited there is a presumption that the Parbhu immigrants in the Central Provinces keep up their laws and usages as to succession prevalent in Bombay, that the evidence on the record is consistent with the presumption, and that the criticisms on and shortcomings in the evidence merely touch the fringe of the evidence, which on the whole supports the presumption.

The grounds of appeal to this Court call in question the findings of fact and law of the lower Courts. I will deal with the arguments advanced. It is first of all urged that it is not proved that this particular family came from the Bombay Presidency, or when they came. No alternative history is suggested, and the only inference that can be drawn from the evidence is that this family like other Parbhu families migrated from the Bombay side not more than about 200 years ago. I regard the summary given by the District Judge as a correct account of the facts to be deduced from the evidence.

The main arguments are a repetition of the arguments put forward in the lower Appellate Court, and are to the effect that no distinction can be drawn between Parbhus and Maratha Brahmins who are also immigrants from Bombay, and that in any case, the Bombay law, whatever that may have been at the time of immigration, should be applied and not the present Bombay law which is of recent growth. As to the first part of this argument I consider that the case of Parbhus is clearly different from that of Maratha Brahmins and that the ruling in Narayan Vithal v. Govind Narayan (3) has no application to the Parbhus of the Central Provinces. The conditions of the two communities are different. The Maratha Brahmins of the Central Provinces are a large and self-contained community, who may now be regarded as an integral part of the population of the Central Provinces. The Parbhus of the Central Provinces on the other hand are a small community, who still regard themselves as forming a branch of the Bombay Parbhus, and whose interests are still connected with those of the Bombay Parbhus. The Maratha Brahmins can well be regarded as not coming within the scope of the ruling in Parbati Kumari Debi v. Jagadis Chandra Dhabal (1), while I consider that the Parbhu families in the Central Provinces certainly come within its scope. There is no course of rulings in the Central Provinces applying the lex loci to Parbhus, the contrary being the case as regards Maratha Brahmins. As regards the second part of the argument, I agree with the line of reasoning adopted by the learned Divisional Judge. The question is what is the law applicable to Parbhus, as to whom there is a living law in Bombay. As to what that law is the Bombay High Court is the proper authority, and we are concerned not with what their view of the law was in the past, but what it is now. If the Parbhus are governed by the Bombay School of Law, we must look to the decisions of the Bombay High Court to ascertain what that law is, according to the latest lights.

It is finally argued that the view that daughters succeed to an absolute estate prevails only in the Island of Bombay and in Gujarat. I am unable to accept this contention. The passage already cited from Trevelyan I consider to embody a correct description of the law as expounded by the Bombay High Court. Both in Bhan v. Roghunath (5) and in Gulappa v. Tayawa (2) this view of the law was not confined to those parts where the Mayukkha is the supreme authority, but was held to be the correct view throughout the Presidency under the Mitakshara Law. The second case was from Dharwar which is not in Gujarat.

(5) 30 B. 229; 7 Bom. L. R. 936.

For all these reasons I consider that the lower Courts have decided the case correctly, and I dismiss the appeal with costs. Counsel's fee Rs. 150.

Appeal dismissed.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 5 OF 1918.

April 13, 1920.

Present:—Mr. Justice Tudball and Mr. Justice Rafique.

LALTA PRASAD—APPELLANT

versus

NASIR KHAN AND ANOTHER—RESPONDENTS.

Pleadings—Gift, validity of, not questioned in trial Court, whether can be questioned in Court of Appeal—Procedure.

In a pre-emption suit the defendant produced a deed of gift showing that, as against him, the plaintiff had no right of pre-emption. The validity of the gift was not questioned in the trial Court and the plaintiff's suit was dismissed. On appeal the plaintiff challenged the validity of the gift deed on the ground that it was not properly attested and that attestation had not been proved. The Appellate Court allowed the objection and decreed the claim:

Held, that the plaintiff, having practically admitted the validity of the deed of gift in the trial Court, ought not to have been allowed to challenge it in appeal, and that the Appellate Court ought not to have entertained the objection without affording the defendant an opportunity of proving the due attestation of the deed. [p. 120, col. 1]

Second appeal from the decree of the District Judge, Shahjahanpur, dated the 13th September 1917.

Mr. Umashanker Bajpai, for the Appellant.

Mr. Lakshmi Narain, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—This is a defendant vendee's appeal arising out of a suit for pre-emption. One of his defences to the suit was that prior to the institution thereof and after the sale deed in dispute he acquired a share in the mahal by a deed of gift which made him a co-sharer in the mahal on the same footing as the plaintiff and, therefore, the plaintiff had no right of pre-emption as against him. He produced the deed of gift of the 29th of June 1916. The only exception taken by the plaintiff to this document was that it was not really a deed of gift but a deed of sale. No objection was taken that this document had not been duly attested as a deed of gift ought to be attested. One of the attesting witnesses was called to prove the deed. He proved its execution and stated that he had attested it at the request of the donor. Not a question was put to him as to whether the attestations of the witnesses were made at the time the document was executed and in the presence of the executant or whether the witnesses signed the document subsequently on an acknowledgment by the executant of his signature thereon. The point was not raised. The Munsif held on the basis of the decision in Bhagwan Das v. Mohan Lal (1) that the defendant vendee having become a co-sharer with equal rights with the plaintiff, the latter was not entitled to pre-empt in respect of the sale in question. The plaintiff, appealed. The Court below held that the evidence on the record did not establish the due attestation of the document and that, therefore, the deed of gift was invalid and the defence failed. It accordingly decreed the plaintiff's claim.

On behalf of the defendant it is urged before us that he was taken entirely by surprise by this plea of the plaintiff in the Appellate Court; if any such objection had been raised, he could easily have proved the due attestation of the document, the genuineness and validity of the document were not challenged in the first Court. Furthermore it is pleaded that the gift was a gift by a Muhammadan, and as such under section 29 of the Transfer of Property Act, the Muhammadan Law applied to the gift and no document was even necessary. We think that the pleas raised on behalf of the appellant have force and must prevail. The gift, being a gift by a Muhammadan, required no reduction to writing or if it was reduced there is nothing to show that it was not duly attested. The validity and the genuineness were practically admitted in the Court of first instance and we do not think it was fair for the lower Appellate Court to allow the point to be raised without giving the defendant further opportunity of proving the due attestation of the document. We must allow this appeal. The defendant having become a co-sharer with equal rights with the plaintiff prior to the institution of the suit, the plaintiff had no right of pre-emption as against him on the day on which he instituted the suit. We set aside the decree of the lower Appellate Court and restore that of the Court of first instance. The appellant will have his costs in all Courts.

(1) 25 A. 421; A. W. N. (1903) 83.

Appeal decreed.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

APPEAL FROM APPELLATE DECREE NO. 970 OF 1919.

January 20, 1920.

Present:—Mr. Justice Walmsley.

NABIN CHANDRA NATH—DEFENDANT—APPELLANT

versus

Srimati TIRTHABASI BHOWMIK, WIDOW OF SHAN CHANDRA BHOWMIK, AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS—RESPONDENTS.

Landlord and tenant—Suit for possession by landlord Defendant setting up tenancy Land, whether comprised in tenancy—Burden of proof

A landlord brought a suit for declaration of title to, and recovery of possession of, some land from his tenant on the ground that the land in suit was not included in the tenancy The defendant alleged a tenancy under the plaintiff in respect of the land claimed It was found that the land claimed was not an encroachment, nor was it contiguous to the land forming the tenancy of the defendant:

Held, that the onus of proving that the land was included in the tenancy of the defendant lay on the defendant. [p. 181, col. 1.]

Appeal against the decree of the Officiating Subordinate Judge, 1st Court, Tipperah, dated the 7th of February 1919, affirming that of the Munsif, 1st Court at Comilla, dated the 21st of December 1917.

FACTS appear from the judgment.

Babu Sasadhar Roy (Sr.), for the Appellant.—The appeal arises out of a suit for recovery of khas possession of a small plot of land forming a portion of the bank of a tank, on declaration of plaintiff's dar taluki right thereto. The defendant admitted the title of the plaintiff to the land, but disputed his right to khas possession on the ground that the land was included within his kayemi jote bearing a rental of Rs. 31. The learned Munsif found that the defendant had failed to prove that the land in dispute was included in the tenancy set up by him. The plaintiff in course of the trial admitted the existence of a jote bearing a rental of Rs. 31 in the name of a cousin of the defendant, who said that he was paying rent to his cousin. The first Court on these grounds decreed the suit. The defendant thereupon appealed and on appeal the learned Judge confirmed the decree of the first Court. Hence the present appeal by the defendant. My submissions are two. The plaintiff having admitted the existence of a jote bearing a rental of Rs. 31, the onus lay upon him to prove that the disputed land was not included within the said jote. [Refers to Rajendro Kumar Rose v. Mohim Chandra Ghose (1).] The learned Judge has wrongly placed the burden of proof on the defendant. My next point is that the lower Appellate Court ought to have accepted the rent decree that was produced before him as additional evidence in support of the defendant's case and instead of commenting on its merits, should have remanded the case for re-trial on the additional evidence to the Court of first instance. I would pray for a remand.

Babu Upendra Kumar Roy, for the Respondents.—I submit the case is concluded by the findings of fact of both Courts. Having regard to those findings the principle laid down in the case in Rajendro Kumar Bose v Mohim Chandra Ghose (1) does not apply. The defendant, it has been found, had no land contiguous to the land in dispute. The case put forward by him is not one of encroachment upon land. The case in Rajendro Kumar Bose v. Mohim Chandra Ghose (1) has been considered and reconsidered in several later decisions reported as Protap

(1) 8 C. W. N. 768.

Chandra Roy v. Judhister Das (2), Gopini Debi v. Lokenath Tewari (3), Sheoleni Roy v. Chattoorbhuj Roy (4), Rutnessur Sen v. Kali Kumar Bidyabhusan (5). Applying the principles laid down in those cases, the Courts below were right in placing the onus on the defendant. No case has been made out for a remand.

Babu Sasadhar Roy replied in brief.

JUDGMENT.—This appeal is preferred by the defendant. It arises out of a suit for declaration of title to and recovery of possession of some land. The lower Appellate Court has dealt with the case on the footing that the defendant has a tenancy under the plaintiffs, although the Munsif seems to have entertained some doubt as to whether there was such a tenancy at all. Assuming that there was a tenancy, both the Courts below have held that the burden of proof was upon the defendant to show that the land which is the subject-matter of this suit is comprised within the defendant's tenancy. This view forms the first object of attack by the appellant. It is contended on his behalf that the Courts below should have followed the case of Rajendro Kumar Bose v. Mohimi Chandra Ghose (1). That case has been considered frequently in later judgments. I shall refer to only two of them, namely, the cases of Protab Chandra Roy v. Judhister Das (2) and Gopini Debi v. Lokenath Tewari (3). In those cases it is shown that the general principle enunciated in the earlier case must be subject to certain limitations. Two of the limitations mentioned are that where the case is not one of encroachment or where the land is not contiguous to the land forming the tenancy of the defendant, the burden of proof does not lie upon the landlord. The lower Appellate Court has noticed these points and it says that this is not a case of encroachment and that the defendant has not any land contiguous to the disputed land. In view of this finding it appears to me that the Court below was right in saying that the onus was upon the defendant. If the onus was upon the defendant, the plaintiffs were bound to succeed. One other objection raised was that the learned Subordinate Judge should have remanded the case to the Munsif for a decision upon all the points. It appears to me that that was wholly unnecessary. Both the arguments advanced on behalf of the appellant fail and I dismiss the appeal with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

(2) 23 Ind. Cas. 69; 19 C. W. N. 143; 19 C. L. J. 408.
(3) 11 Ind. Cas. 696; 19 C. W. N. 140.
(4) 8 Ind. Cas. 785; 12 C. L. J. 376.
(5) 15 Ind. Cas. 701; 16 C. W. N. 693.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.

FIRST APPEAL FROM ORDER No. 126 OF 1919.

April 14, 1920.

Present:—Mr. Justice Piggott and Mr. Justice Walsh.

RADHE LAL—OPPOSITE PARTY—APPELLANT

versus

Musammat BINDO—APPLICANT—RESPONDENT.

Succession Certificate Act (VII of 1889), s. 19—Order granting certificate—Appeal, whether lies—Remedy, proper.

Under section 19 of the Succession Certificate Act, an appeal lies from an order granting a certificate, and it is not absolutely incumbent on the appellant to move the Court granting the certificate to revoke it. [p. 182, col. 1]

Appeal from an order of the District Judge, Aligarh, dated the 15th March 1919.

Mr. Gulzari Lal, for the Appellant.

Mr. Panna Lal, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—On the death of one Matra Mal his widow Musammat Bindo applied for a succession certificate for the collection of certain debts. She named two persons, Radhe Lal and Bhikari Das, as brothers of the deceased; but we note that Radhe Lal is described as son of Hulas Rai and Bhikari Das as son of Durga Das. She also named one Thakur Das as paternal uncle of the deceased. Notices issued to Radhe Lal and Bhikari Das went to Bombay for service, and eventually the Court recorded an order expressing its opinion that the service effected was sufficient and proceeded to deal with the case ex parte. The application was not opposed and a certificate was granted as prayed. Radhe Lal now comes to this Court in appeal. He says he has a defence on the merits, the fact being that Matra Mal was his brother and died as a member of a joint undivided Hindu family with himself. He says moreover that, while his residence is at Hathras in the Aligarh District, he carries on business in Bombay and was, at the time when attempts were made to serve him with notice in Bombay, travelling about the country on his business. He denies that any notice ever reached him at Bombay. There is really no evidence that he was properly served. The Court of Small Causes at Bombay, to which notice was twice sent for service, twice returned the notice with an affidavit by the serving officer to the effect that he could not find Radhe Lal at the address given. Another notice was sent by registered cover and this came back with the word "refused" endorsed on the said cover. There is really no evidence as to who wrote this word "refused," and we cannot agree with the Court below that it raises any definite presumption that this registered cover was tendered to Radhe Lal and was refused by him. We do not think that he had any possible motive for refusing it, if it had really reached him. We think that in view of the question raised by Radhe Lal's objection this case ought to go back for enquiry. With reference to an objection that has been raised by the respondent we are content to say that we are satisfied that an appeal lies under section 19 of Act VII of 1889, and it was not absolutely incumbent upon Radhe Lal to make an application to the Court below to revoke the certificate itself. We set aside the order under appeal and send the case back to the Court below for disposal on the merits, after Radhe Lal has been given an opportunity of supporting his objection. Incidentally we note that Radhe Lal now gives his address as "in the town of Hathras" but that Mr. Gulzari Lal, who has represented him in this Court, undertakes to accept service on his behalf of any notice that may be issued.

Order set aside; Case remanded.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 2100 OF 1919.

April 15, 1920.

Present:—Mr. Justice Wilberforce.

KANSHI RAM—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

LAL CHAND AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Registration Act (XVI of 1908), s. 17—Memorandum of partition, whether requires registration—Admissibility in evidence.

A memorandum in an account-book of a partition which has already taken place does not require registration and is admissible in evidence. [p. 182, col 1.]

Second appeal from the decree of the District Judge, Attock District at Campbellpur, dated the 21st June 1919, reversing that of the Munsif, 1st Class, Pindigheb, dated the 8th January 1919, decreeing plaintiff's claim.

Lala Fakir Chand, for the Appellant.

Mr. B. R. Puri, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—One Buta Mal had three sons, Hari Chand, Lal Chand and Prem Das. He died in 1899. In 1918 the son of Hari Chand sued for $\frac{1}{3}$rd of some house property left by Buta Mal. The defendants Lal Chand and Prem Das pleaded that Hari Chand had been separated 30 or 35 years ago and that they remained joint with Buta Mal. Their pleas have been held correct in an exhaustive and careful judgment by the District Judge. Against this decision the plaintiff has preferred a second appeal, his grounds being that no partition took place and that it is not proved that Lal Chand and Prem Das remained united with Buta Mal.

An important piece of evidence regarding the factum of Hari Chand's separation from his family was an entry in an account book regarding this partition. The first Court held it inadmissible on account of want of registration, but the lower Appellate Court considered it merely a memorandum of a partition that had already taken place and did not require registration. There is evidence supporting this view of the lower Appellate Court, as witnesses stated that the memorandum was drawn up some two years after the partition. This decision of the District Judge being based on evidence cannot, therefore, be questioned on second appeal. In addition to this memorandum there was much other evidence that the partition took place and this has been well considered by the lower Appellate Court. I uphold this finding, therefore, that Hari Chand separated from the family in about 1885.

As for the fact whether Buta Mal and his two sons, Lal Chand and Prem Das, remained united after the separation of Hari Chand, the District Judge did not deal specifically with the point. He found, however, that the plaintiff was not entitled to any share in the ancestral property of Buta Mal and noted that although Buta Mal died 20 years ago, neither Hari Chand nor his son had made any claim to his inheritance and that Lal Chand and Prem Das had lived together with their father. As against this Counsel for the appellant points out that the family land is still recorded as joint. Counsel also refers to Nihal Devi v. Kishore Chand (1) and Bhola Devi v. Mohkam Chand (2) as authorities that where a partial partition takes place in a family, there must be an affirmative proof that the remaining members remained united. He also relies upon the original memorandum of partition, which shows that separate shares were allotted to all the members of the family. As for the last point Counsel for the respondents correctly points out that in effecting the partition it was necessary to fix the ratio of the shares of the various members. As for the revenue entries he points out that though the land is entered as joint, it is proved that Hari Chand used only to receive $\frac{1}{4}$th of the produce. As against the judgments cited by Counsel for the appellant he relies upon the evidence of re-union, as noted by the District Judge, and also calls my attention to the fact that at the time of the separation of Hari Chand his brothers Prem Das and Lal Chand were mere children.

After a careful consideration of the case I do not think that the learned District Judge, who is an authority on Hindu Law, in any way misunderstood the law on the subject and if he did not enter into the question of the continued union or the re-union of the members of the family, it was because this point was not seriously contested before him. I do not find, therefore, that there is any ground for interference on second appeal and I dismiss the appeal with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

(1) 8 Ind. Cas. 999; 97 P. R. 1910; 142 P. W. R. 1910; 11 P. L. R. 1911.

(2) 48 Ind. Cas. 784; 121 P. R. 1918.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.

FIRST CIVIL APPEAL No. 115 OF 1918.

April 8, 1920.

Present :—Mr. Justice Tudball and Mr. Justice Rafique.

SAMHER SINGH—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

SHER SINGH AND ANOTHER—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Custom—Pre-emption—Wajib-ul-arz, interpretation of—Bhai bhatija, meaning of.

Where in recording a custom of pre-emption in a wajib-ul-arz, the first right is given to "bhai bhatija sharik hakiyat," this does not mean that an own brother has a preference over a cousin. [p. 184, col. 1.]

Plaintiff claimed a preferential right of pre-emption against the vendee on the ground of being the own brother of the vendor, and it was found that the vendee and the two brothers were descended from the same common great-grandfather:

Held, that the plaintiff had not a preferential right under the terms of the wajib-ul-arz. [p. 184, col. 1.]

First appeal against the decree of the Subordinate Judge, Mainpuri, dated the 11th January 1918.

Mr. S. K. Dar, for the Appellant.

The Hon'ble Dr. T. B. Sapru and Mr. R. K. Malaviya, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—This a plaintiff's appeal, who came into Court claiming a preferential right of pre-emption as against the vendee. The vendor is the own brother of the pre-emptor. The vendee and the two brothers are descended from the same common great-grandfather. According to the custom alleged by the plaintiff, assuming that the custom does exist, the first right of pre-emption was given to bhai bhatija sharik hakiyat. The lower Court has held that the words "bhai bhatija" have the wide meaning commonly given to them in the villages of the district, and that this does not mean that an own brother has a preference over a cousin. The second set of pre emptors are co sharers in the patti which might include non relatives : and the third set of pre emptors are co sharers in the village. The plaintiff came into Court alleging a custom which gave him a right of preference. He produced a wajib-ul-arz the meaning of which on this point is by no means clear. The words bhai bhatija in the vernacular have a far wider meaning than the words "brothers" and "nephews" in English. We think that the Court below is perfectly correct in its interpretation. There is no force in this appeal. We dismiss it with costs, including fees on the higher scale.

Appeal dismissed.

PATNA HIGH COURT.

FIRST CIVIL APPEAL No. 161 OF 1917.

March 23, 1920.

Present:—Sir Dawson Miller, KT., Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Coutts.

KUMAR PREMATHA NATH MALIA—DEFENDANT—APPELLANT

versus

A. J. MEIK—PLAINTIFF AND HARGOBIND GOSWAMY AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Grant, construction of—Minerals, whether pass by grant—Adverse possession of minerals, what constitutes—Leases of sub-soil rights, grant of, effect of—Constructive possession—Possession of part, whether possession of whole—Trespasser, position of—Surface working, whether gives title to sub-soil rights—Estate, separate, what constitutes—Cess, direct payment of, effect of.

Where a zemindar grants a tenure in lands within his zemindari and it does not clearly appear by the terms of the grant that a right to the minerals is included, the minerals do not pass to the grantee. [p. 187, col. 2.]

The mere grant of leases by the tenure-holder which purport to grant sub-soil rights will not in itself give to the tenure-holder a title to the sub-soil rights by adverse possession. What must be considered, in order to decide the question of adverse possession, is the evidence of actual working. [p. 187, col. 2: p. 188, col. 1.]

Although possession of a part is constructive possession of the whole if the whole is otherwise vacant, this constructive possession is an incident of ownership and results from title. The doctrine of constructive possession is not applicable to a case where the occupant defends himself on the ground of his possession only without proving any title. [p 188, col. 2.]

A wrong-doer's rights by adverse possession must be confined to the land of which he is in actual possession. [p. 188, col. 2: p. 189, col 1.]

Where an owner of land sells it reserving to himself the minerals, he retains possession of the minerals in the same way as if he had not sold the surface Non-user is not an abandonment of possession. Consequently, no matter how long mines remain unworked by the owner, his right is not barred so long as they are not worked by some one else. [p 189, col. 1.]

There may be cases in which a title by adverse possession can be made out in respect to minerals, but it does not follow that by working a part of the minerals or opening up particular quarries possession over a continuous field of minerals or of quarries of which the portion worked forms part can be obtained. [p. 189, col. 1.]

A mere surface working cannot give any claim by adverse possession to the whole of the coal seam or to any portion of it beyond that which is actually extracted. [p. 189, col. 2.]

Direct payment of cess in respect of rent free lands is by no means conclusive that the lands constitute a separate estate. [p. 186, col. 1]

Appeal from a decision of the Aditional Subordinate Judge, Manbhum.

Messrs. P. K. Sen and L. M. Ganguli, for the Appellant.

The Government Advocate, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—This appeal arises out of a decision of the Additional Subordinate Judge of Manbhum in favour of the plaintiff in a suit brought in respect of the sub soil rights of a certain Mauza Kapasara. The plaintiff in the suit, Mr. Barton, is the manager of the Pandra encumbered estate, Kismats 2 and 4, which belong to Babu Sanker Narain Singh, Babu Bejoy Narain Singh, and Babu Gobinda Narain Singh who may conveniently be designated the Pandra Babus. These two Kismats make up 3 annas of the whole Pergarna Pandra. The other 8 annas belong to the Raja of Pandra and consist of Kismats 1 and 3. Mr. Barton is the manager of the whole estate.

The plaintiff's case is that Mauza Kapasara is one of the Mauzas included in Kismats 2 and 4, the estate of the Pandra Babus. In the year 1736 the Raja of Pandra, who was at that time the proprietor of the whole of Perganna Pandra, granted a patta of Mauza Kapasara to KUMAR PREMATHA NATH MALIA v. MEIK.

Sri Kishori Das Mohant Goswami, the ancestor of the present Goswami defendants. The Goswamis remained in possession of the Manza for a very long time, but from the year 1888 they began to grant leases both of the soil and the sub soil rights and some coal has been extracted. The plaintiff first knew of coal being extracted in the year 1912. He contends that under the patta which was granted to the Goswami in 1736, no sub soil rights passed and that neither they nor the person to whom they have transferred those rights were entitled to grant leases of the sub-soil or to extract coal. He accordingly brought this suit for a declaration that the right to the sub-soil coal in Manza Kapasara is vested solely and exclusively in the proprietors of Kismats 2 and 4, that the defendants be called upon to produce an account of coal raised, that damages for coal extracted during three years be allowed to the plaintiff and that he be granted a permanent injunction restraining the defendants from extracting coal from the sub-soil of Kapasara. The learned Subordinate Judge by his decree granted the relief claimed and on the defendants failing to produce accounts, awarded damages for three years amounting to Rs. 8,197-8-0. From this decree the defendant No. 3, heir to Srimati Bhaba Sundari Devi who was the transferee of an 8-annas share in the Manza from the Goswami defendants, has appealed.

The points taken in appeal are (1) that by virtue of the patta of 1736 the Goswamis acquired a separate estate of which they have been in possession since the time of the Permanent Settlement; (2) that even if it be found that this is not so, the plaintiff has not established his title to Manza Kapasara inasmuch as he has not shown that the Manza is within Kismats 2 and 4; (3) that the grant of 1736 passed the sub-soil rights; (4) that the defendants have acquired a title by adverse possession and (5) that the plaintiff is not entitled to a declaration or an injunction nor to more than two years' damages, if any.

In support of his first contention Mr. Sen, the learned Counsel for the appellant, relied principally on the provisions of Bengal Regulations I of 1793 and XIX of 1793. By Article VIII, sub-clause (3) of Regulation I of 1793 it is enacted that "The Governor General in Council will impose such assessment as he may deem equitable on all lands at present alienated and paying no public revenue which have been or may be proved to be held under illegal or invalid title." He then refers to Regulation XIX of 1793, which provides "for trying the validity of the titles of persons holding or claiming a right to hold lands exempted from the payment of revenue to Government under grants not being of the description of those termed badshahi or royal; and for determining the amount of the annual assessment to be imposed on lands so held which may be adjudged or become liable to the payment of public revenue." Reliance is placed principally on clause 2 (1), which runs as follows:—

"All grants for holding land exempt from the payment of revenue made previous to the 12th August 1765, the date of the Company's accession to the Diwani, by whatever authority and whether by a writing or without a writing shall be deemed valid, provided the grantee actually and bona fide obtained possession of the land so granted previous to the date above mentioned, and the land shall not have been subsequently rendered subject to the payment of revenue by the officers or the orders of Government."

"If it shall be proved to the satisfaction of the Court, that the grantee did not obtain possession of the land so granted previous to the 12th August 1765, or that he did obtain possession of it prior to that date but that it has been since subjected to the payment of revenue by the officers or the orders of Government, the grant shall not be deemed valid."

It is contended that the grant in the present case is one of the kind contemplated by the first part of this clause and that consequently in 1793 Manza Kapasara became a separate estate. The appellant also relies on certain certificate demands in respect of cess made direct to the Goswamis and certain receipts for payment of cesses which were paid direct by the Goswamis apparently pursuant to these demands. Now, by the patta of 1736 no rent is reserved, but this does not necessarily imply that by it a revenue free estate was granted and the circumstances seem to show that it did not grant such an estate. In order to obtain the benefit of Regulation XIX of 1793 even if the grant had been a revenue free grant, the holder would have had to register his claim under section 24 of the Regulation and even that registration would not be proof of the right of the person registered to the property or of his title to hold the lands exempt from the payment of Government revenue (section 28). There is no affirmative evidence that Kapasara is a revenue free estate, but it is contended that the patta of 1735 entitled the Goswamis to have the estate separately assessed to revenue and that it must have been so registered as a revenue paying estate. In our opinion the grant to the Goswamis was, on the face of it, nothing more than a rent free grant which would not have entitled the Goswamis to have the Mauza registered as a separate revenue paying estate, and this view is supported by the fact that Kapasara never has been registered either as a revenue free or a revenue paying estate and that neither the Goswamis nor the appellant have ever paid revenue to Government. It is true that claims for cess have been made direct on account of Kapasara to the Goswamis, but there are many reasons why this may have been done. Kapasara is certainly a rent free tenure and under the provisions of the Cess Act, cess is ordinarily paid for rent free lands by the proprietor. By the Board's rules, however, it is provided that if "doubt exists as to the estate or tenure to which such lands appertain or if for any other valid reasons direct assessment appears desirable, the Collector may exercise his discretion in adopting the latter course," and various circumstances which may be considered valid reasons for direct assessment are enumerated. Direct payment of cess on account of rent free lands then is by no means conclusive that these rent free lands constitute a separate estate and if the Goswamis held a separate estate which paid revenue to Government, it would have been easy for them to have produced their receipts for such payments. Not a single receipt, however, has been produced. Admittedly Kapasara is not entered as a separate estate in the register of revenue paying estates and there is nothing to show that it is or ever has been a separate estate.

The next point is whether the plaintiff has proved that Kapasara is within the Pandra Babus' estate, that is, within Kismats 2 and 4 of Perganna Pandra. It appears that up to the time when argument in the case was being heard, Kapasara was entered in the register of revenue paying estates as within Kismats 1 and 3, which appertain to the Zemindari of the Raja of Pandra. At the time of argument this was apparently discovered and Mr. Burton made an application to the Deputy Collector to have the register corrected and the Mauza placed within Kismats 2 and 4. He apparently produced papers to show that there was a mistake in the register and notice was issued to him as manager of the Raja of Pandra's estate to show cause why the correction should not be made. On behalf of the Raja he admitted the mistake and after the case had been gone into by the Deputy Collector and the Deputy Commissioner, the latter ordered that the change should be made. It is contended on behalf of the appellant that there was in fact no mistake and that the change was obtained by Mr. Burton for the purposes of the present case. It is abundantly clear, however, that there was a mistake. There is no dispute that the Pandra Babus are the proprietors of Kismats 2 and 4 and it is not in controversy that the predecessors-in-interest of the present Pandra Babus were Sib Narain Singh and Ananta Narain Singh. In the year 1861 Sib Narain Singh and Ananta Narain Singh, in obedience to a parwana issued by the Deputy Commissioner evidently for the purpose of preparing his registers of revenue paying and revenue free estates in accordance with Regulation VIII of 1860, filed a list of the Mauzas in their Zemindari. In this list Mauza Kapasara appears. Again in 1871 apparently on account of certain disputes Sib Narain and Ananta Narain decided to divide their Zemindari and to have it recorded that each was entitled to a half, that is, that each was entitled to a 4 annas of the whole estate of Pandra. In pursuance of this agreement they prepared a list of all the Mauzas within their Kismats, and again in this list the name of Mauza Kapasara appears;

It is clear then that since 1861 the proprietors of Kismats 2 and 4 have been claiming that Kapasara was within their Zemindari and there is nothing to show that it was claimed by anyone else. The Mauza was, however, not entered in the register as within Kismats 2 and 4 but it was entered within Kismats 1 and 3. This was not discovered until the trial of the present suit had almost come to an end and when it was discovered, Mr. Burton at once applied for a rectification of the register. On behalf of the Raja who was the only other interested person, he admitted the mistake and the Collector after a full enquiry made the correction asked for. It is true that Mr. Burton was manager of both the estates, but there is no reason to suppose that he was favouring the Pandra Babus at the expense of the Raja and in view of the lists of 1861 and 1877 and of the fact that the Collector after enquiry placed Kapasara within Kismats 2 and 4, we are satisfied that a genuine mistake had been made and that Kapasara is really within Kismats 2 and 4 of which the Pandra Babus are the proprietors.

The question of what rights passed by the patta of 1736 remains to be considered. The original patta by which the grant was made, if it is in existence at all, must be in the possession of the appellant. It has not been produced, however, and the only evidence as to the contents of the patta are two copies which were produced by the plaintiff. These were made under the following circumstances. In 1901 after Mr. Burton became manager, he called on the Goswamis, under section 14 (a) of Act VI of 1876, to produce their title deeds. They produced a patta which was copied. This copy is Exhibit 1. Subsequently another patta was prepared for the Legal Remembrancer. This is Exibbit 1a. There are certain slight differences in the two copies but they are immaterial for the purposes of this case. Exhibit 1, which may be taken as more favourable to the appellant and about which we have the evidence of Mr. Burton that he compared it with the original, runs as follows:—

"Sri Kishori Das Mahanta Goswami.

Patta in remembrance of an agreement granted by the most powerful Raja Sri Narendra Sinha and the most powerful Raja Sri Sri Bir Sinha.

This patta is executed in respect of a village. Village Kapasara in Perganna Tundi, Tappa Pandra, is given to you to perform the services of Sri Sri (sic). There is no difference of opinion as to this. We relinquish that which is customary to the country. You confer your blessing on me (us) and cultivate (jote abad) and enjoy (the same) in great felicity. To the above import the patta is granted. Dated the 17th of Asarh 1658 (Sakabda)."

Considerable stress has been laid by Mr. Sen on the word "relinquish" in the patta, and he contends that the word indicates that not only surface but sub-soil rights were granted. We cannot accept this contention. The word "relinquish" has no special signification, and all that the sentence in which it occurs means is that the grant was of "that which is customary to the country." Now what passed by grants of this kind has been the subject of many decisions. The latest case on the point is that of Raghunath Roy Marwari v. Durga Prashad Singh (1). The case was one from the same district as the present case, the grant was of very much the same character and the decision at which their Lordships of the Privy Council arrived was that where a Zemindar grants a tenure in lands within his Zemindari and it does not clearly appear by the terms of the grant that a right to the minerals is included, the minerals do not pass to the grantee. This appears to conclude the matter. In the present case it certainly does not appear by the terms of the grant that a right to the minerals is included and in our opinion no right to the sub-soil passed by the patta.

This brings us to the question of whether the defendants have acquired any right by adverse possession and, if so, what the extent of that right is. The evidence of adverse possession is that leases which included sub soil rights have been granted and that under some of these leases coal has been worked. The mere grant of leases which purport to grant sub-soil rights will not in itself give a title by adverse possession and what we must consider is the evidence of actual working. The evidence of working is of a very scanty description. It appears that in 1898 half the Mauza was transferred by Hargobind Goswami to Srimati Bhaba Sundari Devi. In May 1899 the latter granted a sub-lease of the underground rights in 87 bighas to Nafar Chandra Kuer and in January 1900 a similar lease of 27½ bighas to Hari Dass Gokuldas. She also granted small areas, varying from 5 to 25 bighas, to certain other persons between 1899 and 1905 There is no evidence that any of the latter were worked. There is evidence, however, that Hargobind and Bhaba Sundari Devi used to dig some coal for their own use but how much or when is not stated, and it may safely be assumed that the quantity taken by them was merely surface coal required from time to time for domestic purposes. Nafar Chandra's son Hari Prasad Kuer was called and said that from 1899 coal was being raised off and on from Kapasara and that he had quarries and inclines and that one quarry was 100 feet square and about 25 feet deep. This is all the evidence about working the mines, except such as may be gathered from certain account books put in by the defendants showing the receipt of rent and royalties and cesses from Nafar Chandra Kuer between 1889 and 1904 and again in 1911 and 1912 and a payment of Rs. 267 from Hari Das Gokuldas in 1901. The rent payable by the latter was Rs. 412 per annum whether he raised coal or not, and the only evidence of any payment by him is that up to Chaitra 1308 B. S. a sum of Rs. 267 was received for rent and cesses. It is impossible from this to draw an inference as to how much, if any, coal was worked by him The other receipts appearing in the account books show sums received from Nafar Chandra Kuer on the dates above mentioned. According to his lease he was to pay a royalty at the rate of 3 annas 9 pies per ton of a steam coal, 2 annas per ton of rubble, 1 anna per ton of dust and 4 annas 6 pies per ton of coke and burnt coal, with a stipulation that the minimum royalty should be Rs. 100 in the second year, Rs. 200 in the third, Rs. 300 in the fourth, Rs. 400 in the fifth and Rs. 800 from the 6th year. The lease is dated the 29th May 1899. The second year would, therefore, begin in 1900. The total receipts from this tenant, as far as can be gathered from the accounts which nobody has been called to explain, would appear to be between Rs. 600 and Rs. 700 up to the end of 1901. It would appear, therefore, that during these years a certain quantity of coal had been extracted. In 1902 and 1903 sums amounting to Rs. 586 were received from the same source which would point to the same conclusion, but between the latter date and 1911 there is nothing to show in the accounts that anything was paid. In 1911 a sum of Rs. 500 was received and again in 1912 a further sum of Rs 540 was credited. During the latter years the minimum royalty was Rs. 800, and it is very difficult from these accounts to arrive at any conclusion as to the actual quantity of coal raised. Nobody has been called to explain them, and it would be impossible on this evidence to accept the contention of the appellant that there had been extensive working of the coal under this lease. Since 1912 there is really nothing to show that any coal has been extracted at all and so far from the evidence indicating any extensive working over a long period up to the present day as we are asked to assume by the learned Counsel for the appellant, it seems to point to the conclusion that really only a small portion of the surface coal has been taken. It is impossible to find on this evidence that any right by adverse possession has been acquired by the holder of the sub soil rights of Mauza Kapasara which has an area of about 1,000 bighas. No Indian authorities have been called to our attention on the question of how far the rights to the underground minerals can be acquired by adverse possession, but it is settled law both in England and in India that although possession of a part is constructive possession of the whole, if the whole is otherwise vacant, this constructive possession is an incident of ownership and results from title. The doctrine of constructive possession is not applicable to a case where the occupant defends himself on the ground of his possession only without proving any title. It is likewise recognised both in India and in England that a wrongdoer's rights by adverse possession must be confined to the land of which he is in actual possession. In Mirza Shamsher Bahadur v. Kunj Behari Lal (2) the question was elaborately discussed. That was a case of land but the principle applies equally to mines and the decision clearly supports the principle just enunciated. The effect of the English decisions dealing with the acquisition of title to minerals by adverse possession is to the effect that where an owner of land sells it reserving to himself the minerals, he retains possession of the minerals in the same way as if he had not sold the surface. Non user is not an abandonment of possession. Consequently no matter how long mines remain unworked by the owner, his right is not barred so long as they are not worked by some one else. The case of Rich v. Johnson (3) was a suit for ejectment in the case of mines. The plaintiff as lord of the manor was entitled to the mines and had been in actual possession of the manor. The defendants had been in possession of the mines for over 20 years. It was held that there having been no entry within 20 years upon the mines which were a distinct possession and might be a distinct inheritance, the Statute of Limitations was not avoided. It thus appears that there may be cases in which a title by adverse possession can be made out in respect to minerals, but it does not follow that by working a part of the minerals or opening up particular quarries possession over a continuous field of minerals or of quarries of which the portion worked forms part can be obtained. See M'Donnell v. M'Kinty (4). Again in the case of Ashton v. Stock (5), where the plaintiffs were seised in fee of lands to which their predecessors derived title under a conveyance made in the reign of Elizabeth, wherein the grantor reserved to himself and his heirs male a rent charge of 7*s.* 8*d.* and which contained a proviso that the grantee and his heirs could not dig or get coal upon the lands for sale but only such as should be burned or employed thereon and the defendant who claimed title under a demise from the descendant of the grantor had for more than 20 years worked from mines of his own on adjacent lands into the coal fields under the plaintiffs' lands, it was held that the defendant had not acquired any title to the mine by possession under the Statute of Limitation and that the plaintiffs were entitled to an injunction with an account for 6 years. Hall, V. C., in the course of his judgment in that case remarked:—

(1) 50 Ind. Cas. 849; 23 C. W. N. 914; 17 A. L. J. 597; 36 M. L. J. 660; 1 U. P. L. R. (P. C.) 43; 26 M. L. T. 76; 30 C. L. J. 160; 21 Bom. L. R. 895; 10 L. W. 347 (P. C.).

"I can well understand that there might be cases in which from the manner of working coal a person who began to work it and was a mere wrongdoer and trespasser might have acquired title to a certain seam or area of coal, and that by the mode of driving the levels and opening a certain area of coal there might have been possession acquired to the whole thing as a mine or as a seam of coal, and not merely to the particular quantity of coal that was actually shown and gotten. That, however, is not this case and it is not necessary for me to say more than that such a case might exist."

This decision indicates how title by adverse possession might be acquired in minerals but the case there supposed is certainly not the case now before us. In the present case the utmost that can be said to have been done is that a certain quantity of surface coal has been taken, the extent of which can be gauged from the fact that in one instance a quarry about 100 feet square by 25 feet deep was dug. This, in our opinion, is mere surface working and could not give any claim by adverse possession to the whole of the coal seam or to any portion of it beyond that which has already been taken. In the recent case of the Lodna Colliery Co. v. Bepin Behary Bose (6) decided by a Division Bench of this Court on the 30th January 1920, it was held that a trespasser wrongfully working a vein of coal from an adjacent mine acquires possession only of the coal worked but cannot be said to be in possession of the mine itself. We see no reason to differ from the opinion there expressed, which is supported by the authority of Ashton v. Stock (5) and Thompson v. Hickman (7). In our

(2) 7 C. L. J. 414; 12 C. W. N 273; 3 M. L. T. 212.
(3) (1740) 2 Stra. 1142; 93 E. R. 1088.
(4) (1847) 10 Ir. L. R. 514.
(5) (1877) 6 Ch. D. 719; 25 W. R. 862.
(6) 55 Ind. Cas. 113; 1 P. L. T. 84.
(7) (1907) 1 Ch. D. 550; 76 L. J. Ch. 254; 96 L. T. 454; 23 T. L. R. 311.

opinion the defendants have acquired no right by adverse possession to anything more than the coal already extracted.

The last question for consideration is to what relief the plaintiff is entitled. He has asked for 3 reliefs, (1) that it be declared that the right to the sub soil coal in Mauza Kapasara is vested solely and exclusively in the proprietors of the Pandra encumbered estate.

(2) That the defendants may be called upon to produce accurate accounts of their raisings and despatches of coal out of the sub soil of the said Mouza during the last three years and a decree may be given to the plaintiff for the value thereof.

(3) That a permanent injunction may be issued against the defendants restraining them from working or winning or appropriating the coal from and out of the sub soil of Mauza Kapasara.

The plaintiff has been granted both the reliefs (1) and (3) and he has been granted a sum of Rs. 2,732-8-0 a year for three years as damages.

In regard to the first prayer it was contended by the appellant that a suit for a declaration is barred after six years from the time when the right to sue accrued under Article 120 of the Limitation Act and that the right to sue accrued more than six years before the institution of the suit. In our opinion this contention cannot prevail, as the appellant acquired no prescriptive right to the minerals beyond the quantity actually removed at any particular time. It follows that a fresh cause of action arose when any particular portion of the coal was removed. The defendants according to the evidence were working the coal up to within nearly three years of the institution of the suit, and it does not appear to us that the right to claim a declaration is barred. We think, however, that an injunction should not be granted. According to the findings come to the title to the minerals of Mauza Kapasara is in the plaintiff. The defendants appear to have been under a bona fide belief that they were entitled to the sub soil, but there is nothing to show, now that it has been established that they have no right to the sub-soil, that there is any fear that they will infringe the plaintiff's right, nor indeed is there anything to show that they have worked the coal from the estate during the last three years. If in future they continue to do so, a fresh cause of action will arise.

The last question is one of damages. The learned Judge awarded damages for the three years preceding the suit and on the defendants failing to produce any accounts he assessed the damages at Rs. 2,732-8-0 a year, on the ground that this sum was realised by the defendant No. 3, the heir of Bhaba Sundari Devi, under the subleases granted by that lady. This, however, does not appear to us to be any criterion of the actual damage suffered by the plaintiff. It is for him to show that coal has been raised during the period for which he claims damages. The only evidence on this point is that since 1889 coal has been raised from Kapasara off and on but as already pointed out, there is nothing to show that during the three years preceding the suit any coal at all has been taken. The plaint was filed on the 27th September 1915. The last payment of rent or royalty according to the accounts produced was on the 21st March 1912 and as the plaintiff has failed to show that any coal has been appropriated by the defendants since that date, in our opinion he has failed to establish his right to damages. It is, therefore, unnecessary for us to determine the question whether the limitation period is three years under Article 48 or Article 49 as the respondents contend or two years under Article 36 according to the contention of the appellant.

In the result the decree of the learned Subordinate Judge must be varied and in lieu thereof it will be decreed and declared that the right to the sub-soil in Mauza Kapasara is vested solely and exclusively in the proprietors of the Pandra encumbered estate, Kismats 2 and 4, Collectorate Tauzi Nos. 22 and 24, and at present in the duly notified manager thereof and that the defendants have no right to work or appropriate the coal lying in the sub-soil of the said Mauza. The plaintiff is entitled to half his costs in the Court below and each party will bear their own costs of this appeal.

Decree varied.

VIR SINGH v. HARNAM SINGH.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 3096 OF 1918.

June 4, 1919.

Present:—Mr. Justice Bevan-Petman.

VIR SINHG—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

HARNAM SINGH AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Admission, effect of—Specific Relief Act (I of 1877), s. 42—Declaration, suit for, by reversioner of lunatic that certain property acquired by defendant belongs to lunatic, maintainability of.

What a party himself admits to be true may reasonably be presumed to be so, and, until the presumption is rebutted, the fact admitted must be taken to be established. [p. 192, col. 1.]

A suit by the immediate reversioner of a lunatic for a declaration that a mortgage acquired by the manager of the lunatic's estate in his own name belongs to the lunatic is maintainable. [p. 192, col. 1.]

Second appeal from the decree of the District Judge, Ferozepore, dated the 21st August 1918, affirming that of the Munsif, 1st Class, Ferozepore, dated the 2nd April 1918, dismissing the claim.

Mr. Durga Das, for the Appellant.

Mr. Brij Lal, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—The facts necessary to be stated for the purposes of this second appeal are that one Faujdar Singh had three sons, Vir Singh (plaintiff), Punjab Singh, the father of Harnam Singh and Viriam Singh (defendants), and Dana, a lunatic. Harnam Singh was appointed the manager of the estate of his uncle Dana, the lunatic. Faujdar Singh left property and Dana succeeded to one-third, whilst Harnman Singh and Viriam Singh succeeded to one-third jointly through their father Punjab Singh. Harnam Singh and Viriam Singh advanced money on a mortgage in their own names and Vir Singh instituted a suit in which he prayed for a declaration that Dana, his brother, was entitled to a half share in the mortgage rights in the mortgage so entered into, on the ground that the money was advanced out of the income of the ancestral property held jointly by the defendants and their uncle Dana, and he further alleged that his reversionary right to this property of Dana, a childless lunatic, was affected prejudically. Incidentally the accounts of Harnam Singh were attacked. The defendants denied the claim and asserted that the money was their own and they were solely entitled to the rights under the said mortgage. The defendants also pleaded that the plaintiff had no locus standi. The first Court held that plaintiff could maintain the suit if it could be shown that Dana had a share in the mortgage rights, but that plaintiff had failed to prove this condition and that a previous admission of Harnam Singh was insufficient because it was not supported by evidence and did not amount to an estoppel. The Court, therefore, dismissed the suit. The lower Appellate Court, which had already expressed an opinion on the matter in the course of the lunacy proceedings, suggested that the appeal should be transferred and, stating that no further evidence had been produced since his previous decision, dismissed the appeal on the ground that the plaintiff had failed to prove that Dana had any share in the mortgage. I find, however, that neither in the previous proceedings nor in the appeal did the lower Appellate Court consider the effect of the admission of Harnam Singh which is an essential point in the case.

For the respondents a preliminary objection is raised that the appellant has no locus standi to maintain the suit because under section 42 of the Specific Relief Act a plaintiff is entitled to sue for a declaration in respect of his own title or right, and not that of a third party as in this case, that such right must relate to a present subsisting right and that a plaintiff is not entitled to ask for an opinion as to title. For the appellant it is contended that any friend of a lunatic can sue when the estate of the latter is being shown less than it is by the manager of the estate and that, in the present case, the plaintiff is suing in his own interests as a reversioner.

On the merits the appellant contends that the lower Appellate Court has ignored a previous admission of Harnam Singh to the effect that Dana had a half share in the mortgage, and that it should not have been presumed that the money was solely that of the defendants in view of the fact that the defendants and Dana lived together and that their property was managed jointly, that the income of Dana was equal to that of the two defendants jointly and that Harnam Singh was not showing what had become of Dana's income. It is further pointed out that Dana had practically no expenses whilst the defendants had families to support.

In my opinion the first Court did not realise the effect of an adimission and the judgment of the District Judge is vitiated by his having totally ignored the admission. Their Lordships of the Privy Council in Chandra Kunwar v. Chaudhri Narpat Singh (1) have explained the effect of an admission as being that what a party himself admits to be true may reasonably be presumed to be so and, until the presumption was rebutted, the fact admitted must be taken to be established.

The judgment in Lal Shah v. Hira Lal (2) is to the same effect. I hold, therefore, that the burden of proof, at least so far as Harnam Singh is concerned, was on him to prove that the income from Dana's share of the property had not been advanced on the mortgage to the extent of half, as previously admitted by him. He has totally failed to prove this. Though this admission is not evidence against Viriam Singh, it is clear that he has all along been taking a minor part in the transactions of the family and such evidence as exists must be received and judged in the light of Harnam Singh's admission. I hold, therefore, that Dana has a half share in the mortgage.

The contention that any person can institute a suit to vindicate the rights of a lunatic has not been argued. In the present case the plaintiff is asking for a declaration to safeguard his own rights as a reversioner to Dana. His right is a subsisting present one. The test is the present capacity of the plaintiff to take possession, if the possession were to become vacant by the death of Dana, and he certainly would be entitled to immediate possession of his share.

For the above reasons, I accept the appeal, set aside the decree of the lower Appellate Court and grant the appellant the relief claimed with costs throughout.

Appeal accepted.

(1) 29 A. 184 (P. C.); 9 Bom. L. R. 267; 2 M. L. T. 109; 17 M. L. J. 103; 5 C. L. J. 115; 11 C. W. N. 321; 4 A. L. J. 102.

(2) 41 Ind. Cas. 163; 106 P. R. 1917; 119 P. W. R. 1917.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.

CIVIL REVISION No. 57 OF 1919.

April 9, 1920.

Present:—Justice Sir P. C. Banerjee, KT.

ABDUL RASHID—PLAINTIFF—PETITIONER

versus

THE SIZING MATERIAL CO., LTD.,—DEFENDANT—OPPOSITE PARTY.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 20 (c)—Place of suing—Goods, purchase of, at one place to be delivered at another—Cause of action, accrual of, at place of delivery.

Where upon the purchase of goods, it is agreed between the parties that payment for, and delivery of, the goods would be made and taken at a place other than the place where the purchase is effected, a suit arising out of the transaction on account of non-delivery of a portion of the goods may be brought in a Court exercising jurisdiction in the place where delivery and payment were to be made. [p 193, col. 1]

A purchased certain goods from B. at Bombay, who agreed to deliver and receive payment at Cawnpore: after taking delivery A. sued B at Cawnpore for the price of certain of the goods not received by him:

Held, that the cause of action accrued at Cawnpore, and the Cawnpore Courts had jurisdiction to try the suit. [p. 193, col. 1.]

Civil revision against the order of the Judge, Small Cause Court, Cawnpore, dated the 26th March 1919.

Mr. Jang Bahadur Lal, for the Petitioner.

Dr. K. N. Katju, for the Opposite Party.

JUDGMENT.—The plaintiff in this case is a dealer in chemicals and scientific instruments at Cawnpore. He went to Bombay and ordered goods to be sent to him by the defendant. He alleges that he made an advance of Rs. 300. The invoice of the goods and the railway receipt were to be sent by the defendant to the Punjab National Bank at Cawnpore and the plaintiff was to pay the Bank and take delivery. These facts are not disputed. The defendant sent three invoices to the Bank and duplicates to the plaintiff. The plaintiff took delivery, but he says that all the goods mentioned in the invoices were not in the parcel which contained the goods. The plaintiff thereupon asked the defendant for a refund of the price of such of the articles as he states had not been supplied. There was some correspondence between the parties. The defendant offered to make some payment, but as nothing was done the present suit was instituted for the price of the articles, which according to the plaintiff had not been supplied. The Court below has returned the plaint, holding that it had no jurisdiction to entertain it and that the plaintiff's cause of action accrued in Bombay and he should have brought the suit in the Court in Bombay. The reason which the learned Judge of the Small Cause Court has assigned for holding that opinion does not commend itself to me. It is true that the charges were to be paid by the plaintiff for the despatch of the goods to Cawnpore, but the goods were agreed to be delivered to him at Cawnpore upon payment of the price to the Punjab National Bank at Cawnpore. The plaintiff could not get delivery unless he made that payment. As payment had to be made at Cawnpore, delivery of the goods was to be obtained at Cawnpore, and as all the goods, according to the plaintiff, were not delivered at Cawnpore, his cause of action for the present suit accrued within the jurisdiction of the Cawnpore Court. The Court below should, in my opinion, have entertained the suit and tried it on the merits. I accordingly allow the application, set aside the order of the Court below and remand the case to that Court with directions to re-admit it on its list of pending cases and dispose of it according to law. Costs of this application will be costs in the cause.

Application allowed;
Case remanded.

NAGPUR JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 520 OF 1918.

January 27, 1920.

Present:—Sir Henry Drake Brookman, KT., J. C.

PYARELAL - DEFENDANT No. 5—APPELLANT

versus

Seth PANNALAL AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS AND DEFENDANTS Nos 1 TO 4 AND 6 TO 9—RESPONDENTS.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 11, Expl. IV, applicability of—Failure to raise a point in previous suit—Res judicata—Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), s. 63—Mortgage—Redemption—Accessions, payment for.

Explanation IV to section 11, Civil Procedure Code, applies even where the matter in dispute was not heard and finally decided in the former suit [p. 195, col .]

The determination of the question whether a person ought to have raised a point in a suit so that his failure to raise it should preclude him from raising it in a subsequent suit, must depend on the particular facts of the case. [p. 195, col. 2.]

Where one of several mortgagees acquires tenancies while in possession and claims the cost of such acquisitions upon redemption, it is unnecessary, under section 63 of the Transfer of Property Act, to invoke the doctrine of merger The sectiondoes not require the accessions to have been made by the mortgagee by availing himself of his position as such, nor can it be urged that the acquisitions might have been made even if the mortgage had not been taken. [p. 196, col. 2.]

Appeal against the decree of the Additional District Judge, in Civil Appeal No. 1 of 1918, decided on the 31st July 1918.

Mr. V. Bose, for the Appellant.

Mr. Ram Das, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—Pannalal and Jamnadas, the plaintiffs in the suit out of which this second appeal arises, are the sons of one Chhotmal, who had a full brother Deokishan and a near relative named Gauridas whose exact position in the family tree has not been ascertained. On the 19th September 1876 Chhatarsing and Sardar Singh mortgaged their inferior proprietary rights in Mauza Mathani to these three persons, the mortgagees to have possession for 5 years and to foreclose if the mortgage debt was not satisfied.

On the 16th March 1885 the same mortgagors gave a simple mortgage of the same property to Jagannath Prasad, his brother Prem Narain and one Nanhelal.

On the 12th September 1893 the plaintiffs with Deokishan and Gauridas obtained a conditional decree for foreclosure on the mortgage of 1876 in Suit No. 13 of 1893 to which the subsequent mortgagees were not parties. The decree was made absolute on the 9th May 1894 and the decree holders, after obtaining possession on the 5th December following, remained in possession of the village till the 20th December 1913 when they were ousted by Amarchand Kalar and his son Gaurilal. In 1910 Jagannath Prasad, Prem Narain and Nanhelal sued on their mortgage both to redeem the prior mortgage and to foreclose their own. They obtained a combined decree on the 28th November 1911 and in due course foreclosed after redeeming the earlier mortgage. While possession under the mortgage of 1876 continued, a number of occupancy and absolute holdings were acquired from the respective tenants by sale and one occupancy holding by foreclosure of a mortgage. Details of these acquisitions are furnished by a table in the twelfth paragraph of the first Court's judgment in the present case.

The object of the present litigation is to recover possession of the holdings so acquired, the plaintiffs claiming to be tenants of all the fields which had been obtained from the original tenants as aforesaid. The plaint was filed on the 12th August 1916. The defendants include Chironji Bai, the widow of Nanhelal, Jagannath Prasad, Prem Narain and Amarchand. Of the remaining defendants Balaram No. 6, Kanhaiyalal No. 8 and Kishandas No. 9 are in possession each of one or two of the fields in dispute, while Manoharlal No. 7 is said to have bought the village from Chironji Bai, Jagannath Prasad and Prem Narain.

Before passing to the pleadings it should be mentioned that the defendants Amarchand and Pyarelal have been joined by the first three defendants as partners in the village and in 1915 took proceedings against the plaintiffs under section 145, Criminal Procedure Code, claiming to be in possession of the plots now in suit. On the 3rd December 1915 they obtained from the Magistrate an order declaring them to be in possession and protecting them from interference except with the permission of a competent Civil Court.

The claim was opposed by all the defendants, the principal contestants being Amarchand and Pyarelal. The trial Judge dismissed the claim in its entirety, holding that the tenancies acquired during the possession of the mortgagees of 1876 merged in the inferior proprietary rights, the fields becoming khudkasht.

In their pleadings the plaintiffs contended that, if not entitled to possession, they should at any rate be awarded a sum of money covering the cost of acquisition, but the trial Judge (on the authority of an obiter dictum at the end of the judgment in Dwarka Pershad v. Tulsee Ram (1) refused this relief also.

The plaintiffs appealed to the District Court and the Additional District Judge ordered the defendants to deliver possession of the land, but directed that on the defendants' paying Rs. 3,766 to the plaintiffs by the 31st May 1919 the defendants should be re instated in their possession as inferior proprietors. In the event of default in payment the plaintiffs were to be the owners of the land by foreclosure.

The defendant Pyarelal has preferred this second appeal and on his behalf one point only has been urged, namely, that the plaintiffs' claim for the cost of their acquisitions should have been put forward in Suit No. 19 of 1910 and that by reason of Explanation IV to section 11, Civil Procedure Code, it is not now tenable. The plaintiffs have put in cross-objections, the principal object of which is to secure possession of all the fields as tenants.

The question of res judicata raised by the appellant needs decision only if it be taken that the plaintiffs are not tenants of the land in dispute. It is urged on his behalf that the claim for redemption of the prior mortgage advanced in Suit No. 19 of 1910 impliedy included a claim to redeem the land now in dispute as khudkasht. It is contended that section 63, Transfer of Property Act, under which the cost of acquiring accessions to the mortgaged property is recoverable by the plaintiffs, contemplates final settlement of all the equities and accounts arising out of the mortgage which is put in suit and that the plaintiffs, under the rule laid down by their Lordships of the Privy Council in Kameswar Pershad v. Ruttan Koer (2), both might and ought to have advanced their claim in the suit of 1910. It is said that no confusion could have been caused if this course had been taken and Guddappa v. Tirkappa (3) is relied on as supporting the view that if a possible matter of attack could give

(1) 10 C. P. L. R. 103.
(2) 20 C. 79 (P. C.); 19 I. A. 234; 6 Sar. P. C. J. 241; 10 Ind. Dec. (N. s.) 53.
(3) 25 B. 189; 2 Bom. L. R. 572.

rise to no confusion, the duty of advancing it is not to be avoided. The decision of the Privy Council in Raja Kishendatt Ram v. Raja Mumtaz Ali Khan (4) is referred to as indicating that in a suit for redemption all questions as to who will enjoy the benefit of accessions made by the mortgagee should be dealt with. Mahabir Pershad Singh v. Macnaghten (5), Vinayak Shivrao v. Dattatraya Gopal (6), Kashi v. Bajrang Prasad (7) and Satyabadi Behara v. Harabati (8) are also relied upon.

For the plaintiffs, who are the only respondents appearing in this Court, it is contended in the first place that Explanation IV to section 11, Civil Procedure Code, has no application where the matter in dispute in the latter suit was not heard and finally decided in the former suit, a view which finds support in Kailash Mondul v. Baroda Sundari Dasi (9) and Woomesh Chandra Maitra v. Barada Das Maitra (10). This contention I would at once dispose of adversely to the plaintiffs on the authority of Sri Gopal v. Pirthi Singh (11), Mahomed Ibrahim Hossein Khan v. Ambika Pershad Singh (12) and Bommidi Bayyan v. Surayanarayana (13), the second of which is a decision of a Privy Council. Moreover, the view in the Allahabad case was approved and adopted by the Privy Council on appeal in the same case: see Sri Gopal v. Pirthi Singh (11). In Guddappa v. Tirkappa (3) (above cited) at page 197 Jenkins, C. J., pointed out that in Kailash Mondul v. Barola Sundari Dasi (9) the Privy Council decision in Kameswar Pershad v. Ruttan Koer (2) was not referred to.

There is much more force in the plaintiffs' contention that the mortgage of 1876 (Exhibit P-19) does not specify any field as either sir or khudkasht, that the plaint in the suit of 1910 upon the mortgage of 1885 similarly omitted to claim redemption of any particular fields as khudkasht and that it could not reasonably be regarded as essential for the present plaintiffs to raise any question as to what individual fields might be foreclosed as khudkasht in the event of foreclosure, when the subsequent mortgagees themselves raised no specific issue covering the point.

It is plain that the question what fields would constitute khudkasht in the event of foreclosure might conceivably have been raised in the Suit of 1910, but according to the rule laid down by the Judicial Committee in Kameswar Pershad v. Ruttan Koer (2) it must depend on the particular facts of the case whether the plaintiffs ought to have raised that point. In Dinobundhoo Chowdhry v. Kristomonee Dosses (14) Garth C. J., remarked as follows:—

"The state of the law in India upon the subject of land tenures and inheritance is exceedingly difficult and complicated. It is quite impossible that the great mass of the people can properly comprehend its details and it must constantly happen that, until the differences between contending parties have been ventilated and discussed in a Court of law, the litigants themselves are entirely ignorant of what their legal rights and position may be. I do not believe that the Legislature of this country, nor the Lords of the Privy Council, in interpreting the language of the Legislature, ever intended to impose upon a people, who are for the most part uneducated and imperfectly advised, a more stringent rule upon this difficult subject than has obtained for centuries past in civilised Europe."

These remarks seem to me to have particular force in the present case. Exhibit P-17 is a copy of the jamabandi for 1911-12 and shows that the fields in dispute were still being shown as tenancy holdings. It appears from the Settlement Officer's order (Exhibit 4 D-9), dated the 25th April 1914, that the Deputy Commissioner as far back as 1902 and again in 1903

(4) 5 C. 198; 5 C. L. R. 213; 6 I. A. 145; 4 Sar. P. C. J. 17; 3 Suth. P. C. J. 637; Rafique and Jackson's P. C. No. 58; 3 Ind. Jur. 426; 3 Shome L. R. 1; 2 Ind. Dec. (N. s.) 737.

(5) 16 C. 632; 16 I. A. 107 (P. C.); 5 Sar. P. C. J. 345; 13 Ind. Jur. 133; 8 Ind. Dec. (N. s.) 451.

(6) 26 B. 661; 4 Bom. L. R. 492.

(7) 30 A. 36; 4 A. L. J. 763; A. W. N. (1907) 281.

(8) 34 C. 223; 5 C. L. J. 192.

(9) 24 C. 711; 1 C. W. N. 565; 12 Ind. Dec. (N. s.) 1143.

(10) 28 C. 17.

(11) 20 A. 110 at p. 113; A. W. N. (1897) 216; 9 Ind. Dec. (N s.) 431.

(12) 14 Ind. Cas. 496; 39 C. 527; 11 M. L. T. 265; (1912) M. W. N. 367; 9 A. L. J. 332; 14 Bom. L. R. 280; 16 C. W. N. 505; 15 C. L. J. 411; 22 M. L. J. 468; 39 I. A. 68 (P. C.).

(13) 17 Ind. Cas. 445; 37 M. 70; 12 M. L. T. 500; 23 M. L. J. 543; (1913) M. W. N. 1.

(14) 2 C. 152 at p. 171; 1 Ind. Dec. (N.s.) 393.

declared that the holdings till then acquired must be regarded as having merged in the proprietary rights of the malguzars: but from Exhibit 4 D 17, an order by the Commissioner of the Nerbudda Division disposing of an appeal preferred by the present plaintiffs, it is also clear that conflicting orders on the subject had been passed from time to time and that even as late as 1913 the parties were still disputing as to their real positions The plaint in the suit of 1910 is Exhibit P-10 and in it the foreclosure of "the mortgaged property" is asked for without any indication of the dispute which had been going on for years, while the claim for redemption was expressly described as relating to the mortgage deed of 1876 in respect of Mauza Mathani together with all rights mentioned in that deed. The plaintiffs' mortgage (Exhibit P-19) makes no mention of khudkasht as such and altogether the circumstances seem to me to have justified the plaintiffs in considering it unnecessary to claim the cost of acquisition when the subsequent mortgagees had not made it clear that they desired to take possession of the lands now in dispute. It might, in my opinion, be argued with more reason that the then plaintiffs should have indicated the lands of which they expected to receive possession and that their failure to do so led the present plaintiffs to assume that their possession would not be interfered with. It is not suggested that the subsequent mortgagees did not know of the dispute, nor does it appear from the record that the present plaintiffs were deprived of possession by way of executing the final decree for foreclosure obtained by he mortgagees of 1885.

Looking to all the circumstances I do not see my way to holding that the present plaintiffs ought to have raised any question as to their rights in respect of the holdings acquired by any of the mortgagees of 1876 while in possession under the mortgage of that year. Both parties appear to have been responsible for the failure to make the suit of 1910 all inclusive and the rule of res judicata should not be applied against the then defendants. The appeal accordingly fails and is dismissed with costs.

The plaintiffs have preferred objections to the lower Appellate Court's decree, the principal object of which has already been stated. Alternatively it is contended that they should be allowed a larger sum than Rs. 3,776 as the cost of acquisition, the actual cost having been Rs. 4,116-12-6.

The main objection is not pressed in respect of the four holdings which figure in the first three and the fifth entries in the trial Judge's table aforesaid. These holdings were acquired by all the mortgagees of 1876 together and it is conceded by the plaintiffs' Counsel that they must be taken to have been purchased for the benefit of the mortgagor so as to enhance the value of the mortgaged property. The tenancies did not determine by virtue of clause (d), section 111, Transfer of Property Act, inasmuch as they existed for agricultural purposes and therefore are excluded by section 117 of the Act from the operation of section 111. But the Privy Council decision in Raja Kishandatt Ram v. Raja Mumtaz Ali Khan (4), which was reached before the Transfer of Property Act came into force, shows that even then the principle of merger might be applied as being in accordance with the principles of equity, justice and good conscience. Under section 63 of the Transfer of Property Act it is unnecessary to invoke the doctrine of merger and I do not think that any distinction can be drawn between a single mortgagee and the entire body of mortgagees, where there is more than one and all act together. The section does not require the accessions to have been made by the mortgagee by availing himself of his position as such: it would, therefore, be idle for the plaintiffs to urge that the acquisitions might have been made even if the mortgage had not been taken

With regard to the other acquisitions which were made otherwise than by the entire body of mortgagees and in all cases without the ostensible participation of Deokishan, it is urged that the lower Appellate Court was wrong in treating the act of more than one mortgagee as tantamount to the act of the entire body of mortgagees. Reliance is placed on the principle now well-settled in this Court that one member of a joint family may become a tenant without the other members being his co tenants: see Anant Ram v. Takit Singh (15), Gulabrao v. Sitaram (16) and Deochand v. Moti (17).

For the defendant-appellant it is urged that the position of Chhotmal and his descendants as mortgagees in possession put them in a specially favourable position for obtaining land from tenants, that in the plaint and the oral pleading of the plaintiffs' Pleader recorded on the 13th February 1917 their case was rested on acquisition by Chhotmal alone and that both the Courts below have held the mortgagees to have constituted a joint family in 1876, since when no partition is shown to have been effected.

Chhotmal died on the 22nd March 1896 and five of the nine acquisitions now under consideration were made after that date. The first Court held that the acquisitions are not shown to have been effected out of the separate funds of Chhotmal or his descendants and the correctness of this conclusion is not questioned here. Against this must be placed the fact that in 1894 or 1895 Chhotmal alone obtained a patta from the Settlement Officer in respect of all the holdings which had been acquired up to that time. An explanation of this was offered in the concluding sentence of the third paragraph of the present appellant's written statement, and in this connection it is necessary to mention that from 1891 to the end of 1894 the mortgagees of 1876 were out of possession, having been wrongfully ejected by the mortgagors. The lower Appellate Court's view is that, inasmuch as clause (e), section 76, Transfer of Property Act, prohibits a mortgagee in possession from committing any act which is destructive or permanently injurious to the property, it follows that he must hold for the mortgagor any purchase of a tenant's right he may make, whether he is sole mortgagee or one of a body of mortgagees. The learned Judge expressly laid down that the mortgagee in possession is a trustee for the mortgagor of any accession, but for this position there appears to be no authority and the most that can be said appears to be that the position of such a mortgagee is in some ways analogous to that of a trustee. I do not think that one of several mortgagees in possession can reasonably be regarded as holding a worse position than one of several co-sharers in an unincumbered village. In Jairam v. Balaji (18) it was held by Ismay, J. C., that a co-sharer who purchases the holding of an absolute occupancy tenant, becomes himself an absolute occupancy tenant. There is no evidence or suggestion in the present case that the mortgagors suffered any loss by the substitution of Chhotmal for the original tenants and it is important to remember that the holdings now in view were all acquired after the mortgage of 1876 was foreclosed and before the subsequent mortgagees obtained any decree. That Chhotmal and his descendants have consistently treated the so called accessions as tenancies acquired for their exclusive benefit appears not only from the settlement patta (Exhibit P-3) but also from their persistent contention before the Revenue Authorities that the lands should not be treated as khudkasht. Until the mortgage of 1876 was redeemed by Jagannath Prasad, Prem Narain and Nanhelal, there could be no question of their declining to accept Chhotmal or his descendants as tenants of the entire proprietary body. I find from the record of Suit No. 19 of 1910 that the mortgagees of 1855 could have sued for foreclosure on that mortgage in May 1893. They, however, delayed their suit for 17 years and so far as the acquisitions made in 1878 (Exhibit P-26), 1883 (Exhibits P-28) and (P-40), 1889 (Exhibit P 41), 1897 (Exhibit P-29) and 1902 (Exhibit P-39) are concerned, the present proprietors have no sort of equitable claim to interfere with the plaintiffs' occupation as tenants. By their co owners for the time being the plaintiffs were admittedly recognised as tenants and they remained in possession as tenants for over 12 years. I hold, therefore, that they are entitled to retain possession of these lands as tenants representing the original tenants from whom they were acquired.

With regard to the acquisitions of 1908 (Exhibit P 31), 1909 (Exhibit P-30) and

(15) 4 C. P. L. R. 57.
(16) 8 C. P. L. R. 11.
(17) 1 N. L. R. 178.

(18) 14 C. P. L. R. 9.

1911 (Exhibit P-7), the question is whether the plaintiffs' position is weaker by reason of their possession having extended over less than 12 years. This I would answer in the negative. In any other view it would seem essential to hold that the power of the other co-owners to accept the plaintiffs as tenants of the entire proprietary body depended on their obtaining the approval of the mortgagees of 1885, although the latter did not redeem the property from the mortgage of 1876 until 1912 or later. As already remarked, it is not shown that by substitution of the plaintiffs for the original tenants the interests of the proprietary body have been in any way injured.

It is unnecessary now to consider whether the plaintiffs can properly be allowed the sum of Rs. 4,116-12-6 for their acquisitions as against Rs. 3,776 allowed by the lower Appellate Court. In respect of the lands acquired by Exhibits P-23, P-24, P-25 and P-27 the plaintiffs will be paid Rs. 1,200 only, their claim for possession of the connected lands being dismissed. For the other holdings acquired the plaintiffs will be given a decree for possession as tenants. The lower Appellate Court's decree is set aside and a fresh decree in accordance with the foregoing conclusions will be drawn up. Costs of the plaintiffs' objections will follow this result. The defendants will bear their own costs in both the Courts below. The plaintiffs' costs in the lower Courts will be paid by all the defendants.

Appeal dismissed.
Decree varied.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.
SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 2306 OF 1919.
April 10, 1920.
Present:—Mr. Justice LeRossignol.
Musammat ASA DEBI—DEFENDANT—APPELLANT
versus
BASHI RAM—PLAINTIFF AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Hindu Law—Widow—Maintenance—Right of residence—Widow, whether bound to liquidate husband's debts.

Ordinarily, a Hindu widow has a right of residence in the family house and she may not be ousted except to satisfy claims which are paramount to her right of residence, which is a part of her right to maintenance. [p. 199, col. 1.]

The widow of an undivided member of a Hindu family can set up her right of residence against a purchaser for value, unless the alienation was for a family purpose, but the widow of a divided member is bound to liquidate any debt which was binding on her husband unless it was incurred in fraud of her right. [p. 199, col. 1.]

Where, however, the husband loses the property in his lifetime, there is nothing to which his widow can succeed as his heir or from which she can derive maintenance. [p. 199, cols. 1 & 2.]

Second appeal from the decree of the District Judge, Lahore, dated the 25th August 1919, reversing that of the Subordinate Judge, 1st Class, Lahore, dated the 31st March 1919, dismissing the claim with costs.

Mr. Manohar Lall, for the Appellant.

Dr. Gokal Chand Narang, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—The facts of this case are that the plaintiff in execution of his own decree against one Ratan Chand purchased Ratan Chand's half share in a house and now sues for possession by partition of that share.

Ratan Chand has died and the claim to partition is accepted by the other co-sharer, the brother of the late Ratan Chand, but is contested by Ratan Chand's widow, who sets her right of residence against plaintiff's claim.

The trial Court dismissed the suit on the ground that Ratan Chand was a wastrel and the moneys advanced to him by the plaintiff were not for necessity or family purposes and consequently the debt incurred by him was not binding on his widow.

The learned District Judge decreed for the plaintiff on appeal, on the ground that though Ratan Chand was addicted to drink, there was no evidence that the particular debts with which the case is concerned were tainted with immorality.

This second appeal was then preferred and it is urged that the onus of proving that the debts were binding on the widow lay upon the plaintiff, who had not proved their nature.

For the respondent it was contended that the right of residence enjoyed by a widow was a right which was liable to postponement to the satisfaction of any of her husband's debts, moral or immoral, and that in this case her husband had lost this property, i.e., his half share in the house, in his lifetime and nothing was left to which his widow could succeed as his heir, or from which she could derive maintenance. A Hindu widow under ordinary circumstances has a right of residence in the family house: Hindu Law, by Mulla, page 437; Trevelyan's Hindu Law, page 76, and she may not be ousted except to satisfy claims which are paramount to her right of residence, which is a part of her right to maintenance.

I have been referred to a host of authorities; inter alia to:—

Mulla's Hindu Law, paragraph 468, Ramanadan v. Rangammal (1), Venkatammal v. Andyappa Chetti (2), Jaswanti v. Tej Narain (3), Talewand Singh v. Rukmina (4), Jayanti Subbiah v. Alamelu Mangamma (5), Gauri v. Chandramani (6), Valu v. Ganga (7), Rajah Pirthi Singh v. Rani Raj Kower (8) and Manilal v. Bai Tara (9).

From a perusal of these authorities it appears that a distinction must be drawn between the case of the widow of a divided member of a Hindu family where the widow is her deceased husband's heir, and the widow of an undivided member who on her husband's death does not succeed him but retains a lien for maintenance on the property of the undivided family. In the latter case she can set up his right of residence against a purchaser for value, unless the alienation was for a family purpose. In the former, as she is not a creditor of her husband's estate but represents him, she is bound to liquidate any debt which was binding on her husband [Cf. Jayanti Subbiah v. Alamelu Mangamma (5) and Mulla's Hindu Law, paragraph 468] unless incurred in fraud of her right.

In this case the debt was due by the husband and the property was lost by him in his lifetime. Had it been necessary to decide whether the debt was for a necessary purpose, I should have held that that had not been established.

For the above reasons, I dismiss the appeal with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

(1) 12 M. 260 (F. B.); 4 Ind. Dec. (N. s.) 531.
(2) 6 M. 130; 7 Ind. Jur. 127; 2 Ind. Dec. (N. s.) 369.
(3) 41 Ind. Cas. 192; 120 P. W. R. 1917; 10 P. R. 1918.
(4) 3 A. 353; 5 Ind. Jur. 601; 2 Ind. Dec. (N. s.) 166.
(5) 27 M. 45.
(6) 1 A. 262; 1 Ind. Dec. (N. s) 177.
(7) 7 B 84; 7 Ind. Jur. 251; 4 Ind. Dec. (N. s.) 56.
(8) 12 B. L. R. 238; 20 W. R. 21; 3 Sar. P. C. J. 259.
(9) 17 B. 398; 9 Ind. Dec. (N. s.) 259.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

CIVIL APPEAL No. 173 OF 1918.

August 28, 1919.

Present:—Mr. Justice Sadasiva Aiyar and Mr. Justice Burn.

VENGANAT RAJA VASUDEVA RAVI VARMA RAJA AVERGAL DEFENDANT No. 1—APPELLANT
versus
NAITHILATH MATATHIL RAMAN KUTTY MENON AND OTHERS—
PLAINTIFF AND—DEFENDANTS 2 TO 7—
RESPONDENTS.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 11—Res judicata—Appeal, disposal of, on points independent of those decided by trial Court, effect of—Malabar Law—Tarwad—Agreement by karnavan for benefit of tarwad—Junior member not consulted—Agreement, whether valid.

Where an agreement is entered into by the karnavan of a Malabar tarwad for the benefit of the tarwad, the fact that a junior member was not consulted about it is not a legal ground for invalidating the agreement. [p. 201, cols. 1 & 2.]

When an appeal is filed and admitted, the matters decided by the lower Court cease to be res judicata and are left open between the parties for argument before, and decision by, the Appellate Court. If the Appellate Court disposes of the appeal on points independently of those on which the lower Court rested its decision or in terms of a compromise between the parties, the findings of the lower Court do not operate as res judicata in regard to the matters dealt with by it. [p. 203, col. 1.]

Appeal against the decree of the Court of the Subordinate Judge, South Malabar at Palghat, in Original Suit No. 39 of 1916.

Messrs. C. V. Ananthakrishna Aiyar and P. S. Kalyanasundara Aiyar, for the Appellants.

Messrs. C. Madhavan Nair, P. Appa Nair and S. Eacharan Kutti Nair, for the Respondents.

VENGANATH RAJA VASUDEVA v. NAITHILATH MATATHIL.

This appeal coming on for hearing on the 18th, 19th and 21st of August respectively and having stood over for consideration till this day, the Court delivered the following

JUDGMENT.

SADASIVA AIYAR, J.—The 1st defendant, the Valia Nambidi of Kollengode, is the appellant before us.

The suit was brought by the last surviving member of a Nair Tarwad for an injunction against the 1st defendant's (Nambidi's) exercising the irrigation rights secured to him under the registered compromise deed, Exhibit XIV (dated 6th July 1904), signed by the plaintiff's deceased elder brother (the then Karnavan of the plaintiff's Tarwad), by the 1st defendant and by the members of the 2nd defendant's family (who might be called shortly 'the Pandarams") and intended to define clearly and "for ever" by agreement the respective rights of the three families to the use of the water flowing in certain channels taking off from the Meenkara river by the help of an anicut called the Kotta Katavu anicut constructed by the plaintiff's Tarwad.

The disputed agreement Exhibit XIV, dated 6th July 1904, between the above interested three families was entered into in supersession of the prior agreement Exhibit A, dated 9th March 1897, executed between two only of the three parties, namely, the plaintiff's Tarwad and the Pandarams.

The plaintiff's case is (see paragaphs 5, 8, and 9 of the plaint):—

(a) that "the 1st defendant cunningly gained over late Gopal Menon" (the plaintiff's elder brother and then Tarwad Karnavan) "and through him" the Pandarams, that "the 1st defendant made Gopal Menon to believe that he" (the 1st defendant) "would cause one of his younger brothers to marry one of his (Gopal Menon's) daughters and (thus) got the Karar." (Exhibit XIV) "executed" without necessity "fraudulently" and that the 1st defendant's younger brother afterwards married a daughter of Gopal Menon;

(b) that the said Karar was highly detrimental to the plaintiff and to his Pallam Nilam and Netuvanchira Nilam "and great trouble, loss and ruin are likely to happen to many of the holders of the anicut lower down thereby," and it is opposed "to the stipulations made in respect of the anicut and channel by the Government and the plaintiff's Karnavan Gopala Menon."

The Pandaram defendants (Nos. 2 to 7) remained ex parte The principal Pandaram defendant (2nd defendant) gave evidence in support of the Karar Exhibit XIV, which is attacked by the plaintiff. The contest is thus between the plaintiff and the 1st defendant whose familes are (according to paragraph 11 of the plaint) "ancient enemies." One further allegation of the plaintiff is that he knew of his Karnavan's fraudulent and collusive action only after January 1914, when the 1st defendant for the first time (according to the plaintiff) attempted to enforce his rights of irrigation under Exhibit XIV though the Karar had been executed in July 1904.

The issues raised by the lower Court on the 1st defendant's contentions are (among others) the following:

"2. Is the Karar referred to in paragraphs 7 and - of the plaint invalid as alleged by the plaintiff?"

"7. Whether the dispute as to the cha and anicut referred to in the plaint has not been finally settled by the decision in Original Suit No. 30 of 1900 and Appeal Suit No. 59 of 1903 (High Court) and is not the 1st defendant's claim barred by res judicata by reason of the said decision?"

I propose to deal only with these two issues because if they are decided against the plaintiff his suit ails. I think that the lower Court would have done well to have raised (having reference to the allegations of the parties) three clear and distinct issues on the points involved in the second issue. I shall accordingly expand the issue thus:

(2*a*). Did the 1st defendant, by promising to make one of his brothers marry Gopal Menon's daughter, induce him to enter into the agreement Exhibit XIV and did Gopal Menon enter into the agreement with that ulterior object and not in the interest of the Tarwad as a Karnavan should have done?

(2*b*). Is that agreement deterimental to the interest of the plaintiff's Tarwad by reason of its causing injury to the irrigation of the plaintiff's Tarwad lands, whereas the old agreement Exhibit A (between the plaintiff's Tarwad and the Pandarams), which it superseded, did not cause any such detriment?

(2c). Is that agreement detrimental to the plaintiff's Tarwad as interfering with his obligations to the Government and to the owners of lands lower down the anicut and is it, therefore, not binding on the plaintiff's Tarwad?

The learned Subordinate Judge dealt with the 2nd and 3rd issues together in paragraphs 6 and 7 of his judgment. So far as the 2nd issue is concerned, he does not come to close quarters with the grounds put forward by the plaintiff as his grounds of attack against the Karar. The Subordinate Judge's conclusions on the facts are:

(a) Exhibit XIV was entered into by Gopal Menon (the plaintiff's Karnavan) without the knowledge and consent of the plaintiff (a junior member then);

(b) The Karar Exhibit XIV "is prima facie injurious to the interests of plaintiff's Tarwad as it brings in a new joint owner or beneficiary of the anicut and channel" (that is a new beneficiary in addition to the plaintiff's Tarwad and the Pandarams who were the beneficiaries under Exhibit A of 1897).

I feel constrained to remark that this is an unsatisfactory way of disposing of the issue, which is whether the Karar Exhibit XIV is invalid "as alleged by the plaintiff," that is, on the ground that it would cause "great hardship" by cutting off irrigation water which the plaintiff's Tarwad lands were getting under the old Karar and that it would put to "trouble and loss the plaintiff, the ancient enemy" of the 1st defendant's family, and that "incalculable and inestimable loss and trouble and mental pain are likely to befall the plaintiff every year" (see plaint paragraphs 11 and 12) and on the ground of fraud, collusion and danger of subjection to legal liability to Government and to the lower riparian owners. The casual observation of the Subordinate Judge that the Karar is "prima facie detrimental" because it introduces a third beneficiary, is not convincing as unless the introduction of the 3rd beneficiary lessened the benefit till then enjoyed by the plaintiff's Tarwad under the old agreement, the mere introduction of a new beneficiary cannot be detrimental. The plaintiff not having been consulted is not a legal ground invalidating the agreement to which his Karnavan was a party.

The Subordinate Judge should have considered the respective terms of Exhibit A and Exhibit XIV as they affected the plaintiff's Tarwad, should have considered the evidence let in on both sides about the alleged fraud and collusion, and then decided the three questions (a), (b) and (c) and finally arrived at his conclusions on the 2nd issue.

However, as this is a regular appeal in which we are entitled ourselves to arrive at the necessary finding on the facts, I shall proceed to the consideration of the evidence.

Before dealing with the oral evidence, a few facts as to the litigation in the course of which the compromise Exhibit XV was entered into might be mentioned. That litigation began by the suit (Original Suit No. 454 of 1902) brought by the Nambidi as plaintiff against Gopala Menon (the Karnavan of the present plaintiff's Tarwad) as the 1st defendant and against the Secretary of State for India as the 2nd defendant for two principal reliefs, "to direct the 1st and 2nd defendants to surrender the road-site described in the plaint schedule to the plaintiff, after causing the channel which the 1st defendant newly opened through it to be filled up and after converting the said plot into road-site and if the channel is not filled up, to direct the 1st defendant to pay to the plaintiff Rs 50 for the expenses that would be required for the filling up of the said channel; (b) to restrain the defendants by a perpetual injunction from opening a channel along the said road-site and from carrying water through it, in case it is found that the said road-site has not been given up by the Government." The channel referred to above is the channel which was irrigating about 2,000 puras of Gopal Menon's (and the present plaintiff's) Tarwad lands, D in the Commissioner's plan Exhibit XII (I refer to that plan as proved to be correct in preference to the plaintiff's plan B). It is clear that if the Nambidi (the present 1st defendant) had succeeded in that suit, brought by him, the plaintiff's Tarwad "would have been injured considerably" as admitted in plaintiff's own evidence in this suit (see page 159 of the printed records, lines 42 to 44).

I shall further set out (a) the rights of irrigation of the plaintiff's Tarwad and the Pandarams' family under Exhibit A and (b) of the plaintiff's Tarwad, the Nambidi's Kovilagam and the Pandaram's family under Exhibit XIV. Under Exhibit A of 1897, (1) plaintiff's Tarwad got the right to take water during 111 days out of the 9 months (or 273 days) in the year during which water was available (the remaining 3 months from the middle of March to the middle of June or about 92 days in the year being considered useless for irrigation purposes) ; (2) the Pandarams' family had the Murai during the remaining 162 days. (I have taken 273 days as equivalent to the 9 months, though the parties might have roughly considered that each month contained 30 days).

Under Exhibit XIV of 1904 : 1. Plaintiff's Tarwad got about 165 days instead of the 111 days in Exhibit A (out of the 273 days) ; 2. The Pandarams' family got 54 days' Murai (they having had 162 days' Murai under Exhibit A) ; and 3. The Nambidi's Tarwad got the remaining 54 days' Murai newly.

It will thus be seen that the plaintiff's Tarwad got under Exhibit XIV irrigation facilities for 54 days (165 minus 111) more than they had under Exhibit A and as it is conceded that the particular days in the Malabar months during which irrigation is allowed do not matter, Exhibit XIV is much more advantageous to the plaintiff's Tarwad than Exhibit A, it is the Pandarams that lost under Exhibit XIV, but the Pandarams not only do not complain but (as I said before) 2nd defendant gave evidence in this suit as defendants' 3rd witness in favour of the Nambidi. How then could Exhibit XIV, which was executed in compromise of the suit of 1902, be detrimental to the interests of the plaintiff's Tarwad ?

Only two witnesses were examined for the plaintiff. The first witness is the interested plaintiff himself and he is wholly unable to state how an agreement which is more favourable to his Tarwad than the former agreement, is really detrimental to his Tarwad. The gist of his evidence is that because it favours his enemy, the Nambidi, it is detrimental to himself. The 2nd witness is a dependant and creature of the plaintiff and he gives no evidence about the alleged injury caused by the new Karar. He says : "I depend upon the plaintiff for my subsistence." Even his Kudiyiruppu belongs to the plaintiff. As to the alleged promise made by the 1st defendant to Gopal Menon to make one of the 1st defendant's brothers to marry Gopal Menon's daughter, the only evidence is that of the plaintiff. He first said that the 1st defendant's brother, Madhava Rajah, was to marry Gopala Menon's daughter, but he was obliged to admit that Madhava Rajah's marriage had taken place in 1901 about 3 years before the date of this Karar. No doubt, one of the defendant's brothers married Gopal Menon's daughter after date of Exhibit XIV, but this was five years after the date of Exhibit XIV. There is absolutely nothing to connect that marriage with Exhibit XIV, except the plaintiff's evidence which is practically vague heresay evidence.

As regards the contention that the agreement interferes with the plaintiff's obligations to Government and to the owners of lands lower down the aniout, this has been sufficiently dealt with in the judgment of my learned brother with which I entirely agree.

The Subordinate Judge has found the agreement to be invalid on the ground that the 1st defendant is legally precluded from relying on the Karar by reason of the res judicata created by the decision of the High Court in Appeal Suit No. 59 of 1903 (7th issue).

The facts connected with that litigation have been set out in the judgment of my learned brother. The Court of first instance dismissed the Nambidi's Suit No. 50 of 1900 on three grounds: that the site of the channel then in dispute belonged to the Collector, and that the channel belonged to Gopal Menon's Tarwad; (2) that the Nambidi's suit for injunction was bad for non-joinder of the Secretary of State as a party ; and (3) that the relief of injunction is a matter of discretion in the Court and in the circumstances of that case, the injunction relief could not be granted, especially as in the absence of the Government as a party, such relief would be futile. When the case went up on appeal to the High Court, this Court was not called upon to decide it either on the questions of law or on the questions of fact argued in the first Court. None of the three grounds on which the lower Court decided that the suit, so far as it related to the injunction relief in respect of the anicut and chal site, should be dismissed was considered by this Court and no opinion was arrived at on the question whether the lower Court's view on any of the three points was right or wrong. (That suit itself was substantially and mainly for the redemption of some mortgaged lands on payment of the mortgage amount and of the value of the improvements) It is an elementary principle of law that when an appeal is filed and admitted, the matters decided by the lower Court cease to be res judicata and are left open between the parties for argument before, and decision by, the Appellate Court. No questions were decided in the Appellate Court in the suit of 1900 owing to the parties agreeing that that portion of the decree of the lower Court which refused the injunction reliefs relating to the chal and anicut site, should stand, the remaining portion of the decree relating to redemption being modified in favour of the Nambidi (appellant) on the question of the value of improvements. Under those circumstances, it is futile to contend that any finding as to the rights of the Nambidi and Gopal Menon in the sites of or the waters tapped by the chal and the anicut was arrived at by the High Court on appeal. The argument based on the imaginary existence of that implied finding by the High Court, a finding which, if it existed, is, no doubt, later in date than Exhibit XIV of 1904 (the High Court compromise decree being dated January 1905), the argument being that that implied finding declared rights which superseded the rights created by Exhibit XIV, therefore, fails. No finding negativing the rights as declared and agreed upon in Exhibit XIV was necessarily implied in the High Court's decree, as no such finding was necessary for the disallowance by consent of parties or even otherwise of the plaintiff's prayer for injunction in that suit in respect of the anicut and chal site.

In the result, the appeal must be allowed with the appellant's costs in both the Courts payable by the plaintiff.

BURN, J.—The plaintiff, who is the last surviving member of a Malabar Tarwad, brought this suit for an injunction and to restrain the 1st defendant and his agents from interfering in any way with an anicut and channel which the plaintiff claims to be his property. Defendants Nos. 2 to 7, the representatives of the parties who will hereafter be referred to as the Pandarams, are persons who admittedly have some rights in the channel and who, according to the finding of the lower Court, are joint owners of the anicut and channel along with the plaintiff. The lower Court has granted the injunction prayed for and the 1st defendant appeals.

The anicut in question is known as Kottakatavu and is thrown across the Meenkara river. It is a temporary construction of branches and mud which is renewed from year to year with the permission of the Collector (vide Exhibits XVII, Q, R). The anicut appears to have been constructed for the first time in 1884 for the irrigation of some land known as Kolampara Challa, which is the Jenm property of the 1st defendant and which was held by the plaintiff's Tarwad under an agreement of 1841 for a term of years and subject to certain conditions as to reclamation. It was so used until 1896, when it became unnecessary for the irrigation of this particular land because other sources of supply were available. The plaintiff's family have acquired a considerable extent of land at some distance to the west of the Kolampara Challa. This is referred to in the evidence as the Pallam land. It appears to have been irrigated from the Meenkara river prior to 1896, but disputes arose as to the course of the channel and this led to the supply being stopped. In 1896 an application was made to the Collector for permission to construct a channel along an abandoned road to reach the Pallam land. The 1st defendant raised objections to the request being granted (vide Exhibits XXXI and XXXII), but eventually sanction was accorded by the Collector in 1897 (vide Exhibit Q). At about the time when permission for the construction of the new channel had been obtained, an agreement was entered into between the plaintiff's Tarwad and the Pandarams (Exhibit A) for distribution of the channel water between them. The water is available for nine months in the year and under the agreement Exhibit A, dated the 9th of March 1897, the plaintiff's Tarwad was to take water between certain dates in each month and the Pandarams were to have the right to it for the remaining days of each of the months. The 1st defendant was no party to this agreement. On the 14th of December 1900 the 1st defendant instituted Original Suit No. 50 in the Court of the Subordinate Judge of Palghat. He sought to recover possession of the lands held by the plaintiff's Tarwad under the agreement of 1849, subject to the conditions as to compensation which had been provided therein. He also alleged that the 1st to 4th defendants in that suit, now represented by the plaintiff, had been irrigating the lands in suit by means of the Kottakatavu anicut and the channel coming therefrom. He contended that these had been constructed by the defendants in their capacity as persons in possession of the lands which he sought to redeem, that they should be considered as adjuncts to these lands and should be surrendered to him along with the lands. The plaint further sets out that the defendants had constructed a branch channel so as to interfere with the supply of water to the lands then in suit. It was asserted that the defendants had no right so to divert water to other lands of theirs and a perpetual injunction was asked for restraining them from doing so. The 1st defendant in that suit, who was the Karanavan of that Tarwad, in his written statement set out the history of the anicut and channel and stated that these had been constructed with the permission of Government and that the channel leading to the Pallam land had been dug on land which was the property of Government. The Subordinate Judge rejected the plaintiff's prayer in so far as it asked for an injunction to prevent the taking of water to the Pallam land. In his judgment the Subordinate Judge finds that the Government had not granted permission for the construction of the anicut in 1884 to the applicants merely on the ground that they were the tenants of the plaintiff and that in any event the permission granted in 1896 and subsequent years had no necessary connection with the grant in 1884. He also found that it was not established that the channel was necessary for the cultivation of the Kolampara Challa. As regards the ownership of the channel he found that it was exclusively the property of the 1st defendant. This finding is based on the authority given by the Collector to the 1st defendant to excavate the channel. But the Subordinate Judge pointed out that there might be a question with regard to the ownership as between the Government and the 1st defendant. The Government was no party to the suit, and in several places in the judgment it is stated that the reliefs asked for in respect of the anicut and channel cannot be granted because the Secretary of State is no party to the suit. An appeal was preferred by the plaintiff in Original Suit No. 50 of 1900 and he sought to have the decree of the Court of first instance reversed with regard to the refusal of the injunction. The appeal was eventually disposed of in terms of a compromise. A modification was made in the original decree with regard to the amount of compensation payable by the plaintiff and in other respects the decree of the Subordinate Judge was confirmed. The order of the High Court was passed on the 5th of January 1907. The original decree of the Palghat Court was passed on the 1st of December 1902. 18 days later the present 1st defendant instituted another suit, Original Suit No. 454 of 1902 on the file of the District Munsif of Alatur, and to this he made Gopala Menon the Karnavan of the plaintiff's Tarwad and the Secretary of State parties. The plaint sets out the facts regarding the permission granted by the Collector in 1896 for the construction of a channel and alleges that the Government had no right whatever to grant such permission, as the site of the channel is the property of the plaintiff. It was stated that the site formed part of an abandoned road and was the plaintiff's property and even if the road was held out not to have been abandoned, yet the public rights over the surface were only of a limited character and the Government had no power to sanction the excavation of the channel. The prayers were that the defendants be directed to surrender the road-site to the plaintiff and should be restrained by a perpetual injunction from opening a channel in that place. Both the defendants filed written statements contesting the plaintiff's claim. This suit was compromised on the 6th of July 1904 and the agreement is Exhibit XIV. The Secretary of State was no party to the compromise and on the other hand the Pandarams, who were no parties to the suit, joined in the agreement which was entered into between the plaintiff and the 1st defendant. Here matters rested until the institution of the present suit on the 3rd of May 1916.

The plaintiff alleges that until the death of his Karnavan Gopal Menon in May 1913 he had no acquaintance with the management of the Tarwad affairs and had no occasion to inspect the suit properties. It is alleged that in 1914, 1915 and 1916 the 1st defendant's agents attempted to divert water from the channel, that this action on their part put the plaintiff upon enquiry and that he then discovered that the 1st defendant was asserting claims on the strength of the compromise embodied in Exhibit XIV, a document of the existence of which the plaintiff professes to have been completely ignorant. Paragraph 8 of the plaint alleges that the compromise was brought about by collusion between the 1st defendant and the late Karnavan Gopal Menon. Gopal Menon is said to have been induced to enter into this argument by a promise of a marriage between one of his daughters and one of the 1st defendant's brothers. It is also suggested that the Pandarams had been gained over by some device and there is also a general allegation of fraud. The plaintiff also asserts that the terms of the Karar are very detrimental to his interests. In the written statement of the 1st defendant the plaint allegations of fraud and collusion are denied. The agreement Exhibit XIV is stated to have been a bona fide settlement of a dispute made with the knowledge of the plaintiff. The alleged trespass is also denied, and it is stated that ever since the date of the compromise water has been regularly taken from the channel by the 1st defendant's men in accordance with the terms of the compromise.

The main question in dispute is whether the plaintiff is bound by this Karar of the 6th of July 1904. The Subordinate Judge has found that it is not valid and binding on the plaintiff. He points out that there is some evidence that Gopal Menon did not get on very well with some of the members of the Tarwad and that though in other suits instituted by the 1st defendant all the members of the Tarwad had been impleaded, yet in Original Suit No. 454 of 1902 Gopal Menon alone was made a party. The Subordinate Judge further states that the Karar is prima facie injurious to the interests of the Tarwad as it brings in a new joint owner or beneficiary to the anicut and channel. There is no specific finding in respect of the allegations of fraud and collusion and I am unable to find any evidence in support of them. It is true that a daughter of Gopal Menon was married to the younger brother of the 1st defendant in 1909, but this was five years after the execution of Exhibit XIV, and beyond the bare assertion on the part of the plaintiff there is no evidence of any promises having been held out at the time of the Karar. I am not prepared to accept the uncorroborated statement of the plaintiff as establishing that anything of the kind took place. Beyond the suggestion as to the promise of marriage, neither the plaint nor the evidence contains any specific allegation as to how the improper influence was exercised. It is true that the plaintiff was not impleaded in Original Suit No. 454 of 1902, while he had been included as a party in Original Suit No 50 of 1900. It is also true that he has not signed the compromise. His inclusion as a party was not, however, necessary and I do not think that any inference can be drawn from this omission or from the failure to obtain his signature in Exhibit X.V. As to the injurious nature of the agreement the Subordinate Judge bases his finding on the ground that rights have been carved out for a third party from those which formerly belonged to the plaintiff's Tarwad and the Pandarams alone Under the first agreement Exhibit A of 1897 the plaintiff was permitted to take water on 111 days and the Pandarams for 159 thus making up the full period of nine months. Under Exhibit

XIV 54 days are alloted to the 1st defendant, 54 to the Pandarams and 162 to the plaintiff's Tarwad. The Pandarams are prima facie the sufferers but they do not contest the suit. The plaintiff's Tarwad gets considerbaly more than it had before. The plaintiff himself is unable to give any clear explanation of how he can be damnified by this agreement. He professes that even if more days' supply is allowed him under Exhibit XIV than under Exhibit A, yet the terms of the former are injurious to him. He further added that if the 1st defendant's land were to be irrigated even for a Naligai, his crops would suffer. These are merely extravagant claims of an obstructive nature. Although the plaintiff was unable to explain the injurious effects of the agreement, yet some reasons for considering it as harmful to the plaintiff have been advanced at the hearing of this appeal. It is suggested that under Exhibit XIV the first defendant gets some rights to interfere with the repair and maintenance of the channel, while under Exhibit A it was entrusted to the sole charge of the plaintiff's Tarwad. I do not think that this is a right construction of Exhibit XIV, which seems to me to maintain the plaintiff's rights intact though it possibly relieves him of the burden of bearing all the charges. Next it is pointed out that under the permits for the construction of the anicut granted by the Collector in recent years (vide Exhibit Y) provision is made for water being let down the stream on 24 days during the irrigation season. It is suggested that difficulties may arise where this provision interferes with the water supply on days allotted to the 1st defendant or the Pandarams. I think, however, that the whole agreement between the parties to Exhibit XIV is subject to the conditions imposed in the Kychit granted by the Collector. This is clear from paragraph 8 of Exhibit XIV, which expressly refers to "the order issued by the Government for taking water." As far as the plaintiff himself is concerned, water has to be let down the river past the anicut on 12 days only out of the 162 allotted to him. Even deducting these days he is in a much better position than under the previous agreement. As to the circumstances under which the compromise was effected, it must be noted that the first attestor is one Ananta Pattar who was at the time a Tahsildar in that locality. He has not signed as Tahsildar, but the evidence is that he was deputed to try to effect a compromise between the parties. The Secretary of State had been impleaded in Original Suit No. 454. His right to the site of the channel was disputed and the determination of the question of ownership would have raised points of considerable difficulty. If the parties interested in the water supply could be induced to compromise their claims, the necessity for the determination of these complicated legal questions might be avoided. In these circumstances there is nothing improbable in an effort having been made by the Collector to have the dispute settled, and I see no reason to doubt the truth of the evidence that Ananta Pattar was deputed for this purpose. The plaintiff's Tarwad based their right to the anicut and channel on the permission for their construction which had been granted them by the Collector. The right of the Collector to give such permission was directly in issue in Original Suit No. 454, and the plaintiff himself admits that the interests of his Tarwad would have been injured to a considerable degree if the plaintiff in Original Suit No. 454 had met with success. Gopal Menon seems to have acquired considerable property for his Tarwad and to have been a stout champion of its interests as against the 1st defendant. At the time of the Settlement there was a substantial question in dispute and I think that Gopal Menon was well advised in setting it in the manner he did. The negotiations were started at the instance of the Collector and the plaintiff has in my opinion failed altogether to establish that the agreement was procured by undue influence or other unfair means. I am unable to agree with the finding of the learned Subordinate Judge and think that the compromise was for the benefit of the Tarwad and binding on the plaintiff. The Subordinate Judge has also found on the 4th issue that the 1st defendant is debarred from enforcing the rights claimed by him under Exhibit XIV by reason of the decision in Original Suit No. 50 of 1900 and Appeal Suit No. 59 of 1902. I am unable to agree with this conclusion. The reliefs which the present 1st defendant claimed in that suit have already been mentioned. The Subordinate Judge found that the anicut and channel were not being enjoyed by the plaintiff's Tarwad as holders of land under 1st defendant but in virtue of the independent sanction of the Collector acting on behalf of Government. He also found that it was not established that injury would be caused to 1st defendant by the taking of water through the extensive channel to the Pallam land. There was no determination of the rights of all the parties interested in the channel water. The judgment contains some strongly worded remarks to the effect that the first defendant has no title to the anicut and chal, but those observations must be read along with the rest of the judgment. It was recognised that the rights of the Tarwad were derived from the order of the Collector and that the question of ownership as between Government and 1st defendant was open and could not be determined in the suit because the Secretary of State was not a party. The fact that the Government was not a party is stated as a sufficient reason for not granting either of the reliefs which were sought with reference to the anicut and channel. There was nothing to prevent the 1st defendant contesting the claim of Government to grant permission for the construction of an anicut and channel. This is what he in fact did in the subsequent suit in the Alatur Court. The compromise in that suit was entered into when Appeal Suit No. 59 of 1902 was pending in the High Court. I am unable to see how anything in the earlier proceedings can operate to prevent the parties interested in the irrigation from the channel from coming to an agreement between themselves, which would lead to the abandonment of litigation which in its result might have seriously prejudiced rights claimed by the several contracting parties.

I, therefore, agree with my learned brother that this appeal should be allowed and the suit dismissed with costs throughout.

M. C. P.

Appeal allowed.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

REVISION No. 937 OF 1918.

June 17, 1919.

Present:—Mr. Justice Abdul Raoof.

Musammat BAL KAUR AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS—PETITIONERS

versus

SHIB DAS—DEFENDANT—RESPONDENT.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), O. XXXIII rr. 2, 5, 15—Application for leave to sue as pauper not accompanied by schedule of property, dismissal of—Application, subsequent, whether barred.

Where an application for leave to sue as a pauper is rejected on the ground that it is not accompanied by a schedule of the property belonging to the applicant, a subsequent application is not barred under rule 15 of Order XXXIII of the Civil Procedure Code. [p. 208, col. 1]

Revision from the order of the Subordinate Judge, 1st Class, Lahore, dated the 17th June 1918.

Mr. Tirath Ram, for the Petitioners.

Bakhshi Tek Chand, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—The facts out of which this petition for revision has arisen may be stated as follows:—The petitioner applied for permission to sue as a pauper on the 26th of February 1917. This application was not accompanied with a schedule of moveable and immoveable property belonging to the applicant as required by rule 2, Order XXXIII of the Code of Civil Procedure. On account of this defect the application was rejected on the 16th of August 1917. The Court recorded the order in the following words:—

"This is an application for permission to sue as a pauper, but was not accompanied by a schedule of any property belonging to the applicant, as required under Order XXXIII, rule 2, Civil Procedure Code, and is, therefore, hereby rejected under Order XXXIII, rule 5, Civil Procedure Code."

The applicant then made a second application, dated the 23rd December 1917, which has been rejected again by the Court. He has, therefore, come up to this Court for revision. The reason given for the rejection of the present application is that it is barred under Order XXXIII, rule 15, Civil Procedure Code. In support of this opinion the learned Subordinate Judge has relied upon the case of Atul

Chandra Sen v. Raja Peary Mohan Mookerjee (1). Having regard to the special features of that case it can hardly be said to be applicable to the present case. In the present case beyond the fact of an application being presented without the required schedule and the appearance of the parties, nothing further was done. In the case relied upon evidence was taken on both sides, and it was found that the applicant had made a false statement, that his own purohit contradicted him, and that he was owner of a house. The first application in that case, therefore, was rejected not for want of any formality, but because the applicant had been found to be possessed of property. The order no doubt purported to have been made with reference to the provisions of rule 2, namely, that the applicant had not furnished the particulars required with regard to the plaint. In substance, however, the order was made within the meaning of rule 7, Order XXIII, Civil Procedure Code.

It is contended on behalf of the respondent in this case that according to the ruling relied upon the second application was prohibited by rule 15, because the order was made under rule 5 (a), and according to the said ruling orders made under rule 5 (a) barred a second application with reference to the provisions of rule 15. The learned Judges at page 813 of the report remarked:—

"The question, therefore, narrows itself to this, namely, whether the rejection under rule 5 (a) in all cases is free from the bar laid down in rule 15."

Evidently the learned Judges meant to imply that there may be some cases in which an order made under rule 5 (a) may be barred under rule 15, and there may be other cases in which such an order may not be a bar to a second application. This ruling was cited in a Full Bench case reported as Howa v. Sit Shein (2) decided by the Lower Burma Chief Court. The learned Judges in a very exhaustive judgment examined the provisions of the different rules under Order XXXIII, Civil Procedure Code, and came to the conclusion that an order made under rule 5 (a) could not bar a second application. It is needless for me to examine all the rules under Order XXXIII. It is enough to say that I entirely agree in the opinion expressed by the majority of the learned Judges of the Lower Burma Chief Court.

In my opinion, therefore, the Court below was not justified in rejecting the present application. I set aside the order of the Court below and send the case back to it to be disposed of according to law.

Revision accepted.

(1) 33 Ind. Cas. 812; 20 C. W. N. 669.
(2) 42 Ind. Cas. 903 (F. B.); 9 L. B. R. 93; 11 Bur. L. T. 77.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.

FIRST APPEAL FROM ORDER NO. 129 OF 1919.

April 15, 1920.

Present:—Mr. Justice Tudball and Mr. Justice Sulaiman.

MUHAMMAD ANWAR ALI KHAN AND OTHERS—APPELLANTS

versus

DARA SHAH KHAN AND OTHERS—RESPONDENTS.

Guardians and Wards Act (VIII of 1890), ss. 47, 48—Order refusing to remove guardian—Appeal, whether lies.

An order refusing to remove a guardian is final and is not open to appeal under sections 47 and 48 of the Guardians and Wards Act.

Appeal from an order of the District Judge, Bareilly, dated the 20th June 1919.

Mr. Mukhtar Ahmad, for the Appellant.

Mr. S. P. Ghose, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—This is an appeal against an order passed by the District Judge of Bareilly, refusing to remove a guardian from her post. A preliminary objection is raised that no appeal lies. We think there is considerable force in this argument. Section 47 of the Guardians and Wards Act gives a right of appeal against an order made by the District Court under section 39 for removing a guardian, but it nowhere gives a right of appeal from an order refusing to remove a guardian. Section 48 distinctly says:—"Save as provided by the last foregoing section and by section 622 of the Code of Civil Procedure, an order made under this Act shall be final and shall not be liable to be contested by suit or otherwise." It is, therefore, clear that no appeal lies from the order of the Court below and we, therefore, dismiss this appeal with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

LACHMAN CHAMAR v. EMPEROR.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.
CRIMINAL REVISION No. 811 OF 1919.
February 21, 1920.
Present:—Mr. Justice Piggott.
LACHMAN CHAMAR—APPLICANT
versus
EMPEROR—OPPOSITE PARTY.

Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), s. 498—Accused marrying woman represented to be a widow—Woman claimed as wife by another—Denial by her of marriage and staying preferably with accused—Accused, whether guilty of wrongful detention.

Accused married a woman whom her relatives represented to be a widow. The complainant claimed the woman as his wife and demanded her from the accused. She denied that she had ever seen the complainant, or had had anything to do with him and deliberately walked into accused's house. Accused was convicted under section 498, Penal Code, for detaining the woman with unlawful intent knowing or having reason to believe that she was the wife of the complainant:

Held, that the conviction could not be sustained, as the woman's attitude showed that she was not being detained by the accused with or without justification, having determined to stay with him and not submit to the complainant, and that the accused did not have "reason to believe" that she was the wife of the complainant. [p. 209, col. 2.]

Criminal revision against the order of the District Magistrate, Jaunpur, dated the 6th November 1919.

Mr. J. M. Banerji, for the Applicant.

The Assistant Government Advocate, for the Crown.

JUDGMENT.—The applicant Lachman has been convicted under section 498 of the Indian Penal Code of detaining a young woman of the name of Dhakhia with intent that she may have illicit intercourse with himself, he knowing or having reason to believe the said woman to be the wife of his caste fellow, Harihar. The evidence shows that about the month of March 1919 Harihar allowed this woman to go away with her grandmother. A month later the complainant want to look for his wife and was told by the grandmother that she had gone off with somebody and that her whereabouts were unknown. He eventually traced her to the house of the accused Lachman in a village in another district. There is no evidence whatever that Lachman knew or had any reason to believe that Dhakhia was the wife of another man up to the time when Harihar arrived at his house and demanded the woman. There is no real reason for disbelieving Lachman's assertion, supported by evidence, that the grandmother represented Musammat Dhakhia to him as a young widow and that he believed himself to have contracted a lawful marriage with her according to the usual custom in the case of the re-marriage of a widow amongst members of his caste. The question is whether from the time when in the month of June the complainant Haribar arrived at Lachman's house and claimed the woman as his wife it ought to be held that Lachman had "reason to believe" this woman to be the wife of another man, and whether from that date he detained her with unlawful intent. From the evidence given by Musammat Dhakhia at the trial it is beyond question that she was living with Lachman of her own free will and had not the slightest desire to return to the complainant. She went so far as to deny that she had ever seen Harihar before in her life, or ever had anything to do with him. It is not easy to say on the evidence whether the Courts below were justified in holding that Lachman had reason to believe that Haribar was speaking the truth when he claimed this woman as his wife. For aught that appears from the record he may have received vehement assertions to the contrary from Musammat Dhakhia and may have felt convinced of the truth of these assertions. In any case I do not think it can be held on the evidence that Lachman "detained" this woman. According to Haribar's deposition what happened, when he arrvied at Lachman's house and claimed the woman, was that Lachman replied that he knew nothing about Haribar's claim. All he knew was that he had taken the girl from her grandmother and had contracted what he believed to be a lawful union with her. Having thus defined his position, he told Haribar that the latter could do what he thought proper. On this the woman deliberately turned her back on Haribar and walked into Lachman's house. I think there can be no mistake about the woman's attitude. She was not being detained there by Lachman but, with or without justification, had absolutely made up her mind to stay with him and not submit to Haribar's claim. Under the circumstances I do not think that the conviction can be sustained. I accept the application of Lachman, set aside the conviction and sentence against him and acquit him of the offence charged. He has already been released on bail, his sureties will, therefore, be discharged.

Application accepted.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL APPEAL No. 636 OF 1919.

April 27, 1920.

Present:—Mr. Justice Martineau.

INDER SAIN AND OTHERS—CONVICTS—APPELLANTS

versus

EMPEROR—RESPONDENT.

Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), ss. 140, 149—"Offence," meaning of—Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), s. 164—Statement recorded in presence of Police Officer, value of—Witness withholding information about offence, reliability of.

The word "offence" in section 149 of the Penal Code means only an offence under the Penal Code and does not include an offence under the Railways Act [p. 225, col. 2.]

Consequently, a conviction under section 126 of the Railways Act, read with section 149 of the Penal Code, is illegal [p 225, col. 2.]

A statement cannot be said to be properly recorded under section 164, Criminal Procedure Code, if a Police Officer is present at the time and is allowed to put questions to the witness. [p. 225, cols. 1 & 2.]

Statements of witnesses who do not say anything about the commission of an offence which they have witnessed to anybody till the time of their examination by the Police and who on being questioned previously stated that they knew nothing, cannot be relied on. [p. 225, col. 1.]

Appeal from the order of the Special Magistrate, First Class, Rohtak, exercising enhanced powers under section 30, Criminal Procedure Code, dated the 20th September 1919.

Dr. Gokal Chand Narang, for the Appellants.

Lala Shiv Narain, Public Prosecutor, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—This judgment will dispose of ten appeals, namely, Nos. 636, 637, 690 to 694, 755 and 790 of 1919 and 77 of 1920. Of the appellants in these appeals, three, namely, Kishan Sahai, Kuria and Hira Lal, have been convicted under section 126 of the Railways Act of loosening rails and sleepers on the Parnala Railway Bridge with intent to endanger the safety of persons travelling on the railway; two, namely, Chankas Rai and Tara Chand, of abetting that offence and seven, namely; Inder Sain, Jowala Pershad, Lajja Ram. Hari Ram, Bakhtawar, Jas Ram and Kanshi Ram, of being members of an unlawful assembly, some members of which, in prosecution of the common object, loosened rails and sleepers on the Parnala Railway Bridge with the intent aforesaid. It is not disputed that early on the morning of the 14th April 1919 an attempt was made to remove rails on the Parnala Bridge which is about a mile from the Bahadurgarh Station in the Lahore direction. All the guard sleepers on the bridge were broken off and thrown away, and the bolts and fish plates and some dog spikes of one rail were removed, and other damage mentioned by Harsa Singh, Sub Way Inspector (P. W. No. 8), was done. Fortunately the work of removing the rail had not been completed when the 4 Down Mail train arrived at about 7-15 A. M. and the train passed over the bridge in safety.

About 250 yards from the bridge on the south side of the line (i. e., the right side as one goes from Lahore to Delhi) is the village of Parnala. Near the Railway Station, which is also on the south side of the line, are the old and new Mandies of Bahadurgarh, the old Mandi lying between the station and the new Mandi. The town of Bahadurgarh lies to the south of the Mandies.

Four of the appellants are railway employees at Bahadurgarh Station, Chankas Rai being the Station Master, Tara Chand, the timekeeper, Kuria, a hammerman and Hari Ram, a trollyman. Kishan Sahai is a carpenter working in the old Mandi; Kanshi Ram is Secretary of the Municipal Committee of Bahadurgarh. Of the remaining appellants Hari Ram is a servant of a shopkeeper of the new Mandi and the others are all shopkeepers and Banias of that Mandi, Jas Ram being the Chaudhri.

The prosecution story is briefly as follows:—

For some days before the occurrence there was unrest and excitement among the people at Bahadurgarh. On the 5th, 6th and 7th April political meetings attended by some of the appellants were held at which speeches were made against the Rowlatt Act and on other subjects. On the 6th and 11th a hartal was observed. On the 13th a press message was received at Bahadurgarh Station to the effect that strikes had taken place among the Railway staff at other stations. At about 2 or 2 30 A. M. on the 14th the appellant Tara Chand, accompanied by the Assistant Station Masters Panna Lal and Udho Das (who have been acquitted by the Magistrate) and two other Railway employees, went to the new Mandi with the idea of bringing people to the station and getting them to join in committing some mischief, and in order to collect them they resorted to the expedient of having an alarm of "thief" raised, pretending that a cow belonging to Panna Lal had been stolen. Having collected some people and addressed them they returned to the station, taking with them some men from the old Mandi on the way, and they were joined at the station by about a dozen men from the new Mandi. These men went to the Station Master and consulted with him as to what was to be done. After this consultation which took place at about 4 or 4-30, the Mandi people returned to the Mandi. Some time later a number of the Mandi people collected and went to the Parnala Railway Bridge. Kuria and Hira Lal also went there with a wrench and a crowbar, which they had got from Badna mate under Tara Chand's orders. The men set to work to remove the rails, but the train arrived before they could accomplish their object and they ran away.

The theory for the defence briefly is that the crime was committed by the people of the Parnala village, one or two menials employed on the Railway being also in the conspiracy, and that Kanwal Singh, Zaildar of Bahadurgarh, and Nisar Mohammad, Vice President of the Bahadurgarh Municipal Committee, had been instrumental in getting the appellants prosecuted.

Between 6-15 and 7 on the morning of the 14th April Mr Canning, Permanent Way Inspector, (P. W. No 54) was informed, while he was at his house, by Badna mate (P. W. No. 20) that a lot of men were gathering on the bridge. He sent for the Time-keeper Tara Chand and told him to go and tell the Station Master to stop the 4-Down Mail, as Mr. Nachery, a Loco. Inspector, who was with Mr. Canning, wanted to go by it in order to see what had happened to the 3-Up Mail which was long overdue. Tara Chand returned with the Station Master Chankas Rai at about 7-15. Mr. Canning asked the latter to stop the Down Mail at Bahadurgarh. The Station Master said that he could not do so as the line clear had been given and all the signals had been lowered. Just about that time the Down Mail ran through. Chankas Rai and Tara Chand left Mr. Canning, but came back after a few minutes with Badam, gatekeeper, (P. W. No. 52), who said that men were gathering at the bridge and making a row. Mr. Canning then told the Station Master to stop all trains both up and down, and sent Tara Chand to take men with him and go and see what had been done to the bridge, and in case the damage was slight to put it right. He also sent Harsa Singh, Sub-Way Inspector, (P. W. No. 8), to the bridge on his arrival from Saupla at 9, and Tara Chand and Harsa Singh had the bridge repaired.

The first report of the bridge having been damaged was made to the Police at Thana Bahadurgarh at 9 A. M. on the 14th April by Ramji Lal (P. W. No. 40), a Jat of Parnala. The Head Constable who recorded the report wrote to the Station Master asking him to wire to the Sub-Inspector of the Railway Police at Jind. Mr. Browne (P. W. No. 1), Deputy Superintendent, Sub Divisional Officer, Railway Police, who was investigating a case at Shakurpur, was also informed of the occurrence by Mr. Canning at 9-30 or 10 and he sent a Police guard to guard the Parnala Bridge and wired to the Sub-Inspector, Railway Police, at Jind ordering him to proceed at once to the spot and start investigation. Sub-Inspector Nur Ahmad of the Railway Police (P. W. No. 58), arrived at Bahadurgarh at about 1 A. M. on the 16th April, and commenced investigation in conjunction with Sub-Inspector Kirpa Narain (P. W. No. 9), the officer in-charge of the Bahadurgarh Thana. These officers did not succeed in obtaining any evidence to show who the culprits were. Sub Inspector Kirpa Narain says that he learnt from Kanwal Singh, Zaildar of Bahadurgarh (P. W. No. 41), that the damage had been done by the Mandi people in conjunction with the Railway staff, and that Kanwal Singh mentioned the name of Jas Ram and said his information was obtained from Fateh Ullah (P. W. No. 15) and from other inquiry. Strange to say, however, the Sub-Inspector did not send for Fateh Ullah. On the 19th April Sub-Inspector Nur Ahmad sent a report to the Deputy Superintendent of Police regarding the investigation which had been carried on up to that time and the information obtained. That report has been admitted as evidence by the Magistrate and marked as Exhibit P-25; but it appears to be nothing more than a part of the Police diaries and is, therefore, inadmissible in evidence. Sub-Inspector Kirpa Narain says that he made secret enquiries between the 16th April and the 6th May, when the Deputy Commissioner came to Bahadurgarh and told him to stop his inquiries, saying that he would make secret inquiries himself. Nothing more was apparently done by the Police till the 10th June, when Mr. Browne took up the investigation. Mr. Browne arrived at Bahadurgarh on the 13th June and stayed there till the 25th or 26th, and he says that during that time he unravelled the case. The Police had the statements of 26 of the prosecution witnesses recorded by Magistrates under the provisions of section 164, Criminal Procedure Code, some on the 23rd June, some on the 2nd July and some on the 6th July. Confessions of the appellants Kuria and Hira Lal, who had been arrested by order of the District Magistrate on the 23rd and 29th May, respectively, were recorded by Lala Suraj Narain, Magistrate, on the 24th June. A pardon was tendered to one Mansa Ram, a Bania of the new Mandi, and his statement was recorded by Sheikh Muhammad Fida Ulla, Magistrate, on the 10th July and the case was Chalaned the same day.

A mere perusal of the judgment of the lower Court would give the impression that the case against the appellants is a strong one, but I regret to find that the Magistrate has not examined the evidence critically. Although he has mentioned what the evidence is against each individual accused, he does not appear to have analysed it or given consideration to the question whether it is trustworthy, and he has altogether ignored glaring inconsistencies with which the record abounds. It is, therefore, necessary for me to go into the evidence somewhat minutely.

The evidence relating to the planning of the offence may be taken first. The story about the Railway officials having a false report of a theft spread with the object of collecting the Mandi people and then getting them to join in some nefarious scheme appears to be far-fetched and improbable. If they had not already secured the sympathy of the Mandi people and did not know what their attitude would be, they could not possibly have expected that those people, after being called out from their beds on a false pretence, would have been ready to join them in their plans. If, on the other hand, they knew that they could count on the assistance of the Mandi people, they would have gone straight to them and called them to the station to arrange matters and there would have been no object in raising a false alarm about a theft having taken place.

The witnesses as to the alarm having been raised are P. Ws. Nos. 6, 10, 11, 13, 14, 17, 47, 48, 52 and 56. They differ considerably as to the time and place at which the alarm was given. Phullu (P. W. No. 6) says he heard it coming from the goods shed at about midnight. Rahmat (P. W. No. 13) says he heard it a little after 1 coming from the Mandi from which the noise went on to the station. Ramji Lal (P. W. No. 56) says the alarm was raised in the old Mandi at about 1 or 2. Badam gatekeeper (P. W. No. 52) says he heard it at about 2 coming from the Mandi but as he was at his gate something like two-thirds of a mile away, it would have been practically an impossibility for him to hear the alarm at all. Other witnesses say that the alarm was given at about 2 or 2-30 or 3 in the new Mandi. One witness, namely, Sham Charan Das, Signaller (P. W. No. 11), says that he heard it at about 4 30 coming from the road outside the railway quarters. The learned Counsel for the Crown contends that the alarm of "thief" was being given at different places and for many hours during the night, but this is a theory which it is impossible to accept, and there does not appear to have been any reason for continuing to spread a false report of theft after the Railway Babus had succeeded in collecting the Mandi people. The story told by Mansa Ram (P. W. No. 10) about the alarm is entirely at variance with what he said in his statement on the 10th July. In the latter statement he said that Lajja Ram suggested raising a cry of "thief," that he agreed to the proposal, and that he took away a bullock which was yoked to a cart outside Lajja Ram's shop, and raised an outcry that the bullock had been stolen, upon which some 20 people assembled at Lajja Ram's shop. But at the trial he has stated in his evidence that he heard an alarm of thief coming from the direction of the station, that he came downstairs and saw Panna Lal, another Babu, and some other men, that Panna Lal told him that his cow had been stolen and that he and some of the Mandi people searched for the cow in the Mandi, but did not find it and then went to the station.

The principal witnesses with regard to the alarm having been raised are Abdul Rahman (P. W. No. 14) and Mumtaz (P. W. No. 47), who are Chaukidars in the old Mandi. They say that the Railway Babus came at about 2 or 2·30 A. M. to that Mandi and said they were searching for a cow of theirs which was lost, that they went on to the new Mandi, and that after about an hour or half an hour an alarm of thief was raised in the new Mandi, upon which Abdul Rahman went there. Abul Rahman says that he found a number of men at Lajja Ram's shop and that Tara Chand was telling them that there had been a row in Delhi and a strike at Shakurpur and that the Mandi people should do something in order to give the Railway staff at Bahadurgarh an excuse for striking. His statement on this point does not agree with that of Mansa Ram, according to whom the conversation which took place with the Railway Babus who came to the new Mandi was on the subject of the cow which they said had been stolen. In examination-in-chief Abdul Rahman says that when the Babus left he followed them first to the old Mandi from where they took some men with them, and that then he went with them to the station, where they were joined by men from the new Mandi. In cross-examination he has altered his statement and has said that the Babus went from the new Mandi to the station, that the men of the two Mandis went there afterwards, and that he followed in order to see the tamasha. Mumtaz, however, contradicts him and says that the Railway Officials accompanied the people of the new Mandi to Ram Chandra's shop in the old Mandi and from there to the station. The evidence of Ahmad (P. W. No. 48), an Octroi Muharrir, employed at the Railway Station octroi post, which is opposite Ram Chandar's shop, does not agree with that of Mumtaz, for he says that the five men who had come from the station and gone to the Mandi returned to the station without stopping anywhere, and that it was not till about half an hour later that 15 or 16 men came from the new Mandi to Ram Chandar's shop, and then took seven men with them from there and went to the station. Sham Charan Das (P. W. No. 11) says that he was awakened at about 4 30 by hearing the alarm of "thief" from the road outside the Railway quarters, and that he went there and found the Station Master, the Assistant Station Masters, Tara Chand and some Banias of the Mandi at the Station Master's quarters. His statement on this point cannot be believed, as there was no possible object for the Railway Babus to continue giving the alarm of 'thief' after they had collected the Banias of the Mandi and brought them to the Station Master's quarters. In fact according to Abdul Rahman the alarm had subsided as soon as it was raised in the new Mandi, for when he reached that Mandi nothing was being said about the alleged theft of the cow, but he says that Tara Chand was discoursing on other matters. It is clear, therefore, that the evidence with regard to the raising of the alarm and the collecting of the people is extremely conflicting and unsatisfactory.

We come next to the evidence as to what took place after the Mandi people had joined the Railway Babus at the station and as to the conversation which is said to have taken place with the Station Master Chankas Rai. The evidence on this point consists of the statements of Abdul Rahman, Mumtaz and Sham Charan Das, and they differ widely from one another. Abdul Rahman says that the three Station Babus were inside the Booking Office and that Tara Chand said that the train was coming, that they should get ready and throw brick-bats at it, and that this would give an excuse for the staff to stop work. The witness goes on to say that from there all went to the quarters of the Station Master, who was sitting on his bed, that the Station Master told them that there were about Rs. 1,000 or 1,100 in the chest and that they could rob it and set fire to the station, and that Lajja Ram remarked, "Let the train arrive and we will see what can be done."

Mumtaz says in examination-in chief that the Railway Babus and the Mandi people went from the old Mandi to the Station Master's Office, that the Station Master was present there, and that one of the three Babus said that the telegraph wires had been broken at Shakurpur and the train had been held up there, and that they should go and break the bridge before the train came in. He says that on this he returned to his duty. His evidence thus contradicts Abdul Rahman's on three important points:

(1) He says that the conversation took place in the Station Master's Office, whereas Abdul Rahman says it was in the Booking Office.

(2) His account of the conversation materially differs from Abdul Rahman's account, according to which nothing was said about breaking the bridge; and

(3) He says that the Station Master was present, whereas according to Abdul Rahman the Station Master was in his own quarters, to which the men afterwards adjourned.

In cross-examination Mumtaz tries to improve matters by saying that from the Station Master's Office all went to the Station Master's quarters and that there the Station Master told the other men to go and break the bridge. But this is inconsistent with the statement he made in examination in chief, namely, that he returned to his duty after one of the Babus had said that they should go and break the bridge.

Sham Charan Das (P. W. No. 11) says that when he got to the Station Master's quarters, the men there were saying that no train had been come during the night and so strike had taken place; that somebody asked the Station Master what should be done and whether the line should be uprooted; that the Station Master replied: "Wait, I shall tell you presently," and that Tara Chand said the line should be uprooted but they should wait.

In his previous statement before Lala Suraj Narain the witness made no mention of the reply which he now says the Station Master gave, and in cross examination he has said that he does not remember whether the Station Master gave a reply. He says that no one spoke about plundering the cash chest or about setting fire to the station. The Magistrate thinks that Sham Charan Das's statement is not inconsistent with Abdul Rahman's because Sham Charan Das was not present at the beginning of the conversation at the Station Master's quarters and Abdul Rahman left before Sham Charan Das did, but he overlooks the fact that Abdul Rahman has stated in cross-examination that Sham Charan Das was present when the Station Master said that they should rob the cash chest. It is urged for the defence that Sham Charan Das is not on good terms with the Station Master. In this connection it may be noted that the latter reported to the District Traffic Superintendent on the 23rd May that Sham Charan Das had ceased working on the 9th May and had not resumed duty notwithstanding that the Sub Assistant Surgeon had said that he could be put on duty. The statements of the three witnesses, Abdul Rahman, Mumtaz and Sham Charan Das as to the conversation at the station and at the Station Master's quarters are quite inconsistent with one another and no reliance can be placed on them.

Abdul Rahman says that when he was at the Station Master's quarters, Lajja Ram and Hari Ram called him and Phullu and told them to go to Sankhaul and fetch Kura Jat with 10 or 20 men, and that they started off, but had not gone far when Lajja Ram called them back, after which he (Abdul Rahman) went back to his duty in the old Mandi. Even with regard to this small incident the evidence is contradictory. Phullu (P. W. No. 6) makes no mention of the incident and in fact according to the evidence he did not go to the Station Master's quarters at all. Ramji Lal (P. W. No. 56), a shoemaker of the old Mandi, says that on hearing the alarm of "thief" at abont 1 or 2 he went out of his shop and saw six or seven men collected at Ram Chandar's shop, which is opposite his own, and that Ram Chandar and another man told him to bring back Rahman (i e, Abdul Rahman) and Phullu, who were going to Sankhaul, so he ran and called out to them and they returned. According to this witness, therefore, Abdul Rahman and Phullu had started to go to Sankhaul from the old Mandi, and were called back to that Mandi by Ram Chandar, and this happened some hours before the Mandi people are alleged to have gone to the Station Master's quarters. His evidence is thus irreconcilable with Abdul Rahman's, Ramji Lal goes on to say that at about 5.45 Ram Chandar and other men passed his shop going to the new Mandi, and that Ram Chandar told him that men were collected in the new Mandi for the purpose of breaking the bridge, and asked him to go with them. This witness admits that he had been turned out of the shop he was occupying by Ram Chandar to whom it belongs, so that the motive for his giving the evidence which he has given is apparent.

Reverting to the evidence of Abdul Rahman, his untrustworthiness is shown also by the fact that he mentions Jowala Pershad and Inder Sain as two of the men who went from the Mandi to the station, although he had stated before Lala Suraj Narain that he had not seen them anywhere between 2 and 5. He says that he made a false statement on this point before Lala Suraj Narain because on the day his statement was recorded, Mansa Ram had told him he would be murdered if he named Jowala Pershad, Inder Sain, Kanshi Ram or Jas Ram. The falseness of the explanation is obvious, as Mansa Ram himself named those very men in the statement which was recorded by Lala Suraj Narain on the 24th June, the day after Abdul Rahman's statement was recorded. It may further be noted that the persons who Abdul Rahman said in examination in chief had threatened him were Lajja Ram and Hari Ram, whereas in cross-examination he says it was Mansa Ram who had threatened him.

Abdul Rahman and Mamtaz had no object in going with or following the Mandi people to the station, and the reason given by Sham Charan Das for going to the Station Master's quarters is, as pointed out above, a false one. None of these witnesses made any statement as to what they now profess to have seen until their statements were taken by Mr. Browne in June, and it is impossible to accept the explanation given by Abdul Rahman and Mumtaz (Biloches by caste) that they kept quiet for fear of being murdered by the Banias.

The theory that the attempt to remove the rails was the result of conspiracy between the station staff and the Banias of the Mandi seems improbable for more than one reason. In the first place Sham Charan Das himself admits that the station staff were on bad terms with the Mandi people, and a file D-17 produced by the defence shows that the appellant Inder Sain as Secretary of the Mercantile Association of the Bahadurgarh Mandi had on the 13th March 1919, written to the District Traffic Superintendent complaining that the Station Master would not let the Mandi people enter the Booking Office for buying first, second and intermediate class tickets which they used to do before and asking that a separate window might be made for persons wanting to buy such tickets. The District Traffic Superintendent sent that complaint to the Station Master for remarks, and Chanka Rai replied on the 29th March that there were very few first and second class tickets, and there was no need for a separate window, and that the complainant was in the habit of writing such letters so as to bring Government Officials under his influence. The District Traffic Superintendent informed the complainant on the 9th April that there was no necessity for a separate window, but that instructions had been issued to the Station Master to avoid inconvenience to first, second or intermediate class passengers. It seems unlikely that the Station Officials would have conspired with the Banias of the Mandi, to have the rails taken up on the Parnala Bridge, when the relations between them were not of a particularly friendly nature. Another reason for rejecting the theory of conspiracy is the improbability of the conspirators waiting to carry out their plan till only a short time before the arrival of the train. If it had been arranged at 4 or 4-30 to have the rails taken up at the Parnala Bridge, why should not men have been sent at once to put the plan into action?

The learned Counsel for the Crown has laid some stress on the fact that the Station Master did not stop the train when Mr. Canning sent him a message by Tara Chand to do so. No inference, however, can be drawn against the Station Master from this, even if it be assumed that Tara Chand gave him the message, which it is not proved that he did. Stopping the Mail Train is a serious matter, and Mr. Coyle, the driver of the Mail Train, in fact states that the Station Master would not have been justified in stopping the Mail on an oral message from the Permanent Way Inspector.

We may come now to the evidence as to the carrying out of the plan alleged to have been formed at the Station Master's quarters. The evidence of the witnesses other than those belonging to the village Parnala may be considered first.

The evidence of Gobinda (P. W. No. 2), Budhu (P. W. No. 3) and Mansa Ram (P. W. No. 10), who have retracted their previous statements, proves nothing against the appellants. The evidence of Biru pointsman (P. W. No. 4) also proves nothing against them. He says he saw Kuria and Hira Lal taking a wrench and a crowbar, which they had brought from the direction of the workshop, towards the bridge, but he says that this was after 7-30 A. M., so that he is referring to the time when they went to repair the bridge after the Mail Train had passed. He says that he saw a number of men collected outside the Station Master's quarters at 6 A. M., but this does not appear to be in accordance with the general story of the prosecution, which is that after the consultation at the Station Master's quarters at 4 or 4 30 the people returned to the Mandi. Moreover the witness admits that he did not hear what the people were saying.

Ahmad (P. W. No. 48) says that at 6 A. M. he saw that about 100 men had collected in the old Mandi and were saying "Come along and break the bridge," that the appellant Lajja Ram was among them and that they all went off towards the bridge; but this witness admits that he made no mention of what he had seen to anybody till he made his statement to Mr. Browne.

Dhan Singh (P. W. No. 12) gatekeeper at gate No. 6, which is a little over 1,100 yards from the bridge and is between the bridge and the Railway Station, says that at 6 A. M. he saw about 100 men going towards the bridge and shouting "Mahatma Gandhi ki Jai" and that among them he recognised Lajja Ram, Udmi, Bhakhtawar, Kuria and Hira Lal, of whom the last two had with them a wrench and a crowbar. He also says that when they had gone a considerable distance, he saw Jowala Pershad, Inder Sain and Kanshi Ram going towards the bridge and that they called Rahmat who was at his brick kiln which is near the gate, and asked him to give them men to break the bridge, but that he replied that he had no men and they went on towards the bridge. This witness admits that he told no one about the matter till he was sent for by Mr. Browne and made his statement to him, i. e., in June, and further that he made that statement only after he had been detained by the Police for eight or ten days. He also admits that although he knew that men had gone to damage the bridge, he showed the green flag when the Mail Train came instead of the red flag, which is the danger signal, an admission which, if his statement as to his knowing that men had gone to break the bridge be true, would suggest that he was concerned in the plot. He would naturally have been suspected and might well have made the statement he has made for the purpose of saving himself.

Rahmat (P. W. No. 13), who is employed as a Munshi at a kiln not far from Dhan Singh's gate, says that he saw 40 or 50 men come from the Mandi and go along the line towards the bridge and that four men from the crowd went to the station and after a while followed towards the bridge He says that those four were Inder Sain, Jowala Pershad, Kanshi Ram and Mansa

Ram, and that Inder Sain called him and asked him to let him have some men, but the witness said he had none to spare and asked why they were wanted, on which Jowala Pershad said that the Station Master had told them he had received a telegram that a special train with military band, artillery and a machine gun was coming and that they were going to pull down the bridge before the train arrived. The men then went on and the witness returned to the kiln.

It is to be noted that Dhan Singh makes no mention of Mansa Ram's presence or of Jowala Pershad telling him what he had been told by the Station Master. Rahmat admits that he told nobody what he had seen till Mr. Browne began his investigation. He admits further that his employer Chiranji Lal and the appellant Jowala Pershad used to be partners in a brick kiln, but that Jawala Pershad left the partnership two years ago and has become the partner of other persons in another kiln, and that those persons have been underselling Chiranji Lal, having only 4 or 5 months before the witness gave evidence obtained a contract from the Municipal Committee for supplying bricks at a lower rate than that at which Chiranji Lal supplied them. It does not appear very likely that Jowala Pershad would have asked Rahmat, a servant of the proprietor of a rival kiln, to let them have men for breaking the bridge. I consider that no reliance can safely be placed on the statements of Dhan Singh and Rahmat.

Fateh Ullah (P. W. No. 15), a labourer who lives in the town of Bahadurgarh but works in the new Mandi, says that he went to work at about 7 A. M., that at about 7 30 he saw Jas Ram and Jawala Pershad leaving the new Mandi and followed them, and that Bakhtawar and Inder Sain came from the direction of the Parnala pond (which is on the side of the bridge) and told Jas Ram and Jawala Pershad that the bridge had been damaged but they had been interrupted in the middle of their work. The witness says that he went on to the goods shed to look for work, and that as he was passing the Station Master's quarters, the Station Master called him and said that the cash in the chest contained about Rs. 1,000 or, 1,100 and that they should take it and told him also that the line had been broken. The witness says he went and informed Kanwal Singh, Zaildar, and Nisar Mohammad, Vice-President of the Municipal Committee, who were at the latter's baithak.

This witness' evidence is quite inconsistent with that of the two witnesses just mentioned Dhan Singh and Rahmat, for according to them Jawala Pershad and Inder Sain were going along towards the bridge before the Mail Train came, while according to Fateh Ullah, Jawala Pershad left the Mandi after the train had come and was not with Inder Sain but met him coming from the direction of the bridge. The evidence is inconsistent also with what Kanwal Singh Zaildar and Nisar Muhammad say they were told by Fateh Ullah. Kanwal Singh (P. W. No. 41) says that Fateh Ullah came and told him and Nisar Muhammad that Inder Sain, Jas Ram and Bakhtawar had come from the direction of the bridge to the Mandi. Nisar Muhammad (P. W. No. 57) gives another version or rather two other versions. In examination-in chief he says that Fateh Ullah reported that he had seen Indar Sain, Jas Ram and Jawala Pershad (not Bakhtawar) returning from the direction of the bridge. In cross-examination he says that what Fateh Ullah told him and Kanwal Singh was that he had gone to the new Mandi to give medicine to a Mahajan's wife, and that when he was going from the Mandi to the station he saw Indar Sain, Jas Ram and Jawala Pershad standing at the new Mandi entrance and saying that if the mail had not arrived the bridge would have been broken. Sub-Inspector Kirpa Narain says that Kanwal Singh Zaildar mentioned the name of Jas Ram, and he admits that Bakhtawar's name was not mentioned in the report (P-25) which Sub-Inspector Noor Ahmad sent to the Deputy Superintendent on the 19th April.

Fateh Ullah's further story about the Station Master's calling him and telling him to plunder the cash chest (at a time when it should be remembered the Station Master had just had an interwiew with Mr. Canning) appears to be highly improbable, and here too we find a contradiction between his statement and that of Nisar Muhammad, who says that Fateh Ullah told him and Kanwal

Singh that it was when he was returning from the goods shed, and not, as is now stated by Fateh Ullah, when he was going to it, that the Station Master spoke to him about the money in the chest and told him to take it with the further direction (not mentioned by Fateh Ullah in his evidence) that people should tie his hands and feet.

In cross examination Fateh Ullah admits that Jawala Pershad, Jas Ram, Inder Sain and Bakhtawar are members of the Panchayat of the Mandi which has recently levied a tax of one anna on the Re. on wages; so that he had a clear motive for falsely accusing them. Notwithstanding the important information which is alleged to have been given by him to the Zaildar and by the latter to the Sub-Inspectors, the Sub-Inspectors did not send for him and question him nor was he called before the Deputy Commissioner when the latter came to Bahadurgarh, and it was not till the 10th June that he was sent for and his statement recorded by Mr. Browne. It is clearly impossible to rely on Fateh Ullah's evidence.

Chandu (P. W. No. 16), a labourer who works at Jas Ram's shop, says that he went there at 7-30 and that Jas Ram's nephew, who was there, told him that others had gone to break the bridge and that he should go too, and that after a while Jas Ram, Inder Sain, Bhola, Jwala Pershad, Mansa Ram, Bakhtawar and Hari Ram came and said that if the Mail Train had not come the bridge would have been broken. This witness like others made no mention of the matter to any one till he made his statement to Mr. Browne. He earns only a few annas a day and his evidence is entitled to no weight and even if believed, does not show that the men he names had anything to do with damaging the bridge.

Har Narain (P. W. No. 18) began his evidence by saying that at about 6 A. M., when he had gone to his work at the new Mandi, he saw a large number of men going along the line towards the bridge, some of whom were saying "break the line," and he named some of the appellants whom he said he saw following the crowd, but on being put a further question, he replied that this was all that the Police had taught him to say and he then said that he did not in fact go to the Mandi at all that morning and did not know anything, but that the Police had beaten him and compelled him to make the statement.

Faiz Muhammad (P. W. No. 17), a blacksmith who works under the Permanent Way Inspector, says that at some time after 5 A. M. 10 or 12 men went from the Station platform towards the new Mandi, saying "do not touch the telegraph wires, they are of use to us but break the line and the bridge" and that he recognised Inder Sain and Jawala Pershad who were a bit ahead of the others. He also says that afterwards when he had gone to the station, Kuria came to Tara Chand and said tools were wanted and Tara Chand and the Station Master told him to go and get them from Badna mate, upon which Kuria went off to Badna. The witness says that this last incident occurred two or three Gharis after sunrise so that it might possibly, even if his statement were true, relate to the time when Kuria got tools for repairing the bridge, after the Mail Train had passed, as the evidence of Harsa Singh (P W. No. 8) Sub-Way Inspector shows that Kuria was one of the men employed to repair the bridge. Faiz Muhammad, however, admits that he kept silence about the matter to which he now deposes. He says that he and Mahi Dhan went to Mr. Canning's bungalow and told him a row was going on and asked for orders as to whether they should go to protect their families or attend to their work. He did not inform Mr. Canning, his superior officer, of what he professes to have seen and when questioned by Harsa Singh (P. W. No. 8) as to whether he knew who had done the damage, he told him he did not and persisted in his assertion (see Harsa Singh's evidence on page 202 of the record). He admits that he told no one what he had seen until he was questioned by Mr. Browne, and also admits that even in his statement to Mr. Browne he did not name the Mandi people, though he now names two of them. His evidence seems to be quite unreliable.

Mahi Dhan (P. W. No. 19), a carpenter working under the Permanent Way Inspector, says that he saw Tara Chand talking to Kuria in front of the latter's quarters at 5 30 or 5-45, but did not hear what they said. He also states that Jawala Pershad and Inder Sain came to his quarters and that the former asked him for a wrench. The witness replied that he had none and asked Jawala Pershad why he wanted a wrench. Jawala Pershad told him it was in order to uproot the line. He says that Jawala Pershad said to Kuria, who was standing outside the quarters, "You fetch a wrench; this man is afraid," upon which Kuria ran towards the station, and Jawala Pershad and Inder Sain went off in the direction of the bridge. The witness says that after a while he decided to go and inform the Permanent Way Inspector. He then saw Rahmat having an altercation with four or five men at the level crossing more than hundred paces off and also saw 10 or 15 men running towards the bridge. He sent Kahna trolleyman to go and see what the men were doing, and he himself went to the Permanent Way Inspector's bungalow. He says that on his way he saw 50 or 60 men going along outside the fencing in the direction of the bridge, that he had proceeded a little way when he met Mansa Ram running from the direction of the station towards the bridge, that Mansa Ram asked him where he was going, that the witness told him that he was going to the Permanent Way Inspector, and that on this Mansa Ram said that if the witness made a report to the Permanent Way Inspector or anybody else, he would murder him. The witness further says that he overtook Faiz Muhammad, that they both went to the Permanent Way Inspector, and that he told the latter that there was a great row and men were going towards the bridge.

It is to be observed that according to this witness Mansa Ram was alone and was far behind the crowd who were going to the bridge, whereas according to Rahmat Mansa Ram was with Inder Sain, Jawala Pershad and Kanshi Ram. Mahi Dhan like Faiz Muhammad withheld all information of what he professes to have witnessed from Mr. Canning, although they both used to see Mr. Canning daily. Mr. Canning says that Mahi Dhan and Faiz Muhammad told him merely that they were in fear about their familes. Mahi Dhan also admits that he was asked by Mr. Canning on the 23rd of April who had done the damage to the bridge and that he replied that he did not know. He admits that he gave the same reply to Harsa Singh (P. W. No. 8). It was not till his statement was taken by Mr. Browne that he made mention of the matters to which he now desposes. Even in that statement he said nothing about having been threatened by Mansa Ram. His evidence appears to be no more reliable than that of Faiz Muhammad.

Kahna (P. W. No. 22), trollyman of the Sub Way Inspector, supports the first part of Mahi Dhan's statement, saying that he saw Jawala Pershad and another man talking to Mahi Dhan and asking him for tools, that when Mahi Dhan said he had none, Jawala Pershad told Kuria to get the tools from somewhere, and that Kuria went off to the station, while Jawala Pershad and his companion went towards the bridge. The witness goes on to say that after half an hour being told by Mahi Dhan to go to the bridge and see what was being done, he went there and saw some 40 men, of whom Kuria was unfastening bolts with a wrench and Hira Lal was taking out dog spikes with a crowbar, and that meanwhile the Mail came and the people dispersed. The witness like others admits that he told nobody what he had seen and he made his statement for the first time in Mr. Browne's investigation.

Badna (P. W. No. 20), temporary mate, says that at about 5·30 Kuria and Hira Lal came to his quarters and asked him for a crowbar and a wrench, saying Tara Chand had sent for the tools as there was something to be done; Tara Chand was standing by himself some 20—30 paces off, and called to Badna to give the tools, and Badna got Bhairu gangman to take the tools down from the roof and give them to Kuria and Hira Lal who then went off. Badna says that he left Bahadurgarh that day with Mr. Canning and that on his return on the 22nd he found a wrench and a crowbar lying in front of his door. It might be argued that this witness's evidence is on a par with that of Faiz Muhammad and Mahi Dhan, as he made no mention to Mr. Canning of the matter to which he has deposed and when questioned by him and by Harsa Singh, he told them he did not know who had damaged the bridge. But it must be borne in mind that he would naturally have been unwilling to disclose the fact that he had supplied the tools which were used for the purpose of breaking the bridge. It seems improbable that he would ultimately have stated that the wrench and crowbar had been borrowed from him—a statement which would have directed suspicions towards him if it had not been true—and I think his evidence is, therefore, entitled to weight as against Kuria and Hira Lal, the men to whom he says he lent the tools. But I can attach no value to his statement as to Tara Chand being present a little way off and telling him to give the tools, as it is as likely as not that he added this part of the story in order to exculpate himself.

Khuba, gangman, (P. W. No. 21) says he saw the incident to which Badna has deposed, and Badna's evidence is also supported by that of two other gangmen Bhairu (P. W. No. 23) and Jontha (P. W. No. 55), although these witnesses also said nothing about the matter either to Mr. Canning or to Harsa Singh.

Chiman (P. W. No. 59), a labourer who works in the new Mandi, says that he was saying his prayers at 5 A. M. in chaubara in front of the entrance of the new Mandi, when Hari Ram came and said that people were going to break the bridge and asked him to come. He replied that he would go when he had said his prayers. Kanshi Ram, Bakhtawar and Jawala Pershad were standing below and they and Hari Ram went off towards the bridge. After about half an hour the witness went to the new Mandi, and went along with 10 or 12 other men to the bridge, which they found was being damaged by about 18 men, among them being Mansa Ram and the appellants Kuria, Bakhtawar, Hari Ram, Kanshi Ram, Jawala Pershad and Jas Ram. The witness says that Kuria had a wrench but he did not notice a crowbar. The men asked him to help in breaking the bridge, but he declined. Meanwhile the train came and the men ran off, some towards Parnala and others to the new Mandi. This witness admits that he had never done any work for Hari Ram, Kanshi Ram, Bakhtawar or Jawala Pershad and had nothing to do with them, so that it does not seem likely that they would have gone to his chaubara and interrupted him in the middle of his prayers in order to ask him to join them in breaking the bridge. He says that he went off to Najafgarh the same day and remained there until a Policeman fetched him to Mr. Browne, who recorded his statement. He also says that he had come to the Mandi only two days before the 14th April, and that he had not been at Bahadurgarh for three months previous to that.

It seems very doubtful whether he was really at Bahadurgarh on the 14th April, and it is not explained how Mr. Browne got information about him and what led him to send for him, as the witness admits that he had not told anybody that he had been to the bridge or had seen anything. He also makes the significant admission that when he was brought before Mr. Browne, it was only after the latter had told him 50 times to tell the truth that he made his statement. His evidence is clearly not of the slightest value.

Raja Faqir (P. W. No. 37), a gangman employed under the Permanent Way Inspector, says that he had gone home for a day's leave on the 13th April, and that early next morning he was going along the line to Bahadurgarh when he saw 40 or 50 men breaking the bridge, among whom were Kuria and Hira Lal. The latter seized him and told him to come and join in breaking the bridge. The witness said he would come after leaving the flour, which he was carrying, at the gateman's hut and he then went on to his quarters. Before he reached his quarters the train passed and he saw the men from the bridge run away, some towards Parnala and some towards Nizampura. He admits that he told nobody what he had seen till he made his statement to the Railway Thanedar some two months later.

Badam (P.W. No. 52) is the gatekeeper of the gate nearest to the Parnala bridge, and the first thing to be noticed is that although he deposes not only to having seen men going to the bridge but also to having seen it being damaged, he was not included as a witness in the Chalan. He says that at about 6 or 6-15 A.M. Kanshi Ram, Inder Sain and Jawala Pershad passed his gate going towards the bridge, that Mansa Ram was following them and that a few paces behind came a mob of 50 or 60 men among them being Kuria and Hari Ram, of whom the latter had a wrench and a crowbar. He says that he asked Kuria what they were all going to do, and that Kuria had a pull at the witness's

S. N. Dar
Advocate High Court
Jammu & Kashmir
Srinagar.

Huqqa and said he did not know what they were going to do, but he was going with them. They went on to the bridge and began to damage it and on hearing the noise of its being broken, the witness went there. He says that Hira Lal was taking out pins with a crowbar, Kuria was unfastening bolts with a wrench and Kishan Sahai was cutting sleepers, etc., with an axe, and other men were breaking the guard sleepers and masonry pillars. The witness says he went back to his gate and was there when the train passed, and that he then went to Mr. Canning's bungalow to inform him. In cross-examination he adds that he saw Jas Ram returning from the bridge with 10 or 15 other men near the Dhaula well, and that Jas Ram was reproving the others and telling them they had not done well in breaking the bridge. In examination-in-chief, however, the witness made no mention of Jas Ram at all.

It is to be observed that Badam's statement as to his seeing Jawala Pershad going to the bridge and Jas Ram coming from it is inconsistent with the evidence of Fateh Ullah mentioned above, as according to Fateh Ullah those two persons were going from the Mandi to the bridge when they met Bakhtawar and Inder Sain who had left the bridge when the Mail train came, Mr. Canning's evidence shows that Badam told him on the 14th April merely that men were gathering at the bridge and were making a row, and that he could not say whether they were doing anything to the bridge. Badam admits that he said nothing to Sub-Inspector Nur Ahmad when the latter came to his gate on the 17th April, and that when questioned by Harsa Singh he said he knew nothing, and that he also said the same to Mr. Canning on the 23rd April. He says that on the evening of the 5th May he went to Parnala village and called all the Lambardars and told them that the Deputy Commissioner was coming next day and they should tell him who had broken the bridge. Notwithstanding this he admits that he mentioned the names of only Kuria, Hira Lal and Jas Ram to Mr. Canning on the 5th May and to the Deputy Commissioner on the 6th and that it was not till the 12th June that he made a full statement when he was sent for by Mr. Browne. The only persons against whom Badam's evidence seems to be entitled to any weight at all are Kuria and Hira Lal, whom he mentioned in his statements of the 5th and 6th May, i. e, more than a month before the Police investigation which resulted in the prosecution of the appellants. It is noteworthy that he admits that although he knew that the men were damaging the bridge, yet he did not show the danger flag when the Mail Train came. This admission affords a reason for suspecting that he was concerned in the plot to remove the rails.

I now come to the evidence of the Parnala villagers and may note here that Sub-Inspector Kirpa Narain states that when he questioned the villagers they exhibited complete ignorance of the affair. Ramji Lal (P. W. No. 40), who made the first report at the Thana, says that he went out in the morning to ease himself and saw 50 or 60 men come from the direction of the station and the Mandi and begin to break the bridge, and that he recognised Jas Ram, Mansa Ram, Hari Ram, Inder Sain and Jawala Pershad among them. He says that he told them not to damage the bridge as the blame would fall on his village, but Jas Ram told him to go away. The Mail Train arrived and the people scattered, and the witness, leaving Amin Lal who was with him near the water which is near the bridge, went to Pir Dhan Lambardar, and told him what had occurred and came back with him to the bridge. Amin Lal was still near the water when they got there. They then returned to the village, where Sultan and Wazira joined them and Ramji Lal went with Pir Dhan, Sultan and Wazira to the Thana and made this report.

This story does not agree with the report made at the Thana. Ramji Lal named none of the appellants in that report, but said that he did not know the names of the people who had been damaging the bridge or where they lived. He does not allege that the appellants were not known to him, but he says merely that the reason for his not naming them in the report was that he was afraid because Parnala is a small village. He also said in his report, not that the people dispersed on the arrival of the train, but that they ran away when he and Amin Lal raised a hue and cry

Now it is perfectly clear that it was the arrival of the train which interrupted the men who were trying to remove the rail, and prevented them from effecting their purpose. Apart from other evidence on this point there is the evidence of the driver of the train, Mr. Coyle, who says that as the train was near the Parnala Bridge he saw a crowd of over 30 men running away from it. The fact that Ramji Lal in his report gave a deliberately false reason for the crowd dispersing is very significant. What was his object in not making a true report? The theory which suggests itself is that in order to divert suspicion from himself and Amin Lal, he was anxious to convey the impression that they had actively interfered to prevent the bridge from being damaged. He appears to be an unreliable witness.

Amin Lal (P. W. No. 25) says that he took his buffalo out to water it at about 5-45, and saw Kuria and Hira Lal, whom he knew, loosening the line on the bridge with a wrench and a crowbar, and that some 60 or 70 other men were there. Then the train came and the men ran away along the line. The witness says that the men appeared to be Sikhs and that there was no Mahajan among them. This contradicts those witnesses who depose to the presence of certain of the appellants who are Mahajans. Amin Lal says that he told nobody what he had seen till he made his statement to Mr. Browne It may be noted that he makes no mention of his or Ramji Lal's telling the men who were at the bridge not to damage it.

Pir Dhan, Lambardar, (P. W. No. 35) says that Ramji Lal came and told him that men had come to break the bridge. He told Ramji Lal to stop them and Ramji Lal ran off. The witness took Wazira, Matru and Sultan with him and followed. On their way they met Ramji Lal and Amin Lal coming from the bridge, and Ramji Lal told them that the men had run away towards the station and the Mandi. It is apparent that his version differs materially from Ramji Lal's. Pir Dhan admits that Ramji Lal mentioned no names to him. He says that on their way to the Thana they met Udmi, a Bania of the Mandi, who told them not to name any one in the report, but this is contradicted by Ramji Lal and Sultan (P. W. No. 24), who say they met no one on the way. Pir Dhan also says that Jas Ram came with some five other men to Harbhaj, Ala Lambardar, and asked him not to take any names, saying that he would be responsible for his silence. It seems incredible that the Mandi people would have done this and thereby directed suspicion towards themselves.

Sultan (P. W. No. 24) says that he was called by Mutru, Chaukidar, and went with Ramji Lal, Pir Dhan and Wazira to see the bridge and then returned to the village and went with them to the Thana. His statement proves nothing against the appellants.

Wazira and Matru who also went with Ramji Lal to the Thana have not been produced.

Imrat (P. W. No. 26) says that when he was at the entrance to the village, he saw 60 or 70 men going from the Mandi side to the bridge, and that he went to the bridge, and recognised Mansa Ram, Jas Ram Jawala Pershad, Kishan Sahai, Hari Ram and Inder Sain among the men. He says that he did not notice a crowbar with any of them, but that Kishan Sahai had an axe and Mansa Ram a wrench whereas according to other witnesses, it was Kuria or Hira Lal who had the wrench. He says he begged the men not to damage the bridge as the blame would fall on his village. Shortly afterwards the train passed and the men ran away. This witness made his statement for the first time to Mr. Browne.

Raja Mali (P. W. No. 27) says that he was at the Dhaula well 300 paces from the bridge when the train passed, and that the men who were at the bridge ran away. He says that 15 or 20 men came in his direction and he recognised Inder Sain, Jowala Pershad, Jas Ram, Hardwari and Mansa Ram. Some one called out to him to seize the men as they had broken the bridge, so he and two Sita Rams, Multan and Tale, who were near him, stopped the men, but Jas Ram said they had not succeeded in breaking the bridge and begged Raja and his companions to let him go, which they did. This witness admits that he told nobody about the matter till he made his statement to Mr. Browne.

Multan (P. W. No. 28) and Tale (P. W. No. 29) corroborate Raja's statement as to their stopping men who came from the bridge and the former says he recognised Jas Ram, Mansa Ram and Hari Ram, while the latter indentifies Jas Ram and Jawala Pershad. These witnesses too admit that they told nobody about the matter until they were examined by Mr. Browne.

Kirpa (P. W. No. 34) deposes to the same incident and says he recognised Jas Ram, who asked the men who stopped him to let him go. He is a labourer earning a few annas a day, and like other witnesses he told nobody what he had seen until he made his statement to Mr. Browne. Arjan (P. W. No. 39) also deposes to Jas Ram being caught by some men of the village near the Dhaula well, and to his being allowed to go on his saying that no damage had been done to the line. He makes the same admission as to his keeping silence about the matter until he made his statement to Mr. Browne. He is a Chamar earning only a few annas a day.

Shadi (P. W. No. 49) is a witness to the same incident, and he says he told no one about it till he was called by an Indian Police Officer two months later. Sita Ram Bairagi (P. W. No 53) says that he went to the Dhaula well to beg and that some men of his village stopped four or five Banias who came running from the bridge, but he was some 50 paces off and did not recognise them. This witness as well as Tirkha and Shadi are not among the witnesses who are included in the Chalan. Sita Ram Jat (P. W. No. 31) contradicts the other witnesses by saying that the men who came from the bridge were too numerous for them to be able to stop any.

Ram Jas (P. W. No. 30) says that he was at his threshing floor when he saw 60 or 80 men come to the bridge from the direction of the Mandi and begin to damage it, one man having a wrench, another a crowbar and others axes. He went up close to the bridge and recognised Jas Ram and Jawala Pershad, who were telling the others to be quick in breaking the bridge. He says that Ramji Lal and Amin Lal were near and asked the men why they were breaking the bridge and the men told them to go away. After a while the train came and the men ran off. The witness says that most of them were Banias of the Mandi and some belonged to the Railway. He admits that he said nothing to the Lambardars or Thanedars or to the Zaildar who came on the 16th April, giving as his reason that he was in fear of his life. He said nothing in fact about what he had seen until he made his statement to Mr. Browne.

Bujan (P. W. No. 32) says that he was at his field, and seeing a crowd at the bridge went up there. He recognised Kishan Sahai who was breaking the woodwork with an axe and Jas Ram who abused the men and said they had done very wrong in breaking the bridge and told them to run away as the train was coming, whereupon they all ran away. This witness too told nobody what he had seen till he made his statement to Mr. Browne. His evidence with regard to Jas Ram is inconsistent with that of other witnesses, who make out that Jas Ram was taking part in getting the bridge broken.

Raghunath (P. W. No. 33), who is a labourer, says that he was at Ram Jas P. W. No. 30's threshing floor at the time of the occurrence, and he corroborates Ram Jas' statement. He says he recognised three men including one of the appellants, namely Lajja Ram. He too says he told nobody what he had seen until he was questioned by Mr. Browne.

Raja Jat (P. W. No. 38) says that he saw some 50 men coming from the direction of the station and begin to break the bridge. He recognised only Jas Ram. He says the people ran off in different directions on Jas Ram's telling them that the Mail Train had come. In cross-examination the witness said that he told nobody what he had seen until he was called by Mr. Browne. In re-examination he said he mentioned the matter generally to the village people.

It appears to me impossible to place any reliance on the evidence given by the witnesses of Parnala village mentioned above in the face of the report made by Ramji Lal at the Thana, in which he said that none of the men were known, and of the facts that the villagers when questioned by the Thanedars said they knew nothing whatever about the affair and that the witnesses kept silent for two whole months. It is also to be observed that the evidence as to Jas Ram and other men being caught when they were coming away from the bridge and as to Jowala Pershad having been among the men at the bridge is irreconcilable with the evidence of Fateh Ullah mentioned above.

This completes the evidence of the alleged eye-witnesses. There are a few other witnesses whose evidence has to be considered.

Har Bhaj, Ala Lambardar of Parnala, (P. W. No. 36), says that on the 15th April Mansa Ram came and took him and Ramji Lal to Jas Ram and Banwari in the new Mandi, and that Jas Ram asked them not to disclose the names of persons who were taking part in damaging the bridge, promising not to let them suffer. He says that next day when the two Thanedars came to investigate the case, he and Ramji Lal sent Ram Jas, Bhura and Shib Lal to fetch the Mandi men and to tell them they had done the deed and should come and bear the consequences. The Mandi men did not come and Shib Lal was then sent and he brought Jas Ram, Banwari, Hari Ram, Jawala Pershad and Bakhtawar, who came to the witness' Deorhi and asked him not to take their names or produce them before the Police and said they would bear the consequences. The witness says that on that occasion he did not disclose anything to the Thanedars, but that he told the Zaildar next day about the matter mentioned above.

Har Bhaj's story is a very improbable one. There was no need for the Mandi Banias to send for him and ask him not to disclose the names of the offenders, seeing that he had been away all day on the 14th and had no personal knowledge of what had happened. Neither Mansa Ram nor Lajja Ram makes any mention of the incident. It is also unlikely that the Mandi men, if they were guilty, would have gone to Parnala on the 16th April when the Sub-Inspectors were making an investigation there. Har Bhaj's statement that he informed the Zaildar about these matters the next day is not corroborated by the latter. As to his statement about his sending Ram Jas, Bhura and Shib Lal to fetch the Mandi men, Ram Jas says nothing about the matter. Bhura has not been produced, and the statement of Shib Lal (P. W. No. 60) as to the men he brought from the Mandi does not agree with that of Har Bhaj, for he leaves out the names of Hari Ram and Jawala Pershad and substitutes the names of Fateh Chand, Mansa Ram and Ram Sarup. Har Bhaj says that he was called by the Deputy Commissioner but did not tell him anything through fear of the Mandi people. Shib Lal also admits that he said nothing about the Banias of the Mandi coming to Parnala and asking the Lambardars not to mention their names until he made his statement to Mr. Browne, and he says the reason was that he was afraid of the Mandi people plundering the village. The idea of the Jats of Parnala being afraid lest the Banias of the Mandi might come and loot their village is ludicrous in the extreme.

Kanwal Singh, Zaildar, (P. W. No. 41) says that Fateh Ullah came and told him and Nisar Muhammad at 10 A. M. on the 14th April that the Railway and the Mandi people had broken the Railway bridge and implicated Jas Ram, Bakhtawar and Inder Sain who, he said, had been coming from the direction of the bridge and that the Station Master was telling the people that there were Rs. 1,000 or Rs. 1,100 in the cash chest which they should rob. He got his horse and rode to the bridge, which he found had been repaired, and then went to Parnala village and made secret inquiries. He says that the men seemed to have united and would not disclose any facts. This favours the theory put forward for the defence that the people of Parnala village were concerned in the commission of the crime. It has already been pointed out that the information which the Zaildar says was given to him by Fateh Ullah does not tally with Fateh Ulla's evidence in Court, and although the Zaildar says he got the information on the morning of the 14th, it was not till the 16th that he communicated it to the Police when the two Sub-Inspectors came to investigate the case. It may also be mentioned that both the Zaildar and Nisar Muhammad who took part with the Police in the investigation appear to be not on very good terms with the appellant Kanshi Ram, having joined in an application made to the Tahsildar two or three months before the occurrence for having Kanshi Ram transferred.

Muhammad (P. W. No. 57) mentions the information given to him and the Zaildar by Fateh Ullah (his account of it differing, as already pointed out, from Fateh Ulla's and the Zaildar's versions), but admits that he did not communicate it to the Sub-Inspectors or tell any one else about it till he mentioned it to Mr. Browne during the latter's investigation. It is worthy of note that he is an applicant for an appointment as Honorary Magistrate on the Bahadurgarh Bench and that he was told by the Deputy Commissioner of Rohtak about two months before the commission of the offence that his application would be considered if he did any special services.

The above review of the evidence for the prosecution shows that that evidence is highly conflicting and that the bulk of it is very unsatisfactory. Most of the witnesses are of low position and there are several who are not free from the suspicion of having been concerned in the offence themselves and may have implicated others in order to save themselves. A very weak point in the case is the fact that the witnesses kept silence for a long time about the incidents to which they have deposed, saying when questioned that they knew nothing about the affair, and that it was only when Mr. Browne took up the investigation, two months after the occurrence, that they made their statements. The explanations given by some of them that they were afraid of being murdered by the Banias of the Mandi, or in the case of the Jats of Parnala that they were afraid that the Banias might plunder their village, cannot possibly be believed. The circumstances under which the witnesses made their statements after Mr. Browne had taken up the investigation require some notice. I have already referred to the statement of Har Narain (P. W. No. 18) that the story at first related by him in Court was the one which the Police had taught him and to the admission of Chiman (P. W. No. 59) that he made his statement after being told a great many times by Mr. Browne to tell the truth. With regard to the statements recorded by Magistrates under section 164 of the Criminal Procedure Code, not only were Police Officers present when the statements were recorded, but they were allowed by one of the Magistrates at least, namely, Sheikh Muhammad Fida Ullah, to put questions to the witnesses. That Magistrate says that an Inspector of Police was present and used to question the witneses as to what happened at various places and also questioned Mansa Ram as to who were present at the bridge, and he also says that the witnesses used to say something voluntarily and stop and that then, when questioned by the Sub-Inspectors, they used to continue their statements. It is impossible to feel any confidence in statements made in such circumstances, which differ little from statements made to the Police themselves, especially when it is borne in mind that for two full months the witnesses had withheld all information and had told every one who questioned them that they know nothing. It may be noted that some ten of the witnesses have retracted their previous statements wholly or in part when giving their evidence at the trial. My conclusion after a careful consideration of the whole case is that the evidence against all the appellants other than Kuria and Hira Lal is quite unreliable.

Further the case against those of the appellants who have been convicted under section 126 of the Railway Act read with section 149, Indian Penal Code, must fail on a legal ground. Section 149, Indian Penal Code, renders all members of an unlawful assembly liable for an offence committed by any member of the assembly in prosecution of the common object of the assembly. Now section 40, Indian Penal Code, provides that except in the chapter and sections mentioned in clauses (2) and (3) of that section the word "offence" denotes a thing made punishable by the Indian Penal Code. Section 149 and Chapter VIII, in which section 149 occurs, are not mentioned in clauses (2) and (3) of section 40, and consequently the word "offence" in section 149 means only an offence under the Indian Penal Code, and does not include an offence under the Railways Act.

The case against Kuria and Hira Lal stands on a different footing, for in the first place there are their confessions recorded on the 24th June and although those confessions appear to me to be of no value as against the other persons whom they implicate, I see no good reason for rejecting them as against Kuria and Hira Lal. They admitted in those confessions that they had taken part in loosening the rails, though they tried to minimize the part they took and sought to excuse themselves by saying that they acted under Tara Chand's orders. They retracted their confessions at the trial and alleged that they had made them under Police pressure. No evidence, however, was produced in support of this allegation. It is true that they were about a month in custody before they confessed, but there is other evidence which corroborates the confessions. There is the evidence of Badna, P. W. No. 20, supported by that of other witnesses mentioned above, as to Kuria and Hira Lal having borrowed a wrench and crowbar from him and I have already given reasons for believing that part of the story. Further there is the evidence of Badam (P. W. No. 52) which, while it is unreliable so far as it implicates others of the appellants, appears to be entitled to weight as against Kuria and Hira Lal. He made his statement with regard to those two appellants on the 5th and 6th May, and it cannot be said that he made it under pressure, as the original Police investigation started by Sub-Inspectors Nur Ahmad and Kirpa Narain had come to an end, while Mr. Browne did not commence his investigation till more than a month later. No evidence has been produced by Kuria and Hira Lal in their defence, and I consider their conviction justified. There is also no reason for interfering with the sentences.

EMPEROR v. BHAGELU DOM.

The result is that I dismiss the appeals of Kuria and Hira Lal but accept the appeals of the remaining appellants and acquit them and direct that they be set at liberty.

Appeal accepted.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.
CRIMINAL REVISION No. 861 OF 1919.
March 15, 1920.
Present:—Mr. Justice Tudball.
EMPEROR—APPLICANT
versus
BHAGELU DOM—OPPOSITE PARTY.

Criminal Tribes Act (III of 1911), s. 22 (2) (b)—Failure to report change of residence—Previous conviction, form of.

The failure by a member of a criminal tribe notified under section 10 of the Criminal Tribes Act to report himself and to give information of his residence or intended change of residence renders him liable to conviction under section 22 (2) of the Act; if he has been previously convicted, he is liable to conviction under section 22 (2) (b) of the Act. [p. 227, col. 1.]

Criminal revision against the order of the Assistant Sessions Judge, Gorakhpur, dated the 18th September 1919.

The Government Advocate, for the Applicant.

JUDGMENT.—This is an application in revision on behalf of the Local Government asking that Bhagelu Dom's conviction under section 22, sub-section 2, clause (c), of the Criminal Tribes Act be set aside or a new trial on a fresh charge be directed.

Bhagelu Dom is a member of a criminal tribe which has been notified under section 10 of the Act. Under clause (b) of that section it was necessary for him to notify his place of residence and any change or intended change of residence and any absence or intended absence from his residence, to the Police. The rules have been issued under section 20 of the Act for the purposes and objects of the Act itself, and in respect to the present convict the rules which apply to him are those which were issued under section 20, sub section 2, clause (d). Rule 8 (a) is the rule applicable. Under it every registered member of a criminal tribe in respect of which a notification has been issued under section 10 (b) shall notify in person to the officer in charge of the Police station, within the limits of which he is for the time being residing, his place of residence and any change or intended change of residence and any absence or intended absence from his residence. If the new place of residence is within the jurisdiction of another Police station, a report of the new place of residence must be made in person within seven days of arrival to the officer in charge of the Police station within the limits of which the new place of residence is situate. The facts are as follows:—

Bhagelu was convicted and sentenced to a term of imprisonment which he served in the jail at Gorakhpur. On the expiry of his term when released from jail he went to the Police Station at Gorakhpur (Kotwali) and reported himself. His home, that is, his place of residence was in a village within the limits of Police station Khampur. He was directed to report himself at Khampur Police Station. He failed to do this. He did not go home but went away to Patna. He, therefore, if the jail is to be deemed as the place of his residence at the time of his release, was changing his place of residence either for his own home in the Khampur Police Circle or for Patna, and it was his duty to report this change of residence or his intended change of residence. If on the other hand it is deemed that his old home at Khampur was still his residence, if he intended to go to Patna, it was still his duty to report himself and to give information of his intended change of residence at the Khampur Police Station. He failed to do this. Whatever view one may take of the facts, it is quite clear that he failed to comply with the terms of the notification, and he, therefore, committed an offence which falls under section 22, sub section 2, and not under section 22, sub section 1, which is the section under which the Assistant Sessions Judge has convicted him. The decision of the Court below is, therefore, wrong in so far as the conviction has been held under section 22, sub-section 1, clause (c). The conviction in view of the previous convictions could only have been under section 22, sub-section 2, clause (b), the maximum sentence for which is one of one year together with a fine. I, therefore, allow the application to this extent that I alter the conviction to one under section 22, sub-section 2, clause (b) of the Criminal Tribes Act. The man has already undergone something over three months' imprisonment and he has, pending the decision of this application, been admitted to bail. Under these circumstances I do not think it necessary to inflict a punishment greater than that which he has already undergone. I, therefore, reduce the sentence to a term equal to that which the accused has already suffered. He, therefore, need not surrender to his bail. If not on bail, he will be released.

Conviction altered.

UPPER BURMA JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

CRIMINAL REVISION No. 889 OF 1919.

November 19, 1919.

Present:—Mr. Pratt, J. C.

CHATTER SINGH DAMAI—

APPLICANT

versus

EMPEROR—RESPONDENT.

Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), ss. 447, 448—House-trespass—Entry into house at invitation of wife of owner with intent to commit adultery—Offence.

During the temporary absence of the complainant from his house his wife invited the accused to the house, who entered it with the intent to commit adultery:

Held, (1) that the complainant could not be said to have ceased to be in possession of his house because of his temporary absence; [p. 228, col. 2.]

(2) that the accused, having entered the house with the intent to commit an offence, was guilty of house-trespass. [p. 228, col. 2.]

Mr. R. C. J. Swinhoe, for the Applicant.

JUDGMENT.—Applicant Havildar Chatter Singh Damai of the Military Police Band has been convicted of criminal trespass and sentenced to one year's rigorous imprisonment.

The facts are that complainant, a Lance-Naik in the Myitkyina Battalion, suspected his wife of an intrigue and set a trap to catch the delinquent. He announced his intention of going on a shooting expedition and then set a watch on his house.

Applicant was caught in the house at night and there is no doubt that he went with the intention of committing an offence and on the invitation of complainant's wife. The sole point for consideration is whether he is guilty of house-trespass, when he entered on the invitation of the wife, who was in actual physical possession of the house.

The learned Sessions Judge has solved the difficulty by holding that possession by the wife is possession of the husband, but the objection to this solution is that the logical corollary to his view would seem to be that an invitation by the wife would be an invitation by the husband. Although the wife was in actual physical possession, it cannot be held that the husband ceased to be in possession of the house because of his temporary absence.

This would lead to the obviously impracticable position that a man ceased to be in possession of property, as soon as he leaves it temporarily, and on this view supposing the wife in her husband's absence invited a man to the house, and the man came, while she was also out for the time being, the house would be in no one's possession.

I have not been able to find any precisely similar case, though one would imagine many such have been before the Courts.

Tok Gyi v. Emperor (1), on which the learned Advocate relies, does not appear to be of much assistance, as the alleged trespasser in that case entered by permission of the pongyi in actual possession and moreover there was no intention to commit an offence. The present is not a case of juridical as opposed to actual possession.

The Upper Burma case of Queen-Empress v. Nga Tun Bye (2) and the Lower Burma case of Po Kin v. Crown (3) are not parallel, because in those cases, although the accused entered the house on the invitation of an inmate, his intention was merely to keep an assignation and not, as in the present case, to actually commit an offence.

The nearest parallel I have been able to find is the case of Queen Empress v. Kangla (4), where accused was found to have entered complainant's house with intent to commit adultery. In that case the conviction was upheld, but there is nothing to show whether the husband was actually in the house at the time or not, and the record is silent as to whether the accused came on the wife's invitation.

The definition of criminal trespass in section 441 of the Penal Code runs:—

"Whoever enters into or upon property in the possession of another with intent to commit an offence, or to intimidate, insult, or annoy any person, in possession of such property, or, having lawfully entered into or upon such property, unlawfully remains there with intent thereby to intimidate, insult, or annoy any such person, or with intent to commit an offence, is said to commit 'criminal trespass.'"

It is to my mind clear that the essentials of the section have been complied with.

Applicant undoubtedly entered into property in the possession of another and with intent to commit an offence.

Even if it can be assumed that the original entry was lawful, because it was in possession of the wife, it ceased to be lawful, when applicant remained on the house with intent to commit adultery.

If the section is construed literally, the offence was committed as soon as the house was entered even on the view that the wife was in possessior, since it cannot be said possession by the wife was possession by her lover, or that it was not the possession of another so far as applicant is concerned.

I hold, however, that although the wife was in actual physical possession, the husband did not cease to be in possession.

The section does not lay down that the property must be in the sole possession of another.

The rejoinder to this argument is to quote the case of Prankrishna Chandra, In the matter of the petition of (5), wherein it was held that the entry of a stranger into a family dwelling house, with the permission and license of one of the members, is not criminal trespass.

I see no reason to doubt that the law as laid down in that ruling is sound so far as it goes, but unfortunately there was no intention to commit an offence in that particular case.

Although in the present instance the wife was in possession of the house and invited the accused there, the husband was legally in possession as well, and the intention was to commit an offence, which constituted an infringement of the rights of the husband.

Applicant must have known full well that the house owner would not consent to his entry for the purpose of committing adultery with his wife.

I see no reason to suppose that the conviction was wrong in law.

Applicant has, however, been sentenced to the maximum sentence of imprisonment admissible by law.

(1) 35 Ind. Cas. 810; 8 L. B. R. 425; 10 Bur. L. T. 77; 17 Cr. L. J. 378.
(2) U. B. R. (1897-01) I, 354.
(3) 1 L. B. R. 355.
(4) 23 A. 82; A. W. N. (1900) 208.
(5) 6 B. L. R. App. 80.

The offence is a serious one, but I do not think undue stress can be laid upon the point that the accused was a person of inferior caste.

I reduce the sentence to six months' rigorous imprisonment, which is to my mind sufficiently severe to meet the merits of the case.

Sentence reduced.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.
CRIMINAL REVISION No. 482 OF 1919.
July 21, 1919.
Present:—Mr. Justice Bevan Petman.
RAM KISHEN—PETITIONER
versus
EMPEROR—RESPONDENT.

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), s. 345—Composition of offence with one of several accused persons, effect of.

The composition of an offence under section 345 of the Criminal Procedure Code with one of several accused persons has not the effect of an acquittal of all the accused persons. [p. 230, col. 1.]

Revision from the order of the Sessions Judge, Lahore, dated the 29th March 1919, modifying that of a Magistrate, 1st Class, Lahore, dated the 8th March 1919, convicting the petitioner.

Mr. Ram Chand Manchanda, for the Petitioner.

Mr. Mul Chand, Public Prosecutor, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—Five persons were prosecuted under section 324 of the Indian Penal Code for assaulting and causing injuries to the complainant. Of these one, Mohni, was absconding and proceedings under section 512 of the Code of Criminal Procedure were taken against him. One accused was discharged by the Magistrate trying the case and the complainant compounded the offence with two others who were, therefore, acquitted. The petitioner Ram Kishen was, therefore, alone before the Court and he was convicted under section 324 of the Indian Penal Code and sentenced to six months' rigorous imprisonment and a fine of Rs. 50 or, in default of payment, to further rigorous imprisonment for four months. Mohni, the absconder, was subsequently arrested; but the complainant compounded his offence and he, too, was acquitted. The petitioner appealed and was so far successful that the Appellate Court, holding that it was not proved that he had used a knife, altered the conviction to one under section 323 of the Indian Penal Code, but the sentence was maintained.

For the petitioner it is contended that when the offence was compounded in respect of some of the accused, it had by operation of law the effect of an acquittal of the remaining accused and that, therefore, the Magistrate had no jurisdiction to continue the trial of, and convict, the petitioner, and that the conviction was illegal. It was further argued that the position was similar to a suit for damages against joint tort-feasors where if one defendant pays the damages or the plaintiff obtains satisfaction from him, the remaining defendants are no longer liable. Reliance is placed on Chandra Kumar Das v. Emperor (1) and Emperor v. Mulo (2). In the former case the facts were that a complaint was pending against certain accused, only some of whom were before the Court. The complainant intimated to the Court that he had compounded the offence and desired to withdraw his complaint and the Magistrate allowed the withdrawal. The Magistrate had, however, issued process against two other accused, and on their appearance had overruled an objection taken on their behalf, to the continuance of the proceedings, that the offence had been compounded. The Calcutta High Court held that the Magistrate's order was erroneous and that "if in the case of a compoundable offence the complainant intimates to the Court that he had compounded it and desires to withdraw his complaint, the order passed by the Magistrate allowing the withdrawal is in respect of the offence and not solely in regard to the persons actually under trial at the time, and it seems to us that, in so providing, the law contemplates that all the accused persons should be under trial at the same time before a Judicial Officer, unless in some exceptional circumstances, such as their absconding, or sickness or some such reason, the attendance of some of them cannot be obtained." The Court remarked that it did not appear why the Magistrate had not issued process to these accused at the same time as to others and proceeded: "we think, therefore, that the complaint is compounded in respect of the offence committed so as to include the parties who are now under trial and that further proceedings against them must be stayed."

(1) 7 C. W. N. 176.
(2) 19 Ind. Cas. 948; 14 Cr. L. J. 292; 6 S. L. R. 284.

The decision in Muthia Naick v. Emperor (3) is against the present contention. In that case the decision of a Division Bench is very brief and as follows:—

"Petitioner's Vakil contends that the composition of an offence under section 345 of the Code of Criminal Procedure with one of several accused persons has the effect of an acquittal of all the accused persons. We can find nothing in the section to support this interpretation and if this is really the meaning of the learned Judges in Chandra Kumar Das v. Emperor (1), we must respectfully dissent. No other authority is quoted by petitioner."

The petition was accordingly dismissed.

I entirely agree with the above decision of the Madras High Court. I doubt whether the learned Judges of the Calcutta High Court intended to lay down the general proposition of law now attributed to them; but if they did, I am not prepared to follow them. The case is not analogous to a suit for damages against joint tort-feasors. The second ruling relied on is not really in point. I hold that the contention is bad in law and reject it.

With regard to the sentence, the complainant is apparently a man who in the case of some of the accused regards his wrongs as met by an apology, though probably accompanied by money; and under these circumstances I do not think a severe sentence is called for. It is suggested that the petitioner was too poor to meet the complainant's demands. I see also that the Magistrate awarded the present sentence under section 324, Indian Penal Code, and that although the lower Appellate Court altered the conviction to one under section 323, Indian Penal Code, it did not reduce the sentence. I think justice will be met by my present order. I maintain the conviction but reduce the term of imprisonment to the period already undergone which is roughly about $2\frac{1}{2}$ months, and maintain the fine. To avoid remanding the petitioner to jail his Counsel tendered Rs. 50, the amount of fine, which money has now been deposited in the office of this Court. I direct that the petitioner be discharged from his bail bond.

Sentence reduced.

(3) 43 Ind. Cas. 592; 41 M. 823; 19 Cr. L. J. 176.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL REVISION No. 61 OF 1920.

April 8, 1920.

Present:—Justice Sir P. C. Banerji, KT.

BHAGGI LAL—PETITIONER

versus

EMPEROR—OPPOSITE PARTY.

Public Gambling Act (III of 1867), s. 6—U. P. Public Gambling (Amendment) Act (I of 1917), s. 3—Common gaming house, what is.

Where upon the search of a house persons are found therein engaged in gambling and instruments of gaming are also found, and there is evidence that the owner made a profit by allowing his house to be used as a place for gambling, it must be presumed under section 6 of the Public Gambling Act, as amended by the U. P. Public Gambling (Amendment) Act of 1917, in the absence of evidence to the contrary, that the house in question is a common gaming house. [p. 231, col. 1.]

Criminal revision against the order of the Magistrate, 1st Class, Allahabad, dated the 26th December 1919.

Mr. Zahur Ahmad, for the Applicant.

The Assistant Government Advocate, for the Crown.

JUDGMENT.—Bhaggi Lal, the applicant, has been convicted under section 3 of Act III of 1867, as amended by Act I of 1917, of the Local Council for keeping a common gaming house. The applicants in the connected case No. 50 have been convicted under section 4 of the said Act. It has been found that in a house which was owned or kept by Bhaggi Lal a large number of persons (about 65) were discovered by the Police gambling on a particular night. The Police had obtained a warrant under section 5 of the Act and the validity of the warrant is not questioned. It is not disputed that gambling was going on in that house and that the persons who were arrested and who have been convicted were gambling there. The main contention is that the house was not a common gaming house within the meaning of the Act. That depends upon the further question whether instruments of gaming were found in the house. Under the definition of the expression "instruments of gaming" as given in section 2 of Act I of 1917, an instrument of gaming includes any article used as a means or appurtenance of, or for the purpose of carrying on or facilitating gaming. In the present case certain articles were found in the house called solahis which are couries, and these were used as a means for carrying on gambling. Therefore, the articles found in the house were instruments of gaming. As the house was searched under a warrant properly issued and instruments of gaming were found in the house, that circumstance is under section 6 of the Act evidence that the house was used as a common gaming house, unless the contrary was proved. In the present case there is no evidence to the contrary. Therefore, under section 6 it must be presumed that the house in question was a common gaming house. In addition to this a witness was examined, who deposed that Bhaggi Lal was making a profit and charging a commission for the use of his house for purposes of gambling on that particular night. It is stated that the witness was an approver and, therefore, his evidence ought not to be accepted without corroboration. It appears that the witness, whose name was Mujahid Khan, was examined under section 10 of the Act. The Court was competent to examine him on oath and his evidence, if believed, could be acted upon and if the Court was of opinion that he had made a true statement, it might grant him a certificate freeing him from prosecution in connection with the gambling. This, it seems, was done in the present case. Whether a certificate was granted or not is immaterial, but no pardon had been granted to the witness and he was not examined as an approver within the meaning of the Code of Criminal Procedure. As already stated, he was examined by the Court in exercise of the authority which the Court had under section 10 of the Act. Thus in the present case we have first of all the presumption that by reason of the discovery of instruments of gaming in the house occupied by Bhaggi Lal, the house was a common gaming house, and we have the additional fact that there is positive direct evidence that he used to make a profit by allowing his house to be used as a place for gambling. Bhaggi Lal has, therefore, been rightly convicted. It necessarily follows, from the fact that the other persons were gambling in the common gaming house kept by Bhaggi Lal, that their conviction is legally correct. I have been asked to interfere with the sentence as being excessive. This was a bad case of gambling in which a large number of persons of various castes had assembled together and no less than Rs. 1,400 were found in the possession of the men who were carrying on the gambling. In these circumstances I do not think I should be justified in interfering with the sentence. I accordingly dismiss the application.

Application dismissed.

PATNA HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL APPEAL No. 232 OF 1919.

February 3, 1920.

Present:—Mr. Justice Mullick and Mr. Justice Sultan Ahmed.

PERTAP RAI AND ANOTHER—APPELLANTS

versus

EMPEROR—RESPONDENT.

Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), ss. 149, 325—Charge under s 325 read with s. 149—Conviction under s 325, legality of—Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), ss. 236, 237, 238.

If an accused person is charged with grievous hurt under section 325 read with section 149 of the Penal Code, he cannot be convicted of the substantive offence under section 325, Indian Penal Code, such a course not being warranted by the provisions of sections 236, 237 and 238, Criminal Procedure Code. [p 234, col 1]

Jatindra Nath Chaterjee v. Emperor, 11 C. W. N. 666; 34 C. 698; 5 Cr. L. J. 427, followed.

Criminal appeal against the order of the Sessions Judge, Sonthal Parganas at Dumka, dated the 23rd September 1919.

PERTAP RAI v. EMPEROR.

Messrs. S. P. Varma and Surendra Nath Dey, for the Appellants.

The Assistant Government Advocate, for the Crown.

JUDGMENT.

MULLICK, J.—This is a case which arises out of a family dispute among some Rajputs residing in Mouza Choa. It appears that there was a dispute about land between Pratap on the one side and the deceased Kashi on the other, who was the son of Pratap's brother Mahatab. On the morning of the 4th of June last Kashi had driven away Pratap's labourers from the field and had come back to his house and was lying down reading. The evidence shows that he was a school master by profession.

Pratap is thereupon alleged to have gone with 15 others to Kashi's room, pulled him out and assaulted him with lathis. Kashi was assisted by his cousin Banwari and Banwari's sons Parbhu, Darshan and Jagar Nath. The allegation also is that Mahatab and his son Prayag joined Kashi's side, while Hublal, the brother of Mahatab, together with his servants and dependents assisted the accused, and an attempt has been made in the course of the trial to ascribe the fatal blow to Hublal himself. That allegation has been disbelieved by the learned Sessions Judge and although the Assessors found that Hublal, Pratap and his son Jagar Nath joined in the attack which resulted in the death of Kashi, the learned Judge has acquitted Hublal and convicted only Pratab and Baij Nath of the offence of causing grievous hurt under section 325, Indian Penal Code, and sentenced them to rigorous imprisonment for four years each.

It appears that Pratap and Baij Nath arrived at about 9 A. M. at the Thana and made a complaint to the officer in charge. At 11 A. M. Hira, a relation of the deceased, arrived at the Thana and made a complaint as to the assault upon Kashi. The officer in charge did not ascribe very much importance to the case and told Hira to fetch the wounded man. When Hira returned he found that Kashi was dead and after some delay in obtaining bearers to carry the corpse, he reached the Thana again at about 7 P. M. when a regular first information was recorded.

The Sub-Inspector arrived at the place of occurrence the next day and arrested 16 persons, all members of the family or servants and dependents of the family. Three out of these 16 were discharged by the Committing Magistrate, while the remaining 13 were committed for trial for offences under sections 147 and 304 read with section 149, Indian Penal Code.

The learned Sessions Judge in his judgment, which is not altogether satisfactory, found we think that there was no unlawful assembly because the assailants of Kashi did not number 5. He thinks that only Pratap and Baij Nath attacked Kashi in his room and caused the injuries which resulted in his death.

The medical evidence shows that Kashi had three injuries on the head and face, which were probably the result of one lathi blow. He had also three injuries on other parts of the body, two of which were probably caused by lathis and one by a fall. There is also evidence to the effect that Parbhoo, Darshan, Jagarnath and Prayag on Kashi's side received injuries probably caused by lathi blows.

On the side of the accused the only persons hurt were Pratap and Baij Nath.

The statement of Pratap and Baij Nath, though not very clear as recorded by the Committing Magistrate, would seem to show that the defence was that there were two occurrences on that day, the first of which was a quarrel in the early morning between Pratap and Baij Nath on the one side and Banwari and Mahatab on the other about some civil appeal, in the course of which they were assaulted by some members of Banwari's party. They state that they then went to the Thana, that while Pratap remained on in the Bazar, Baijnath returned home alone and that on his return he was further assaulted by his former assailants.

Though the learned Sessions Judge has not discussed the evidence with sufficient fulness, we have ourselves examined it very carefully and we are not satisfied that his reasons for disbelieving the allegation that there was an unlawful assembly and a riot are well founded. We think that he has acquitted 11 of the 13 accused before him against the weight of evidence. At least as regards 7 there was clear evidence that they joined in the attack upon Kashi in his room and afterwards in his yard.

It is true that the witnesses Parbhoo, Jagarnath, Darshan and Prayag are relatives of those who were in dispute with Kashi, but having regard to the circumstance that the dispute is one between members of the same family and that the occurrence took place in the family homestead at a time and at a place where no independent witness could have been available we think that the learned Judge was wrong in rejecting the prosecution story and substituting a theory of his own.

We do not think it would be proper to reject the prosecution story and at the same time without any evidence at all to hold that it was Pratap and Baij Nath who struck the fatal blow. At the trial an attempt was made to show that Hub Lal and Baij Nath gave the deceased one or two lathi blows while he was lying on the yard and while his remaining assailants were running away. Possibly the object of the witnesses who made this statement was to fix Hub Lal and Baij Nath with the fatal injury. But reading the whole evidence it seems clear that the fatal injury was inflicted when the seven men who were armed with lathis pulled the deceased out and attacked him in the verandah and before he was knocked down. It is difficult in these circumstances to say what particular part each played in the attack, and it is for that reason that the Committing Magistrate charged the accused before him with offences under sections 147 and 149 read with section 304, Indian Penal Code. As to those whom the learned Sessions Judge has acquitted we think that there was evidence to support the charges, but we are not now concerned with their acquittal.

Mr. Varma who has said all that it was possible to say on behalf of his clients has suggested to us that it would be extremely dangerous if we were to accept the prosecution case against Pratap and Baij Nath, for that would amount to a reversal of the findings upon which the acquittal of the remaining accused was based and might be taken by the Crown as an invitation to appeal against their acquittal. We have no concern with that contingency. What we have to see is whether the learned Sessions Judge was right in rejecting the allegations as to rioting and constructive culpable homicide not amounting to murder in respect of Pratap and Baij Nath. We think that inspite of the discrepancies between the statements made by the eye witnesses before the Police and those made by them before the Sessions Court, the witnesses have substantially told the truth as regards the assault.

It may be conceded that the witness Darshan, although he now professes to have seen the whole of the attack from beginning to end, did not really arrive till Kashi had been knocked down. The other discrepancies seem, in my opinion, neither serious nor material and making the fullest allowance for Mr. Varma's contentions, I think it is abundantly established that more than five persons attacked Kashi, that Pratap and Baij Nath were members of that unlawful assembly, the common object of which was to beat Kashi for having resisted the cultivation of the lands in dispute, and that the fatal blow was inflicted in prosecution of that common object.

Mr. Varma has attempted to suggest that the slightness of the other injuries upon the body of Kashi indicates that the lathi blow on the head was an accident. We are quite unable to accept this suggestion. There can be no doubt from the position of the injuries that they were inflicted voluntarily and having regard to the fact that lathis do and are commonly expected to cause death if directed at the head of the victim, there can be no doubt that the assailants knew that death was likely to result.

In these circumstances we think the conviction under section 325 should be set aside and the conviction under section 149 read with section 304, Indian Penal Code, be substituted therefor. The sentence for four years' rigorous imprisonment will remain unchanged.

We may observe that the appellants were in fact charged before the learned Judge under sections 147 and 304 read with 149, Indian Penal Code, and that while convicting them under section 325, the learned Court has passed no orders under sections 149 and 304. We desire to draw the learned Judge's attention to the case of Jatindra Nath Chatterjee

v. Emperor (1) where it was held that if an accused is charged with grievous hurt under section 325 read with section 149, Indian Penal Code, he cannot be convicated of the substantive offence under section 325, Indian Penal Code, such a course not being warranted by the provisions of sections 236, 237 and 238, Criminal Procedure Code.

SULTAN AHMED, J.—I agree.

Appeal dismissed.

(1) 11 C. W. N. 696; 34 C. 698; 5 Cr. L. J. 427.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL REVISION No. 100 OF 1920.

April 17, 1920.

Present :—Mr. Justice Piggott.

BHOLA NATH—PETITIONER

versus

EMPEROR—OPPOSITE PARTY.

Public Gambling Act (III of 1867), ss. 3, 6—Presumption as to occupation—Warrant, issue of, legality of—Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), s. 260—Summary trial—Non-appealable sentence—Judgment, contents of—Trials, separate—Judgment, joint, legality of.

Where there is a fair presumption under section 6 of the Public Gambling Act that a person is the occupier, or has the use of a room, within the meaning of section 3 of the Act, as a common gaming house, the issue of a warrant is not illegal. [p. 235, col. 1.]

In the case of two separate trials where the law requires a judgment to be written in each, it is improper to record a single judgment. [p. 234, col. 2.]

In a summary trial, where a non-appealable sentence is passed, the Magistrate need only record a finding and his reasons therefor. [p. 234, col. 2.]

Criminal revision against the decision of the District Magistrate, Allahabad, dated the 13th January 1920.

Mr. E. A. Howard, for the Applicant.

The Assistant Government Advocate, for the Crown.

JUDGMENT.—Bhola Nath has been convicted on a summary trial of the offence of keeping a common gaming house punishable under section 3 of Act III of 1867. The Magistrate tried two persons Bhola Nath and Basdeo, separately on the alternative charge that either they were keepers of a common gaming house, or they were engaged in gaming in a common gaming house and thereby liable to punishment under section 4 of the same Act. He has convicted Bhola Nath alone under section 3 and Basdeo under section 4. He at the same time conducted under the procedure prescribed by Chapter XXII of the Criminal Procedure Code a separate trial of a number of persons for having committed an offence punishable under section 4 aforesaid at the same time and place. The first objection taken is that the Magistrate has written a single judgment in both trials. I do not think that the writing of a single judgment in two separate trials, where the law requires a judgment to be written, is commendable. If two separate cases are so closely connected together that the trial Court thinks a single judgment would sufficiently cover the two separate cases, the best course to adopt is to write a detailed judgment containing a complete recital of the facts in what seems to be the more important of the two cases, and it would not be objectionable as a rule to refer to such recital in the separate judgment recorded on the less important case. At the same time the Court should always be careful to see that evidence which is only admissible in one of the two cases is not referred to or put forward as a reason for a conviction in the case in which it is not relevant. In the trial which I am now considering, the sentence passed was non-appealable and the Magistrate was under no obligation to write a judgment at all. All that the law required of him was a finding accompanied by a brief statement of his reasons for finding the accused guilty. The only question which really arises with regard to the procedure followed in this case is whether or not a statement made by one Muhammad, who was not on his trial along with Bhola Nath and Basdeo, has or has not been used as one of the reasons for finding Bhola Nath guilty. The learned Sessions Judge has referred to Muhammad's statement in the order which sets forth his reasons for finding Bhola Nath guilty and I think it may fairly be contended that he has made use of Muhammad's statement against the applicant Bhola Nath. The question which then arises is whether, with reference to the provisions of section 167 of the Indian Evidence Act, it does or does not appear to this Court that, independently of Muhammad's statement, there was sufficient evidence to justify the conviction. I am decidedly of opinion that there was. Objection is taken to the irregularity of the warrant on the strength of which the gaming house in question was raided by the Police, but I am satisfied with the reasons given by the Magistrate for holding that the warrant was perfectly legal. The facts set forth in the record before me show that the Court had abundant grounds for applying the presumption laid down by section 6 of the Public Gambling Act, III of 1867. On the strength of that presumption alone, it should have been found that the room in question was being used as a common gaming house. There was other evidence before the Court. One Jokhu had been brought before the Magistrate as one of the persons found by the Police in the gaming house at the time of their raid. He was lawfully examined by the Magistrate and his statement is clear that gambling was going on at the time of the Police raid and that it was going on for the benefit of Bhola Nath. Under the circumstances of the case I think the Magistrate would have been warranted in recording a conviction based upon Jokhu's evidence, taken in connection with the other facts observed by the Police Officers and the search witnesses at the time of the raid. Over and above this we have the fact that the room in question was over a Thakurdwara which had been dedicated by Bhola Nath. Indeed the defence in the Magistrate's Court went so far as to allege that it was actually part of the Thakurdwara. There was, therefore, as the Magistrate remarks, a fair presumption that Bhola Nath was the occupier of this room, or at any rate had the use of this room, within the meaning of section 3 of Act III of 1867. I think there can be no doubt upon the facts set forth in the Magistrate's order that Bhola Nath was rightly convicted. The sentence passed seems to me by no means inappropriate under the circumstances. I reject this application.

Application rejected.

PATNA HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL REVISION No. 354 OF 1919.

November 3, 1919.

Present:—Mr. Justice Das.

JHARI SINGH AND OTHERS—PETITIONERS

versus

EMPEROR—OPPOSITE PARTY.

Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), ss. 143, 297—Offence under s. 297, gist of—Trespass, meaning of—Interpretation of Statutes—Legal term, meaning of.

The gist of an offence under section 297 of the Penal Code is trespass, and before a person can be convicted under that section it must be proved that there was a trespass by him with the intention and in the places mentioned in the section. [p. 238, col. 1.]

The term "trespass" means an unjustifiable intrusion upon property in possession of another person. [p. 238, col. 2.]

In interpreting a Statute, the settled rule of construction is that where the Legislature uses a legal term which has a known significance, it must be assumed that the term has been used in that sense and in no other. [p. 238, col. 1.]

Criminal revision against the order of the Sub-Divisional Magistrate, Gaya, dated the 16th September 1919, with power under section 407 (2), Criminal Procedure Code, dismissing the appeal of the petitioners against the order of the 2nd Class Magistrate, Nawadah, dated 29th August 1919.

FACTS appear from the judgment of the Appellate Court, which was as follows:—

"The dispute which has given rise to this case relates to a tank, called Nokhar Pokhar, near Nawadah surrounding an ancient and sacred temple of the Swetambari sect of the Jain community on or about the site of which Goutam Swami, a famous and eminent Jain saint, is said to have entered into Nirvana more than 2,000 years ago.

The temple and its vicinity or precincts, therefore, are regarded as a place of great sanctity by the whole Jain community and are annually resorted to as a sacred place of pilgrimage by the people of that community.

From a religious point of view this case seems to me to be of more than ordinary importance, so as to demand a very careful and scruplous consideration of the facts and circumstances which have transpired in the evidence adduced in this case.

The occurrence is said to have taken place on the 5th of January last in the bed of the aforesaid tank, from which the six appellants with others are alleged to have caught and destroyed fish with the avowed object of wounding the feelings and insulting the religion of the Jains who go to the temple and tank for purposes of worship and pilgrimage.

A brief account as to how the great delay has occurred in the trial of this case has been given by the lower Court in its judgment, dated the 29th August 1919, and I need not repeat it. After the second order for further enquiry passed by the learned Sessions Judge of Gaya, the case ultimately came up for trial before Babu C. K. Mathur, Deputy Magistrate of Nawadah, with 2nd Class powers, who found the appellants guilty under section 143 and section 297, Indian Penal Code, and sentenced the first appellant to rigorous imprisonment for a month and a fine of Rs. 20 only or in default to further rigorous imprisonment for a month, and the rest of the appellants to rigorous imprisonment for a fortnight and a fine of Rs. 10 only or in default to further rigorous imprisonment for a fortnight each under the latter section (297, Indian Penal Code). He passed no separate sentence under section 143, Indian Penal Code. The appellants were charged under another section, viz., section 295, Indian Penal Code, but they were acquitted of this charge.

The present appeal is thus from that portion of the judgment of the lower Court which deals with the offences under section 143, Indian Penal Code, and section 297, Indian Penal Code. I, therefore, propose to decide this appeal on the evidence relating to the offences alleged to have been committed under these two sections.

As the outset I may remark that though the learned Deputy Magistrate has written a very long and elaborate and carefully considered judgment, he has fallen into an error of inadvertency giving rise to a marked inconsistency in his finding with regard to the offence under section 297, Indian Penal Code. While discussing the evidence bearing upon section 295, Indian Penal Code, he remarks, 'it would be too much to presume on behalf of the prosecution that because fishing is prohibited in this particular tank and not in every tank usually, this tank becomes a sacred object or place of worship.' Immediately after this he observes, 'on the other hand the circumstances of the occurrence fully comply with the provisions of section 297, Indian Penal Code. There was such a trespass on the tank for wrongful purposes according to prosecution evidence as is contemplated by the section.' If 'there was such a trespass on the tank as is contemplated by the section 297', that trespass must be in a place of worship ; and so it is quite clear that the lower Court did hold here that the tank is a place of worship and thus he contradicted his previous findings on this point. It is, therefore, necessary for this Court to examine and weigh the evidence adduced on this point with great care and scrutiny. In a previous part of his judgment the learned lower Court is emphatic with regard to the oral evidence of the prosecution that 'the evidence on the whole is believed to be true and reliable;" two witnesses, viz., P. W. No 1 and P. W. No. 6, depose distinctly that the temple and the tank round it are regarded and used as a place of worship by the Jain community. The first witness, who is a Bhat Brahman and a Vaisnava too, is the Pujari of the place and there is nothing in his evidence to show that he was not telling the truth with regard to the tank being a place of worship. P. W. No. 6 is a very respectable rich Zamindar and an Honorary Magistrate of Behar and his eldest brother is the manager of the temple. He, being a Jain himself and having visited the place on several occasions, solemnly swears that "both the temple and the tank are held sacred by the Jains and form their place of worship." I fully believe the evidence of these two witnesses on this important point of the case and that the tank surrounding the temple is a place of worship within the meaning of section 297, Indian Penal Code. The peculiar position of the tank within the precincts of the temple and its antiquity and sanctity like those of the temple itself leave no room for doubt in my mind that the Jains regard and resort to it as a place of worship.

Having found on the evidence of the two respectable and reliable witnesses referred to above that the tank is a place of worship within the meaning of section 297, Indian Penal Code, I now come to a consideration of the question whether the persons who are alleged to have caught and killed fish in the tank, did so with the intent or knowledge that the feelings of any person were likely to be wounded or that the religion of any person was likely to be insulted by the act of killing fish in that tank. It has been amply proved that there had been a keen and long standing dispute with regard to the tank and the right of the fishing in it between the Maliks and the tenants of the village on the one side and the person representing the interest of the Jains on the other, and it is admitted and proved that there has been a final decision, that no one can catch fish from this tank and that the Jains have the right to preserve and protect the fish in that tank. So far, therefore, as this right and the right of using the tank as a place of worship are concerned, the Jains are undoubtedly in possession of the tank. It is an historical fact well known to all, that the Jains are extremely averse to the destruction of life in any form, kindness to all creatures being a vital and cardinal doctrine of their religion. This point has been fully and ably discussed by the learned lower Court and I agree with it in thinking that the catching and killing of the fish in the tank was done with the intention or knowledge of wounding the feelings and insulting the religion of the Jain community. The motive for such a wanton and outrageous act of sacrilege is quite clear from the fact, as found by the learned trying Magistrate. He says, " the disappointment caused to the Zamindar for all the above reasons seems to be more than he can bear, and there can be no wonder if the present action was taken through his creatures to cause further harassment to Jain people and thereby force them sooner or later to pay a fancy price for the tank out of religious susceptibilities. That the Zamindar is heavily indebted is borne out by D. W. No. 7. I thus quite agree with the lower Court in finding that the circumstances of the occurrence fully comply with the provisions of section 297, Indian Penal Code. There was such a trespass on the tank for wrongful purposes according to prosecution evidence as is contemplated by the section.

The accused appellants denied the charges and the occurrence as well. In this connection their allegation in paragraph 15 of their written statement is significant, as indicating that they are fully aware of the wantonness and serious consequence of the act of catching and killing any fish in the tank. They have been clearly identified by the eye-witnesses as having taken an active part in the act of fishing in the tank on the 5th January last, and I agree with the lower Court in holding that the evidence of these witnesses is 'true and reliable.' I, therefore, uphold the conviction of the appellants under section 297, Indian Penal Code."

The rest of the judgment deals with the charge under section 143, Indian Penal Code, which is not material to this report.

Messrs. G. C. Das and Khurshed Husnain, for the Petitioners.

Mr. G. C. Pal, for the Opposite Party.

JUDGMENT.—The petitioners have been convicted under sections 143 and 297 of the Indian Penal Code and have been sentenced to various terms of imprisonment and fine.

The charge against the petitioners was that they caught and destroyed fish from the bed of a tank with the object of wounding the feelings and insulting the religion of the Jains to whom the tank is a place of worship. The petitioners are the servants and tenants of the Zemindar. It is found that the Zemindar is the owner of the tank and it is not disputed that the tank is in the possession of the Zemindar. But the Record of Rights is to the effect that although the tank is in the possession of the Zemindar, still no one can catch fish in the tank and that the Jains have the right to preserve and protect the fish in the tank. In other words, the Jains have a right to prevent the owner of the tank from utilising it in a particular way. In other words, they have an incorporeal right over the tank.

The Appellate Court says: "So far, therefore, as this right and the right of using the tank as a place of worship are concerned, the Jains are undoubtedly in possession of the tank." I do not at all agree with this view of law. In my view, upon the facts found and on the Record of Rights the Jains are certainly in possession of an incorporeal right, but it cannot be said that they are in possession of the tank.

That being so, could the petitioners have been convicted under section 297, Indian Penal Code? Section 297 runs as follows:— "Whoever, with the intention of wounding the feelings of any person, or of insulting the religion of any persor, or with the knowledge that the feelings of any person are likely to be wounded, or that the religion of any person is likely to be insulted, thereby commits any trespass in any place of worship, or on any place of sepulture, or any place set apart for the performance of funeral rites or as a depository for the remains of the dead, or offers any indignity to any human corpse, or causes disturbance to any persons assembled for the performance of funeral ceremonies, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to one year, or with fine, or with both."

It will be seen that the gist of the offence is trespass. Therefore, in my view, before there can be a conviction under section 297, Indian Penal Code, it must be proved that there was a trespass by the accused persons with the intention and in the places mentioned in section 297, Indian Penal Code.

I agree with the view which has very often been expressed that the word "trespass" in section 297 cannot be construed by reference to section 441. But I wholly differ from the view which has been taken, certainly in one case which was cited before me by the learned Assistant Government Advocate, that it means merely any injurious act. It is, in my opinion, a well settled rule of construction that where the Legislature uses in an Act a legal term which has a known significance it must be assumed that the term has been used in that sense and in no other sense. In Queen v. Slator (1) it was argued upon section 7 of the Corrupt Practices Prevention Act that the term "indictment" there meant criminal proceedings. The Court rejected the contention. Denman, J, said "It always requires the strong compulsion of other words in an Act to induce the Court to alter the ordinary meaning of a well known legal term" and Bowen, J., added: "The whole of the argument fails if it is not shown that there is a popular use of the term 'indictment' as including information. There is certainly no such popular use of the term among lawyers, and if there is among persons ignorant of the law it is an incorrect use of the term." In my view, trespass as a legal term means and has always meant an unjustifiable intrusion upon property in possession of another person.

The learned Assistant Government Advocate says that it means merely an intrusion and nothing more than that, and not an intrusion upon another person's possession. Adopting the words of Bowen, J., I may say that there is certainly no such popular use of the term among lawyers. Is there then a strong compulsion of the other words in that section which would induce the Court to alter the well-known meaning of the legal term? In my opinion there is not. The whole section can be read consistently by giving to the word "trespass" that meaning which has always been given to it in law.

The offence would then be committed if a person, with the intention set out in section 297, commits any unjustifiable intrusion in any place of worship, to take the case which is before us, in the possession of another person. That is the way in which I read section 297.

In this case the tank was not in the possession of the Jains and, therefore, in my view, an offence under section 297 has not been committed by the petitioners. It is conceded that if the conviction under section 297 fails, the conviction under section 147 must necessarily fail. I would, therefore, set aside the conviction and sentences passed on the petitioners and direct that the fines, if paid, be refunded.

Conviction set aside.

(1) (1881) 8 Q. B. D. 267 at p. 272; 30 W. R. 410; 51 L. J. Q. B. 246; 46 J. P. 694.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL REVISION No. 113 OF 1920.

April 14, 1920.

Present:—Mr. Justice Tudball.

RAM BARAN SINGH AND OTHERS—APPLICANTS

versus

EMPEROR—OPPOSITE PARTY.

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), ss. 345, 439—Composition of offence—Revision—High Court or Sessions Judge, power of, to allow composition.

Neither the High Court nor the Judge of a Court of Session, when sitting as a Court of Revision, has the power, in view of section 345 of the Criminal Procedure Code, to allow an offence to be compounded. [p. 239, col. 2.]

Criminal revision from an order of the Additional Sessions Judge, Mirzapur, dated the 31st October 1919.

Mr. A. P. Dube, for the Applicants.

The Assistant Government Advocate, for the Crown.

JUDGMENT.—This is an application in revision. The applicants were convicted of an offence under section 323 of the Indian Penal Code and sentenced to pay a fine of Rs. 25 each. They went in revision to the Sessions Judge and there they sought for permission to compromise the case with the opposite party. The Judge held that he had no power to allow a compromise in view of the terms of section 345 of the Criminal Procedure Code. The applicants, therefore, came to this Court. Two points are taken: first of all that the Court of the Sessions Judge had jurisdiction to allow a compromise to be filed although he had no power to acquit, and secondly, that the sentence was unduly severe. In so far as the Sessions Judge's jurisdiction to allow a compromise to be filed is concerned, I think there is no force in this application. Section 345 of the Criminal Procedure Code in clause 7 distinctly says:—"No offence shall be compounded except as provided by this section." The first four clauses of the section refer to the compounding of a case in the original Court of trial. Clause 5 says that offences may be compounded when an accused has been committed for trial or when he has been convicted and an appeal is pending only on the leave of the Court to which the accused has been committed or before which the appeal is to be heard. Clause 6 says:—"The composition of an offence under this section shall have the effect of an acquittal of the accused." There is no provision whatsoever in this section for the composition of an offence when the matter is before the Court on revision. The Sessions Judge himself clearly could not allow a composition because he had no power on revision of passing an order of acquittal. All that he could do was to refer the matter to this Court. It is urged that this Court under section 439 has, in revision, the powers given to an Appellate Court under section 423 of the Code, and it is urged that clause (d) of the latter section is quite wide enough to enable this Court to allow a composition to be filed before it on revision. That clause runs as follows:—"May make any amendment or any consequential or incidental order that may be just or proper." This, in my opinion, cannot possibly be held to enable the Court to allow a composition to be filed. A composition means an acquittal. Clause (d) is an addition to the Code which was put in in order to make it clear that when a Court came to a certain decision, either a conviction or an acquittal, it could also pass any necessary amendment which followed as a consequence on the order which had been passed in the case. It was never intended to overrule clause 7 of section 345. My attention is called to the case of Ram Piyari v. Emperor (1). On the other hand, there is another decision* by one of the two Judges who was concerned with the former, in which he has taken the opposite view. I think this latter view was the more correct. This Court has only those powers on revision which are granted to it by section 439 and no further. If the Legislature had intended to grant this Court power to allow a composition on revision, it would clearly have said so in section 345, whereas, it has not done so and has clearly stated that no offence shall be compounded except as provided by that section. The first ground for revision, therefore, fails. As regards the sentence, the applicants are not persons of any position. They no doubt were rightly convicted. The matter was a trivial one and a sentence of Rs. 25 fine was perhaps hardly called for. In this respect I allow their application. I reduce the sentence of fine from one of Rs. 25 to one of Rs. 10 in each case. The excess, if paid, will be refunded.

(1) 5 Ind. Cas. 696; 7 A. L. J. 103; 32 A. 153; 11 Cr. L. J. 205.

*See Ram Chandra v. Emperor, 28 Ind. Cas. 103; 37 A. 127; 13 A. L. J. 104; 16 Cr. L. J. 247.—Ed.

Sentence reduced.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL REVISION No. 18 OF 1920.

February 26, 1920.

Present:—Sir Lancelot Sanderson, KT., Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Walmsley.

Srimati DASSYA AND ANOTHER—PETITIONERS

versus

NIBARAN CHANDRA GHOSH—

OPPOSITE PARTY.

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), s. 133—Absence of one of the Jurors at the time of making investigation, effect of—Report of other Jurors, whether should be acted upon—Procedure.

Where in a proceeding under section 133 of the Code of Criminal Procedure only four out of the five Jurors were present at the time of the investigation:

Held, that the Magistrate should not act upon their report but should allow the proceedings to go on after appointing a fresh Jury.

Criminal revision against an order of the District Magistrate, Pabna, dated the 14th November 1919, affirming that of the Deputy Magistrate, Pabna, dated the 24th September 1919.

Babu Khitish Chandra Chuckerbutty (with him Babu Panchanan Ghosal), for the Petitioners.—The facts of the case are as follows. The petitioner No. 1 is a helpless widow and petitioner No. 2 is her dharmaputra (godson) and the opposite party one Nibaran Chandra Ghose who is related to the petitioner No. 1, tried in various ways to oust them from their homestead. The opposite party brought a case under section 133, Criminal Procedure Code, alleging that a way had been obstructed by the petitioners by raising a hut thereon. The petitioners denied the existence of the alleged way over their homestead land and five Jurors were appointed by the Court and they were asked to report on the matter. The Jurors fixed the 27th August as the date on which they would take evidence and the petitioners were ready with their evidence on that day. But the Jurors did not turn up that day and the petitioners were not informed on what date they would come and so they went to the Sadar Station, Pabna, to ascertain why the Jurors did not come on the fixed date. While the petitioners were away at Pabna to ascertain the date, four out of the five Jurors arrived on the spot without giving any notice to the petitioners and took ex parte evidence and submitted their report to the trying Magistrate.

The learned Magistrate, relying on the ex parte report, found against the petitioners. The petitioners then moved the District Magistrate against that order of the lower Court but he did not interfere in the matter.

My first submission is that the Courts below erred in law in relying upon the ex parte report of the Jurors.

My second point is that the report of the Jurors is defective as only four out of the five Jurors were present at the time of the investigation.

My third point is that proper notice should have been given to the petitioners on the expiry of the date fixed on the first occasion.

Babus Debendra Nath Bagchi and Mohini Mohan Bhattacharjee, for the Opposite Party.—I have filed a counter-affidavit showing that one notice was given to the petitioners and that the absentee Juror was a nominee of the petitioners who stayed away on 3 more occasions only to put obstacles in the way. Evidence was duly taken from neutral parties. There has not been any failure of justice. The report may also be taken as one under section 141, Criminal Procedure Code. Refers to Durga Charan Das v. Sashi Bhusan Guho (1).

JUDGMENT.—In this case we make this Rule absolute. The Rule was granted on the second ground that the report of the Jurors was defective as only four out of the five Jurors were present at the time of the investigation and so the report was illegal and it ought not to have been relied on. It appears that the Magistrate acted upon the report. In our judgment he should not have done so. He should have appointed a fresh Jury and allowed the proceedings to go on with the fresh Jury.

The Rule is made absolute. The Magistrate must appoint a fresh Jury.

Rule made absolute.

(1) 13 C. 275 at p. 279; 6 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 693.

KANNAN NARAYANAN v. MUTHALPUREDATH RAMUNNI.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 1467 OF 1918.

October 2, 1919.

Present:—Mr. Justice Spencer and Mr. Justice Krishnan.

KANNAN NARAYANAN alias NARAYANAN MOOPIL MOOSSAD—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

MUTHALPUREDATH RAMUNNI MENON (DEAD) AND OTHERS—DECEASED DEFENDANT No. 7 AND DEFENDANTS NOS. 1 TO 5, 8 AND 9 AND LEGAL REPRESENTATIVE OF DEFENDANT No. 7—RESPONDENTS.

Limitation Act (IX of 1908), Sch. I, Art. 116—Suit to recover arrears of rent under registered kanom deed—Limitation.

The period of limitation applicable to a suit to recover arrears of rent from the assignee of a person holding under a registered kanom deed is contained in Article 116 of Schedule I to the Limitation Act. [p. 242, col. 1.]

Second appeal against the decree of the Court of the Subordinate Judge, South Malabar at Calicut, in Appeal Suit No. 4 of 1918 (Appeal Suit No. 520 of 1917 on the file of the District Court, South Malabar), preferred against the decree of the Court of the District Munsif, Walluvanad, in Original Suit No. 188 of 1916.

Mr. C. V. Ananthakrishna Aiyer, for the Appellant.

This second appeal coming on for hearing on the 22nd of July 1919, the Court delivered the following JUDGMENT.—The second appeal is dismissed as against 9th respondent (legal representative of 7th defendant) with costs. On the finding in appeal the 8th defendant is liable to pay arrears of rent. He is not represented in this second appeal.

We must ask the lower Appellate Court to return a finding on the questions

1. What arrears of rent were due from the 8th defendant.

2. What amount, if any, was payable by plaintiff for redemption after setting off arrears on the date of the first Court's decree.

Findings will be submitted in six weeks, and seven days will be allowed for filing objections.

In compliance with the order contained in the above judgment the Subordinate Judge of South Malabar at Calicut submitted the following

FINDING.—The High Court has called upon me to record findings on the following two issues:—

1. "What arrears of rent were due from the 8th defendant."

2 "What amount, if any, was payable by plaintiff for redemption after setting off the arrears on the date of the first Court's decree"

* * * * * * *

I, therefore, find that the arrears of rent due from the 8th defendant for the six years claimed in the plaint is Rs. 449-2-8 and that for the three years immediately preceding the suit is Rs. 157-13-7. In addition to the rent, 8th defendant is also liable to pay the revenue of the properties. Interest has been allowed by the Court on arrears of revenue at 6 per cent. per annum. The revenue due from the 8th defendant for the six years claimed in the plaint will be Rs. 47 12-9 with interest and that due for the three years immediately preceding the suit with interest will be Rs. 15-11-2.

3. 2nd Issue:—The Kanom on the entire property is Rs. 91-6-10. The value of improvements due to 1st defendant in respect of item No 2 is Rs. 97-8-10 and that due to 7th defendant is Rs. 10 6-3. The arrears of rent for the six years as found above come to Rs. 455 5-1 from defendants Nos. 1 and 8 and the total amount of revenue claimed in the plaint with interest at 6 per cent. per annum comes to Rs. 111 11-1. The plaintiff is entitled to set off the whole arrears against the Kanom and value of improvements and the plaintiff is not liable to pay anything for redemption after setting off the arrears to the date of the first Court's decree.

This second appeal coming on for final hearing after the return of the finding of the lower Appellate Court upon the issues referred to by this Court for trial, the Court delivered the following JUDGMENT.—We must accept the findings now submitted, as the respondents do not appear and file any objection.

The 8th defendant will be liable to pay the arrears of rent claimed by the mortgagor landlord in the place of the 7th defendant, as he is the assignee of the former's right and the rent claimed accrued after the date of the assignment. We think the landlord is entitled to 6 years' arrears from the 8th defendant, for even though his liability arises from his privity of estate, the result of such privity is to make him bound by the covenants in the registered Kanom deed. As the rent is payable under such a covenant, we think that Article 116, Indian Limitation Act, applies against him also. With all respect to the learned Judge, we are unable to follow the ruling of Miller, J., in Naduvil Edom Kelu Achan v. Varadarau Aiyar (1). We observe the learned Judge does not say what article applies to the case in his view, though he holds against the application of Article 116 of the Limitation Act.

Plaintiff cannot, however, get a decree for a larger amount for arrears than what was given to him by the 1st Court's decree, as he did not appeal against it.

In the result we must modify the decree of the lower Appellate Court by substituting the 8th defendant for the 7th defendant in paragraphs 2 and 4 of the 1st Court's decree. Plaintiff will be paid his costs of this second appeal by the 8th defendant. Time for redemption will be three months from this date.

M. C. P.

Decree modified.

(1) 24 Ind. Cas. 481; 26 M. L. J. 283.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

APPEAL FROM ORDER No. 145 OF 1919.

March 5, 1920.

Present:—Justice Sir N. R. Chatterjea, KT., and Mr. Justice Panton.

FANNY EMMELINE PETERSON—OPPOSITE PARTY—APPELLANT

versus

EARNEST HENRY SHAVE AND ANOTHER—PETITIONERS—RESPONDENTS.

Guardianship—Mother—Natural right of mother to have custody of her child, whether can be given up for good by agreement—Child made over by mother to another to be brought up as the latter's own—Mother, whether precluded from claiming it back—Circumstances depriving mother of her natural right—Expectations or associations.

A mother cannot be deprived of her natural right of absolute control over her own child by any agreement. Therefore, the mere fact that the child was made over by its mother to another to be brought up by the latter as her own, or even a definite agreement never to claim it back, would not preclude her from having the custody of her own child. But there may be circumstances in a particular case which would render it undesirable in the interests of the infant that the mother should resume her rights over it when she has once made over the child to another, and associations or expectations have been created on the part of the infant When there are no such associations or expectations which it would be undesirable in the interests of the infant to disturb or disappoint, the Court exercising the jurisdiction of the Crown over infants would not deprive the mother of her natural right of guardianship over her child. [p. 244, col. 2; p. 246, col. 1.]

Appeal against the order of the Judge, 24 Parganas, dated the 21st of March 1919.

FACTS appear from the judgment.

Mr. Avetoom (with him Mr. J. W. Chippendale), for the Appellant.—A mother cannot enter into a contract to give away her child to another for ever. By giving away the child to be brought up by the aunt for some time, the mother does not lose her natural right of guardianship. A person can acquire no lien on the person of a child for costs incurred for its maintenance. In the absence of the father the Court, in determining who is entitled to have the custody of the child, should give effect to the mother's wishes in respect of the care, maintenance and education of the child. See Queen v. Barnardo Jone's case (1). The Court exercising the jurisdiction of the Crown over infants should give effect to what will be for the interest and welfare of the infant. It cannot be argued that the mother, by placing the child in the care and custody of the aunt, has created expectations which the Court in the interests of the infant would not disturb. There is, again, no suggestion whatever against the character of the mother or as to her fitness, which would disentitle her to act as the guardian of her son. There is absolutely nothing to deprive the mother of her natural right of control over her infant son.

(1) (1891) 1 Q. B. 194; 64 L. T. 72; 39 W. R. 195

My next point is that the lower Court had no jurisdiction to pass the order under appeal in view of the fact that for more than 9 months in the year the child was living in Allahabad outside the jurisdiction of the Court which passed the order. The child must be within the jurisdiction of the Court; otherwise the order of the Court will be of no effect.

Mr. Renfrey (with him Babus Nogendra Nath Ghose and Uma Charan Laha), for the Respondents —The objection as to jurisdiction was not taken in the lower Court and is, moreover, a purely technical one.

As to the merits I submit that the right of the mother as guardian of her infant son should not be permitted to be capriciously exercised: when the natural guardian has permitted another to maintain and educate her child, she should not be allowed arbitrarily or capriciously to alter the mode of its maintenance and education, or to take it from the custody in which she has allowed it to remain. See Agar Ellis, In re; Agar Ellis v. Luscelles (2). The law on the subject is clearly laid down by their Lordships of the Judicial Committee in Annie Besant v. Narayaniah(3). Their Lordships in that case approved of the decision in Lyons v. Blenkin (4). Reads Trevelyan's Law relating to Minors at page 70.

The child was made over to my client absolutely to be brought up as her own. There is no dispute that she loves the child dearly and she herself and are husband are giving every comfort and education to the child. Your Lordships should not interfere unless it is necessary in the interests of the child.

Mr. Apcar toom, in reply.—The decision in Annie Besant v. Narayaniah(3) really supports my contention. The guardian of the child in the exercise of his discretion may entrust the custody and education of the child to another, but this delegation of authority is essentially revocable and if the welfare of the infant requires it, the natural guardian can, notwithstanding any contract to the contrary, revoke the authority and take custody of the child once more into her own hands. The only consideration for your Lordships would be whether the mother by placing the child in the custody of the aunt has created associations or given rise to expectations which your Lordships would not disappoint or disturb in the interests of the infant.

JUDGMENT.—This appeal is against an order appointing Ernest Henry Shave and his wife Ethel Mary Shave joint guardians of a minor named John Christopher Peterson—under Act VIII of 1890. Mrs. Shave is the aunt (mother's sister) of the minor. The application of Mrs. Shave and her husband was opposed by Fanny Emmeline Peterson, the mother of the infant. The infant is the posthumous son of Alfred Peterson, who died by an accident on the 15th January 1911, and was born on the 25th August 1911 at Darjeeling. He was, therefore, about $7\frac{1}{2}$ years of age at the time when the application was made and is about $8\frac{1}{2}$ years now. Mr. Peterson at the time of his death was the manager of a sugar factory earning Rs. 375 a month and commission, and on his death Mrs. Peterson was left in a destitute condition. She had four other children whom she placed in charitable institutions, two of the boys went to La Martiniere, the elder being now an apprentice in the Lilooah Workshops. The third boy is at Kalimpong and the daughter is on the Bruce Foundation at Mussouries.

When the infant was between two and three months old, Mrs. Peterson brought him to her sister Mrs. Shave in Calcutta and made him over to her as she was going to be trained as a nurse. In so doing she acted very properly and she at once went through a course of training as a nurse so that she might earn her own livelihood, and be in a position to maintain her children.

(2) (1883) 24 Ch D. 317; 53 L. J. Ch. 10; 50 L. T. 161; 32 W. R. 1.

(3) 24 Ind. Cas. 290; 41 I. A. 314 at p. 320; 27 M. L. J. 30; 18 C. W. N. 1089; 1 L. W. 5 0; (1914) M. W. N. 585; 16 M. L. T. 165; 20 C. L. J. 253 16 Bom. L. R. 625; 12 A. L. J. 1155; 38 M. 807 P. C.).

(4) (1821) Jacob 245; 37 E. R. 842; 23 R. R. 38.

The respondent's case is, that the child was made over to her absolutely to be brought up as her own. Mrs. Peterson, on the other hand, says that she never agreed that the child should stay permanently with the Shaves and did not part with him for good. It appears, however, from Exhibit 1, a "Progress Book" in the handwriting of Mrs. Peterson, that the "baby was made over to my sister, his aunt, to bring up as her own." It also appears from the evidence that in 1914, Mrs. Peterson and Mrs. Shave went to the Rev. Mr. Henderson with a project of re-christening the child. It further appears that the infant calls Mrs. Shave his mother, and Mrs. Peterson "aunt Emmy." There is no doubt, therefore, that the child was made over to Mrs. Shave to be brought up as her own. There is also no doubt the evidence that Mrs. Shave and her husband are very fond of the child and have treated him like their own child. The boy was at school at Allahabad at the time when the application for guardianship was made; but is now, we are told, at school at Kurseong.

Mrs. Peterson, after being trained as a nurse, joined the Cambell Hospital and also had private practice and in January 1919 got an appointment at Darjeeling as sister in-charge of the Victoria Hospital. There her pay is Rs. 160 a month with a free furnished house and permission to have private practice, which is worth Rs. 60 to Rs. 80. She wants the minor, now that she is in a position to maintain and educate him. She says: "I want the minor as he came after my husband's death and I am fonder of him than of the others. I propose to send him as a day-boy to the Diocesan School."

The learned District Judge says: "Upon the evidence I find that Mrs. Peterson resigned all her rights over the child almost from the time of his birth, that she contributed nothing towards his maintenance, and that up till quite recently when she quarrelled with Mrs. Shave, she made no attempt to recover possession of him. I find, on the other hand, that the Shaves have supported the child uninterruptedly from the time he was made over to them up till the present time, that they are as fond of him as he is of them, and that he has been brought up to regard them as his parents. The question, therefore, for decision is whether Mrs. Peterson is now entitled to rescind her agreement of surrender and recover possession of the infant. It has always been a well established principle of the Court, when the natural guardian has permitted another person to maintain and educate his child, not to permit him arbitrarily or capriciously to alter the mode of its maintenance and education, or to take it from the custody in which he has allowed it to remain," and referring to the observations of Cotton, L. J., Agar Ellis, In re; Agar Ellis v. Lascelles (2) held that Mrs. Peterson cannot successfully maintain her claim. He accordingly declared Mrs. Shave and her husband joint guardians of the minor. Mrs. Peterson has appealed to this Court.

We do not think that the mere fact that the child was made over by the mother to Mrs. Shave to be brought up by her as her own, or even a definite agreement never to claim it back, would preclude her from having the custody of her own child. It is well settled that the mother cannot be deprived of her natural right of absolute control over her own child by any such agreement. But there may be circumstances in a particular case, which would render it undesirable in the interests of the infant that she should resume her rights when she has once made over the child to another, and associations or expectations have been created on the part of the infant.

In the case of Queen v. Barnardo, Jone's case (1) Lord Esher, M. R., discussing the rights of the mother of a legitimate child, observed:—"What are the rights of the mother of a legitimate child? It is her undoubted right, if there is no father living, to have the company and care of and the control over her own child. That is the law of England founded on the law of nature. If that be the mother's right, it follows that with regard to the actual care of and control over the child, she may nominate some one else to have the same right as she has herself to take care of and have the control over it. It cannot be denied that she may say to what school her child shall be sent or that she may choose its tutors or its governesses. She may say, 'I wish the child to be placed under the care and control of this or that person', and if there is no good reason to the contrary, the law will enforce her wish. In the present case, the child is in the actual care of Dr. Barnardo, being there of the mother's own free will. More than that, she has by an agreement undertaken not to take the child away. The law is perfectly clear that parents cannot bind themselves by any such agreement. No such agreement can deprive a parent of the right of absolute control over his or her own child. This applies precisely to the mother of an illegitimate child She cannot by any agreement absolve herself from the duty of taking care of it. The existence of the agreement is, therefore, immaterial. Then comes the question—the child being in the actual care of Dr. Barnardo and the mother desiring to have it placed in the care of some one else—which of the two is it to be given to? The Court is bound to give effect to the wish of the mother even though the child be illegitimate, unless there is some good reason to the contrary. Is there in this case any reason to the contrary? She did right, in my opinion, in giving up the child to Dr. Barnardo, being herself unable to take care of it. After leaving to him all the trouble and expense of taking care of it for 18 months, she comes forward and says, 'I want my child back'" After discussing the circumstances the learned Judge came to the conclusion that there was nothing to entitle the Court to say that she should not be allowed to exercise her natural and legal rights with respect to her child.

That was a case of an illegitimate child and yet the Court of Appeal held that in determining who is entitled to have the custody of and control over an illegitimate child, the Court will, in a proper case, give the same effect to the mother's wishes in respect of the care, maintenance and education of the child as it gives to the wishes of the father of a legitimate child in those respects.

In Agar Ellis, In re; Agar Ellis v. Lascelles (2), referred to above, the Court of Appeal held that a father has a legal right to control and direct the education and bringing up of his children until they attain the age of 21 years, even although they are Wards of Court, and the Court will not interfere with him in the exercise of his paternal authority except (1) where by his gross moral turpitude he forfeits his rights, or (2) where he has by his conduct abdicated his paternal authority, or (3) where he seeks to remove his children being Wards of Court out of the jurisdiction without the consent of the Court.

The observations of Cotton, L. J., relied on by the learned District Judge are as follows:—"The father, although not unfitted to discharge the duties of a father, may have acted in such a way as to preclude himself in a particular instance from insisting on rights he would otherwise have, as where a father has allowed, in consequence of money being left to a child, the child to live with a relative and be brought up in a way not suited to its former station in life or to the means of the father. There the Court says you have allowed that to be done, and to alter that would be such an injury to the child that you have precluded yourself from exercising your power as a father in that particular respect, and then the Court interferes to prevent the father from having the custody of the child, not because he is immoral or has forfeited all his rights, but because in that particular instance he has so acted as to preclude himself from insisting on what otherwise would be his right." The question whether there are any such circumstances in the present case, which would induce the Court to interfere to prevent Mrs. Peterson from having the custody of her child, will be considered later.

On behalf of the respondent reliance was placed upon the case of Annie Besant v. Narayaniah (3). In that case, the Judicial Committee observed: "There is no difference in this respect between English and Hindu Law. As in this country so among the Hindus the father is the natural guardian of his children during their minorities, but this guardianship is in the nature of a sacred trust and he cannot, therefore, during his lifetime substitute another person to be guardian in his place. He may, it is true, in the exercise of his discretion as guardian entrust the custody and education of his children to another, but the authority he does confer is essentially a revocable authority and if the welfare of his children require it, he can, notwithstanding any contract to the contrary, take such custody and education once more into his own hands. If, however, the authority has been acted upon in such a way as, in the opinion of the Court exercising the jurisdiction of the Crown over infants, to create associations or give rise to expectations on the part of the infants which it would be undesirable in their interests to disturb or disappoint, such Court will interfere to prevent its revocation: Lyons v. Blenkin (4)."

The question, therefore, is whether in the present case there are circumstances which preclude the mother from insisting on rights which she would otherwise have, or whether the mother has acted in such a way as to create associations or give rise to expectations on the part of the infant which it would be undesirable in his interests to disturb or disappoint. In Annie Besant's case (3) the two boys were made over by their father to Mrs. Besant, who offered to take charge of them and defray the expense of their maintenance and education in England and at the University of Oxford, and by a letter affected to appoint Mrs. Besant to be guardian of their persons and authorised her to act as such from that time forward. The boys were, accordingly, sent to England by Mrs. Besant and they were prosecuting their studies at Oxford. One of them had nearly attained the age of majority. Both of them appeared by Counsel, who stated to the Court that the infants did not desire to return to India or to abandon their chance of obtaining a University education in England. The Judicial Committee pointed out that the Court in India had no jurisdiction over the boys, as they were in England when the application was made. No proceedings were taken under the Guardians and Wards Act, a suit having been brought against Besant. It was further pointed out that the order directing Mrs. Besant to take the boys back to India could not be lawfully carried out without their consent or without an order from the Court exercising the jurisdiction of the Crown over infants in England. Their Lordships, accordingly, dismissed the suit but without prejudice to any application the father of the boys might think fit to make to the High Court in England touching the guardianship, custody and maintenance of his children.

The facts in that case, therefore, are different from those of the present. Then the question is whether the Court would disappoint any expectations raised if the infant be taken away from the custody of Mrs. Shave. It appears that Mr. Shave is employed in a paulin factory at Dum Dum, his present salary being Rs. 500 per month. Besides this he earned a bonus of Rs. 3,000 last year. But he and Mrs. Shave have children of their own, a boy and a girl. It is true that they are fond of the infant and have hitherto brought him up comfortably and paid all his expenses. The boy also appears on the evidence to be attached to them. As stated above, he is now at school and they pay his expenses, which amount to Rs. 25 a month. If left to them, there is no doubt that they will educate him properly. But beyond that it does not appear that there is any question of any expectation. The appellant's position at Darjeeling now enables her to maintain and educate the child without difficulty, and in some respects compares favourably with that of the Shave who live at Dum Dum. She has a free furnished house at Darjeeling and can easily afford to send the boy to school as a day-boy. Mr. and Mrs. Shave reside at Dum Dum. In the usual course of things the boy would be at Kurseong for about eight months in the year and can only live with them during his holidays. On the other hand, he can live with his mother at Darjeeling. There is no suggestion whatever against her character or fitness to act as the guardian of her son. Her brother-in-law Mr. Peterson, examined by the respondent, said that she is a good and affectionate mother. It may be mentioned that even after the child was made over to Mrs. Shave, she often visited the child, and it is admitted that for sometime in the year 1914 both the sisters lived together in Calcutta and the infant lived with them. It does not appear, therefore, that her affection for the child has ceased. The evidence, however, as to her having paid money to her sister for the maintenance of the infant is not satisfactory, and has been rightly rejected by the Court below.

It is said on behalf of the respondent that Mrs. Peterson has four other children in charitable institutions and that she should in the first place devote herself to their interests. One of them, as already stated, is now an apprentice in the Lilooah Workshop, and it appears that she has in fact had the others to stay with her in Darjeeling during their holidays. This infant is her last child and her desire that it should be restored to her is a natural one. We are not satisfied that the interests of the infant would naturally suffer if he were taken out of the custody of Mrs. Shave, nor do we think that "the mode of the child's maintenance and education" will be materially altered.

Mrs. Peterson through her Counsel has offered to send the boy to the Shaves to live with them for a month every year.

In all the circumstances of the case, we think that the order of the Court below should be set aside. The infant will be restored to the guardianship of his mother, Mrs. Peterson.

In the circumstances we direct that the parties do bear their own costs in both Courts.

Appeal decreed.

NAGPUR JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 88 OF 1919.

March 9, 1920.

Present :—Mr. Kotval, A. J. C.

Musammat KASIDANBI AND ANOTHER—DEFENDANTS NOS. 2 AND 3—APPELLANTS

versus

GANGULAL AND ANOTHER—PLAINTIFF AND DEFENDANT No. 1—RESPONDENTS.

Evidence Act (I of 1872), s. 68—Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), s. 59—Attestation of mortgage-deed—Execution by pardanashin lady—Proof.

In the case of a pardanashin lady executing a mortgage-deed it is not essential that the attesting witnesses should actually see the executant sign or make a mark. The attestation would be sufficiently proved if there is evidence that the lady admitted that she was the executant and the deed was taken behind the pardah for her signature and after it was signed by her, the signatures of attesting witnesses who were present there were then made.

Appeal against the decree of the District Judge, Raipur, in Civil Appeal No. 25 of 1918 decided on the 19th November 1918.

Messrs. S. Ramdas and A. C. Roy, for the Appellants.

Messrs. K. K. Gandhe and D. W. Kathalay, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—The plaintiff sues on a mortgage bond purported to have been executed by the three defendants who are Muhammadans. Defendants Nos. 2 and 3 are the wives of defendant No. 1. Defendant No. 1 admitted execution and consideration. The case was heard ex parte against defendants Nos. 2 and 3. As the two attesting witnesses deposed that defendants Nos. 2 and 3 did not execute the deed in their presence, the plaintiff was allowed to prove execution by other evidence under section 71 of the Evidence Act.

The plaintiff himself as P. W. No. 3 stated that defendant No. 1's wives were present behind the pardah while the deed was written, that they themselves told him that they were defendant No. 1's wives, that defendant No. 1 took the deed to them and got it signed by them and that the signatures of the attesting witnesses who were present at the time were then made. P. W. No. 4 supports this witness and further states that he saw the women behind the pardah touch the pen and that defendant No. 1 identified them as his wives. It is to be noted that each attesting witness states in the attestation clause that the signatures and marks were made in his presence.

Both the lower Courts have held that the mortgage-deed is duly proved.

In second appeal it is urged that there has not been any valid attestation, as according to the plaintiff himself the attesting witnesses did not see the defendants Nos. 2 and 3. There is authority, however, in Harnarain Narain Singh v. Ganaur Singh (1), Isri Prosad v. Rai Ganga Prosad

(1) 3 Ind. Cas. 309; 13 C. W. N. 40.

AIDAL SINGH v. PEAREY LAL.

Singh Bohadur (2) and Sarurjigar Begam v. Baroda Kant Mitter (3) for holding that in a case like the present it is not essential that the attesting witnesses should actually see the executant sign or make a mark. Apart from this there is the evidence of P. W. No. 4 that he saw the women behind the pardah, who were identified by the defendant No. 1 as his wives, touch the pen. The lower Courts have rightly held that the deed is duly attested. No other ground is urged. The appeal fails and is dismissed with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

(2) 3 Ind. Cas 311; 14 C. W. N. 165.
(3) 5 Ind. Cas. 5.9; 37 C. 526; 14 C. W. N. 974; 11 C. L. J. 563.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.
CIVIL REVISION No. 18 OF 1920.
April 12, 19 0
Present:—Mr Justice Rafique and
Mr. Justice Piggott.
Kunwar AIDAL SINGH—DEFENDANT—PETITIONER
versus
L. PEAREY LAL AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS—OPPOSITE PARTIES

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 115—Interlocutory order deciding preliminary issues—Revision, whether entertainable.

An application for revision is not entertainable from an order deciding preliminary issues in a suit, where such order would be appealable when the suit is finally decided Civil revision against the order of the Subordinate Judge, Agra, dated the 5th February 1920.

Messrs. U. K. Baipai and N. P. Asthana, for the Petitioner.

Messrs. B. E. O'Conor and Baleshwari Prasad, for the Opposite Party.

JUDGMENT.—The two Applications Nos. 18 and 19 of 1920 are applications in revision and have arisen out of two suits filed in the Court below on foot of three mortgages. The common defence to the two suits was that they were bad for misjoinder of causes of action and of parties and that the plaintiff was seeking a partial sale which was not permissible under the law. The lower Court disposed of both the points against the applicants. They have, therefore, come up in revision to this Court and contend that the Judge of the Court below was in error in deciding the said issues against the applicants. We think that the present applications are not entertainable. The points that have been decided against the applicants can be made the subject matter of appeals if the two suits are eventually decided against the applicants. The applications, therefore, fail and are dismissed with costs, including fees in this Court on the higher scale.

MAJARADDIN KABIRAJ v. MAJIBAR RAHMAN

Application dismissed.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.
CIVIL RULE No. 323 OF 1919.
December 8, 1919.
Present:—Mr. Justice Chatterjea and Mr. Justice Panton.
MAJARADDIN KABIRAJ—PETITIONER
versus
MAJIBAR RAHAMAN BISWAS AND OTHERS
—OPPOSITE PARTIES.

Appeal—Finding of first Court not concurred in by Appellate Court—Duty of Appellate Court.

Where an Appellate Court does not find itself in agreement with the finding of the trial Court, it should come to an independent finding of its own upon the evidence on the record [p 24', cols. 1 & 2.]

Rule against the order of the District Judge, Nadia.

FACTS appear from the judgment.

Mr. K. Ahmed (with him Babu Sarat Ch. Mookerjee), for the Petitioner.—The petitioner is a private purchaser. Opposite party No. 1 is the auction purchaser. Opposite parties Nos 2 and 3 are decree holders. An application was made for setting aside the sale under Order XXI, rule 90, of the Code of Civil Procedure. The first Court set aside the sale, but on appeal its judgment was reversed by the District Judge. The property in dispute is an occupancy holding which was purchased by me sometime previous to the auction sale for Rs. 400. The value set out in the proclamation was Rs. 75 only. The property was sold at Rs 300. The first Court found, as a matter of fact, that the price was inadequate. The learned Judge relying on the finding that the price was adequate which was purely as slip of the pen, simply reversed the decision of the Munsif without giving his reasons therefor. My grievance is that the Judge proceeded on a misapprehension of the Munsif's findings and that he erred in law in not coming to an independent finding of his own on the point. A judgment of reversal ought to contain the reasons for the reversal. The case ought to go back for re-hearing.

Babu Bireswar Bagchi (for Babu Narendra K. Bose), for the Opposite Parties.—The Munsif found that the price at which the property was sold was not inadequate. The learned Judge at most misread the Munsif's judgment. The Judge distinctly stated in his judgment that he "saw no reason not to accept the findings" of the learned Munsif. I submit that amounts to an independent finding and is sufficient reason for the reversal of the learned Munsif's judgment. He must have gone through the evidence. The way in which he records his finding sufficiently bears that out. The learned Judge is perfectly right in his finding. My next point is that the case does not fall within section 115, Civil Procedure Code, inasmuch as there is no irregularity materially prejudicing the petitioner's interests, nor has the Court exercised its jurisdiction wrongfully. Refers to Kumar Chandra Kishore Roy v. Basat Ali (1). That case was not much stronger than the present one.

Mr. K. Ahmed in reply.

JUDGMENT.—It seems to us that the learned District Judge did not arrive at an independent finding of his own upon the evidence on the record, but proceeded upon a misapprehension that the Court of first instance had found that the price fetched at the sale was adequate, which was obviously due to a slip of the pen as a reading of the entire judgment will show. The learned Judge apparently did not consider that he was reversing the finding of the Munsif, as he merely says that he saw no reason not to accept the finding of the Munsif. We think that in these circumstances the Judge should come to an independent finding of his own upon the evidence on the record.

The case is accordingly remanded to the lower Appellate Court for re hearing of the appeal. Costs, one gold mohur, to abide the result.

Case remanded.

(1) 44 Ind. Cas. 763; 27 C. L. J. 418; 22 C. W. N. 627.

NAGPUR JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

FIRST CIVIL APPEAL No. 54-B OF 1916.

September 5, 1917.

Present :—Mr. Mittra, A. J. C.

PENTAYA AND ANOTHER—DEFENDANTS—APPELLANTS

versus

KESHEORAO—PLAINTIFF—RESPONDENT.

Stamp Act (II of 1899), s. 35—Unstamped document, validation of—Original not forthcoming, effect of—Document lost, contents of, proof of—Oral evidence, admissibility of—Negotiable Instruments Act (XXVI of 1881), s. 80—Pro-note—Agreement to pay interest, proof of—Secondary evidence, admissibility of—Interest, rate of, allowable—Period for which interest payable.

The procedure for validating unstamped instruments prescribed by Chapter IV of the Stamp Act has no application to an instrument the original of which is lost and is not forthcoming, as under section 35 of the Act it is only an original unstamped instrument which can be validated by payment of stamp duty and penalty. [p. 250, col. 2.]

Where the original of an instrument is not forthcoming, oral evidence to prove its contents is inadmissible [p. 251, col. 1.]

Secondary evidence of a written agreement to pay interest on a pro-note at a certain rate is inadmissible, and interest can only be awarded in accordance with section 80 of the Negotiable Instruments Act [p. 251, col. 1.]

In the case of a promissory note payable on demand, the date of the demand and not of the making of the note must be taken as the point from which to calculate interest. [p. 251, col. 1.]

Appeal against the decree of the Additional District Judge, Amraoti, dated the 9th November 1916.

Mr. G. V. Deshmukh, for the Appellants.

Mr. M. V. Joshi, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—The plaintiff sues upon a promissory note for Rs. 1,000 admittedly executed on the 20th December 1912 by PENTAYA v. KESHERAO.

Pentaya, defendant No. 1, and his son Balanna, defendant No. 2. The plaintiff claims interest at the rate of 12 per cent. per annum though the promissory note is silent on the point. The plaint alleges a promise to pay this rate of interest, but does not mention that there was a written agreement to this effect. According to the plaintiff Rs. 70 was paid on the 28th July 1913 by way of interest. The plaint says that the cause of action accrued on the 28th November 1915, as on that date the plaintiff made a final demand for payment. The defence was that there was no agreement to pay interest. The defendants denied the payment of Rs. 70 either as interest or principal. They also pleaded limitation. The plaintiff's Pleader in reply stated that the amount of Rs. 70 was specifically paid as interest and interest was agreed at 1 per cent. per mensem and the defendant No. 2 passed a chit along with the pro-note stipulating for the payment of interest. The claim was also within time according to the plaintiff by reason of an acknowledgment contained in the letter, dated 10th October 1914, written by defendant No. 2 Balanna, who was alleged to be the managing member of the family and who according to the plaintiff had authority to bind the defendant No. 1. These pleadings were recorded on the 17th January 1916. On the 21th January the defendant No. 2 was examined. He denied the letter dated 10th October 1914. No interest according to him was agreed to be paid and the amount was not to carry interest whatsoever.

The plaintiff's case is that there was a written agreement which he describes as a chit signed by Balanna, which was filed with the plaint and which he found was missing from the record on the 24th January and in lieu of which the chit 'A' has been substituted.

The lower Court has held that secondary evidence of the contents of the missing chit is admissible, inasmuch as its loss has been proved though its abstraction from the record is not believed by the learned Additional District Judge. The lower Court also finds the payment of Rs. 70 as interest, which has the effect of saving limitation. It also holds the acknowledgment (Exhibit P-9) dated the 10th October 1914 proved. According to the findings of the lower Court the two defendants are members of a joint family of which both are managers and the act of one is binding on the other. Upon these findings the plaintiff's case has been decreed in full.

The defendants have filed this appeal. The first point for consideration is whether secondary evidence was admissible to prove the contents of the missing chit. The evidence of the plaintiff and his clerk shows that at the foot of the promissory note a few words were added stating the agreement to pay interest at 1 per cent. per mensem, and this was only signed by Balanna. This slip of paper was separated from the promissory note, as the plaintiff says he was not aware whether the promissory note containing such an agreement to pay interest could be made on one anna stamp. The intention of the parties, therefore, was to treat the agreement to pay interest as something separate from the promissory note. It is admitted that the original chit was unstamped and it is also admitted that the chit 'A' is not a copy of it but substantially represents the purport of the missing chit. I am of opinion that secondary evidence is not admissible as the original is unstamped. If the original had been forthcoming, then under section 35 of the Stamp Act it could have been admitted in evidence on payment of penalty. But the procedure laid down in Chapter IV of the Stamp Act clearly shows that only original instruments can be validated by payment of the deficit stamp duty and penalty: for example, section 38 requires that the Court shall send to the Collector an authenticated copy of such instrument together with a certificate in writing stating the amount of duty and penalty levied in respect thereof. An authenticated copy of a lost instrument cannot be made, therefore, a lost instrument cannot be validated on payment of the penalty. This view is supported by the decision of the Madras High Court in Sennandan v. Kollakiran (1), which follows the earlier decision, Muttukiruppa Kaundan v. Rama Pillai 2). As

(1) 2 M. 103; 4 Ind. Jur. 499; 1 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 416.

(2) 3 M. H. C. R. 158.

Secondary evidence of the written agreement is not admissible, plaintiff is only entitled to interest in accordance with the provisions of section 80 of the Negotiable Instruments Act.

As held in Best v. Haji Muhammad Sait (3) the plaintiff can get interest at 6 per cent. per annum from the date on which the promissory note ought to have been paid. To quote from the judgment already referred to, the note being payable on demand it is not the date of the making but the date of demand that must be taken as the point from which to calculate interest. In the plaint the date of first demand is given as the 29th September 1914 and interest will be calculated from this date.

The defendants try to prove by oral evidence an agreement not to charge interest. I agree with the opinion expressed by this Court in Rangappa v. Bismilla Khan (4) that such oral evidence is not admissible. I have also not the least doubt that the defendants' story that there was an agreement not to charge interest is absolutely false. The plaintiff did not know the defendants and it was on the recommendation of a Pleader who certified to the honesty and solvency of the defendants that he was induced to lend the sum. There is nothing in the letter to indicate that the plaintiff was to finance the defendants without interest.

There remains for me to consider whether the plaintiff's suit is in time. The plaintiff has pleaded a repayment of Rs. 70 as interest. He has produced his rokar, which shows an entry that the sum of Rs. 70 was paid towards interest. The defendants deny any payment at all, whether for principal or interest. The rokar has been produced in this Court and was inspected by the learned Counsel for the appellants. There is nothing suspicious in this entry. There was no reason why the plaintiff should debit himself with Rs. 70 in 1913 when he had ample time within which to file a suit. The plaintiff and his clerk have sworn to this payment of interest. There is also the evidence of Dattatrai (P. W. No. 5), who supports the plaintiff. I hold agreeing with the lower Court that the payment of Rs. 70 as interest by both the defendants has been proved. I also agree with the lower Court that the letter (Exhibit P-9) has been duly proved and would operate as an acknowledgment and save limitation as regards one of the defendants; but it is unnecessary to go into this subject, as I have already come to the conclusion that the suit is not barred by limitation. The parties are agreed that upon the findings arrived at by me the plaintiff is entitled to Rs. 1,106 as the amount due to him on the date of the plaint. The decree of the lower Court will be modified by substituting this amount for Rs. 1,300. The appellants will pay the respondent's costs, as they have failed on all the points taken by them in the memorandum of appeal.

Appeal partly allowed.

(3) 23 M. 18; 8 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 407.
(4) 32 Ind. Cas. 238; 12 N. L. R. 9.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

MISCELLANEOUS FIRST CIVIL APPEAL No. 2467 OF 1918.

June 23, 1919.

Present:—Mr. Justice Shadi Lal.

GHANSHAM DAS—CREDITOR—APPELLANT

versus

PUBLIC BANKING AND INSURANCE COMPANY IN LIQUIDATION AND OTHERS—RESPONDENTS.

Company in liquidation—Solvency, test of—Interest after commencement of liquidation, liability to pay—Proof of interest, whether necessary.

If a company in liquidation is, or ultimately turns out to be, solvent, interest is payable upon any debts which carry interest, or upon which a right to interest has been acquired, out of the surplus assets remaining after payment of principal and interest up to the date of the winding-up order. [p 252, col .]

The solvency of a company is established by the fact that after the payment of the principal and interest up to the date of the winding-up, there are some assets which may be realized and will be sufficient to meet the liability on account of interest which accrued due after the commencement of the liquidation [p 25 , cols & .]

No proof is necessary for interest after the commencement of the winding-up, the creditor, if his debt is one that bears interest, gets it, if there is a surplus, as incidental to his debt, irrespective of the question whether any mention of the interest was made in the order adjudicating upon his claim. [p 2 2, col 2; p 253, col. 1.]

Miscellaneous first appeal from the order of the District Judge, in charge of liquidation work, Lahore, dated the 28th June 1918.

Mr. Hargopal, for the Appellant.

Mr. S. K. Mukerji, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—The appellant Ghansham Das, who purchased the deposit receipts of certain depositors, claims interest upon the debt due to him upon those receipts subsequent to the winding up. Now, so far as the claim of the creditors to recover interest after the date of the commencement of the winding-up is concerned, the law is to the following effect:—

If the company is, or ultimately turns out to be, solvent, interest is payable upon any debts which carry interest, or upon which a right to interest has been acquired, out of the surplus assets remaining after payment of principal and interest up to the date of the winding up order—vide Buckley on Companies, 9th Edition, page 474.

The question, then, is whether the assets of the company are more than sufficient to pay all moneys due at the date of the winding-up on account of principal and interest on such debts as bear interest. Now, it appears that the claims of all the creditors have either been discharged or will be discharged by the persons who have purchased some of the assets of the company and undertaken the liability to satisfy those claims. Further, it is beyond dispute that the contributories have so far paid only Rs. 50 in respect of their shares of Rs. 100 each, and can be called upon to pay the balance of the money due upon those shares. There are certainly surplus assets out of which interest subsequent to the winding up can be paid to the creditors, and I cannot understand why the District Judge says that the company is "as a matter of fact not solvent at the present moment." The solvency of the company has been fully established by the fact that after the payment of the principal and interest up to the date of the winding up there are some assets which may be realized and will be sufficient to meet the liability on account of interest which accrued due after the commencement of the liquidation.

The legal right of the creditors of this Company to recover subsequent interest does not, therefore, admit of any doubt, and the next question is whether the appellant has, by his act or conduct, forfeited his right. Now, so far as the meeting of the creditors and the contributories convened for the 16th February 1918 is concerned, it is sufficient to say that the notice convening the meeting confined itself to the question of the sale of the debts of the Company, and the matter of interest to be payable to creditors was neither mentioned in the notice nor taken up at the meeting. The appellant's absence from the meeting cannot, therefore, debar him from recovering interest.

It appears that the appellant was, prior to the purchase by him of the deposit receipts, Superintendent of the Liquidation Office, and consequently acquired information which he utilized in order to benefit himself at the expense of the creditors. His conduct is no doubt reprehensible, but there is nothing that extinguishes his legal right to recover interest.

Mr. Mukerji for the liquidator contends that as neither the appellant nor his predecessors-in interest originally prayed for interest after the commencement of the winding up, he cannot now ask the Court to award him interest. As pointed out by Stiebel in his book on Company Law, page 1222, no proof is necessary for interest after the commencement of the winding up; the creditor, if his debt is one that bears interest, gets it, if there is a surplus, as incidental to his debt. To the same effect are the following observations by Buckley, J, in the well-known case Duncan Co., in re (1):—

"Now what do you admit to proof for dividend in the winding up of a Company? The amount of the debt at the commencement of the winding-up. That has nothing whatever to do with the payment of interest accruing due after the winding-up, if the Company turns out to be solvent. There could not, until the fact of solvency was ascertained, be a right to claim that interest. The sum for which proof can be made is the amount which is entitled to rank for dividend against the assets to such an extent as they will go."

(1) (1905) 1 Ch. D. 207; 74 L. J. Ch. 183; 92 L. T. 103; 53 W. R. 298; 12 Manson 38.

The Company has now turned out to be solvent, and the creditor is consequently entitled to subsequent interest irrespective of the question whether any mention of the interest was made in the order adjudicating upon his claim.

Though the appellant is entitled to interest out of the surplus assets of the Company, I do not think that he can recover it from the persons who have purchased some of the assets of the Company. The liability of the vendees depends upon the contract entered into by them; and upon that point the learned District Judge, who settled the matter at the meeting held on the 16th February 1918, says "that no mention of interest was made, that none proposed to pay interest, and I myself in writing the order never intended that interest should be paid." This concludes the question so far as the liability of the vendees is concerned.

For the aforesaid reasons I accept the appeal so far as to hold that the appellant is entitled to interest out of the money which is yet to be realized from the contributories. The District Judge is directed to make such call upon the contributories as is sufficient to discharge the claim for interest. In view of the conduct of the appellant described above, I leave the parties to bear their own costs in this Court.

Appeal accepted.

UPPER BURMA JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 214 OF 1919.

December 1, 1919.

Present:—Mr. Pratt, J. C.

MA YE BAW AND ANOTHER—DEFENDANTS—APPELLANTS

versus

MAUNG SHWE HMAN AND ANOTHER—PLAINTIFFS—RESPONDENTS.

Mortgage—Redemption, suit for—Mortgage converted into sale—Sale, validity of, whether can be questioned by mortgagor.

Plaintiff sued to redeem a mortgage effected by himself. The defence was that the plaintiff had converted the mortgage into a sale, and this was established. Plaintiff objected to the validity of the sale on the ground that he had no power to effect it:

Held, that plaintiff had no locus standi to impugn the validity of the sale. [p. 254, col. 1.]

Mr. O. G. Pillay, for the Appellants.

Mr. P. N. Bose, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—Plaintiff, Maung Shwe Hman, sued for redemption of two plots of land.

His case was that the land had been mortgaged orally by his father, Maung Te to defendant, Ma Ye Baw, and her deceased husband, Maung San, for Rs. 10 fifteen years previously.

Subsequently after Maung Te's death Maung Shwe Hman took a further advance of Rs. 50 from Maung San on the same land. The land being undivided ancestral estate, plaintiff asked that his two sisters and co-heirs, Ma Ein Zan and Ma Me Nyan, might be given an opportunity to be added as plaintiffs.

Ma Me Nyan was brought on as plaintiff by her own desire and nominated Shwe Hman as her attorney. The plaint was not otherwise changed. The Court of first instance found that five years ago there was a dispute between Shwe Hman and Maung San because the latter refused to allow redemption of the land. On the suggestion of the village Pongyi the matter was referred to arbitration and in accordance with the decision of the elders Maung San paid a further sum of Rs. 50 and converted the mortgage into an outright sale. The suit was accordingly dismissed.

In the first Court the Advocate for plaintiff argued that in any case there could be no valid sale without the consent of the co-heirs.

The Court, however, found that as they were in the village and did not object, this contention had no weight and in any case they could still sue to set aside the sale transaction.

As a matter of fact plaintiffs were not entitled to be heard on the question of the validity of the sale, which was not in issue, without first amending the plaint.

Plaintiff, Shwe Hman, relied on a mortgage effected by him. The defence was that he had converted the mortgage into a sale and this was proved. Plaintiff, having alleged a mortgage and the transaction having been proved to be a sale, had no locus standi to impugn the validity of the sale. Obviously, if he had power to effect a mortgage, he could effect a sale, and in any case he could not be allowed to take advantage of his own malfeasance.

The first Appellate Court found that the sale was proved but that, the consent of the co-heirs not having been obtained, it was invalid and granted a mortgage decree.

This was to my mind entirely without justification. There can be no doubt at all that in the transaction Shwe Hman acted as head of the family and for his sisters. They must have been well aware of the transaction, which was referred to the arbitration of the elders at the suggestion of the Pongyi. They did not protest nor did they take any steps to set aside the sale.

Even when one of them joined plaintiff's suit, she did not suggest that her brother had not the power to mortgage the property.

It must be assumed, therefore, that the sale was effected by Shwe Hman with the consent of the co-heirs

Apart from the question of consent the question of the validity of the sale did not arise in the pleadings and plaintiffs were not entitled to succeed on a case, which they had not set up.

I reverse the finding and decree of the District Court and restore the finding and decree of the Township Court with all costs.

Appeal decreed.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 1140 OF 1915.

May 22, 1919.

Present:—Mr. Justice Broadway and Mr. Justice Abdul Raoof.

BRIJ LAL—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

DURGA AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), s. 244—Execution of decree—Sale of share of co-parcener in joint Hindu family—Purchaser, position of—Suit for partition and allotment of share, maintainability of.

A suit by the auction-purchaser of the share of a Hindu co-parcener in joint family property for partition of the joint property and delivery to him of what might be allotted to the share of the judgment-debtor would not be barred by the provisions of section 244 of the Civil Procedure Code of 1882 The mere fact that the decree-holder himself is the purchaser would make no difference. [p. 256, cols. 1 & 2]

Second appeal from the decree of the Senior Subordinate Judge, Ferozepore, dated the th February 1915, affirming that of the Munsif, 2nd Class, Zira, District Ferozepore, dated the 17th December 1913.

The Hon'ble Bakshi Sohan Lal, for the Appellant

Mr. Shamir Chand, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—The facts of this case are as follows :—

One Ganpat Rai obtained a money decree for Rs. 939 inclusive of costs on the 10th August 1899 against one Lajpat. On the 25th August 1899 an application was made asking for the attachment and sale of Lajpat's share in certain property, which belonged to a joint Hindu family of which Lajpat was a member. The other members of the family objected to the attachment in that form, contending that Lajpat's share should first of all be ascertained. This was done and the share was found to be 1/6th of the property sought to be attached. Accordingly this 1/6th share was sold on the 4th June 1901 and purchased by Ganpat. The sale was duly confirmed and the necessary sale certificate issued. Ganpat then applied for possession by partition of the share purchased by him, to which request the other members of the family objected on the ground that no possession could be given until the property had been partitioned. On the 22nd November 1902 an order was made by the Court concerned directing that the purchaser should sue for partition in a separate suit as partition could not be effected in execution proceedings. Nothing further was done until the 10th June 1913, when the present suit was instituted by the son of Ganpat. This suit was dismissed on a preliminary objection, the Court holding that a separate suit was barred by the provisions of section 47, Civil Procedure Code. The learned District Judge on appeal upheld this decision and the plaintiff appellant has thereupon come up to this Court.

The Courts below have relied on Bhaga Shah v. Bura Shah (1) and Sheo Narain v. Nur Muhammad (2). Bhaga Shah v. Bura Shah (1), however, is not really in point as the sale had never been confirmed, while Sheo Narain v. Nur Muhammad (2) was overruled by a Full Bench of the same Court in a decision reported as Bhaguati v. Banwari Lal (3). On the other hand, the present case is similar to that reported as Yelumalai Chetti v. Srinivasa Chetti (4), where it was held that the only right acquired by the Court sale was a right to effectuate the sale by a suit for partition of the joint property of the co-parceners and the delivery to the plaintiffs of what might be allotted to the share of the judgment-debtor. It was further held that the executing Court was not competent, on a mere application for execution by the purchaser, to enforce the right of the purchaser by an order for partition. That case dealt with a purchaser at the sale other than the decree-holder and to that extent might be considered distinguishable from the present one. In Bhagwati v. Banwari Lal (3) it was held, however, that the mere fact that the purchaser was also a decree holder made no difference. It seems to us that these two decisions are correct. Before the decree could be given effect to and possession made over, it was obviously necessary that a partition should first be effected. Whether or not section 47, Civil Procedure Code, would empower the executing Court to effect partition, it is perfectly clear that section 244 of the old Code did not give an executing Court such powers. We accordingly follow the two decisions referred to above and hold that the present suit is not barred.

We accept the appeal and setting aside the orders of the Courts below return the case to the Court of first instance for disposal in accordance with law. Stamp on this appeal will be refunded and other costs will follow the event.

Appeal accepted; Case remanded.

(1) 58 P. R. 1888.
(2) 30 A. 72: 5 A. L. J. 20; A. W. N. (1908) 12.
(3) 1 Ind. Cas. 416;31 A. 82 (F. B); 6 A. L. J. 71; 5 M. L. T. 185.
(4) 29 M. 294.

UPPER BURMA JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

CIVIL APPEAL NO. 239 OF 1919.

November 20, 1919.

Present:—Mr. Pratt, J. C.

MA ON ME—APPELLANT

versus

MA PYA GYI AND OTHERS—RESPONDENTS.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 151, O. XLI, r. 23—Ex parte decree—Appellate Court, power of, to remand case—Inherent power, when to be exercised.

An Appellate Court has inherent power not only to reverse a decree passed on evidence given by the plaintiff only, the defendant being ex parte, but also to direct a re-trial of the case. [p 256, col 1.]

The question whether it is necessary for the ends of justice to exercise such power of remand must depend upon the circumstances of the particular case and in exercising such jurisdiction, the Court must be careful to see that its decision is based on general legal principles and subject to the rule that if the Code does contain specific provisions which would meet the necessities of the case in question, such provisions should be followed and the inherent jurisdiction should not be invoked. [p 256, col. 1.]

Mr. S. Mukerjee, for the Appellant.

Mr. P. N. Bose, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—Plaintiff obtained an ex parte decree against defendants.

On appeal the District Court held that the case ought not to have been proceeded with ex parte and remanded the case for hearing of evidence for the defence and judgment on the merits.

It is not necessary to recapitulate the facts of the case. Suffice it to say that I entirely agree with the first Appellate Court that the trying Court ought not to have proceeded ex parte, still less to have refused to allow defendants to contest the suit, when they petitioned against the ex parte trial.

It is contended on appeal in this Court that as the suit had not been disposed of on a preliminary point, the lower Court of Appeal had no power to remand the suit under Order XLI, rule 23. This is on the face of it a correct view of the law. The Judge in his order does not, however, quote any particular rule of law and apparently considered he was entitled to remand the suit for hearing on its merits under his inherent powers as a Court.

There is ample authority for this view.

In Perumbra Nayar v. Subrahmanian Patter (1) a Bench of the Madras High Court held that notwithstanding sections 562 and 564 of the Code an Appellate Court has inherent power under such circumstances not only to reverse a decree passed on evidence given by the plaintiff only, the defendant being ex parte, but also to direct a re trial of the case.

This ruling was followed by a Full Bench of the same Court in Sadasiva Krishna Ayyar v. Kuppan Ayyangar (2) and I fully agree with the reasoning of the learned Chief Justice in that case.

A similar view was taken by a Full Bench of the Calcutta High Court in Abdul Karim Abu Ahmed Khan Ghuznavi v. Allahabad Bank Limited 3).

It was there laid down that the question whether it is necessary for the ends of justice to exercise such power of remand must depend upon the circumstances of the particular case and in exercising such jurisdiction, the Court must be careful to see that its decision is based on general legal principles and subject to the rule that if the Code does contain specific provisions which would meet the necessities of the case in question, such provisions should be followed and the inherent jurisdiction should not be invoked.

Accepting these reservations, the present case was one, where a remand for disposal on its merits was clearly the most satisfactory solution of the case.

(1 23 M. 445; 10 M. L. J. 61; 8 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 712.

(2 30 M. 54; 1 M. L. T. 268; 16 M. L. J. 479.

(3) 41 Ind. Cas. 698; 21 C. W. N. 877; 26 C. L. J. 49; 44 C. 929.

Defendants were entitled to have the case re-opened, whilst a mere remand for further evidence and a decision of the case on its merits by the first Appellate Court would not have been satisfactory.

The facts in Maung Htu v. Maung Che (4) were different, as the evidence on both sides was recorded and the trial complete before the remand by the Appellate Court was made. There is nothing in that judgment, which conflicts with the view that the first Appellate Court has in a case like the present inherent power to remand a suit for hearing and disposal on its merits. I hold the Court had inherent power to pass the order which it did and that the exercise of the power was justified by the circumstances of the case

The appeal is dismissed with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

(4) C. A. No. 120 of 1918.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 2516 OF 1915.

May 21, 1919.

Present:—Mr. Justice Scott-Smith and Mr. Justice Martineau.

HIRA AND ANOTHER—DEFENDANTS—APPELLANTS

versus

BUTA—PLAINTIFF AND BHUDHU AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Hindu Law—Widow—After-born son, whether divests his mother's estate from date of birth or from date of father's death—Alienation by enceinte widow, legality of.

The rights of a son under Hindu Law in the estate left by his father commence at birth and not before. Therefore, an after-born son divests his mother's estate as a widow from the moment of his birth and not from the moment of his father's death. Between the date of the death of her husband and that of the birth of her son, the widow is competent to alienate her husband's property for necessity. [p. 258, col. 2; p. 259, col. 1.]

Second appeal from the decree of the District Judge, Jullundur, dated the 27th May 1915, confirming that of the Munsif, 1st Class, Jullundur, dated the 14th November 1914.

Bakhshi Tek Chand, for the Appellants.

Mr. Kanwar Narain, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—The house and site in suit belonged to Thakur, who died in May 1911. On the 4th of July 1911 his widow, Musammat Ralli, sold the property to defendants Nos. 3 and 4. The plaintiff, who is the son of Thakur, sues for possession contesting the validity of the sale effected by his mother. He brought the suit under the impression that his mother had sold the property as his guardian during his minority, but it turned out that she had sold it as its owner, five days before the plaintiff was born.

The Munsif held that the plaintiff, who was in his mother's womb at the time of his father's death, was in contemplation of law actually existing at that time, and that on his birth he divested the estate of his mother whose title was inferior to his own. He held in consequence that at the time of the sale the plaintiff was the owner of the property and not Musammat Ralli, and that, therefore, the sale by her was void. He accordingly passed a decree in the plaintiff's favour without going into the question of necessity.

On appeal the District Judge held that any action taken by Musammat Ralli in regard to the property should be regarded as action taken by a guardian on behalf of an infant in the womb and would have to be justified by necessity. He did not, however, go into the question whether necessity for the sale had been proved or not. He upheld the decree, apparently on the ground that a widow with child was not competent to alienate property to which she would have no right if the child turned out to be a son—a position which seems hardly consistent with the view first expressed by him that she could sell for necessity.

The defendants have preferred a second appeal to this Court. The appeal came before a learned Judge in Chambers, who referred the following question to a Division Bench:—

Under Hindu Law was the plaintiff's mother, Musammat Ralli, absolute owner of the property in dispute during the interval between her husband's death and the birth of the plaintiff, who was in her womb at the time of the death of her husband, and was she empowered under Hindu Law to sell the said property as owner thereof shortly before the plaintiff was born?

Mr. Tek Chand, who appears on behalf of the appellants, informs us that his argument was not correctly understood by the learned Judge. He does not contend that Musammat Ralli was the absolute owner of the property during the interval between her husband's death and the plaintiff's birth, but contends that she was the owner with the usual widow's estate, with power to alienate only for necessity. The question referred to the Division Bench does not, therefore, arise. The learned Counsel on both sides have, however, agreed that the appeal should be decided by this Bench, and it has accordingly been argued before us.

It is not disputed that the right of succession under Hindu Law vests immediately on the death of the owner of the property and cannot remain in abeyance, nor is it disputed that the plaintiff divested the estate of his mother whose title was inferior to his own, and that he is competent to contest the validity of the sale. The question is only whether Musammat Ralli's estate was divested from the date of the plaintiff's birth or from the date of his father's death.

Jatindra Mohan Tagore v. Ganendra Mohan Tagore (1) is cited by Mr. Kanwar Narain on behalf of the respondents to show that under Hindu Law a gift to a child en ventre sa mere is valid. That ruling does not cover the point before us.

In Sabapathi v. Somasundaram (2) it was held that under Hindu Law a son conceived was equal to a son born, and that accordingly an alienation by a Hindu to a bona fide purchaser for value was liable to be set aside by a son, who was in his mother's womb at the time of the alienation, to the extent of his share.

Mangli v. Sobha Singh (3) was a case in which a suit was brought for pre-emption by a person who had not been born at the time of the sale. The Court held that under Hindu Law a child begotten had, if

(1) 9 B. L. R. 377 (P. C.); 18 W. R. 359; 2 Suth. P. C. J. 642; 3 Sar. P. C. J. 82.

(2) 16 M. 75; 2 M. L. J. 244; 5 Ind. Dec. (N. s.) 761.

(3) 20 Ind. Cas. 272; 1 P. L. R. 1914; 218 P. W. R. 1913.

subsequently born, all the rights of a child in existence.

In Minakshi v. Virappa (4) it was held that in accordance with Hindu Law obtaining in the Madras Presidency the right of a son in the womb to ancestral property could not be defeated by a Will or gift.

Ram Krishna v. Tripurabai (5) relates to the effect of an adoption by a Hindu widow on a transfer previously made by her of a part of her estate. That case is not in point as the transfer was one made without necessity.

In Hanmant Ramchandra v. Bhimacharya (6) it was held that a posthumous son took the family property by right of survivorship on the principle of relation back to the time of the father's death, which applied in the analogous case of inheritance and partition, and that the rights of such a son stood on the same footing as those of a son in esse at the time of the father's death.

On behalf of the appellants Mr. Tek Chand has referred to (i) paragraph 499 of Mayne's Hindu Law, 8th Edition, in which it is stated that a child who is in the mother's womb at the time of the death is, in contemplation of law, actually existing and will on his birth divest the estate of any person with a title inferior to his own who has taken in the meantime; (ii) West and Buhler's Digest of Hindu Law, 3rd Edition, Volume 1, at page 803, where it is stated that it is only on the actual birth of the son that his co-ownership arises; and (iii) Bamundoss Mookerjee v. Musammat Tarinee (7), which is a judgment of the Privy Council in an appeal from a decision of the Sudder Dewanny Court of Bengal.

This last judgment appears to settle the question in dispute. Their Lordships of the Privy Council said that they entirely agreed in the principles laid down in the judgment of the Sudder Court, and expressed their entire concurrence in the judgment of that Court on the question of law. We have, therefore, to return to the judgment of the Sudder Court in that case to see what was decided.

The question in the case was whether a widow, who had been empowered by her husband to adopt a son, could sue in her own right for a share of the ancestral estate. The argument for the appellant was that a widow having permission to adopt was to be regarded as enceinte. The Court accordingly went into the question whether a son's rights in the estate commenced at birth or while he was in the mother's womb, remarking on page 181: "If no text can be shown for the suspension of the rights of a widow actually pregnant, it is still more certain that there is no similar provision for divestiture of right in the case of a widow held only to be constructively pregnant of a son through the effect of a permission to adopt." The learned Judges quoted the following passage from Colebrooke's translation of the Dayabhaga, Chapter 1, section 45: "They who are born and they who are yet unbegotton, and they who are actually in the womb, all require the means of support; and the dissipation of their hereditary maintenance is ensured." With regard to this passage they observed that the very terms of the text providing for sons yet unbegotton referred to a contingent and future, and not to a present, right. At page 183 they said: "The afterborn son's right is to his share of the estate as it stands at the time of his birth, and not retrospectively with reference to its state at any supposed period of his conception." Further on, at page 184, with reference to a remark made by a certain commentator, they said: "Here is an express and indeed, to our minds, a conclusive reference to actual birth after the death of a father as the period of commencement of right." Again on page 189, the learned Judges remarked: "The truth is that the supposition of a positive and actual right vested in an embryo which may never come into full existence is one which must almost be rejected on the mere statement of it."

It is clear, therefore, from the above mentioned judgment of the Sudder Court of Bengal, which was adopted in its entirety by the Privy Council, that the rights of a son under Hindu Law in the estate left by his father commence at birth and not before. Even it this were not so, the widow would still be competent to make an alienation for the benefit of her unborn child. To hold that she cannot alienate any of the property left by her husband at all till the child is

(4) 8 M. 89; 9 Ind. Jur. 21; 3 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 62.
(5) 1 Ind. Cas. 647; 33 B. 88; 10 Bom. L. R. 1029.
(6) 12 B. 105; 12 Ind. Jur. 274; 6 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 556.
(7) 7 M. I. A. 169 (P. C.); 1 Sar. P. C. J. 616; 19 E. R. 273.

born would be anomalous, as the child may prove to be a daughter or may be still born, in which case an alienation made by her before the child's birth would, if made for necessity, be valid. Moreover, we do not think that there is anything in Hindu Law in support of the proposition that a pregnant widow in possession of the usual life-estate has no power to deal with it at all until she be delivered of her child, and has in fact less power than she has after the birth, when she can admittedly alienate for necessity.

Following Bamundoss Mookerjee v. Musammat Tarinee (7) we hold that Musammat Ralli's estate was divested only on the plaintiff's birth, and that she was the owner of the property on the date of the sale and was competent to alienate it for necessity.

The other question arising in the case has not been decided by the lower Court. We accordingly accept the appeal, set aside the decree of the lower Courts, and remand the case to the Court of first instance under Order XLI, rule 23, Civil Procedure Code, for disposal according to law. Stamps on the appeals in this Court and in the lower Appellate Court will be refunded, and other costs will be costs in the case.

Appeal accepted;
Case remanded.

UPPER BURMA JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

CIVIL REVISION No. 53 OF 1919.

December 8, 1919.

Present:—Mr. Pratt, J. C.

MAUNG SAW—APPLICANT

versus

INGRASWAMY BY HIS ASSIGNEE E. V. MAHOMED EBRAHIM—RESPONDENT.

Negotiable Instruments Act (XXVI of 1881), s. 8—Pro-note—Stranger, whether can sue on note—Evidence Act (I of 1872), s. 92—Evidence to show that consideration for pro-note was advanced by person other than payee, admissiblitiy of.

Section 8 of the Negotiable Instruments Act prevents any person suing on a negotiable instrument, who is not named therein as the payee, or has not become entitled as endorsee or assignee.

Under section 92 of the Evidence Act, evidence is inadmissible to prove that the consideration for a promissory note was advanced by some person other than the payee of the note.

Mr. L. Pillay, for the Applicant.

Mr. S. Vasudevan, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—Plaintiff Ingraswamy sued and obtained a decree on a promissory note drawn in favour of one Mahomed Ebrahim. The note had neither been assigned to nor endorsed in favour of plaintiff.

Evidence was adduced to show that plaintiff really lent the money and not Ebrahim. Both the lower Courts have entirely overlooked the effect of section 92 of the Evidence Act. The evidence that plaintiff lent the money was in contradiction of the terms of the document. There was no allegation of fraud or misrepresentation on the part of defendant and the evidence was, therefore, inadmissible.

Plaintiff was not entitled in his own name to the possession of the note and was not, therefore, the holder of the note under section 8 of the Negotiable Instruments Act.

The effect of the section is quite clear and prevents any person suing on a negotiable instrument, who is not named therein as the payee, or has not become entitled as endorsee or assignee.

I consider the matter is one of jurisdiction and that the Courts had no jurisdiction to give plaintiff a decree, unless the note had been endorsed in his favour or assigned to him by the nominal payee.

I set aside the finding and decrees of the lower Courts and direct that the suit be dismissed with costs throughout.

Decree set aside.

SESHAGIRI RAO v. SREENIVASA RAO.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

APPEAL AGAINST APPELLATE ORDER No. 76 OF 1918.

August 19, 1919.

Present:—Mr. Justice Seshagiri Aiyar and Mr. Justice Moore.

SESHAGIRI RAO AND OTHERS—PETITIONERS—APPELLANTS

versus

SREENIVASA RAO AND OTHERS—RESPONDENTS

Limitation Act (IX of 1908), Sch I, Arts. 166, 181—Execution of decree—Sale of properties belonging to stranger—Application to set aside sale—Limitation.

Where the property of a stranger to execution proceedings, i. e. a person who was not a party to the decree, is attached and sold, the sale is void for want of jurisdiction, and an application to set aside such a sale would not be barred if made within the period prescribed by Article 181 of Schedule I to the Limitation Act. Article 166 has no application to such a case. [p. 261, col. 1.]

Appeal against appellate order of the District Court, Chingleput, in Appeal Suit No. 203 of 1917, preferred against the order of the Court of the District Munsif, Conjeevaram, in Civil Miscellaneous Petition No. 1046 of 1916, in Original Suit No. 19 of 1904.

FACTS.—The appellants were exonerated in the suit in execution of the decree wherein the suit properties were sold. They brought the present suit for possession of their share in the suit properties as having been not affected by the sale.

The contention was that they were "parties" and so the remedy was by application within the time allotted by Article 166 of the Limitation Act. The lower Appellate Court allowed the contention that Article 166 applied.

Mr. C. V. Ananthakrishna Aiyar (with him Mr. C. Sitaramiah), for the Appellants.—In view of the fact that the appellants were 'parties' to the original suit, the Court has power to treat a suit as a proceeding under section 47, Civil Procedure Code. Article 166 has no application. For the sale has no value so far as the share of the appellants is concerned, as the sale was without notice to these appellants. It has been repeatedly held that such a sale is void in toto. See Raghunath Das v. Sundar Das Khetri (1), Syam Mandal v. Seti Nath Banerjee (2) Second Appeal No. 389 of 1914. The scope of Article 165 is well defined by the Full Bench in Civil Miscellaneous Second Appeal No. 106 of 1917, [Thattantavita v. Puthalathan Kandi Kombi Aliassan (3).] Article 166 is similar. In the view that the sale is void, I submit also that the time limit is the same as that for a suit on title.

Mr. S. Rangachariar, for the Respondents.—Even granting that the appellants' contention is correct, there is really no injustice done to them which cannot be repaired by a proper partition and suitable allotment. See Muthiah Chettiar v. Bawa Sahib (4).

JUDGMENT.—There is no dispute as to the facts in this case. A suit for maintenance was brought by one Yamuna Boyee. Some of the present appellants were defendants Nos. 9 to 12 in the suit and were added as supplemental defendants, as they belonged to a divided branch of the family. Yamuna Boyee obtained a decree for maintenance against defendants Nos. 1 to 8, and the maintenance awarded was made a charge on the shares of defendants Nos. 1 to 8 in certain properties. The appellants and their three fourths share of the properties were expressly exonerated under the decree. In 1906 the decree-holder applied for execution of the decree against defendants Nos. 1 to 8 only, and no notice of the execution proceedings was taken out to the appellants Nos. 1 to 4. Certain lands were attached as belonging to the 1st defendant in the suit and on 26th January 1910, 3 acres and 84 cents of land in Shrotriem Thenambakkam village, including the three-fourths share of the appellants, were sold in Court auction and purchased by one Murugesan Chetty, the present 9th respondent. The sale was confirmed on the 1.th July 1910 and a sale certificate issued to the purchaser on 8th November 1910, delivery of the properties being given on 16th December 1910. On 25th July 1911 (a year and 7 months after the sale) the appellants filed a suit, Original Suit No. 378

(1) 24 Ind. Cas. 304; 42 C. 72 at p. 82; 18 C. W. N. 1058; 1 L. W. 567; 27 M. L. J. 50; 16 M. L. T. 353; (1914) M. W. N. 747; 16 Bom. L. R. 814; 20 C. L. J. 655; 13 A. L. J. 154; 41 I. A. 251 (P. C.).

(2) 38 Ind. Cas. 493; 44 C. 954 at p. 962; 24 C. L. J. 523; 21 C. W. N. 776.

(3) 53 Ind. Cas. 437; 37 M. L. J. 340; 10 L. W. 410; 26 M. L. T. 297; (1919) M. W. N. 734; 42 M. 758 (F. B.).

(4) 26 Ind. Cas. 46; 27 M. L. J. 605; 1 L. W. 96

of 1911, in the Conjeevaram District Munsif's Court to set aside the auction sale and for partition and recovery of their three fourths share, alleging that the sale was invalid so far as their share of the properties was concerned. The District Munsif dismissed the suit on the ground that, as the plaintiffs were parties to the suit in execution of which the sale was held, it was barred by section 47 of the Code of Civil Procedure. The District Munsif's decision was affirmed on appeal by the District Judge. In Second Appeal No. 356 of 1914 the High Court remanded the suit to the Court of first instance for disposal as a proceeding under section 47 of the Civil Procedure Code, the question whether the application was barred by limitation being left open. The lower Courts have dismissed the application as barred by Article 166 of the Limitation Act. Hence the present appeal. Mr. Ananthakrishna Iyer, for the appellants, contends that the lower Court erred in applying Article 166 of the Limitation Act and that the article applicable is Article 181, which provides a period of 3 years from the time when the right to apply accrues in the case of applications for which no period of limitation is provided elsewhere in the Schedule or by section 48 of the Civil Procedure Code. In our opinion the application is governed by Article 181 and not by Article 166 of the Limitation Act and is consequently not barred by limitation, as it was made within the period prescribed by Article 181. The appellants were parties to the suit (see the explanation to section 47 of the Civil Procedure Code) but were not parties to the decree under which they were exonerated; no notice of the application for attachment and sale of the properties was admittedly given to them and they were strangers to the execution proceedings.

It is not disputed that, under the terms of the decree, the Court had no power to sell the appellants' three-fourths share in the properties. The sale was void for want of jurisdiction. Vide Raghunath Das v. Sundar Das Khetri (1), Syam Mandal v. Sei Nath Banerjee (2) and Shivbai Balya Suami v. Yesu Cheso Nayakin (5). If an execution sale is a nullity, i. e., is made without jurisdiction or is void ab initio, Article 166 has, in our view, no application and the residuary Article 181 should be applied. We are justified in our conclusion by the decision in Second Appeal No. 381 of 1914. In that case the facts were that the plaintiff had taken a mortgage from a member of the judgment debtor's family and had obtained a decree for sale of the one sixth share of the joint family properties to which his mortgagor was entitled. Under the decree, however, a one fourth instead of a one sixth share was brought to sale and purchased by the plaintiff decree holder. The learned Judges (Wallis, C. J., and Spencer, J.) held that the sale, in so far as it purported to sell more than the one sixth share awarded by the decree was made without jurisdiction according to the principle laid down by the Privy Council in Malkarjun v. Narhari (5). The learned Vakils for the 9th respondent (the auction-purchaser) vendee relied on the decision in Muthiah Chettiar v. Bawa Sahib (4). In that case the decree directed the sale of items in a particular order. They were, however, sold in a different order. It was held that an application to set aside the sale on the ground that it took place contrary to the direction in the decree was one under section 47 of the Civil Procedure Code and would be governed by Article 166. The case of Muthiah Chettiar v. Bawa Sahib (4) is, however, clearly distinguishable as it was the judgment-debtor who moved the Court to have the sale set aside. The facts of the present case are certainly different. The appeal is accordingly allowed with costs payable by the 9th respondent.

The District Munsif is directed to restore the appellants' application to set aside the sale to his file and dispose of it according to law.

M. C. P.

Appeal allowed; Case remanded.

(5) 48 Ind. Cas. 130; 43 B. 235; 20 Bom. L. R. 925.

(6) 25 B. 337; 5 C. W. N. 10; 2 Bom. L. R. 997; 27 I. A. 216; 10 M. L. J. 368; 7 Sar. P. C. J. 739 (P. C.).

PATNA HIGH COURT.

FIRST CIVIL APPEAL No. 102 OF 1918.

April 15, 1920.

Present:—Sir Dawson Miller, KT., Chief Justice and Mr. Justice Coutts.

THE OFFICIAL TRUSTEE OF BENGAL AND AS SUCH TRUSTEE TO THE ESTATE OF THE LATE MR. JOSEPH CHATER IN CALCUTTA IN BENGAL—DEFENDANT No. 4—APPELLANT

versus

CHARLES JOSEPH SMITH—PLAINTIFF, AND KRISHNA KISHORE ADHIKARI AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XLI, rr. 22, 33—Cross-objections against co-respondent, when can be entertained—Object of r. 22.

Order XLI, rule 22 (1), of the Civil Procedure Code, in so far as it relates to a cross-objection, was provided to meet the case where a respondent, although the decree is not entirely in his favour, is content to let matters rest provided his opponent does not appeal, but who may not be willing to run the risk of having the findings in his favour varied or reversed without an opportunity of appealing against the findings which are adverse to him. [p. 266, col. 1.]

This rule should ordinarily be confined to cases of cross-objections urged against the appellant, but rule 33 of Order XLI gives the Court a very wide discretion and cases may arise where justice requires that cross-objections against a co-respondent should be heard, e. g., where the appeal reopens the whole matter in controversy between the respondents inter se. Where, however, one of several defendants against whom a decree is passed has allowed the period for appealing to elapse without questioning the decree, rule 22 of Order XLI of the Civil Procedure Code cannot be construed so as to revive his right of appeal merely because a co-defendant has instituted an appeal against the plaintiff on entirely different grounds. [p. 266, cols. 1 & 2.]

Appeal from a decision of the Additional Subordinate Judge, Manbhum, dated the 14th September 1917.

Messrs. P. K. Sen and G. D. Singh J. P. Singh, for the Appellant.

Messrs. Imam, N. C. Sinha, S. K. Mitter and N. Ghosh, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.

MILLER, C. J.—This is an appeal from a decision of the Additional Subordinate Judge of Manbhum, dated the 14th September 1917. The appellant, who is the defendant No. 4 in the suit, is the Official Trustee of Bengal and represents the estate of the late Mr. Joseph Chater. None of the other parties have appealed, but cross-objections have been filed by the defendant No. 1 not against the appellant but against his co respondent, the plaintiff. A preliminary objection was taken by the plaintiff to this cross-objection which will be dealt with later. The plaintiff Charles Joseph Smith is the proprietor of certain mining rights in Mauza Kusunda which he acquired by purchase from the Raja of Jharia on the 24th April 1907. The defendant No. 1 acquired a usufructuary mortgage of the mining rights from the plaintiff in consideration of a loan of Rs. 47,500 and was put in possession of the rents and royalties payable by the tenants by way of satisfying the loan and interest. The defendants Nos. 2 and 3 were added as defendants on the ground that they are interested in the mortgage, but they disclaimed all interest therein. The defendant No. 4 as Trustee of the estate of the late Mr. Chater and the defendants Nos. 5 to 10, who may be referred to as the Roy defendants, are tenants of the mining rights and as such liable to pay rent and royalty to the proprietor. The suit as against the defendants Nos. 4 to 10 claimed a declaration that those defendants were bound to pay the plaintiff rent and royalty under the terms of an agreement of compromise made in a suit brought by the Raja of Jharia against them, the Raja's proprietary interest having been subsequently acquired by the plaintiff, and for an account of the coal raised and despatched. As against the mortgagee-defendants the plaintiff's cause of action was of an entirely different nature. He claimed a declaration that the mortgage had been satisfied by collection by the mortgagees of the rent and royalty payable by the other defendants and for an account of the monies collected and delivery of possession of the mortgaged property.

In order to appreciate the nature of the defence to the suit upon which the appellant relies, it is necessary to state shortly the circumstances leading up to the present litigation. The Raja of Jharia was the proprietor of a 7 annas share in Mauza Kusunda, the remaining 9 annas belonging to the Zemindar of Katras. The entire village was in the possession of one Kenaram Sarkar as tenure-holder or Mahatradar. Sometime before the year 1894 Kenaram Sarkar granted a lease of the mining rights in the entire Mauza less an area of 100 bighas to Ashutosh Roy, the defendant No. 5, and his brother Gadhadar Roy deceased, the father of the other Roy defendants, at an annual rental of Rs. 1,554-9 6. The lessees in turn in the year 1894 granted a sub-lease of the same less 150 bighas to Mr. Chater, who was to pay them a royalty of 4 annas 6 pies per ton on all coal raised and despatched as well as all coke manufactured. In 1895 Mr. Chater, by a registered instrument dated the 16th January that year, transferred a moiety of his rights under his sub-lease to the plaintiff. It is agreed that the deed of transfer impliedly covenanted for title and quiet enjoyment and that he was bound by the provisions of section 55 of the Transfer of Property Act. The plaintiff and Mr. Chater thereupon worked the mine in partnership. Three years later in 1898 they together purchased the mining rights in another Mauza called Bagdighi, which also formed part of the partnership assets to which they were entitled in equal shares. On the 7th March 1899 Mr. Chater died intestate leaving a wife and three daughters. One of his daughters and Mr. Aratoon Gregory Apear were granted Letters of Administration to his estate. A partition agreement as to the partnership assets was then entered into between the plaintiff and his late partner's administrators, whereby they agreed that in lieu of their respective undivided moieties in each of the two mining leases the plaintiff should take Bagdighi and Chater's estate should take Kusunda, the agreement to take effect from the 1st January 1900. No formal release appears to have been made by either party to the other and in 1902 a Suit No. 90 of 1902 was instituted by Chater's administrators against the plaintiff, in which by a compromise between the parties a decree was entered on the 29th April 1903 providing, inter alia, that the plaintiff should execute a registered deed of release in respect of Mauza Kusunda in favour of Chater's administrators. An indenture of release was consequently prepared by the administrators' Solicitor and executed by the plaintiff on the 17th December 1904, whereby the plaintiff transferred his undivided half share in the mining rights of Kusunda to the administrators of Chater's estate which the defendant No. 4 now represents. This document recites the grant to Chater by the Roys of the mining rights under a patta of the 16th June 1894 and the transfer of a moiety therein to the plaintiff on the 16th January 1895 and states that for purposes of carrying the said partition into effect the plaintiff "As to his undivided half part or share therein doth hereby grant, convey, transfer, assign, release and assure all mines, veins, seams and beds of coal and the mining and other rights comprised in or granted by the hereinbefore recited pattas." Mrs. Smith, the plaintiff's wife, also had some interest under two muharari leases, dated the 9th September 1894, in part of the same property and by the same instrument joined her husband in transferring her interest to Mr. Chater's administrators, but with her part in the transaction we are not concerned. The patta referred to so far as the plaintiff is concerned was the lease executed by the Roys in favour of Mr. Chater, dated the 16th June 1894, a moiety of which the latter had transferred to the plaintiff on the 16th January 1895. The deed also contained covenants by the plaintiff for title and quiet enjoyment and further assurance. Meantime the Raja of Jharia, having acquired under a mukarari lease from the Raja of Katras his 9 annas proprietary interest in Mouza Kusunda, had become the proprietor of the whole Mouza. On the 11th June 1906 he brought a Suit No. 66 of 1906 in the Court of the Subordinate Judge at Purulia against Kenaram Sarkar, Gadhadhar and Ashutosh Roy and the administrators of Chater's estate and others, claiming khas possession of the underground rights in Kusunda on the ground that Kenaram Sarkar, as tenure-holder, had not and never had any interest in the subsoil and that consequently the lease granted by him to Gadhadhar and Ashutosh Roy and the sub-lease granted by them to Chater passed no title. Although the question has since been definitely determined against the tenure-holder by the decisions of the Judicial Committee, at that time owing to certain decisions in the Courts of this country it was at least doubtful whether the tenure-holder had any rights in the sub-soil unless such rights were clearly expressed in his grant. In this state of affairs on the 2nd February 1907 a compromise agreement was entered into between the parties and the suit was subsequently decreed in the terms of the compromise. The decree provides that the lease granted by Kenaram to the Roys and the sub-lease granted by them to Chater shall remain in force, except that the rent of Rs. 1,554 9 6 payable by the Roys to Kenaram shall in future be payable half to Kenaram and half to the Raja. The Roys also undertook to pay to the Raja a sum of Rs. 35,000 as well as a royalty of 4½ pies per ton in respect to the coal raised on the 150 bighas reserved by them and not sublet to Chater. Chater's administrators were to pay to the Raja a sum of Rs. 10,000 and an additional royalty of 6 pies per ton of steam coal and 2 annas on coke over and above that payable to the Roys under their sub-lease. Each party was to pay his own costs and the claim for mesne profits was withdrawn. After the compromise agreement had been come to, namely, on the 24th April 1907, the plaintiff by two registered instruments of that date acquired for consideration the 7 annas proprietary interest in the sub soil rights of the Mouza from the Raja of Jharia for a term of 999 years and an assignment of the latter's dar mukarari interest in the 9 annas share which he had acquired from the Zemindar of Kurras. Mr. Smith thereupon became entitled as proprietor to the rent and royalty payable to the Raja by the Roys and Chater's administrators respectively under the compromise decree in Suit No. 66 of 1906. Although the compromise agreement was dated the 2nd February 1907, the decree was not in fact made until the 25th April that year. On the 28th March 1908 Mr. Smith granted a usufructuary mortgage of his interest in the sub soil to the defendant No. 1 to secure re payment of an advance of Rs. 47,500 and interest and put in possession the mortgagee, who collected the rent and royalty due under the decree from the Roys and Chater's administrators.

Before the present suit was instituted on the 18th September 1916, disputes appear to have arisen between the plaintiff and the mortgagees as to whether the loan advanced had been satisfied by the collection of rent and royalty, and the tenants were apparently refusing to pay the rent and royalty to the plaintiff. The suit was accordingly instituted on the date mentioned, claiming as against the mortgagees delivery of possession of the mortgaged property and a declaration that the mortgage-debt had been satisfied by collection of the aforesaid rents and royalties. The plaintiff further claimed an account of the sums realised by the mortgagees whilst in possession and payment to him of any balance shown by the account to have been received in excess of the mortgage-debt. As against Chater's administrators and the Roys he claimed a declaration that they were bound to pay him as the transferee of the Raja of Jharia the rent and royalty payable to the latter under the terms of the compromise decree in Suit No. 66 of 1906 and an account of the coal raised and despatched by them from the date of that decree to the date of suit.

The suit was contested on behalf of both sets of defendants. The defence of the Trustee of Chater's estate was, inter alia, that the plaintiff by the indenture of the 17th December 1904, by which he released his half share in the lease of Kusunda to Chater's administrators, covenanted for title and quiet enjoyment and that the present suit was a breach of the covenants therein contained. With the defence of the mortgagees we are not immediately concerned in this appeal, but it may be stated that they denied that they had realised the full amount of the mortgage debt. Several defences were raised by the Roys, but these also are not material for present purposes as they have not appealed.

The learned Judge found that the mortgage of the defendant No. 1 had been satisfied by 1914 and that from that date the plaintiff was entitled to recover the commission and royalty claimed from the other defendants in accordance with the decree in Suit No. 66 of 1906. From this decree the defendant No. 4 has appealed and contends, as in the Court below, that the present suit is a breach of the covenants contained in the instrument of the 17th December 1904.

The interest which the plaintiff re-transferred to Chater's estate under the indenture mentioned was an interest which he had acquired from Chater himself and which he released to the latter's administrators on the termination of the partnership in pursuance of the partition agreement. It is at first sight difficult to see why the covenant for title should be enforced against the plaintiff, if in fact there is a breach, as Chater himself must have been guilty of a breach of a similar covenant admittedly contained by implication in the instrument by which he transferred half his interest in the lease to the plaintiff. It is contended, however, that the instrument of the 17th December contained something more than the usual vendor's covenants for title and quiet enjoyment implied by law and that in fact covenanted against the acts not only of the covenantor and those claiming through him but against disturbance by any one possessing a paramount title. The plaintiff therein covenants that the lease of the 16th June 1894 is still subsisting in law and is not rendered void or voidable and also notwithstanding any act, deed, etc, of the covenantor he has good right to grant, convey, transfer, assure, release and assign the said premises. It also provides that the grantees shall quietly enjoy the same without interruption, etc., by the covenantor or any one lawfully claiming through him and free from all estates title, charges, etc, made, executed, occasioned or suffered by the said Charles J. Smith or any person claiming through or in trust for him. In my opinion it is not necessary to decide with precision what the exact legal effect of this document may be so far as the covenant for title is concerned, as it does not seem to me to impose any wider obligation than that contained in section 55 (2) of the Transfer of Property Act which must be deemed to be incorporated in the transfer by Chater to Smith, and the former cannot rely upon a representation as to title which must have been induced by his own act in warranting the same title to Smith when he transferred his interest to the latter. Moreover, the present suit is based upon a title created by the compromise to which the administrators of Chater's estate were themselves parties, and it is not suggested that the decree was obtained by fraud. As long as it subsists, it is binding upon the parties. The plaintiff has acquired the Raja of Jharia's rights therein and is entitled to stand in his shoes. Had the Raja of Jharia remained in possession, the appellant would have had no defence to the suit brought by him for the royalties due and his assignee must prima facie be entitled to the same rights. Some reliance was placed by the appellant on section 45 of the Transfer of Property Act, but I think the proper view of the instrument of the 17th December 1904 is that the plaintiff merely released to Chater's estate the right, title and interest, which he had previously acquired from Mr. Chater during his lifetime, and it is not open to the latter or his administrators to complain that there is a defect in the title which Mr. Chater himself represented to the plaintiff as subsisting and that he had power to transfer the same. If this view is right, it can make no difference that the plaintiff paid the Raja of Jharia the costs of the Suit No. 66 of 1906 and at or about the time of the compromise agreed to purchase his proprietary interest in the estate. In my opinion the decree of the lower Court should be affirmed.

There is a further matter which requires to be dealt with. The appeal was brought by the defendant No. 4 alone against the decree in so far as it affected his liability towards the plaintiff only. The plaintiff was the real respondent in the appeal, although the defendants other than the appellant were formally added as respondents and served with notice. The defendant No. 1 alone of the respondents other than the plaintiff has appeared. He as mortgagee was affected by the decree in so far as it declared that his mortgage debt had been satisfied and that the plaintiff was to recover possession of the mortgaged property. He, however, did not appeal from this decision and allowed the time for doing so to elapse without taking any step to prosecute an appeal. On being served with notice of the appellant's appeal he filed notice of a cross-objection not on any point which affected the appellant to whose appeal he was not a necessary party but against the decree in so far as it determined the rights between himself and the plaintiff, one of the other respondents. The question is whether in the circumstances he is entitled to do so under the provisions of Order XLI, rule 22, of the Civil Procedure Code. In my opinion he is not. The appellant has no objection to the decree in so far as it affects the defendant No 1 (respondent No. 2) and the word "cross-objection" in Order XLI, rule 22, appears to me inapplicable to a case like the present. As Sir George Jessel,

M. R., pointed out in Cavander's Trusts, In re (1), an appeal on a point which does not affect the original appellant cannot be a cross-appeal and a party who desires to put forward a case with which the appellant has nothing to do must serve notice of appeal in the prescribed manner. Where one of several defendants against whom a decree is passed has allowed the period for appealing to elapse, there seems to me no good ground for supposing that the rule intended to revive his right simply because a co-defendant has instituted an appeal against the plaintiff on entirely different grounds. If the grounds of the original appeal by one defendant are common to all, then the Court has power under Order XLI, rule 4, to vary or reverse the decree in favour of all and a party who has not appealed may in such a case reap the benefit. There may also be cases where the appeal indirectly re-opens the question of the rights of the respondents inter se and it may in such cases be necessary, in the interests of justice, to determine such questions, but beyond these limits I can see no reason why respondents should ordinarily be permitted to re open questions already determined as between themselves, and acquiesced in without appeal, simply because some other party has preferred an appeal upon a point in which they are not directly interested. In my opinion Order XLI, rule 22 (1), in so far as it relates to a cross-objection, was provided to meet the case where a respondent, although the decree is not entirely in his favour, is content to let matters rest provided his opponent does not appeal, but who may not be willing to run the risk of having the findings in his favour varied or reversed without an opportunity of appealing against the findings which are adverse to him. He does not wish to set the Appellate Court in motion, but he cannot be certain until the last moment that his opponent will not do so. His object in accepting the lower Court's decision is one which should not be discouraged, as it puts an end to further litigation and it is just that he should not suffer by it. It is right that he should be allowed some extension of time for prosecuting his cross-appeal, if his opponent at the last moment defeats the object for which he delayed. In my opinion the rule should ordinarily be confined to cases of cross-objections urged against the appellant, but rule 33 of the same Order gives the Court a very wide discretion and cases may occasionally arise where justice requires that cross-objections against a co-respondent should be heard. An instance of this arose in the case of Mathura Mohan Saha v. Ramkumar Saha (2), but the Court there observed that the appeal re opened the whole matter in controversy and required them to re examine the questions in dispute from all possible points of view. In the case of Shib Chandra Kar v. A. C. Dulcken (3) decided by the same High Court about a month later, the Chief Justice and two other learned Judges affirmed and followed the principle laid down in Jadunandan Prosad Singha v. Koer Kallyan Singh (4), to the effect that as a general rule the right of any respondent to urge a cross-objection should be limited to his urging it only against the appellant and it is only by way of exception to this general rule that one respondent may urge a cross-objection as against another respondent. The exception, it is said, holds good in those cases where the appeal opens up questions which cannot be disposed of completely without matters being allowed to be opened up as between co-respondents. The exceptions in my opinion do not arise out of the construction of rule 22 of Order XLI, but are permissible only by reason of the powers given by rule 33 of the same Order. This rule, however, as pointed out by Mookerjee, J., in Shib Chandra Kar v. A. C. Dulcken (3) (ubi sup.), should be cautiously applied and generally speaking in cases where but for recourse to it the ends of justice would be defeated and it should not be allowed to be invoked in favour of a litigant so as to enable him to avoid the provisions of other Statutes such as the Limitation Act or the Court Fees Act. In that case as recourse to the other provisions of the Code would

(1) (1881) 16 Ch. D. 270; 50 L. J. Ch. 292; 29 W. R. 405.

(2) 35 Ind. Cas 305; 43 C. 790; 23 C. L. J. 26; 20 C. W. N 370.

(3 48 Ind. Cas. 78; 28 C. L. J. 123.

(4) 13 Ind. Cas. 653; 15 C. L. J. 61; 16 C. W. N. 612.

have been sufficient for the purposes of the respondent seeking to urge cross objections, she was not allowed to fall back upon Order XLI, rule 33. The Madras High Court, it is true, has taken a different view rather, as it seems to me, upon grounds of expediency than upon any considered interpretation of the rules. In Munisami Madaly v. Abbu Reddy (5) a Full Bench of the Madras High Court decided that cross-objections could be urged in any case by one respondent against another under the provisions of Order XLI, rule 22, and refused to follow the decision of the Calcutta High Court in Jadunandan Prosad Singha v. Koer Kallyan Singh (4), on the ground that it seemed more convenient to follow a fixed rule than to decide the question with reference to the particular facts of the case in which the question was raised. No reference was made in that decision to the effect of Order XLI, rule 33, or its bearing on the earlier rule, but it appears to me that rule 33 was expressly enacted for the purpose, inter alia, of providing for exceptional cases not covered by the wording of the earlier rule, and with great respect to those learned Judges I prefer to follow the decisions of the Calcutta High Court which are based upon a careful consideration of the rules themselves rather than upon grounds of expediency and convenience. The cross-objection should consequently be dismissed with costs to the plaintiff against whom it is directed. The appeal is also dismissed with costs to the plaintiff and the decree of the lower Court is affirmed.

COUTTS, J.—I agree.

Both Appeal and Cross objection dismissed.

(5) 27 Ind. Cas. 323; 38 M. 705; (1915) M. W. N. 45; 27 M. L. J. 740.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

APPEAL AGAINST APPELLATE ORDER NO. 107 OF 1918.

September 30, 1919.

Present:—Mr. Justice Seshagiri Aiyar and Mr. Justice Moore.

JANAKI NAGASAWMI IYER AND OTHERS—PETITIONERS—PLAINTIFFS—APPELLANTS

versus

T. S. RAMASAWMI IYENGAR, OFFICIAL RECEIVER, MALURA, AND OTHERS—OFFICIAL RECEIVER AND DEFENDANTS NOS. 1 AND 2—RESPONDENTS.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XXXIX, rr. 6, 7, 8—Attachment before judgment—Release of property on security being furnished—Execution against property given as security—Preferential right, whether exists.

Where property is attached before judgment, but is released on the defendant giving security, the security comprising certain items of the attached property, the plaintiff on obtaining a decree is entitled to a preferential right, and can execute the decree against the property given as security. [p. 268, col. 2.]

Appeal against the order of the District Court, Madura, dated the 6th of August 1918, in Appeal Suit No. 344 of 1917, preferred against the order of the Court of the Principal District Munsif, Madura, in Miscellaneous Petition No. 342 of 1917, in Execution Petition No. 74 of 1917, in Ordinary Suit No. 553 of 1915.

FACTS appear from the judgment.

Mr. C. V. Anantha Krishna Aiyar, for the Appellants.—The lower Court erred in not allowing execution to issue against the property of the surety. Where bond is given for the party's appearance or for production of property, the case is different. The property is not ear marked and no charge or lien is secured over the property and the plaintiff acquires no preferential right. Here what is done is to earmark the security to the credit of the suit. Plaintiffs are entitled to execute the decree.

Mr. K. S. Jayarama Aiyar, for the Respondents.—The surety's property is not liable in execution of the decree. No charge or lien has been acquired by the plaintiff and he has no preferential right over other creditors.

JUDGMENT.—The facts are not in dispute in this case. The suit was for money and before the decree an application for attachment was made. Twenty items of property belonging to the defendants were attached before judgment. The defendants applied to the Court to release the properties from attachment and offered to give security. The security comprised five items of the attached property. Exhibit A was the bond given to the Court by the defendants.

SITARAM MAHARAJ v. NARAYAN.

After the plaintiffs obtained the decree, they proceeded to levy execution against the property given as security. The District Judge has held that the plaintiffs have not obtained a charge or lien over this property and are not entitled to get the decree amount realized out of this property. We are unable to agree with him There are two classes of cases, each of them well defined, and the question is under which of these classes the present bond comes. It was held in Errikulappa Chetty v. Official Assignee, Madras (1) that when a bond is given for the production of certain property in Court, the person who secures the giving of this bond is not entitled to any preferential right in the property comprised in the bond. Cases where security is given for appearance also belong to this class. In such cases, the person who enables the bond to be taken, obtains no preferential right. Again in cases in which there is a bare attachment under the Code of Civil Procedure it does not give a right of lien to the person who gets the property attached. The principle underlying all these decisions is that where a bond is given for appearance or where a bond is given for the production of property or where there is an attachment, the bond is not earmarked for the credit of the suit. The second class of cases, which is illustrated by the decision in Seena Vana Ramiah Ayyar v. Gopala Ayyar (2), lays down that where something has been done for the credit of the suit, then the party who procures that thing is entitled to a preferential right in the bond given. In Seena Vana Ramiah Ayyar v. Gopala Ayyar (2) money was deposited in Court and that was held to give the plaintiff a right over others. In Subramania Chettiar v. Rajeswara Sethupathi (3) the learned Chief Justice and Kumaraswami Sastriar, J., point out that the giving of a bond is on the same footing as depositing money in Court. Abdur Rahim and Oldfield, JJ. in Gopala Iyar v. Thiruvengadam Pillai (4) held that where money has been deposited to the credit of a suit, the plaintiff obtains a preferential right to it. So the distinction is clear that where money is deposited in Court or something is done to make the security earmarked for the particular suit in which the action was taken, then the person who gets the security is entitled to a preferential right over others who may subsequently come in. We are clear in the present case that, having regard to the terms of the bond, it must be taken to have been given for the credit of the plaintiffs in the suit, and that the plaintiffs are entitled to a preferential right and consequently ought to have been allowed to execute the decree against the property given as security.

We must reverse the decision of the District Judge and remand the petition for disposal according to law. Costs to abide the result. It was pointed out to us that the fixing of the Vakil's fee at the ad valorem scale of five per cent. was wrong. Both the Vakils are agreed upon that. The lower Appellate Court in allowing the Vakils fees will see that five per cent. is not allowed. This judgment will not prejudice any right which the Official Receiver may have to contest the validity or bona fides of the security.

M. C. P.

Appeal allowed;
Case remanded.

(1) 32 Ind .Cas 190 39 M 903.
(2) 49 Ind Cas. 70; 41 M. 1053; 35 M L. J. 355.
(3) 43 Ind. Cas. 187; 41 M. 327; (1917) M. W. N. 872; 6 L. W. 762; 34 M. L. J, 84.
(4) 38 Ind. Cas 481; 32 M. L. J. 503; 5 L. W. 407.

NAGPUR JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL NO. 19-B OF 1919.
November 19, 1919.
Present:— Mr. Mittra A. J. C.
Shri SITARAM MAHARAJ—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT
versus
NARAYAN—DEFENDANT—RESPONDENT.

Lease—Sub-lease by lessee · Breach of covenant—Lessor, right of, to recover damages or rent from sub-lessee.

SITARAM MAHARAJ v. NARAYAN.

Where a lessee in contravention of the terms of his lease grants a sub-lease, the lessor has no cause of action against the sub-lessee either for rent or for damages, his right to recover damages for breach of covenant being restricted to the lessee. [p. 264, col. 2.]

Appeal against the decree passed by the Additional District Judge, East Berar, in Civil Appeal No. 94 of 1918, dated the 18th September 1918, arising out of Civil Suit No. 28 of 1918 decided by the Additional Munsif, Amraoti, on the 15th July 1918.

Dr. H. S. Gour, for the Appellant.

Mr. M. V. Joshi, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—The plaintiff appellant gave a registered lease to three persons for five years. One of the lessees sub let for one year part of the land to the defendant-respondent, who was the contesting defendant (defendant No. 5). The suit as originally framed was for rent of that year. In the course of further pleadings it was pointed out that the lease contains a covenant against sub letting without the plaintiff's consent, and hence a claim for damages was made against all the defendants. The Courts below have decreed the claim for rent against the lessees and have dismissed the suit against the 5th defendant, the sub-lessee.

It is admitted that there is no privity of contract between the sub lessee and the plaintiff. It is, however, contended that although the English Law is different in this respect, there is a privity of estate between the plaintiff and the sub-lessee. Reliance is placed upon section 108, clause (j), of the Transfer of Property Act, which lays down that a lessee remains liable for rent notwithstanding a transfer, whether absolute or by way of mortgage or sub lease. But the section does not say that the mortgagee or the sub lessee becomes liable for the period of occupation of the land. The learned Counsel for the appellant cited the following cases in support of his contention, Kamala Nayak v. Ranga Rau (1), Kunhambu v. Anjelu (2), Kandapurazil Kunhisow v. Mulloli Ohathu (3) and Macnaghten v. Lila Mewa Lall (4). I do not find any of the cases support the proposition that a sub-lessee is liable for rent to the lessor: on the contrary, the cases cited by the respondent's learned Advocate show that this is not so: Venkat Rao v. Kohlu Gond (5) and Timmappa Kuppaya v. Rama Venkanna Naik (6).

In Lewis v. Baker (7), Swinfen Eady, J., says:—

"Where a person parts with all his estate in land, as where he purports to demise for a period co extensive with his own interest, or longer, the transaction is in law an assignment, although purporting to be a demise; an underlease for the whole of the residue of a term is in law an assignment."

Here the sub lease was for one year of a portion of the demised land by one of the lessees. Hence it was not an assignment in law.

No authority has been shown to me under which I can hold the respondent liable for the rent.

The contention that the appellant is entitled to damages for breach of the covenant in the lease not to sub-let without the plaintiff's consent is correct. That is a breach on the part of the lessees and damages may be claimed against them, but I fail to see how the covenant gives a right of action against the sub-lessee. If there had been an assignment and a breach by the assignee by further transfer, a suit for damages would lie against such assignee, as held in Williams v. Earle (8). There has been no assignment or transfer of any kind by defendant No 5. Hence the case cited has no application. Assuming that the transfer to the respondent had been in the nature of an assignment, then the covenant not to alienate would run with the land and the assignee would be bound by the covenant. But there has been no assignment to defendant No. 5. Therefore, no action lies against him on the covenant.

There was no allegation nor suggestion in the pleadings about the defendant No. 5 procuring a breach of the covenant, hence this point cannot be entertained.

(1) 1 M. H. C. R. 24.
(2) 17 M. 296 6 Ind Dec. (N. S) 205.
(3) 17 Ind Cas. 933; 23 M. L. J. 695; 38 M. 86; 12 M. L. T. 665.
(4) 3 C. L. R. 285.
(5) 13 C. P. L R 19.
(6) 21 B. 341; 11 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 210.
(7) (1905) 1 Ch. 46 at p 50; 74 L. J. Ch. 39; 91 L. T. 744; 21 T. L R 17; 54 W. R 146.
(8) (1868) 3 Q B. 739; 9 B. & S. 740; 37 L. J. Q. B. 231; 19 L. T. 238; 16 W. R. 1041.

KRISHNA DAYAL GIR v. LAKSHMI NARAIN.

It is contended that the defendant is in possession of the land and he is, therefore, liable for use and occupation. The case cited [Ananda Chandra Roy v. Abdullah Hossein Chowdhury (9)] is distinctly against the appellant: vide page 155. Whether a person is liable for use and occupation of land or not, I am aware of no authority in which a decree has been passed on this ground where there was a lease of the land to others and the person in possession derived his title from the lessee.

The result is that the appeal stands dismissed with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

(9) 20 Ind. Cas. 679; 41 C. 148.

PATNA HIGH COURT.

APPEALS FROM APPELLATE DECREES NOS. 1008 TO 1018 OF 1918.

April 8, 1920.

Present:—Mr. Justice Sultan Ahmed.

Mahanth KRISHNA DAYAL GIR—APPELLANT

versus

Babu LAKSHMI NARAIN AND OTHERS—RESPONDENTS.

Fraud—Ex parte decree obtained by fraud, suit to set aside—Burden of proof.

In a suit to set aside a decree on the ground of fraud, the plaintiff must prove that the decree was obtained by some fraud practised upon the Court. The dishonesty of a claim on which a plaintiff obtains a decree, after following strictly and honestly the procedure laid down for the trial of suits, cannot justify the setting aside of the decree in a subsequent suit. Therefore, if the plaintiff cannot prove that the decree was fraudulently obtained, he cannot succeed whether the original claim against him was true or false. [p. 271, col. 2; p. 272, col. 1.]

Appeals from a decision of the Subordinate Judge, Gaya.

Messrs. S. N. Palit and Kailaspati, for the Appellant.

Mr. Sambhu Saran, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—These eleven appeals arise out of eleven analogous suits filed by the appellant to set aside eleven decrees obtained by one Babu Lakshmi Narain, who is the respondent in these appeals.

It appears that Lakshmi Narain is a co sharer of the appellant in the villages concerned in these suits. He brought 11 rent suits against certain tenants, making the appellant a party to those suits.

His case was that he, as landlord, was entitled to the rent of his share in the lands from the tenants. The first relief that he claimed from the Court was for the recovery of his rent from them; in the alternative he prayed that if the Court found that the tenants had made payments to the appellant or to the other landlords, he may be held entitled to recover the amount paid for his share by the tenants to them.

During the hearing of those suits the tenant defendants and the plaintiff, who is the respondent in this Court, compromised those suits, because he found that he could not get a decree against the tenants on the ground that they had already made payments to the other landlords. He, therefore, on the 9th December 1914, filed a petition, asking the Court to dismiss his claim against the tenants but prayed that ex parte decrees may be passed against the appellant and the other landlords.

The trial Court awarded him the decrees against the appellant. Subsequently the appellant applied under Order IX, rule 13, for the setting aside of those decrees on the ground of fraudulent suppression of summonses and on the ground that the decrees were illegally and fraudulently obtained. The Court, however, decided that there had been no fraudulent suppression of summonses, nor had the decrees been improperly or fraudulently obtained. The appellant thereupon filed these suits for setting aside those ex parte decrees.

The defence was that there was no suppression of summonses, fraudulent or otherwise, and that the decrees had not been fraudulently or illegally obtained. Both the Courts found that the evidence did not establish any ground for setting aside the decrees. Both the Courts went elaborately into the evidence adduced by the parties and arrived at the conclusion which I have stated above: that being so, in my opinion this is a case which is absolutely concluded by findings of facts.

I, however, proceed to examine the grounds urged by the learned Vakil appearing on behalf of the appellant and see whether he has made out any ground for interference by this Court in second appeal.

He firstly contends that both the Courts are in error in holding that the decision on the application under Order IX, rule 13, with respect to the suppression of summonses is res judicata in these suits. Even if this contention of the learned Vakil be sound and tenable, the finding of both the Courts is clear and convincing on the question of suppression of summonses. The Appellate Court observes that "there is practically not a scintilla of evidence worth the name to satisfy me that Lakshmi Narain had practised any act of fraud either upon the appellant or upon the Court in connection with those rent suits. It has been contended on behalf of the appellant that no summonses were served upon him as they had been all fraudulently suppressed. I am not at all satisfied on this point upon the evidence on the record. The plaintiff has entirely failed to prove any act of fraud in the matter of his alleged suppression of the summonses." This being the finding of the lower Appellate Court on this point, it is not at all necessary to consider whether the decision on the previous applications to set aside the ex parte decree was res judicata or not. If there had been no such clear finding as I find it, indeed I would have been constrained to consider this question: but in my opinion on these findings it is not necessary to do so. I should, however, not be understood to mean that the Courts below are wrong in holding that the previous decision on this point was res judicata in the present suits. On the other hand I am inclined to agree with the two Courts below, on the authorities reported as Puran Chand v. Sheodat Rai (1) and Khirode Chandra Roy v. Srimati Ashtulla Bee (2), that the previous decision was res judicata on this point.

The second ground urged is that the decree was obtained fraudulently by the respondent who, by filing a petition on the 9th December 1914, misled the Court to give him a decree against his co sharer landlords. The contention in the form in which it has been urged before me does not seem to have been urged before the lower Appellate Court. But even if it had been, in my opinion, there is no substance whatsoever in this contention. The plaintiff came to Court to have the ex parte decree set aside on the ground of fraud practised by the respondent. It was, therefore, necessary for him to establish that the fraud was actual, positive and intentional and was committed by the respondent, which resulted in the Court giving him an illegal and improper decree. It will not be sufficient to show that the decree was wrong or erroneous. That may be a very good ground on appeal against that decree, but it will not be sufficient for getting those decrees set aside on the ground of fraud. Though there is no doubt that a Civil Court has jurisdiction to set aside such decree on the ground of fraud, yet, in my opinion, this jurisdiction has to be exercised with great care and caution. Both the Courts have found, as I have stated above, that there was no fraudulent suppression of summonsee. As regards this petition, the first Court clearly found that there was nothing illegal or improper about it. The plaintiff had openly in his plaint claimed a relief in the alternative against the appellant. It is not contended before me that no such relief could be granted to the plaintiff, and, therefore, after the tenant defendants had compromised with him, the plaintiff was perfectly justified in asking the Court to grant him the alternative decree against the appellant and the other co-sharer landlords. I do not find anywhere the slightest trace of any fraud on the part of the respondent. If there was an error, it was an error of the Court which could only be rectified either on review or on appeal, but it could not be corrected in suits to set aside those decrees. As was laid down in the case reported as Marochin v. Parsuram Maharaj (3), "in a suit to set aside a decree on the ground of fraud, the plaintiff must prove that the decree was obtained by some fraud practised upon the Court.

(1) 29 A. 212; A. W. N. (1907) 31; 4 A. L. J. 51.
(2) 35 Ind. Cas. 557; 20 C. W. N. 845.
(3) 10 Ind. Cas. 905.

The dishonesty of a claim on which a plaintiff obtains a decree, after following strictly and honestly the procedure laid down for the trial of suits, cannot justify the setting aside of the decree in a subsequent suit. Therefore, if the plaintiff cannot prove that a decree was fraudulently obtained, he cannot succeed whether the original claim against him was true or false."

Under all these circumstances I am of opinion that the appellant has not made out any case for setting aside the decrees which had been obtained by the respondent. I would, therefore, confirm the decrees of the Subordinate Judge and dismiss these appeals with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL NO. 1036 OF 1915.

May 16, 1919.

Present:—Mr. Justice Scott Smith and Mr. Justice Martineau.

INDAR SINGH—DEFENDANT—APPELLANT

versus

MUNSHI—PLAINTIFF AND BHAGWAN SINGH AND ANOTHER—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Registration Act (XVI of 1908), s. 17—Agreement by reversioner to transfer his rights, whether requires registration—Contract Act (IX of 1872), s. 2—Champertous agreement, validity of—Agreement to share property obtained by litigation in consideration of promisee providing funds, whether can be enforced.

An agreement by the reversioner of a holder of property to transfer a portion of it to the promisee after the vesting of the estate in the reversioner does not require registration. [p. 274, col. 1.]

The English Law of champerty is not in force in India and fair agreements made by claimants of property in litigation to share it with others on their obtaining decrees, in consideration of funds being supplied by the latter for carrying on their suits, are not in themselves opposed to public policy, nor are they necessarily void, but such agreements, when extortionate, are inequitable and in that case should not receive effect. [p. 273, col 2.]

In order to determine whether such an agreement is extortionate or inequitable, what has to be looked at is the actual value of the land in dispute at the time when the agreement was made. [p. 273, col. 2.]

Second appeal from the decree of the District Judge, Jullundur, dated the 2nd August 1915, reversing that of the Subordinate Judge, 1st Class, Jullundur, dated the 15th November 1914.

The Hon'ble Mian Muhammad Shafi, for the Appellant.

Dr. Nand Lal, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—The facts of the case out of which this second appeal arises are fully and clearly stated in the judgment of the lower Appellate Court and we need not report them at length. Briefly they are as follows:—Hamir Singh gifted half his land to his step son, Ram Singh, and half to one Kura, Jat. On the 9th of October 1888 his reversioners, Sundar Singh, Haku and Bhagwan Singh, executed an unregistered agreement whereby they undertook to hand over half the land to Indar Singh, defendant-appellant, on condition of his supplying funds for the litigation necessary to set aside the gifts. Suits were then brought and were successful, and on the 12th of September 1901 a second agreement was executed and registered, confirming the first one. Hamir Singh died some 12 years before suit and sometime thereafter Indar Singh obtained possession of the share agreed to be given to him. He had admittedly been in possession for some seven years before the present suit was brought by Munshi, son of Sundar Singh, one of the executant of the agreements. He brought the suit on the ground that the land had been sold by his father without any consideration or necessity. The first Court dismissed the plaintiff's suit, holding that the agreements were valid and had been duly carried out and that Indar Singh had performed his part of the bargain by supplying funds for the litigation. The learned District Judge on appeal decreed the plaintiff's suit. He held that the original agreement of the 9th of October 1888 required registration and that, therefore, the plaintiff, who was born after its execution but before the execution of the second agreement, could contest the alienation. He further found that there was no proof of the amount spent by Indar Singh on the suits brought with his assistance. He considered that the agreements were champertous and that Indar Singh took an undue advantage of the exeentants thereof who were in straitened circumstances. He also laid stress upon the fact that Indar Singh must have known that the land would subsequently increase in value and said that the bargain was altogether an unfair one. According to the pedigree-table Bhagwan Singh would be entitled to half of the land in suit and Sundar Singh to the other half and though Bhagwan Singh did not join in bringing the present suit, the District Judge gave Munshi a decree for the whole land claimed, being of opinion that as Bhagwan Singh had failed to press his rights, he might be held to have waived them in favour of the plaintiff.

Mr. Muhammad Shafi on behalf of Indar Singh has filed a second appeal in this Court, and the first point urged by him is that the agreement of the 9th of October 1883 did not require registration, because in the words of section 17 (2) (h) of the Registration Act, it did not itself create or declare any right, title or interest in the land, but merely created a right to obtain another document which would, when executed, create such right. Jhandu Khan v. Barkhurdar (1), quoted by the learned District Judge, is no doubt an authority in support of his decision, but the judgment is a very short one and has not been followed in the subsequent decisions of the Chief Court. At the time when the agreement was entered into, the executants were not entitled to any part of Hamir Singh's property. They had merely reversionary rights therein and reversionary rights cannot be alienated. The executants' rights in the property were only to come into existence after Hamir Singh's death and the agreement was to transfer a moiety of such rights when they came into existence, i. e., after the death of Hamir Singh. The agreement was in the nature of an agreement to transfer and its registration as such is not compulsory [Imam Bakhsh Khan v. Karim Shah (2), Shridhar Ballal v. Chintaman Sadashiv (3), following Chunilal Panalal v. Bomanji Mancherji (4) and Partab Singh v. Karam Chand (5)]. It is, however, unnecessary to labour this point further, because Dr. Nand Lal on behalf of the respondents frankly admitted that the agreement of 1883 did not require registration because it did not itself create any rights at all. We, therefore, hold that the agreement, which was executed before the birth of the plaintiff, cannot be objected to by him.

As regards the question of champerty, it was held by their Lordships of the Privy Council in Raghunath v. Nil Kanth (6) that the English law of champerty was not in force in India and that fair agreements made by claimants of property in litigation to share it with others, on their obtaining decrees in consideration of funds being supplied by the latter for carrying on their suits, were not in themselves opposed to public policy, nor were they necessarily void, but that such agreements, when extortionate, were inequitable and in that case should not receive effect. Another Privy Council case to the same effect is Raja Mohkam Singh v. Raja Rup Singh (7).

Now, in the present case it has been proved that Indar Singh supplied money for the carrying on of the litigation by which Sundar Singh, Haku and Bhagwan Singh got the gifts made by Hamir Singh cancelled. The learned District Judge says that there is no proof of the amount spent by Indar Singh on the suits brought with his assistance, but we do not think that he should be called upon to prove how much he advanced: prima facie there was nothing unfair about the agreement. The learned District Judge says that Indar Singh must have known that the value of the land would increase and that, therefore, he derived an unfair advantage. We are unable to agree with him in this. What had to be looked at was the actual value of the land at the time when the agreement was made, and we see no reason to suppose that Indar Singh derived any unfair advantage. Moreover, the agreement was entered into before the birth of the

(1) 150 P. R. 1889.
(2) 16 P. R. 1895.
(3) 18 B. 326; 9 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 772.
(4) 7 B. 310; 7 Ind. Jur. 607; 4 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 209.
(5) 184 P. R. 1889 (F. B.).
(6) 21 C. 843 (P. C.); 20 I. A. 112; 6 Sar. P. C. J. 362; 17 Ind. Jur. 374; Rafique & Jackson's P. C. No. 129; 10 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 567.
(7) 15 A. 352 (P. C.); 20 I. A. 127; 6 Sar. P. C. J. 327; 17 Ind. Jur. 376; 7 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 943.

plaintiff and was duly given effect to after the death of Hamir Singh, Indar Singh obtaining possession of the land, and in the circumstances we do not see how the plaintiff can contest the consideration for the agreement. The transfer of the land to Indar Singh was the natural result of the agreement of 1888 which, having been entered into by all Hamir Singh's reversioners, cannot be objected to by the plaintiff who was subsequently born.

We, therefore, accept the appeal and setting aside the order of the lower Appellate Court, restore the decree of the first Court, dismissing the plaintiff's claim with costs throughout.

Appeal accepted.

PRIVY COUNCIL.

APPEAL FROM THE CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

March 28, 1920.

Present:—Viscount Cave, Lord Moulton, Sir John Edge, and Mr. Ameer Ali.

Lala GANPAT LAL—APPELLANT

versus

BINDBASINI PRASHAD NARAYAN SINGH AND OTHERS—RESPONDENTS.

Mortgage—Suit for sale—Failure to implead necessary parties—Sale in execution of mortgage decree—Suit to redeem by persons who should have been joined as parties, maintainability of.

In a suit for sale under a mortgage the mortgagee failed effectively to implead certain persons interested in the mortgaged property. A decree was passed and the mortgaged property was sold under it and was purchased by the mortgagee. The persons who should have been impleaded subsequently sued for a declaration that their right to redeem was not extinguished, but, to save Court-fees, abandoned the prayer to set aside the sale:

Held, that after the sale had taken place, the mortgagee held as purchaser and was entitled to raise all the defences that belonged to him as such, and that unless the claim to set aside the sale were made in a properly constituted action and properly raised in suitable pleadings in that action, the Court could not interfere with the possession which had been given him by the purchase. [p. 277, col. 2.]

Appeal from a decree of the High Court of Calcutta, dated the 25th March 1915, reversing a decree of the First Subordinate Judge, Gaya.

FACTS of the case sufficiently appear from their Lordships' judgment. The Subordinate Judge for reasons therein stated held that the sale extinguished the plaintiffs' right to redeem and dismissed their suit.

On appeal the High Court of Calcutta (Fletcher and Teunon, JJ.) reversed this decision and passed a decree for redemption.

Fletcher, J. (Teunon, J. concurring) observed as follows:—

"This case is a case that comes under section 85 of the Transfer of Property Act. The defendant No. 1, who was the plaintiff in the mortgage suit, knew of the interest of the present plaintiffs in the mortgaged property and he added them as defendants. He did not know apparently, however, that the two present plaintiffs were at the time of the mortgage suit both minors. This case, therefore, is clearly distinguishable from the case of Sheo Shankar Ram v. Jaddo Kunwar (1). The remarks of their Lordships in that case obviously turned upon the fact that the mortgagee did not know of the existence of the other members of the family who were not made parties and they seem to have recognised in the course of their judgment if the plaintiff in the mortgage suit had known of their interest, it would have been his duty to make them parties to the mortgage suit. But this case is a totally different case. Here the two infants were parties before the Court; but no guardian ad litem was appointed to represent them. That being so, it seems to me obvious that no decree could be passed in the mortgage suit that was binding on the two infants. I should have thought that the matter is not open to argument. If the decree was not binding on them, then the right of redeeming the property is still subsisting. In that connection I may refer in the first place to a case (R. A. No. 6 of 1906) decided by Mr. Justice Mitra and Mr. Justice Bell on the 15th May 1908. That case is very close to the present case. But there is another decision which obviously cannot be distinguished from the present case, and that is the decision of Mr. Justice Mukerjee and Mr. Justice Carnduff in the case of Bal Kishan Lal v. Topeswar Singh (2). The facts of that case cannot be distinguished from the facts of the present case, and it seems to me that that decision is not only binding upon us but one which we should recognize and approve. It is quite obvious that once it is found that the two plaintiffs were at the time of the mortgage suit infants and were not properly represented in the suit, then the decree passed in that suit cannot be held to be binding on them. The learned Judge of the Court below seems to consider that there is a difference as to the rights of the plaintiffs before and after the sale of the property in execution of the mortgage decree. That obviously is a mistake because what the Court could pass in the execution proceedings would be subject to the rights of the two plaintiffs, whatever they might be, and, if the foreclosure against the two plaintiffs be incomplete, then the purchaser took from the Court subject to the liability to have the foreclosure re-opened on a proper application being made by the two infants. It seems to me that in this case it is manifest that the decree passed in the mortgage suit is not binding on the two plaintiffs and the two plaintiffs are, therefore, entitled to redeam the mortgage which their father executed. No case has been raised by the plaintiffs that they are not bound by the mortgage. All that they say is that they have got a right to pay off the mortgage. That being so, we ought to set aside the order of dismissal passed by the learned Subordinate Judge and in lieu thereof pass a decree for redemption in favour of the plaintiffs as mentioned in Order XXXIV, rule 7, Code of Civil Procedure, for the mortgaged property as well as the property which the defendant No. 1 has subsequently purchased for the balance of the decretal amount."

(1) 24 Ind. Cas. 504; 41 I. A. 216; 18 C. W. N. 968; 16 M. L. T. 475; (1914) M. W. N. 593; 1 L. W. 645; 20 C. L. J. 282; 36 A. 383; 12 A. L. J. 1178; 16 Bom. L. R. 810 (P. C.).

Hence this appeal.

Mr. E. B. Raikes (with him Mr. Palat), for the Appellants, submitted that the High Court had failed to observe the peculiar situation brought about by the amendment of the plaint. The plaintiffs could have redeemed before sale, and it might be that they could even after sale have sued to set aside the sale, but they were content to let the sale stand. It so happened that the mortgagee had himself bought the property, but he was in no worse position than a third party purchaser would be, and while the sale held good he could not be disturbed.

Respondents did not appear.

JUDGMENT.

LORD MOULTON.—The facts leading up to the litigation out of which this appeal arises may be briefly stated as follows:—On the 5th April 1896 one Jehangir Prashad Singh, the father of the first respondent, mortgaged to the present appellant's grandfather, Lala Ganpat Lal (hereinafter termed the mortgagee), certain immovable property forming part of the family property of an undivided Hindu family (of whom Jehangir Prashad Singh was the head) in order to secure the payment of a debt of Rs. 300. It is not now in controversy that this debt was rightfully incurred by him as head of the family in order to pay monies due to the Government in respect of the family property, and that, therefore, he had full power to mortgage or sell the said property in order to raise the funds necessary for that purpose.

The money due on the mortgage was not repaid, and on the 27th July 1901 the mortgagee instituted a mortgage suit against the mortgagor and his two brothers, joining also as defendants the two sons of the mortgagor, the elder of whom was one of the plaintiffs in the present action, Bindbasini Prashad Narayan Singh. The other defendant was his younger brother who has since died and whose interest is now represented by the plaintiff. These two sons were joined by reason of their being interested in the family property, inasmuch as the joint family was governed by the Mitakshara Law.

In this suit the usual mortgage decree was made on the 20th January 1902 and in execution of this decree the mortgaged property was sold on the 18th September 1902. At this sale it was purchased by the mortgagee. The sale-proceeds were insufficient to cover the mortgage debt, and accordingly certain other property belonging to the joint family was also sold in execution of a personal decree which the mortgagee had obtained against the mortgagor under section 90 of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882. This property was also purchased by the mortgagee, who thereupon took possession of both properties.

(2) 14 Ind. Cas. 815; 15 C. L. J. 443; 17 C. W. N. 819.

On the 6th April 1909 the first respondent and his brother instituted the present suit against the mortgagee, joining as defendants the mortgagor, and their uncle Mahindar Prashad Singh (who has since died and is now represented in this suit by two minors, acting by Partangir Prashad Singh) and Partangir Prashad Singh. The two defendants Mahindar Prashad Singh and Partangir Prashad Singh were the two brothers of the mortgagor who had been joined as defendants in the original mortgage suit.

The plaint in the present suit as first framed contained very wide allegations of fact, many of which have not been persisted in, and claimed very extensive relief, including a claim that the property should be handed over to the present plaintiffs, on the ground that the mortgagee's possession of it was and had always been unlawful. But on the 7th August 1909 the plaint was radically amended, and it is this amended plaint which thereafter formed the foundation of the action and has alone to be considered.

In this plaint the plaintiffs withdrew all objections to the validity of the mortgage bond, and formally admitted that they did not "object to the validity of the said bond and as to its being binding upon them in this suit." Accordingly in the relief prayed they raised no objection to the validity of the decree for sale granted in the mortgage suit, but claimed a declaration that their right of redemption had not been extinguished by it or by the sales that had taken place under it or under the decree passed under section 90 of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882.

The ground upon which the plaintiffs based their amended claim was that they were minors at the date of the original mortgage suit, and that they should have been represented therein by duly apponited guardians ad litem instead of being joined in their own names as being majors. It is on the issue of fact as to the age of the plaintiffs and the legal consequences thereof that the decision in this case wholly turns.

The plaintiffs originally added a prayer that the sales that had taken place under the decree should be set aside But it was pointed out to them that in such case they would have to pay certain ad valorem Court-fees, whereupon the plaintiffs elected to strike out their prayer to set aside the sales, and accordingly were not required to pay the fees in question.

At the hearing before the Subordinate Judge evidence as to the age of the plaintiffs was adduced by both parties. In the end the Subordinate Judge found in favour of the plaintiffs on this issue, though he has left a note to the effect that the plaintiff who gave evidence before him and who was then according to his evidence 24 years old, appeared to be a man of 30. It was of course admitted that upon this finding the plaintiffs had not been effectively joined in the original mortgage suit, and that if they had the right so to be joined the suit was irregularly constituted in that respect.

Before considering the conclusions of law of the Subordinate Judge, it will be convenient to add here that on the appeal to the High Court this finding of fact was supported, and their Lordships see no reason to doubt its correctness.

Turning to the legal questions that thereupon arise in this case, the appellant did not dispute the proposition that if a person interested in mortgaged property, who should have been joined as a party to a mortgage suit, but has not been so joined, comes in before foreclosure or sale, he has all the rights of redemption that his interest in the property gives him and may exercise them notwithstanding the decree.

But the present case is a very different one. Here the third party impeaches neither the debt nor the mortgage but, on the contrary, admits that they are binding on him in this suit. He admits that the mortgagor had the right to bind his interest in the property by the mortgage and that he did so, and that the debt was due and owing at the date of the mortgage decree. Nay, further, he does not seek either by his plaint or by his prayer to impeach the mortgage decree itself, and he has deliberately chosen not to impeach the sales that have taken place under it. His claim is, therefore, in effect a claim to come in and exercise a right to redeem the whole property without setting aside either the mortgage decree or the sales.

The Judge of the Subordinate Court took the view that unless the sales were set aside there could be no right to redeem. He held that the father had the right to mortgage the family property for the debt in question and had done so, so as to bind the whole property, including the plaintiffs' interest in it; that on the mortgage money being unpaid he had the right to sue the mortgagor and had done so, and had obtained a valid decree for sale against him of the property mortgaged and had proceeded to sale thereunder in the ordinary way; that the plaintiffs who never represented the family property could before sale have exercised such right to redeem as they possessed, though they could not at any time have questioned either the mortgage or the decree made upon it, seeing that it was for a lawful debt incurred by their father and chargeable on the mortgaged property, but that the sale extinguished their father's right of redemption and in so doing extinguished their own, and that unless that sale were set aside they could not redeem. He, therefore, gave judgment for the defendants.

An appeal from this decision was brought to the High Court of Judicature at Fort William in Bengal. The learned Judges of that Court agreed with the finding of the Judge of the Subordinate Court on the question of fact, but took a contrary view on the questions of law, and accordingly gave judgment for the plaintiffs. In their Lordships' opinion these learned Judges failed to appreciate the effect on the proceedings of the altered plaint and thus misunderstood the real issues involved in the action. The Subordinate Judge rightly says that the plaintiffs do not "impeach the mortgage decree." Their pleadings show that they could not at any time have done so and their prayer does not ask to do so. All that they ask is to exercise their alleged right to redeem. And here they have to face the fact that they refused to seek to set aside the sales. Their Lordships have no doubt that while the decree for sale stands and sale has taken place under it, the right to redeem is extinguished unless the sale be set aside. After the sale has taken place the owner holds as purchaser, and is entitled to raise all the defences that belong to him as such, and unless the claim to set aside the sale is made in a properly constituted action and properly raised in suitable pleadings in that action, the Court cannot interfere with the possession which has been given him by the purchase.

It follows, therefore, that the plaintiffs can no longer exercise any right of redemption that they may have possessed, so that it is not necessary to decide as to the extent of that right if they had properly asserted it.

Their Lordships will, therefore, humbly advise His Majesty that this appeal should be allowed and that the decree of the High Court should be set aside and that of the Subordinate Judge restored, and that the respondent here the plaintiff Bindbasini Prashad Narayan Singh should pay the costs in the Courts below and also the costs of this appeal.

Appeal allowed.

Solicitors for the Appellant:—Messrs. T. L. Wilson and Co.

PATNA HIGH COURT.

APPEAL FROM APPELLATE DECREE No 240 OF 1917.

March 30, 1920.

Present:—Mr. Justice Das and Mr. Justice Adami.

DEB LAL JHA—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

BALDEO JHA—DEFENDANT—RESPONDENT.

Part performance, doctrine of, applicability of, to India—Conditions necessary for exercise of jurisdiction.

There is nothing in the Law of India inconsistent with the doctrine of part performance on which Courts of Equity in England have acted for many years. [p. 278, col. 2.]

DEB LAL JHA v. BALDEO JHA.

The jurisdiction to carry into execution transactions clothed imperfectly in legal forms being purely equitable, Courts of Equity have imposed on themselves certain limits for the exercise of the jurisdiction. Those limits must be clearly recognised and carefully guarded. [p. 278, col. 2; p. 279, col. 1.]

The first essential condition for the exercise of the jurisdiction is that there must be a final engagement between the parties. If the circumstances in the case suggest that the matter still rested in negotiation, there is no room to charge a person on the equities resulting from the acts done in execution of the contract. [p. 279, col. 1.]

The second essential condition is that there are such actings of the parties as must be unequivocally and in their own nature referable to the agreement alleged. If the alleged part performance cannot be connected with the alleged agreement, then there is nothing which the Court has to undo and consequently nothing which has been left undone and which ought to be carried into further execution. [p. 279, col. 1]

Appeal from a decision of the Subordinate Judge, Purneah.

Messrs. Rajendra Prashad and Sambhu Saran, for the Appellant.

Messrs. Manuk, Agarwala, Gangadhar Das and B. C. Mittra, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—The dispute between the parties principally relates to two Mouzahs known as Banaily and Matcopa. It is admitted that the plaintiff and the defendant were members of a joint family and continued to be joint until Baisak 1318 Mulki. It is the common case between the parties that after an infructuous attempt at partition by arrangement, a suit for partition of the Ijmali properties was instituted by the defendant against the plaintiff, as a result of which the properties in dispute were allotted to the parties in equal shares. The plaintiff relies upon the decree of Court allotting him an eight anna share in the Mouzahs in question, and says: "I have an 8-anna share in these properties by virtue of a decree of Court. Nothing that happened subsequently could take away my properties and give them to the defendant. I was dispossessed of these properties in Baisak 1322 Mulki. I claim to be put in possession of these properties with mesne profits payable by the defendant."

The suit was, therefore, of a simple nature and, unless the defendant could show that something did happen subsequently which had the effect of transferring the title in the properties to the defendant, the plaintiff was, on the pleadings in the case, entitled to a decree for possession. The defendant says, however, that there was a re arrangement between the parties in January 1915 as a result of which the defendant secured 16 annas interest in the properties in dispute. The subsequent re-arrangement is set out in Exhibit A, furdbutwara, as it is called, prepared by Bhek Nath Misser, arbitrator, and signed by both the parties. It is the validity of this transaction that is in debate before us.

This document shows a complete partition between the parties. Certain properties were allotted absolutely to the plaintiff, and certain other properties including the properties in dispute were allotted to the defendant. This document was, however, not registered, but Mr. Manuk on behalf of the respondent argues that though he cannot defend his title on the conveyance, since none took place and the furdbutwara was not registered, still he can defend it on the equities resulting from res gestæ subsequent to and arising out of the agreement between the parties. On behalf of the plaintiff it was argued that the furdbutwara did not represent the final engagement between the parties, that the matter rested in negotiation and never ripened into an agreement, and that, in any event, the alleged agreement was never acted upon by the parties.

The doctrine of part performance rests on the principle that Courts of Equity will not permit the Statute of Frauds to be made an instrument of fraud. There is no Statute of Frauds in India, but there is a Registration Act and the doubt which at one time existed on the question whether the equitable doctrine of part performance was applicable to India has now been set at rest by the decision of the Judicial Committee in the case of Mahomed Musa v. Aghore Kumar Ganguli (1). The Judicial Committee in the case cited thought that there was nothing in the Law of India inconsistent with the doctrine of part performance on which Courts of Equity in England have acted for many years.

But the jurisdiction to carry into execution transactions clothed imperfectly in legal forms being purely equitable, it is necessary to see what are the limits which the Courts of Equity have imposed on themselves for the exercise of the jurisdiction. Those limits must be clearly recognised and carefully guarded, for it is well settled that the doctrine cannot be extended beyond the limits within which it has hitherto been confined. The first essential condition for the exercise of the jurisdiction is that there must be a final engagement between the parties. If the circumstances in the case suggest that the matter still rested in negotiation, clearly there is no room for charging a person on the equities resulting from the acts done in execution of the contract. The second essential condition is that there are such actings of the parties as must be unequivocally and in their own nature referable to the agreement alleged. If the alleged part performance cannot be connected with the alleged agreement, then clearly there is nothing which the Court has to undo and consequently nothing which has been left undone and which ought to be carried into further execution.

(1) 28 Ind. Cas. 930; 21 C. L. J. 231; 17 Bom. L. R. 420; 28 M. L. J. 548; 19 C. W. N. 250; 18 A. L. J. 229; 17 M. L. T. 143; 2 L. W. 258; 42 C. 501; (1915) M. W. N. 621; 42 I. A. 1 (P. C.).

The principles being well established, it is necessary now to consider whether circumstances exist in this case which make it obligatory on the Court to apply the doctrine of part performance.

First, as to the alleged agreement. The defendant relies upon Exhibit. A, the furdbutwara, which shows that the allotment made by Bheknath Misser was accepted by the plaintiff; but, in my view, Exhibit A cannot be read apart from Exhibit B, a draft of a partition deed which ought to have been, but was not, executed by the parties. It will be noticed on a reference to Exhibits A and B that Bheknath Misser's partition had reference to the properties kept joint by the Pleader Commissioner Sheo Prasad in the previous partition suit instituted by the defendant against the plaintiff. Apart from the properties which were specifically dealt with by Bheknath Misser, there were other properties as to which there were disputes, and I am satisfied on a perusal of Exhibit B that it was the object of the parties by a fresh arrangement to settle all their disputes once for all. Now, what does Exhibit B show? It shows that there were various other disputes which were not finally settled between the parties. It is sufficient for this purpose to refer to paragraphs 3 and 4 of the draft deed of partition. It appears that in addition to the properties specifically dealt with by Bheknath Misser, the parties did want to alter the arrangement with reference to certain other properties effected by the Pleader Sheo Prasad. The parties intended that certain lands in a certain Mouza which had been allotted by Sheo Prasad to the defendant should be transferred to the plaintiff. But neither the bigha area nor the name of the Mouza is filled in in the draft deed of partition. They are represented by dots in Exhibit B. Exhibit B further shows that in respect of the properties kept joint by the previous partition decree and dealt with by Bheknath Misser, the intention of the parties was that there should be an adjustment of account as to the rents realized, and that the liability of the party found on the taking of such accounts to have realized rent in excess of his share not only definitely ascertained, but discharged by the final arrangement between the parties. Paragraph 4, however, shows that the adjustment of account never took place between the parties and that it was never ascertained who was liable to whom and in what amount, for these important matters are not filled in in the draft deed but are only represented by dots. The plaintiff says: "The whole object of the new arrangement was to settle every dispute between us. Ought it in equity to stand good as to part, when it is clear that we never came to an arrangement as to many important disputes between us?" The answer is furnished by the defendant's own evidence. The defendant in his evidence said, "At the time when we signed the Exhibit A it was settled that a formal deed of partition should be executed." Bheknath Misser said, "It was settled that a partition deed will be executed according to the furdbutwara." In my view, the partition of the ijmali properties, being an item in the disputes between the parties, cannot stand, when it is shown that there were various other disputes which remained unadjusted. I hold that the matter rested in negotiation and that the furdbutwara cannot confer a title on the defendant as to the properties in dispute.

The next point is equally clear, namely, whether there have been such actings as are unequivocally and in their own nature referable to the agreement alleged.

On referring to Exhibit A it will apprear that Mouza Barhara Gopal was allotted to the defendant. It is the defendant's case that the parties took possession according to the partition effected by Bheknath Misser. Exhibit 9 shows that the plaintiff, in a suit to which the defendant as co-proprietor was a party, recovered a decree for rent in respect of his 8 annas for a period up to March 1915. The alleged partition was effected on 7th January 1915. In my view the actings of the parties at a period immediately following the date of the alleged agreement are very important for considering whether there was such an agreement at all. If this view be correct, then there is no explanation why the plaintiff was allowed to sue for rent in respect of a property as to which he ceased to be a proprietor on the 7th of January 1915. Exhibit 7 is a petition for re-hearing of the case filed by the defendant, on the ground that summons was not served on him. There is no suggestion in the petition that the plaintiff's suit was fraudulent inasmuch as he ceased to have any title to the property after 7th January 1915. On the other hand, there is an admission of the plaintiff's title by implication. In my view, it has not been shown that the defendant got exclusive possession of Mouza Barhara Gopal on the 7th January 1915. I now come to Milik Dhaneshri which, it will be noticed, was allotted to the plaintiff. Exhibits 13 and 14 are plaints filed by the defendant for recovery of his share of rent in respect of Dhaneshri up to March 1916 The suits were filed on the 9th September 1916. They are absolutely inconsistent with the defendant's case that the parties took possession according to the furdbutwara. They show that, inspite of the furdbutwara, the parties were in possession according to their shares

With reference to Matcopa, the property allotted to the defendant, the position is the same. In this village, the family had 8 annas share, the remaining 8 annas being held by a stranger. Exhibit 11 is a plaint filed by the defendant on 13th April 1916 to recover rent in respect of his four-annas share of rent, and not eight annas to which he would have been entitled had the furdbutwara been given effect to. Exhibit 12 is a similar suit filed by the defendant on 11th April 1917 for recovery of his 4-annas share of rent up to March 1917. The plaintiff was added as a party defendant to these suits on the allegation that he was entitled to 4 annas interest in the village. These documents are, in my opinion inconsistent with the case set up by the defendant, namely, that the parties acted on the furdbutwara and took possession in accordance therewith.

I now come to Pachira, the property allotted to the plaintiff. This property was purchased by the family in the name of one Manna Lal Jha. After the decree in the partition suit, the result of which was to give each of the parties 8 annas share in the village, the defendant set up the heirs of Manna Lall to claim this village as their own. The heirs of Manna Lal filed a suit for rent which was resisted by the tenant on the ground that they were not the proprietors of the village at all. In the Appellate Court, the heirs of Manna Lal succeeded in getting a decree for rent. Thereupon, Deb Lal Jha, the plaintiff in this action, filed a title suit against the heirs of Manna Lal and brought the defendant on the record as defendant No. 5. A compromise decree was passed in this action on 2nd February 1915, that is to say, nearly a month after the date of the furdbutwara. By this decree the title of the plaintiff to eight annas share of the village was declared, the defendant being declared entitled to the remaining 8 annas share of the village It is impossible to think that the plaintiff would have consented to this decree if the furdbutwara, which gave him 16 annas interest in the village, was intended to be acted upon.

The last item of property which I have to consider in this connection is Dhusar Tika Patti, which was allotted to the plaintiff. Portion of the village was leased out to a darpatnidar and portion was held khas by the family. So far as the darpatni interest is concerned, the documents establish conclusively that, inspite of the furdbutwara, the parties continued to be in possession according to their shares as determined by the partition decree. It is necessary to remember that, in this village, the family had 8-annas interest, so that by the partition decree the plaintiff and the defendant were each entitled to collect his 4-annas share of the rent By the furdbutwara the plaintiff became entitled to collect his 8-annas share of the rent, but the documents show that the furdbutwara made no difference to the rights of the parties. Exhibits 4 (7), 4 (8), 4 (9), 4 (10), 4 (11), 4 (12) and 4 (13) show realization of 4-annas share of the rent by the plaintiff up to 1917. There are similar rent receipts showing realization of 4-annas share of rent by the defendant. This is absolutely inconsistent with the whole interest of the family in the village having been allotted to the plaintiff.

With regard to that portion of the village which was held khas by the family, the rent receipts produced in the case show that the plaintiff collected the entire rent due to the family after the furdbutwara. This is in favour of the plaintiff, but, in favour of the defendant, this may be said that all these rent receipts were granted by the patwari who was the common patwari of both the parties, whereas the receipts granted in respect of the darpatni were all granted by the parties themselves. I will assume, however, that the plaintiff took possession of the entire village Dhusartika Patti held khas by the family, but this, in my view, does not affect the question. It is the defendant who is relying on the doctrine of part performance, and the defendant must, therefore, show such acts on his part as are unequivocally and in their own nature referable to the agreement alleged. The evidence, in my judgment, does not establish such actings on the part of the plaintiff, and I must accordingly hold that the furdbutwara, not being a registered document, cannot be relied upon by the defendant as giving him title over the plaintiff's 8-annas share of the properties in dispute, namely Matoopa and Banaily.

Apart from the properties dealt with by Bhekrath Misser, there are disputes between the parties with reference to some other properties. But Mr. Rajendra Prosad, on behalf of the appellant, has confined his arguments to one of them, namely, a plot of land comprising an area of 9B. 1K. 4Dh. in Khata No. 97. The appellant relies upon a Kebala, Exhibit 8, but the learned Subordinate Judge has rejected the appellant's claim on the ground that the identity of the property, the subject matter of Exhibit 8, has not been established. I am wholly unable to agree with the learned Subordinate Judge, and Mr. Manuk, on behalf of the respondent, concedes that the finding of the Subordinate Judge is not correct, but he argues that Exhibit 8 has not been legally proved. Mr. Manuk frankly stated before us that his objection was a purely technical one. His argument was that the certified copy of the document was not admissible in evidence. The plaintiff's case on this point is that the original document is with the defendant, but Mr. Manuk shows that the 9th clause of the original partition deed (Exhibit 3) provided that all documents of title of the properties dealt with by that deed shall remain in the custody of the plaintiff. Mr. Manuk's argument is that the original of Exhibit 8 must accordingly be with the plaintiff. To this technical argument, there is, however, a technical answer; and it is this, that the property, the subject matter of Exhibit 8, was not included in the previous partition, and the document of title would not, therefore, be with the plaintiff by virtue of Exhibit 8. In my view the document was properly admitted in evidence, and the identity being established, the plaintiff is entitled to recover his 8 annas share of this property.

There only remains the question of mesne profits. As between co-owners, the question of mesne profits does not arise, but the defendant must account to the plaintiff for his share of the profits from the date of dispossession alleged in the plaint. Mr. Manuk urged before us that the story of dispossession as alleged in the plaint is an impossible one and ought not to be accepted. But if we disbelieve the story of the defendant, as we do, that he got possession of the properties in dispute by virtue of the furdbutwara, there is no reason why we should not accept the plaintiff's case on this point. He was undoutedly dispossessed. He was not dispossessed by virtue of the furdbutwara. He says that the plaintiff with the assistance of the Srinagar Raj dispossessed him in Baisak 1322 Mulki corresponding with May 1914. There is no reason to discredit this evidence, especially as there were undoubtedly disputes between the plaintiff and the Srinagar Raj.

In the result, then, we allow this appeal and set aside the judgment and decree of the Court below. The plaintiff is entitled to recover possession of Mouzahs Jaingunj Matcopa and Kemat Banailly and 9B. 1K. 4Dh. of land comprised in khata No. 97 to the extent of eight-annas share in each of them. The defendant must also account to the plaintiff for his share of the profits from Baisakh 1322 Mulki up to the time he delivers up quiet and peaceful possession of their properties to the plaintiff. The plaintiff is entitled to the costs in both the Courts.

Appeal allowed.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

APPEAL FROM APPELLATE DECREE No. 1733 OF 1918.

July 25, 1919.

Present:—Justice Sir Syed Shamsul Huda, KT.

NALINAKSHYA DUTTA—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

DHAN KRISHNA MONDAL AND ANOTHER —DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Jurisdiction—Connected suits—Appeal in one—Appellate Court, whether can arrive at conflicting findings.

Where in a case the plaintiff instituted a suit for rent as also a title suit, but an appeal was preferred against the decision in the rent suit only and the udge came to certain findings different from those arrived at by the Munsif in the title suit:

Held, ... that the fact that no appeal was preferred from the decision in the title suit did not preclude the Judge from dealing with the appeal before him and going into such matters as were necessary for the decision of the appeal; [p. 283, col. 1.]

(2) that in doing so the Judge had not decided anything that was outside the scope of the suit or appeal. [p. 283, col. 1.]

Appeal against the decree of the District Judge, Murshidabad, dated the 26th March 1918, reversing that of the Munsif, 2nd Court, at Kandi, dated the 25th of May 1917.

FACTS appear from the judgment.

Babu Brojo Lal Chakerbutty (with him Babu Gurudas Sinha), for the Appellant.—The appeal arises out of a suit for arrears of rent at the rate of Re. 1-6 per annum. The defendant averred that he did not hold any such holding but that the land held by him appertained to a different holding. The first Court decreed the suit. On appeal we took an objection that no appeal lay under section 153, Bengal Tenancy Act, which was overruled and the suit dismissed. My submission here also would be that the appeal was incompetent, as it did not involve either the question of the amount of rent or that of the relationship of landlord and tenant. Hence section 153 would operate as a bar to an appeal. My next point is that there were two connected suits, viz., the rent suit out of which this appeal asises and a title suit, the decision of which was not appealed against. Now, the learned Judge in deciding the appeal before him has arrived at certain findings, which are inconsistent with those of the Munsif in the connected title suit from which no appeal was preferred by the parties. I submit the learned Judge erred in law in deciding those points which were obviously out of the scope of the appeal that was actually before him.

Babu Kalidas Sarkar, for the Respondent, was not called upon to reply.

JUDGMENT.—In this case the appeal is mainly based on the ground that having regard to the provisions of section 153 of the Bengal Tenancy Act, no appeal lay before the learned District Judge, and that, therefore, his decision reversing the decree of the first Court was without jurisdiction. The Court below relied upon an unreported decision of this Court which was referred to in Mr. Sen's book on the Bengal Tenancy Act. I had the advantage of reading the judgment of Mr. Justice Mitra in that case and it seems to me that on the authority of that decision, with which I agree, an appeal lay to the Court below. Therefore, the main ground of appeal fails.

It has been next argued that the learned Judge in dealing with the appeal came to certain findings different from those arrived at by the first Court in connection with a title suit connected with the rent suit out of which this appeal arises. In that suit the decision of the Munsif was accepted by the parties and no one appealed. But that did not preclude the learned Judge from dealing with the appeal that was filed before him and from going into such matters as were necessary for the decision of the appeal. In doing so he has not decided anything that was outside the scope of the suit or of the appeal.

This appeal, therefore, fails and is dismissed with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

PATNA HIGH COURT.

APPEAL FROM APPELLATE ORDER No. 326 OF 1919.

April 14, 1920.

Present:—Mr. Justice Sultan Ahmed.

TRALOKHYA NATH MAZUMDAR—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

SARAT KUMAR SINGH—DEFENDANT—RESPONDENT.

Construction of decree—Appellate decree, ambiguity in—Decree of first Court and pleadings, whether can be looked into—Executing Court, powers of.

A decree must be construed in a fair and reasonable spirit so as to advance and not to impede its execution [p. 285, col. 1.]

An executing Court cannot vary or alter a decree under execution, but it must be satisfied as to what it is called upon to execute, and in order to find that out, when the decree is not clear and it is an appellate decree, the Court is justified in referring to the pleadings and the decree of the trial Court. [p. 284, col. 2; p. 285, col. 1.]

Appeal against the order of the District Judge, Patna.

Messrs Kulwant Sahai and Achalendra Nath Das, for the Appellant.

Messrs. Hem Chandra Mitter, B. N. Mitter and Punchanan Banerjee, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—This is an appeal against an order of the District Judge of Patna arresting the execution of a certain decree on the ground that it is incapable of execution.

The circumstances and facts of this appeal may be shortly stated.

The appellant and the respondent are neighbours. The house of the plaintiff-appellant is to the west of the house of the defendant. On the second story of the plaintiff's house there are two windows which have been in existence from a long time.

Sometime in the year 1894 or 1895 the defendant wanted to construct a house on the east of the plaintiff's house. The plaintiff's allegation was that the way in which the defendant was constructing his house would obstruct the passage of light and air into the house of the plaintiff through the two windows. So in 1895 the plaintiff instituted a suit, which was numbered Suit No. 122 of 1895, in the Court of the Munsif of Patna for a perpetual injunction restraining the defendant from building a wall so as to obstruct the passage of light and air into the plaintiff's house through the windows, and he succeeded in obtaining a decree from the Munsif on the 2nd March 1896 perpetually restraining the defendant from building a wall which may in any way obstruct the passage of light and air into the house of the plaintiff.

An appeal was preferred to the learned Judge against that decree, and, while that appeal was pending, it appears that both parties settled their differences, and on the 26th August 1896 a decree was passed by the learned Judge.

In order to satisfactorily decide the point that has been raised before me it is necessary to quote the decree in extenso:—

"This appeal coming on for decision on this the 26th June 1896 before Mr. J. Knoxwight, District Judge of Patna, in the presence of Mr. Sutherland, Babu Purnendu Narayan Singh and Babu Prasana Kumar, Pleaders for the appellant, and of Babu Guru Prasad Sen and Gangadhar Das, Pleaders for the respondent, it is ordered that

(1) the defendant do construct his wall at a distance of not less than 2 feet and nine inches from that of the plaintiff. This distance to be measured from wall to wall;

(2) the defendant shall not raise his wall including parapet higher than that of the plaintiff;

(3) the defendant shall not build on the west side of the western wall any projecting cornice;

(4) the southern space between the plaintiff's wall and the defendant's wall be left open so as to admit a maximum of light and air.

To pay costs of this appeal amounting to Rs.....as detailed below. To pay the costs of de novo suit."

Nothing happened from 1896 till 1918 but in 1918 the plaintiff, on the allegation that the decree of the Civil Court had been contravened, applied for execution of that decree and the removal of a portion of the wall which obstructed the passage of light and air into the house of the plaintiff.

The judgment-debtor filed an objection and the learned Munsif on the 13th January 1919 disposed of the preliminary objection that the decree was incapable of execution. He held that the decree of the Aprellate Court was in fact a decree for perpetual injunction, and, as such, was capable of execution. He then subsequently proceeded to dispose of the other points which arose on the objection.

An appeal was preferred to the learned Judge against both the order on the preliminary point as well as the final order of the Munsif, dated the 19th May 1919.

The learned Judge in appeal held that the decree was incapable of execution and so convinced was he of the correctness of his decision that he declined to consider the other points which arose out of the objection. He accordingly allowed the appeal and in effect arrested the further execution of that decree.

This appeal has now been filed against the order of the learned District Judge. The only point which I have to consider is, whether the decree sought to be executed is capable of execution or not. There can be absolutely no doubt that the decree of the Appellate Court in the suit is the only decree which has to be executed, and the first Court's decree has merged into the decree of the Appellate Court. I do not think that this proposition of law can ever be contested, nor indeed has it been contested by the learned Vakil appearing for the appellant. But he contends that the decree of the Appellate Court is substantially a decree for prepetual injunction, and if there be any doubt about it, the Court is perfectly entitled to go into the decree of the first Court as well as the pleadings in the suit in order to properly construe the appellate decree.

The learned Vakil appearing on behalf of the respondent, however, contends that the decree of the Appellate Court after the compromise was merely a declaratory decree, and as such not capable of execution as a decree for prepetual injunction.

It will be noticed that the decree of the Appellate Court itself does not in any part of it say that it is a declaratory decree. No declarations are made and the decree clearly says that it is ordered that the defendant do construct the wall at a distance of not less than 2 feet 9 inches from that of the plaintiff and that the defendant shall not raise his wall including the parapet higher than that of the plaintiff, and that the defendant shall not build on the west side of the western wall any projecting cornice and so on. In my opinion it is idle to contend that an order like that is not mandatory.

The decree does not pretend to declare any right or title of the parties; the decree orders the defendant to do or not to do something. Therefore, on the face of the decree itself, in my opinion, it is a decree for injunction. And I am confirmed in the view that I take of this matter by a reference to the decree of the first Court as well as the pleadings in the suit.

The learned Vakil appearing on behalf of the respondent, however, denies the right of the Court to go beyond the decree itself which is under execution. In my opinion the executing Court is perfectly justified in referring to the decree of the first Court as well as to the pleadings in order to construe the decree under execution. It is an elementary principle of law that the executing Court cannot vary or alter the decree, but it must be satisfied as to what it is called upon to execute, and in order to find that out when the decree is not clear, the Court is perfectly justified in referring to the pleadings and the decree of the trial Court; and as was laid down in the case of Ahilyabai v Kashinath (1), a decree must be construed in a fair and reasonable spirit so as to advance and not to impede its execution.

The learned Judge held that though the plaintiff had obtained a decree he had simply secured a bag of wind, inasmuch as that decree was incapable of execution.

The learned Vakil appearing on behalf of the respondent submitted that the proper course for the plaintiff to adopt under such circumstances would be for him to institute a suit for specific performance of contract, or apply for review of the decree in order to make that decree a decree for perpetual injunction. In my opinion the plaintiff can in execution of the Appellate Court's decree get the relief that he seeks.

I now proceed to consider whether the proposition that I have laid down above, that the executing Court can in case of doubt refer to the decree of the first Court and the pleadings in order to construe the decree which it is called upon to execute, is supported by authorities.

In the Full Bench case of Muhammad Sulaiman Khan v. Muhammad Yar Khan (2) Mr. Justice Mahmood observed that "according to the Privy Council ruling, as well as the Full Bench ruling of this Court, as explained by Oldfield, J., in the case of Gobardhan Das v. Gopal Ram (3) and as now understood by us, the decree of the first Court when affirmed by the Appellate Court's decree may be referred to in executing the appellate decree." In the case of Lachmi Narain v. Jwala Nath (4) the case reported as Muhammad Sulaiman Khan v. Muhammad Yar Khan (2) was followed; and it was held that "Where a decree is in its terms ambiguous, it is competent to the Court executing it to refer to the pleadings in the suit in which such decree was passed to ascertain its precise meaning." All these cases as a matter of fact follow the principle laid down by Lord James in Robinson v Dulcep Singh (5). Lord James laid down that "in order to determine what the decree really decides, it is essential to see what were the rights which were in dispute between the parties and which were alleged between them." The same view was taken in the cases of Amolak Ram v. Lachmi Narain (6) and Srinath Dass v. Hari Pada Mitter (7).

Analysing the principle laid down in these cases it comes to this that if the appellate decree under execution is clear, a reference to the decree of the trial Court or to the pleadings is not permissible. As I have already stated, in my opinion, the decree of the Appellate Court is perfectly clear. It is not a declaratory decree, because it does not pretend to be so; it is a mandatory decree which gives orders to the defendant to do or to abstain from doing certain things. If, however, the Court thought that there was an ambiguity as to the nature of the appellate decree, a reference to the decree passed by the trial Court as well as to the pleadings in the case would be perfectly justified. A reference to the pleadings and the decree of the trial Court can lead one to the irresistible conclusion that the decree of the Appellate Court was a decree for perpetual injunction. This being my view on the preliminary point on which the learned Judge has disposed of the appeal, I decree this appeal and hold that the appellate decree in the suit is capable of execution. I, therefore, remit the case back to the learned Judge for a full consideration of all the points that arose on appeal before him.

The result is that this appeal is allowed and decreed with costs.

Appeal allowed;
Case remanded.

(1) 5 Bom L. R. 802.

(2) 11 A. 267 at p 283 (F B); A. W N. (1889) 55; 13 Ind Jur. 427; 6 Ind. Dec. (N. s.) 598.

(3) 7 A. 366; A. W. N. (1885) 57; 4 Ind. Dec. (N. s.) 604.

(4) 18 A. 344 at p. 347; A. W. N. (1896) 87; 8 Ind. Dec. (N. s) 936.

(5) (1879) 11 Ch. D. 798; 48 L. J. Ch. 758; 39 L. T. 312; 27 W. R. 21.

(6) 19 A. 174; A. W. N. (1897) 9; 9 Ind. Dec. (N. s) 115.

(7) 3 C. W. N. 637.

DARSAN SINGH v. SHEORAJ SINGH.

COURT OF THE BOARD OF REVENUE, UNITED PROVINCES.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 101 OF 1918 19.

November 14, 1919.

Present:—Mr. Ferard, S. M.

DARSAN SINGH—APPELLANT

versus

SHEORAJ SINGH AND OTHERS—RESPONDENTS.

Oudh Rent Act (XXII of 1886), s. 62 (1)—Land let for cultivating purposes, whether can be used for groves.

Lands given to tenants for cultivating purposes must not be used for cultivating groves without the landlord's consent.

Second appeal from the order of the Commissioner, Lucknow Division, dated the 11th of July 1919, in the case of ejectment.

JUDGMENT.—The case is clear. As regards ground No. 2, the decree of the 1916 case is on the record and there is abundance of evidence to show that the old trees were cut down. Rent was then assessed under that decree.

The trees now are 3 years old and were not planted with consent of landlord.

It is an attempt to reconvert agricultural land into grove.

It is not argued before me that to do so does not come under section 62 (1), Oudh Rent Act, and I consider it does. Lands given to tenants for cultivating purposes must not be used for planting groves without the landlord's consent.

Appeal dismissed with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

PATNA HIGH COURT.

CIVIL REVISION No. 28 OF 1920.

April 22, 1920.

Present:—Mr. Justice Coutts.

SHAMANANDAN PRASAD—PETITIONER

versus

MULCHAND RAM—OPPOSITE PARTY.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XXIII, r. 1—Application to withdraw suit with leave to bring fresh suit—Procedure—Court, duty of.

SHAMANANDAN PRASAD v. MULCHAND RAM.

Where an application is made to withdraw a suit with leave to bring a fresh suit and the Court thinks that permission to file a fresh suit should not be granted, it should dismiss the application and hear the suit on the merits, or dismiss it for want of prosecution if the plaintiff refuses to proceed.

Application against the order of the Munsif, Sitamarhi, District Darbhanga.

Mr. Nawal Kishore Prasad, II, for the Petitioner.

Mr. Chandra Shekhar Banerji, for the Opposite Party.

JUDGMENT.—This is an application against an order of the Munsif of Sitamarih allowing the plaintiff to withdraw his suit without permission to file a fresh suit.

The facts are that the plaintiff prayed for permission to withdraw his suit with permission to bring a fresh suit, but the Munsif has simply allowed him to withdraw his suit and has refused him permission to bring a fresh suit. This is obviously a wrong order. The Munsif, if he thought that permission to file a fresh suit should not be granted, should have dismissed the application and have either heard the suit on the merits or have dismissed it for want of prosecution if the plaintiff refused to proceed. Instead of doing this, however, he has divided the petition into two parts and has attempted to treat the application as one under the first part of Order XXIII, rule 1, clause (1). This he was clearly not entitled to do, and in this view I am supported by the decision in the case of Bhagwat Pershad v. Lachmi Pershad (1), which is on all fours with the present case. The Munsif has clearly acted without jurisdiction, his order must be set aside and the suit remanded for re hearing on the merits or for dismissal in accordance with law. The petitioner is entitled to costs. Hearing fee one gold mohur.

Suit remanded.

(1) 10 Ind. Cas. 346.

CHAKARPAN v. NATHUA.

COURT OF THE BOARD OF REVENUE, UNITED PROVINCES.

REVISION No. 8 OF 1918-19.

August 28, 1919.

Present:—Mr. Ferard, S. M., and Mr. Harrison, J. M.

CHAKARPAN—APPLICANT

versus

NATHUA AND OTHERS—RESPONDENTS.

Agra Tenancy Act (II of 1901), s. 185—Material irregularity, what amounts to—Burden of proof, wrong allocation of.

The failure to consider a finding on remand and basing an order upon a wrong allocation of the burden of proof are material irregularities within the meaning of section 187 of the Agra Tenancy Act.

JUDGMENT.—The application refers to field No. 152 only.

This is an application for revision under section 185, Tenancy Act. Plaintiff-applicant is landlord. He sued to eject respondents as non-occupancy tenants. They are so recorded since 1310 Fasli. Before that they are recorded as the sub-tenants of Musammat Jaini, occupancy tenant. The Assistant Collector found that they had been paying rent direct to the superior landlord (plaintiff-applicant) since 1309 Fasli and were, therefore, tenants-in-chief then and had occupancy rights. In first appeal the Commissioner, Mr. Fremantle, very properly found that the Assistant Collector's decision was based on a "nonsequitur" and remanded the case for finding as to when Musammat Jaini abandoned her holding. He placed onus on the tenant defendants. This was quite right, as the onus clearly lay on them to show that Musammat Jaini had ceased to be occupancy tenant at a much earlier date than recorded in the papers. Mr. Fremantle, Commissioner, also in his remand order allowed 10 days for objection. The Assistant Collector in his return to the remand on 5th June 1918 found definitely for the landlord, plaintiff-applicant, that Musammat Jaini's occupancy right had not ceased till 1320 Fasli and that the respondents were tenants-in-chief only since then. The remand finding came before Mr. Fremantle's successor, Mr. Silberad, who did not take the trouble even to discuss the remand finding and held that the onus which his predecessor had, quite rightly as I have said, placed on the tenants really lay on the landlord, and dismissed the landlord's appeal. I consider that Mr. Silberad's action, in failing to consider the remand finding and basing his order on a reasoning in which he placed the burden of proof quite wrongly, were material irregularities within the meaning of section 185, Tenancy Act. I need not discuss his confused idea about the position of an occupancy tenant mortgagee with which he starts his judgment, as it does not enter into the case and Pleaders before me both admit it is beside the point.

I would allow the application for revision, set aside the finding of both the lower Courts and decree the applicant's suit for ejectment as regards field No. 152.

Costs to applicant throughout.

Application allowed.

OUDH JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 85 OF 1919.

January 30, 1920.

Present:—Pandit Kanhaiya Lal, A. J. C.

Musammat CHAURAS KUNWAR —PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

JAGANNATH SINGH—DEFENDANT —RESPONDENT.

Hindu Law—Female, grant in favour of—Presumption—Absolute estate, grant of—Succession Act (X of 1865), s. 82, applicability of—Custom—Family custom set up—Tribal custom, evidence as to, whether relevant.

Where a grant is made by a person governed by the Hindu Law in favour of a female, there is no necessary presumption that an absolute estate is intended to be granted, and section 82 of the Succession Act has no application to such a case. [p. 288, col. 2.]

Where only a family custom is set up, evidence as to a tribal custom may in certain circumstances be relevant as showing that a family belonging to that tribe observed it. [p. 288, col. 2.]

Appeal from the decree of the District Judge, Rae Bareli, dated the 14th March 1919, reversing that of the Subordinate Judge, Partabgarh, dated the 27th June 1918.

CHAURAS KUNWAR v. JAGANNATH SINGH.

Babu Bisheshwar Nath Srivastava, for the Appellant.

The Hon'ble Pandit Gokaran Nath Misra, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—Binda Singh was the owner of certain property, a half share of which is now in dispute. He had two daughters, Musammat Gulab Kunwar and Musammat Chauras Kunwar. The former had a son, Mahadeo Singh. The latter had a son, Durga Bakhsh Singh. On the 23rd May 1900 Binda Singh executed a Will, whereby he devised a moiety of his estate to Mahadeo Singh and another moiety to Durga Bakhsh Singh. Mahadeo Singh, however, died in the lifetime of the testator. The allegation of each party is that thereafter Binda Singh made an oral bequest. The exact time or date when the oral bequest was made is not stated. Musammat Gulab Kunwar was given an absolute estate in the half-share which the testator had bequeathed to Mahadeo Singh. The other party states that that half share was given to Musammat Gulab Kunwar for her life. Binda Singh did not live long enough to execute a formal Will, evidencing the manner in which he wanted that half share to devolve. On his death that half share was entered in the name of Musammat Gulab Kunwar. Musammat Gulab Kunwar died in 1907. Her husband, Jagannath Singh, succeeded in getting mutation of names effected in respect of that share in his favour.

The present suit has been filed by Musammat Chauras Kunwar and her son, Durga Bakhsh Singh, for the possession of that share. The Court of first instance decreed the claim. Its finding was that Jagannath Singh had failed to prove the oral Will set up by him and that Musammat Chauras Kunwar was entitled to the disputed share by right of intestate succession.

There were two questions in issue before it. The first was whether there was a custom prevailing in the family to which Binda Singh belonged by which a daughter was excluded from inheritance. The second was whether Binda Singh had made any oral bequest of the kind set up by the plaintiffs. The lower Appellate Court observed that the point mainly pressed was the first one. It nevertheless went on to discuss the other point which it considered to be of importance and came to a conclusion adverse to the plaintiffs. If the second point was not pressed, the Court below need not have discussed it, or should have at all events given the plaintiffs an opportunity of discussing it before proceeding to express any opinion on its merits. The opinion which it expressed was also vitiated by the wrong perspective from which the question was examined. The alleged oral Will set up by the plaintiffs may not have been identical with the alleged oral Will set up by Jagannath Singh. Each of them may have had in their view an oral Will said to have been made on a date different from that referred to or intended by the other. Between the date of the death of Mahadeo Singh and his own death, Binda Singh may have made many oral bequests, changing his mind each time in the state of affection in which he found himself when one of his grandsons died. Section 82 of the Indian Succession Act (X of 1865) has no application, because where a grant is made by a person governed by the Hindu Law in favour of a female, there is no necessary presumption that an absolute estate was intended to be granted. The main plank of the defendant's case is that by virtue of the oral bequest relied on by him, an absolute estate was granted to Musammat Gulab Kunwar. That case must succeed or fail on the merits of the evidence which has been adduced in support of it. The plaintiffs gave no evidence in support of their allegation. The defendant did in support of his.

The question of custom has similarly been approached from a wrong standpoint. The defendant had set up a family custom excluding daughters from inheritance. He had asserted that Binda Singh was a Sombansi Thakur and filed certain wajib-ul-arzes and a number of decisions in support of his contention that such a custom prevailed among all Sombansi Thakurs of that locality or neighbourhood. He also produced some oral evidence in support of that allegation. The lower Appellate Court does not say that it disbelieved that evidence. It merely set aside that evidence out of its consideration, on the ground that it was beside the mark inasmuch as only a family custom was set up. But a tribal custom may in certain circumstances be relevant as showing that a family belonging to that tribe observed it.

It is desirable, therefore, that a proper finding should be obtained on each of these matters from the lower Appellate Court after a due consideration of the evidence which each party has adduced and which is already on the record. That Court is accordingly directed to determine on that evidence:—

(1) Whether Binda Singh made any oral bequest devising the half share in dispute to Musammat Gulab Kunwar by way of an absolute estate after the death of Mahadeo Singh?

(2) Whether by virtue of any custom prevailing in the family to which Binda Singh belonged Musammat Chauras Kunwar was excluded from inheritance?

Two months' time will be allowed for a return of the findings and ten days from the date of the findings will be allowed to the parties for filing objections.

Issues remitted.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

APPEAL AGAINST ORDER No. 248 OF 1918.

December 11, 1919.

Present:—Mr. Justice Oldfield and Mr. Justice Seshagiri Aiyar.

MAZUMDAR RAMAKRISHNA RAO PANTHULU—PETITIONER—APPELLANT

versus

MAZUMDAR BALAKRISHNA RAO PANTHULU—RESPONDENT.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XXI, r. 2—Applicability of rule to cases of decrees other than those for payment of money—Adjustment relating to partition of immoveable property, whether within rule.

An adjustment relating to partition of immoveable property provided for by a decree of Court falls within Order XXI, rule 2, Civil Procedure Code. The rule is not restricted in its application to provisions for payment of money. [p. 289, col. 2; p. 290, col. 1.]

Kelu Nair v. Meenakshi, 21 Ind. Cas. 639; 25 M. L. J. 586; 14 M. L. T. 574, not followed.

Abdul Latif Sahib v. Bathula Bibi Ammal, 23 Ind. Cas. 530; 15 M. L. T. 338; (1914) M. W. N. 346; Sethurama Sahib v. Srimantha Chotta Raja Sahib, 40 Ind. Cas. 820; (1917) M. W. N. 327, followed.

Appeal against the order of the District Court, Ganjam at Berhampore, dated the 27th March 1918, made in Original Execution Petition No. 50 of 1915, in Original Suit No. 19 of 1909.

Mr. N. Rama Row, for the Appellant.

Mr. P. J. Suppanna Row, for the Respondent.

This appeal coming on for hearing on the 8th April 1919, the Court delivered the following

JUDGMENT.

OLDFIELD, J.—The lower Court's conclusion as to items Nos. 2, 3, 7, 8, 9 is based on petitioner's admission in evidence and we have been shown no reason for dissent. The appeal on this point fails.

The remaining argument is as to Exhibit I and the question whether it constitutes an adjustment and the Court can take notice of it, if it was never certified to it, as Order XXI, rule 2, Civil Procedure Code, requires. It was a sale by petitioner to the other decree-holder, respondent, of part of the property, which was to be divided; and we have no doubt that the transfer was an adjustment of the decree. On the question whether Exhibit I should have been certified to the Court, several decisions have been quoted regarding the application of Order XXI, rule 2, to decrees, which, like the case before us, include provision for payment of money as well as for other relief. Of the two cases referred to by the lower Court, it is not clear that the decree in Kristna Hande v. Padmanabha Hande (1) contained any provision of the former description and in Abdul Latif Sahib v. Bathula Bibi Ammal (2) Order XXI, rule 2, is applied to all decrees, under which money is payable; and there is nothing in it to support the restriction of its application proposed by the lower Court to provisions for payment of money. That interpretation of it was in fact rejected in Sethurama Sahib v. Srimantha Chotta Raja Sahib (3). In the latter case a previous unreported decision of my own is referred to, Civil Miscellaneous Second Appeal No. 11 of 1915; but it was founded on a judgment of Sadasiva Aiyar, J., in Kelu Nair v. Meenakshi (4), the principle of which he statedly reconsidered in Sethurama Sahib v. Srimantha Chotta Raja Sahib (3). The recent course of decisions of this Court is strongly marked and in a matter of this nature, I should not depart

(1) 21 Ind. Cas. 177; 25 M. L. J. 442; 14 M. L. T. 233; (1913) M. W. N. 802.

(2) 23 Ind. Cas. 530; 15 M. L. T. 338; (1914) M. W. N. 346.

(3) 40 Ind. Cas. 820; (1917) M. W. N. 327.

(4) 21 Ind. Cas. 639; 25 M. L. J. 586; 14 M. L. T. 574.

from it except for far stronger reason than is available. In these circumstances, following the case last mentioned, I think that the lower Court should have applied Order XXI, rule 2, to the adjustment evidenced by Exhibit I. It is said, however, that in fact the decree, so far as the properties dealt with in Exhibit I are concerned, was adjusted at a later date by the presentation by all the parties to it of Execution Appeal No. 369 of 1913 dated 8th July 1913. That application certainly certifies satisfaction as between the present parties and their brother, the defendant in the suit. But it is not possible to say on the information before us whether it involved any satisfaction as between the present parties, or whether all the properties in Exhibit I being in the schedule A referred in Execution Appeal No. 369 of 1913, the divisions of schedule A properties between them still have to be effected and the decree in respect thereof remained unexecuted.

Again respondent asks for an opportunity to ascertain whether Exhibit I was certified to the Court within the time allowed by Order XXI, rule 2; and in the absence of any categorical statement by the lower Court on the point, we think that he should be allowed an opportunity to show that there was such certification by production of documentary evidence regarding it.

We, therefore, call on the lower Court to submit findings on the issues:—

1. "Did Execution Appeal No. 369 of 1913 effect a valid satisfaction of the decree, so far as it related to immoveable properties, which renders it unnecessary for respondent to prove that Exhibit I was certified to the Court?"

2. "Was Exhibit I ever certified to the Court and, if so, were the provision of Order XXI, rule 2, complied with?"

Fresh evidence may be taken with reference to the first issue and fresh documentary evidence with reference to the second. The finding should be submitted within six weeks after the re-opening of the lower Court after the midsummer vacation and seven days will be allowed for filing objections.

SESHAGIRI AIYAR, J.—As regards Exhibit I, the learned District Judge was right in holding on the authority of Kelu Nair v. Meenakshi (4) that the adjustment relating to the partition of the immoveable properties was not within the mischief of Order XXI, rule 2. But one of the learned Judges who decided that case, has receded from the position taken up by him, following the decision of the learned Chief Justice and Aiyng, J., and my learned brother who followed Kelu Nair v. Meenakshi (4) in C. M. S. A. No. 11 of 1915 is prepared to accept the later view.

If the matter were res integra I would have had some hesitation in holding that the words in Order XXI, rule 2 (1), "or the decree is otherwise adjusted in whole or in part," related to portions of a decree in respect of which "money is not payable." However, acting on the principle that there should be uniformity on a question of procedure, I follow the two later decisions, namely, Abdul Latif Sahib v. Bathula Bibi Ammal (2) and Sethurama Sahib v. Srimantha Chotta Raja Sahib (3) and hold that the present case is covered by Order XXI, rule 2, clause (1). I agree with my learned brother in his conclusion and direction on the other points argued before us.

In compliance with the order contained in the above judgment the District Judge of Ganjam at Berhampore submitted the following FINDINGS.—With regard to the first of the two issues referred to me, it has been admitted before me on behalf of the counter-petitioner that Execution Appeal No. 369 of 1913 did not effect a satisfaction of the decree as between petitioner and counter-petitioner; and this is shown too by the terms of the petition filed in those proceedings. The settlement was between the petitioner and counter-petitioner, collectively on the one side, and the defendant Narasinga Row on the other. My reply to this issue is accordingly in the negative.

2. On the second issue, also, it is admitted that no documentary evidence exists to show that Exhibit I was ever certified to the Court. This issue too, therefore, I answer in the negative.

No costs have been incurred in this Court after remand.

This appeal coming on for final hearing after the return of the findings of the lower Court upon the issues referred to by this Court for trial, the Court delivered the following

BHARATH SINGH v. MUNNU SINGH.

JUDGMEMT. The appeal is allowed to the extent that the lower Court's order will be modified by insertion of a direction that the immoveable properties mentioned in Exhibit I should be divided in addition to those already specified. There will be proportionate costs here and in the lower Court.

M. C. P.

Appeal partly allowed.

OUDH JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

FIRST CIVIL APPEALS NOS. 29 AND 30 OF 1918.

December 18, 1919.

Present:—Mr Stuart, A. J C., and Pandit Kanhaiya Lal, A. J. C.

BHARATH SINGH AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS—APPELLANTS

versus

MUNNU SINGH AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Hindu Law—Widow, alienation by—Necessity, proof of—Consideration, small portion of, not shown for necessity, effect of.

Where in the case of a sale effected by a Hindu widow, the entire consideration with the exception of a small portion is shown to have been taken for legal necessity, the vendee cannot be deprived of the benefit of his purchase. [p 293, cols. 1 & 2.]

Girdharee Lall v. Kantoo Lall, 1 I A. 32 ; 14 B, L. R. 87: 22 W. R. 56; 3 Sar. P. C. J. 380; Buniyad Husain v. Mata Din Singh, 36 Ind. Cas. 5?; 19 O. C. 122; 3 O. L. J. 318 and Gur Sahai v. Girdhar Lal, 52 Ind. Cas. 75: 22 O. C. 84: 1 U. P. L. R. (J. C) 54; 6 O L. J. 411, followed.

In the case of a mortgage no such question arises, because it is open to the reversioners to sue for redemption on payment of the amount for which they may be held liable. [p. 293, col. 2.]

Appeals from the decree of the Subordinate Judge, Sitapur, dated the 9th March 1918.

Mr. J. N. Chak for Mr. M. N. Chak, for Appellant No. 2 in Appeal No. 29.

The Hon'ble Pandit Gokaran Nath Misra and Messrs. Chand Narain Harkauli and Dwarka Singh, for Respondents Nos. 1, 2, 4, 5 and 6 in Appeal No. 29.

Babu Basudeo Lal, for Respondent No. 7 in Appeal No. 29.

Mr. J. N. Chak for Mr. M. N. Chak, for Apnellant No. 2 in Appeal No. 30.

The Hon'ble Pandit Gokaran Nath Misra and Messrs. Chand Narain Harkauli and Dwarka Singh, for all the Respondents except No. 3 in Appeal No. 30.

JUDGMENT.—The dispute in these appeals relates to certain properties which belonged to Mitan Singh, who died leaving a widow, Musammat Jaswant Kuar. On the 11th July 1898 Musammat Jaswant Kuar mortgaged a 5 biswas share in the village Bhitia with possession in favour of Chandra Singh, the ancestor of the defendants, for a consideration of Rs. 2,500 out of which Rs. 2,154 have been held by the Court below to have been taken for legal necessity. On the same date she sold the remaining property in dispute to Chandra Singh for a consideration of Rs. 13,196-11-3, out of which Rs. 12,378-9-4 have been held by the Court below to have been taken for legal necessity. Musammat Jaswant Kuar died on the 5th November 1916. The plaintiffs, Bharath Singh, Balbhadra Singh and Lalta Singh, are the nearest reversionary heirs of Mitan Singh deceased. Two of them, Bharath Singh and Lalta Singh, have withdrawn their appeals and accepted a payment of Rs. 4,000 from Munnu Singh, one of the defendants-respondents, in satisfaction of their claims. Their appeals will be dismissed as withdrawn in terms of the compromise. The remaining appellant, Balbhadra Singh, proposes to proceed with these appeals.

With regard to the sale effected by Musammat Jaswant Kuar, he disputes the existence of any legal necessity with reference to some of the items allowed by the Court below and contends that inasmuch as the property comprised in the sale was of much greater value than the consideration mentioned in the sale-deed, he should be allowed to recover the property on payment of such amount, for which the Court might find the legal necessity to be established. With regard to the mortgage effected by Musammat Jaswant Kuar he contends that the terms of the mortgage were onerous and unreasonable and could not bind the property mortgaged in the hands of the reversionary heirs of Mitan Singh and that he was entitled to redeem the same on payment of such amount, for which the legal necessity may be found to be established.

The sale deed purports to have been executed by Musammat Jaswant Kuar to discharge certain debts due by Mitan Singh subject to a provision to secure her maintenance. Out of the total consideration of Rs. 13,196-11-3, Rs. 4,937 were stated to be due to the vendee on account of certain mortgages made in his favour by Mitan Singh, Rs. 409-11-3 were alleged to have been due to him by Mitan Singh on account of oral debts and Rs. 7,650 were left for payment to other creditors on account of the mortgages made by Mitan Singh. The names of the creditors, the dates of the mortgages or the amounts due on them were not specified in the sale-deed, but the villages comprised in those mortgages are mentioned. The learned Counsel for the plaintiffs-appellants dispute the existence of legal necessity in regard to items aggregating Rs. 4,870 1 11 only.

The first of these items is a debt of Rs. 231 due by Mitan Singh on account of a deed of further charge executed on his behalf by his general agent, Balak Ram, on the 30th January 1895 (Exhibit A7). The evidence of Balak Ram shows that Mitan Singh executed the deed of further charge for Rs. 155 in favour of Behari Lal with respect to the village Baniapur and that he, Balak Ram, signed the deed at the instance of Mitan Singh. Badri Prasad, son of Behari Lal, deposes that the money due on that deed was paid by Chandra Singh along with the money due on the principal deed of mortgage. The power-of attorney held by Balak Ram has not been filed, but the evidence of Balak Ram coupled with the endorsement of the Sub Registrar is sufficient to establish that he had authority to execute and sign the deed on behalf of Mitan Singh. The plaintiffs appellants have been rightly made liable for this amount.

The second item is a sum of Rs. 471 due on a registered mortgage deed executed by Balak Ram on behalf of Mitan Singh as his general agent in favour of Pratap Singh on the 14th August 1894 (Exhibit A5). Balak Ram had authority to execute and sign the above deed on behalf of Mitan Singh. Pratap Singh deposes that he received the money due on it from Chandra Singh. The plaintiffs-appellants are liable for this item also.

The third item is a sum of Rs. 540 paid on account of a deed of mortgage executed by Mitan Singh in favour of Daryao Gir on the 12th June 1893 (Exhibit A11). Balak Ram deposes that Chandra Singh paid Rs. 530 or Rs. 540 out of the purchase money on account of that mortgage to Ram Adhin Gir, the disciple and successor of Daryao Gir. Ram Adhin Gir corroborates him. This item also has, therefore, been properly included in the account.

An item of Rs. 925 12-0 is stated to have been paid on account of a deed of mortgage executed by Mitan Singh in favour of Munna Lal on the 12th June 1890 (Exhibit A12) and another item of Rs. 665 is stated to have been paid on account of a deed of further charge executed by him in favour of the same person on the 3rd July 1891 (Exhibit A13). Jamna Din, son of Munna Lal, deposes that Chandra Singh paid him Rs. 1,400 or Rs. 1,500 on account of those deeds. The defendants stated that Rs. 1,475 were paid on account of those deeds by Chandra Singh; inasmuch as there was no evidence to prove that any sum was relinquished by Jamna Din, that statement has been rightly accepted by the Court below as the measure of the liability of the plaintiffs-appellants on account of those debts.

An item of Rs. 335 is stated to have been paid on account of a deed of mortgage, executed by Mitan Singh in favour of Ambar Singh on the 10th June 1892 (Exhibit A67). Ambar Singh transferred his mortgagee right to Dilipat Singh. The evidence of Din Dayal, who was in the service of Dilipat Singh, proves that Munna Lal, the Diwan of Chandra Singh, gave Rs. 335 to Dilipat Singh on account of that mortgage. Hazari Singh corroborates him. The plaintiffs-appellants are, therefore, liable for this item too.

Another item of Rs. 800 is stated to have been paid on account of a deed of usufructuary mortgage executed by Mitan Singh in favour of Pratap Singh on the 21st May 1894 (Exhibit A69). Chandra Singh paid that amount by depositing it in Court under section 83 of Act IV of 1882, Pratap Singh admits having received that money through Court after a decree for redemption had been obtained by Chandra Singh in respect of the said mortgage (Exhibit. A18). The plaintiffs-appellnts are liable for this amount too.

A sum of Rs. 200 is stated to have been paid to Musammat Jaswant Kuar in cash for the expenses connected with the execution, stamp and registration of the sale-deed. The Court below was of opinion that having regard to the stamp duty paid and the other expenses usually incurred, the above expenditure cannot be considered to be unreasonable and we see no reason to take a different view.

The plaintiffs-appellants are also liable for an item of Rs. 194 due on account of an oral debt due by Mitan Singh, the existence of which has been proved. The existence of legal necessity for Rs. 4,361 out of Rs 4,870-1-11 is thus established. The legal necessity with regard to Rs. 8,326-9 4, allowed by the Court below, is not disputed.

The evidence produced by the plaintiffs-appellants to prove that the property sold was worth Rs. 75,000 is very unsatisfactory. Taking the profits of the property sold as are ascertainable from the assessment papers prepared at the time of the last settlement, the Court below rightly came to the conclusion that the property sold could have not fetched more than what was offered by Chandra Singh, particularly as the vendor was allowed to retain possession of the best villages, the profits of which amounted to one-third of the profits of the entire property sold, for her life as a provision for her maintenance. She lived for eighteen years after the execution of the sale-deed and enjoyed the profits of the said villages, and that fact must have materially affected the price which the property sold might otherwise have fetched.

In regard to the deed of mortgage, Rs. 2,154 were taken to pay a previous mortgage deed for Rs. 1,000 executed by Mitan Singh on the 29th November 1898. That liability has been properly charged against the plaintiffs appellants. The propriety of the terms on which the loan was taken cannot be considered till a suit is filed by the plaintiffs for the redemption of that mortgage, which is binding on them to the extent of Rs. 2, 154. As observed by their Lordships of the Privy Council in Girdharee Lall v. Kantoo Lall (1), where the entire consideration with the exception of a small portion is shown to have been taken for legal necessity, the vendee cannot be deprived of the benefit of his purchase. In Buniyad Husain v. Mata Din Singh (2) and Gur Sahai v. Girdhar Lal (3) a similar view was taken. The Court below has directed the vendee or his legal representatives to pay to the plaintiffs a sum of Rs. 818-1-1 with interest at 1 per cent. per mensem to recoup them for the portion of the consideration for which no legal necessity was found to have been proved. In the case of a mortgage no such question arises, because it is open to the plaintiffs to sue for redemption on payment of the amount for which they may be held liable. If the mortgage contains onerous terms, the propriety of those terms can be challenged when the suit for redemption is brought. The other pleas taken in the memoranda of appeal have not been pressed. The learned Counsel, who appears for Musammat Munna Kuar, does not press the cross objections filed by him on her behalf.

The appeals are, therefore, dismissed with costs. The cross-objections are also dismissed as withdrawn with costs.

Appeals dismissed.

(1) 1 I. A. 321; 14 B. L. R. 187; 22 W. R. 56; 3 Sar. P. C. J. 380.

(2) 36 Ind. Cas. 57; 19 O C. 122; 3 O. L. J. 313.

(3) 52 Ind. Cas. 75; 22 O. C. 84; 1 U. P. L. R. (J. C.) 54; 5 O. L. J. 411.

PRIVY COUNCIL.

APPEAL FROM THE ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.

January 20, 1920.

Present:—Lord Shaw, Lord Phillimore, Sir John Edge, Mr. Ameer Ali and Sir Lawrence Jenkins.

GIRDHAR DAS, SINCE DECEASED (NOW REPRESENTED BY BRIJ MOHAN DASS) —APPELLANT

versus

Raja SRI KRISHNA DATT DUBE AND OTHERS—RESPONDENTS.

Hindu Law—Mitakshara—Partition, requisites of —Division of interest—Intention to separate, whether sufficient—Burden of proof.

In a Hindu joint family a disruption of the status of jointness may take place by agreement, without division of the estate by metes and bounds. Even an unambiguous expression of an intention by one member of the joint family to separate and hold his share separately will suffice But the question is one of fact, and the onus is on the party alleging separation of interest or the intention to separate to affirmatively establish it. [p. 297, col. 1.]

Appeal from a decree of the Allahabad High Court, dated the 18th February 1914, affirming a decree of the Subordinate Judge, Benares.

FACTS of the case sufficiently appear from their Lordships' judgment. The trial Court dismissed the suit of the plaintiff-appellant, and an appeal to the High Court (Sir H. Richards, C. J., and Sir P. C. Banerji, J.) was dismissed. Hence this appeal.

Messrs. De Gruyther and Garth, for the Appellant, submitted that a partition had taken place between Harihar Dutt and his brother Shankar Dutt. To effect a partition it is not necessary there should be a separation by metes and bounds: directly the members agree to hold their shares separately, it operates as a partition.

Balkishen Das v. Ram Narain Sahu (1).

It is not necessary the other members of the joint family should agree: without any agreement any member may indicate that he will hold his share separately: that alone operates as a partition.

Girja Bai v. Sadashiv Dhundiraj (2).

The communication of an unequivocal desire to separate amounts to partition.

Kawal Nain v. Prabhu Lal (Budh Singh) (3).

The evidence here shows the two brothers had ceased to be joint. In the ekrarnama of 17th June 1889 Shankar Dutt reserves his right of recovery against Harihar: that was incompatible with the property being joint. Paragraph 5 of the deed is a conveyance by Harihar to Shankar of the whole of his interest for a consideration previously arranged.

[LORD PHILLIMORE:—You must say this deed was void, or you would have no interest at all: I suppose you use it as evidence of the state of the family.]

That is so. The whole of the provisions of the deed are contractual: the brothers could not contract except on the basis of the separation which we contend had occurred If the property were joint, Harihar could not deal with the succession.

The deed of 1889 did not divest Harihar of title: it was altogether void. The deed required the sanction of the Court of Wards. Harihar Dutt and Shankar Dutt being disqualified proprietors, section 205B of Act XIX of 1873 required the sanction of the Court of Wards to any disposition of the property by either of them. The High Court have wrongly assumed that such sanction was given. It has never even been alleged that it was given: and we submit, first, that there is no presumption that it was given, second, that the burden of proving such sanction as a condition precedent to the validity of the deed lies on the persons claiming under it, and that such burden has not been discharged.

Messrs. Dunne and Parikh, for the Respondents.—The question whether there has indeed been a separation between these two is a question of fact. There is no question of any unequivocal expression of intention here, the only question is, was there an agreement to separate? That is a question of fact, to be decided by way of inference from facts. It is not enough to say that the documents are incompatible with the property being joint: it must be shown they were inconsistent with any such proposition. If there had been a separation of interests, the Court of Wards would have kept separate accounts. The presumption is that the brothers remained joint: that presumption has not been rebutted.

The property being joint, Haribar could not mortgage it except for necessity; it has been found that there was no necessity.

If, however, it be held that the brothers were separate, the High Court have rightly held that the deed of 1889 was valid. By that deed Harihar transferred his interest to Shankar: he had nothing left to mortgage. As the High Court point out, it was never questioned in the trial Court that the Court of Wards sanctioned the arrangement, and

(1) 30 I. A. 189; 30 C. 738; 7 C. W. N. 578; 5 Bom. L. R. 461; 8 Sar. P. C. J. 489.

(2) 37 Ind. Cas. 821; 43 I. A. 151; 20 C. W. N. 1085; 14 A. L. J. 822; 20 M. L. T. 78; 12 N. L. R. 118; (1916) 2 M. W. N. 65; 18 Bom. L. R. 621; 4 L. W. 114; 24 C. L. J. 207; 31 M. L. J. 465; 48 C. 1031 (P. C.).

(3) 40 Ind. Cas. 286; 44 I. A. 159; 15 A. L. J. 581; 2 P. L. W. 57; 21 C. W. N. 986; 33 M. L. J. 42; 19 Bom. L. R. 642; 26 C. L. J. 101; (1917) M. W. N. 514; 6 L. W. 230; 39 A. 496 (P. C.).

the question being one of fact, it was not open to appellant to raise it for the first time in appeal.

JUDGMENT.

MR. AMEER ALI.—The suit which has given rise to this appeal was brought in the Court of the Subordinate Judge of Benares on the 8th August 1910 to enforce a mortgage bond for Rs. 50,000 executed by one Raja Harihar Dut Dube in favour of Bisambhar Das, the plaintiff's father, since deceased. By this bond, which bears date the 6th October 1889, Harihar Dut purported to hypothecate a half share of a large property commonly known as the Jaunpur Estate in the Jaunpur District, then in his possession. Harihar Dut died in 1892 and on his decease the property came into the possession of his younger brother, Raja Shankar Dut Dube. Shankar Dut died three years later. The minior defendant Kishen Dut was adopted after Raja Shankar Dut's death by his widow under his authority.

The Court of Wards have assumed charge of the estate during Kishen Dut's minority.

The Jaunpur Estate owes its origin to one Sheo Lal Dube who lived towards the end of the eighteenth and the beginning of the nineteenth century, and appears to have been a man of considerable business ability. For his services to the British Government he had received the title of Raja, which has continued in his family as all its heads in succession seem to have enjoyed it. Harihar Dut and Shankar Dut were fourth in descent from Sheo Lal, and in 1879 they were the only persons interested in the Jaunpur Estate. Harihar Dut was admittedly a person of extravagant habits; he had, in the course of the few years during which he had been in possession of the property, contracted debts amounting to several lakhs of rupees. Shankar Dut was evidently more prudent and anxious to preserve intact the ancestral estate and dignity. In order to save the property from ruin in consequence of Harihar Dut's extravagance the two brothers jointly applied in October 1878 to the Court of Wards to assume charge of the estate and to discharge the debts with which it had become encumbered. The application was acceded to, and the Court of Wards held the estate for ten years, during which all the debts were paid off and the property was once more solvent. The law which vests in the Board of Revenue as the chief revenue authority in the Province the powers of a Court of Wards defines the class of proprietors disqualified to manage their property and of whose estate it may assume charge. Among these proprietors are included persons declared by the Local Government on their own application to be "disqualified" (Act XIX of 1873, Land Revenue, N. W. P., sections 193 and 194). Harihar Dut and Shankar Dut came within this category. By a later Act (VIII of 1879, section 24), a further section (205B) was inserted in Act XIX of 1873 which introduced the wholesome provision that:—

"Persons whose property is under the superintendence of the Court of Wards shall not be competent to create, without the sanction of the Court, any charge upon, or interest in, such property or any part thereof.

"And no such property shall be liable to be taken in execution of a decree made in respect of any contract entered into by any such person while his property is under such superintendence."

This provision of the law prevented Harihar Dut from encumbering the estate during the management of the Court of Wards. But Shankar Dut was, evidently and not without reason, apprehensive that his brother would resume his habits of extravagance on the release of the property by the Court of Wards. In order to prevent so far as possible his burdening the estate, Shankar Dut obtained from him an agreement by which among other conditions Harihar bound himself not to contract any debt without Shankar's consent. It was agreed that on a breach of this condition Harihar should forfeit his right to the possession and management of the estate, which should devolve on Shankar. This document was executed on the 13th June 1889 but was not registered until January 1890. Whilst the property was under the administration of the Court of Wards, Harihar had borrowed Rs. 50,000 from Bisambhar Das on five promissory notes. The estate was released on the 1st October 1889 and five days after, that is, on the 6th October, he executed the mortgage bond in suit, in substitution of the promissory notes.

Bisambhar Das appears to have brought an action on this bond in the lifetime of Shankar Dutt, but it was withdrawn, owing, it is said, to some technical defect, with liberty to bring another suit.

The present action was instituted as already stated on the 9th August 1910. The plaintiff Girdhar Das (who is insane and sues by his committee or certificated guardian, his wife) and the defendants other than the Collector and Kishen Dutt are the heirs and representatives of the original mortgagee, Bisambhar. The plaintiff's claim to bring to sale the half share of the Jaunpur Estate under the mortgage rests on three grounds:—Firstly, that it is an impartible estate, and that, therefore, Harihar Dut had absolute power of alienation over it; secondly, that even if it was not an impartible Raj but a property subject to the ordinary rules of the Hindu Law, it had been partitioned between the two brothers, and that at the time of the mortgage, Harihar was holding possession of his share separately from Shankar; and thirdly that even if there was no partition, the debt was incurred by Harihar Dut as the managing member for legal necessity and the benefit of the joint family.

The Collector, representing the Court of Wards, joined issue with the plaintiff on all these points. He contended further that at the time of the mortgage Harihar had no right in the property, as he had under the agreement of the 13th June 1889 relinquished all his rights in the estate in favour of Shankar Dut, and that even if for any reason the agreement was not enforceable, Harihar Dut as a member of the joint family was incompetent under the Hindu Law to execute the mortgage in question.

It appears that in a suit instituted in 1893 against Raja Shankar Dut by one of Raja Harihar Dut's creditors named Bithal Das, the validity of the agreement of the 13th June 1889 was put in issue, and the High Court in that case had decided that it was a valid agreement made for valuable consideration and binding on Harihar Dut and all persons deriving title from him.

In the present case the Subordinate Judge, before whom it came for trial in the first instance, held that the Jaunpur Estate in question was "not an impartible Raj, but an ordinary estate of a joint Hindu family," and as there was no proof of any legal necessity, the mortgage-deed on which the suit was brought was "invalid." He referred to the decision of the High Court in Bithal Das v. Shankar Dat (4) with regard to the effect of the agreement of the 13th June 1889, but properly observed that the parties were not the same in the present action, and that the pronouncement made in that case could not, therefore, operate as res judicata. Upon the findings of fact at which he arrived the Subordinate Judge dismissed the plaintiff's suit.

The learned Judges of the High Court of Allahabad on appeal, after disposing of the question whether the estate in suit was an impartible "Raj" or not, proceeded to deal with the case on the basis of the agreement of the 13th June 1889. They first expressed their agreement with the view of the first Court on the plaintiff's contention that the estate was impartible. They then went on to say as follows:—

"There is no evidence of partition save certain recitals in applications and other documents, including the agreement to which we have just now referred, to the effect that they were owners in equal shares. We do not think that it is necessary, having regard to the view we take of the case, to decide that there had been what amounted in law to a partition between the brothers."

It is to be regretted that the learned Judges did not express more decisively their opinion on the contention of partition, as it would have saved much discussion before this Board. In the result they held that the agreement was valid and binding, and accordingly affirmed the decree of the Subordinate Judge dismissing the suit.

On appeal before this Board it is admitted that the concurrent finding of the two Courts in India on the question of impartibility is conclusive. The debate, therefore, has been confined to two points—viz., whether, accepting that the estate was at one time a joint family property, the plaintiff has succeeded in establishing that at the time of the mortgage the brothers were separate; and secondly, whether the agreement of the 13th June 1889 was invalid and inoperative as it was not entered into with the sanction of the Court of Wards. It is clear, however, that the latter question would require determination only if separation is established.

(4) 17 A. 264 at pp 272, 273; A. W. N. (1895) 57; 8 Ind. Dec. (N. s.) 494.

The Dube family, it should be observed, are subject to the Mitakshara Law of the Benares School. Admittedly there has been no actual partition between the brothers; nor is it alleged, much less proved, that they enjoyed separately the rents and profits of their respective shares. It is not suggested that they were separate in mess and worship. What is contended for is that by their acts they had agreed to a "division of interest," which amounted in law to a separation. No doubt a disruption of the status of jointness may take place by agreement, without division of the estate by metes and bounds. Even an unambiguous expression of an intention by one member of the joint family to separate and hold his share separately will suffice. But the question is one of fact, and the onus is on the party alleging separation of interest or the intention to separate to affirmatively establish it.

The plaintiff in support of his contention relies principally on two documents. One is a deed of compromise bearing date the 2nd January 1875, entered into between Raja Lachmi Narain Dube on one side, and the two brothers (Harihar and Shankar) on the other. Lachmi Narain was a cousin of Harihar and Shankar, and was at the time the head of the Dube family. Shankar was then a minor and was represented on the compromise by the Collector, the share of these two being apparently in 1875 in charge of the Court of Wards. The document recites that "a dispute relative to a partition of the riasat," meaning thereby the estate, "had been going on for a long time between the parties owing to which no benefit whatever had been derived, but on the contrary losses sustained, and that, therefore, they were entering into a compromise with the object of maintaining the riasat." The parties then proceed to make the following declaration:—

"The riasat is a Raj which was acquired by the ancestors of the parties, that we or our heirs will never express a wish to have the profits or anything else partitioned, if we make a partition, it will not be entertained and this riasat will always continue joint and we, both the parties, namely, Raja Lachmi Narayan Dubey, first party, and Raja Haribar Dut Dubey and Shankar Dut Dubey, the second parties, have equal rights. The matters relating to gaddinashini, management of affairs, the expenses of the riasat and family, and possession of Lachmi Narayan Dube will continue as hereafter in accordance with ancient custom. After the present gaddinashin the person who may be the eldest in age and qualified, will be the gaddinashin in future. Matters connected with the management of riasat will also be attended to by us, the second parties, in concurrence with the others. The debts that are due up to this day by the parties will be paid from the whole of the riasat, and debts must on no account be contracted in future without the consent of the parties."

The parties to this document certainly do not evince any desire or intention to separate or to divide their respective interests in the joint estate; on the contrary, they insist on the continued existence of the estate as the joint property of the three executants. They call the estate a "Raj," and the head of the family for the time being "the eldest in age and qualified" as the gaddinashin; but that in no way affects the status of the family as a joint Mitakshara family.

Particular stress, however, is laid on the terms of a document executed by Shankar Dut on the 13th June 1879, shortly after the Court of Wards had assumed charge of the Jaunpur Estate. It is called an ikrarnama or agreement and is in the nature of a deed-poll. By this deed Shankar Dut binds himself and his heirs not to raise any objection to the sale or transfer by the Collector, or any other duly authorised officer of the Court of Wards, of any Zamindari ilaka "appertaining to the estate" and belonging to him, for the purpose of liquidating the debts with which it was burdened. At the same time he reserves his right to compensation against his brother. It is urged that the declarations contained in this document show a pre existing severance of interest between the two brothers. It becomes necessary, therefore, to refer shortly to the terms of the document. It begins with the statement that the "executant" had presented an application jointly with Haribar on the 25th October 1878 to the Collector, and the Zamindari property belonging to him "which is held jointly with Raja Harihar Dut Dube has been placed under the management of the Court of Wards." It then goes on to say :—

"As the debts are heavy...and as Raja Harihar Dut Dube, and I, the executant, are the proprietors of a moiety share each, and if any ilaka belonging to the riasat is disposed of, then owing to the property being held in shares (jointly) there is no hope of getting a fair price owing to apprehensions of future objections being raised either by us, or our heirs, I, the executant, do hereby agree and give it in writing that if the Collector of the District of Jaunpur, the officer of the Court of Wards, or with the permission of the said officer, the manager transfers by sale any Zamindari ilaka appertaining to the riasat belonging to me, the executant, with the object of liquidating the debts and applies the proceeds in liquidating the debts, then I, the executant, or my heirs and successors will raise no objections in future in respect of such transfer, and I, the executant, or my heirs and successors will make no objection (after the management of the Court of Wards has been removed) in respect of the transfer aforesaid either against the Court of Wards or the persons to whom the Court of Wards may transfer the property. But it must be understood that this ikrarnama (deed of agreement) will in no way be detrimental to any of my rights which I had against Raja Harihar Dut Dube before its execution ; because after the transfer of some of the ilakas, appertaining to the riasat only a large portion of the riasat will be left free from incumbrance, and then whatever claim I may have with reference to the imlak which may be in existence I will make it against the imlak which is left and against my partner."

This document was executed, as it clearly states, with the object of enabling the Collector or the Court of Wards to give good title to the transferees unhampered by the possibility of future litigation by any reversioner. It was the only mode by which a fair price could be assured. There is no statement that the properties were held separately or that the interests of the two brothers were separate or separately enjoyed ; nor that any severance of interest was intended. On the contrary, it distinctly states that the estate was held "jointly" and that the two brothers were entitled to it in equal shares. The reservation by Shankar Dut of his rights is a natural corollary to the right of every joint tenant to claim upon partition compensation from his co-parceners in the event of unequal division. Reference has also been made to the joint agreement executed by Harihar and Shankar on the 13th June 1889. Their Lordships have examined this document also with great care and given due weight to the considerations urged on behalf of the appellant, but they find no trace of any previous separation or intended separation. On the contrary, the whole policy of the agreement is to keep the estate undivided in the family. There is an evident and natural desire to raise the prestige of the estate by calling it a Raj, and by styling the head or karta of the family the gaddinashin. But, as already stated, there is no indication throughout the document that there was an intention to disrupt the status of the family. The Court of Wards assumed charge of the estate as a joint estate, and throughout its administration treated it on that footing (ide for example the sale notification of the 15th August 1879). The village administration papers (wajib-ul-arz) for 1886 contain statements to the same effect.

Their Lordships do not think it necessary to refer to any of the documents executed by Harihar Dut or Shankar Dut after the date of the mortgage of the 6th October 1889, as its validity and enforcibility against the estate must be determined on the basis of the status of the family at the time it was executed and of the powers of Harihar Dut to bind the property. On a careful examination of the evidence their Lordships have come to the conclusion that the plaintiff has utterly failed to establish the separation on which he rested his claim. Admittedly there is no proof of such legal necessity as would justify the creation of the mortgage in respect of the joint family property. In this view of the case their Lordships do not consider it necessary to enter upon a discussion of the validity of the agreement of the 13th June 1889.

A number of decisions by this Board was were referred to on behalf of the appellant but having regard to the facts of this case they require no examination.

In their Lordships' judgment this appeal should be dismissed with costs, and they will humbly advise His Majesty accordingly.

Appeal dismissed.

Solicitors for the Appellant.—Messrs. T. L. Wilson & Co.

Solicitor for the Respondent.—Mr. E. Dalgado.

OUDH JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL NO. 176 OF 1919.

January 20, 1920.

Present:—Mr. Lindsay, J. C.

DRIGPAL SINGH AND ANOTHER—PLAINTIFFS—APPELLANTS

versus

SUKHNANDAN LAL AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Minor—Guardian ad litem, appointment of—Disqualified person appointed guardian—Minor, whether represented—Hindu Law—Joint family—Mortgage by father—Decree against father—Sale of mortgaged property—Redemption, suit for, by sons, maintainability of.

If the law absolutely disqualifies certain persons from being appointed guardians ad litem, the appointment of any such person in that capacity is a nullity, and the minor is not at all represented in the litigation. [p 300, col. 2.]

Dammar Singh v. Pirbhu Singh, 4 A. L. J. 155; A W. N. 1907 70; 29 A. 29[illegible], distinguished.

A Hindu father executed a mortgage which was binding on his sons. The mortgagees obtained a decree on the basis of that mortgage against the father alone, without making the sons parties to the suit, and themselves purchased the mortgaged property in execution of their decree Subsequently the sons sued the mortgagees-purchasers, seeking inter alia redemption of the property:

Held, that the suit was maintainable for redemption of the mortgaged property. [p 301, col. 1.]

Debi Singh v Jia Ram, 25 A. 214; A. W. N. (1903) 21, distinguished

Hard cases must not be allowed to make bad law. [p. 302, col. 1.]

Appeal from the decree of the District Judge, Hardoi, dated the 29th March 1919, confirming the decree of the Subordinate Judge, Hardoi, dated the 2nd April 1918.

Messrs. A. P. Sen and H. K. Ghosh, for the Appellants.

The Hon'ble Pandit Gokaran Nath Misra, for Respondents Nos. 1—4 and 6—9.

JUDGMENT.—The two appellants in this case are the sons of one Gopal Singh, who was impleaded in the suit as defendant No. 5. On the 17th of November 1891 Gopal Singh executed a simple mortgage of certain property in favour of the defendants or their predecessors-in-title. On the 6th of January 1904 a suit was brought on this mortgage to which Gopal Singh and his two sons, the present plaintiffs, were made parties as defendants. At the time this suit was brought the sons were minors and it is proved that their mother was appointed their guardian ad litem. The suit was contested on a variety of pleas, the principal defence set up by the minors' guardian being that the mortgage was not binding on account of want of legal necessity. The issues were fully tried out and the Court came to the conclusion that the mortgage was binding on the minors and decreed the claim. Subsequently the property was sold in execution of the mortgage decree and purchased by the mortgagees themselves. The present suit has been brought by these sons of Gopal Singh for the purpose of recovering the property which was sold in execution of the mortgage decree. The allegation was that the property was joint ancestral property, that their father Gopal Singh who made the mortgage was a man of profligate habits, that the mortgage debt was in no way binding on them, and that they were entitled to have the decree in the previous suit set aside on the ground that they were not duly represented in the litigation. They claimed possession of the property with an account for mesne profits. In the concluding portion of the 12th paragraph of the plaint the plaintiffs offered to pay any part of the mortgage debt which the Court might find to be binding upon them.

Both the Courts below have dismissed the plaintiffs' claim. The Subordinate Judge was of opinion that the plaintiffs were not duly represented in the litigation of 1904; nevertheless he held that they were bound by the mortgage, it having been proved that at the time the mortgage was made these sons of Gopal Singh were not in existence. The Subordinate Judge held, and I think rightly, that in these circumstances the sons could not challenge the validity of the mortgage deed.

Regarding the right of the plaintiffs to recover the property by redemption, he held that such a claim was not tenable for, although the plaintiffs were not properly represented in the mortgage suit, nevertheless, according to the Subordinate Judge, the decree which was passed in the earlier suit is a wholly good decree at least against the mortgagor and the sale of the mortgaged property under the decree was effective. He held that as the mortgage had merged into the decree and sale, there was no longer any case for redemption.

In appeal the learned District Judge did not expressly decide the question whether these plaintiffs had been properly represented in the earlier litigation. He refers to the finding of the learned Subordinate Judge, however, and does not express any dissent from the finding. He agreed with the Subordinate Judge that the plaintiffs were born after the mortgage had been executed and so were not in a position to attack the validity of the mortgage. On the question of redemption which was distinctly raised in the lower Appellate Court, the District Judge agreed with the first Court on the ground that the mortgage had merged in the decree. He says in the concluding portion of his judgment that the validity of the decree cannot be impeached because the validity of the mortgage itself is unshaken. This latter expression of opinion cannot be accepted, for obviously there may be a good and valid mortgage and yet a decree passed on the mortgage may not be valid in the sense that it is not binding upon the plaintiffs as in this case.

The first point which was argued here was regarding the position of these plaintiffs in the earlier suit. Section 457 of the old Code of Civil Procedure laid down expressly that no married woman could be appointed guardian ad litem of minor defendants and there is no question now that the mother of the plaintiffs at the time of the suit was a married woman. Her husband was still alive and was one of the defendants in the suit. It seems quite clear, therefore, that the mother was not a person who could legally be appointed a guardian ad litem in the case and if that is so, I am unable to understand how it can be contended that these plaintiffs were duly represented in the litigation. I agree with the opinion expressed on this point by the learned Subordinate Judge. A number of cases have been cited to me on behalf of the respondents here, but it seems to me that they are clearly distinguishable. They are cases in which an irregularity was committed in the matter of appointing a guardian ad litem, such for example as the omission to record a formal order of appointment. Cases of irregularity seem to me to stand upon an entirely different footing from the case which I have now to deal with. If the law says that certain persons cannot be appointed guardians ad litem, it necessarily follows that the appointment of any such person in that capacity is a nullity, and the minor is not represented at all in the litigation. The nearest case to the present which the learned Counsel for the respondents could refer me to was one reported as Dammar Singh v. Pirbhu Singh (1). There it was held that an irregularity under section 443 of the Code of Civil Procedure did not vitiate the decree. That was a case in which the mother of minors had been appointed guardian ad litem, although there was in existence at the time a certificated guardian who had been appointed by the Civil Court under the Guardians and Wards Act. If that case was rightly decided it is nevertheless distinguishable from the case before me, for a reference to section 443 shows that even where a certificated guardian has been appointed, another guardian ad litem may be appointed by the Court for special reasons to be put on the record. There is no absolute disqualification in that case, but in the case contemplated by section 457 of the old Code there is an absolute disqualification. A married woman is declared to be a person who cannot be legally appointed as a guardian ad litem.

I am quite clear, therefore, that the plea of the plaintiffs in the present suit, that they were not represented in the earlier litigation, must prevail. It necessarily follows from this finding that the decree is not binding upon them. On the other hand it is not to be supposed that these minors are now in a position to re-open the whole question which was litigated in the earlier suit. They cannot be heard to attack the mortgage upon which the decree was passed for, as already explained, that mortgage is binding upon them. It was executed before they came into existence. The only right, it seems to me, which these plaintiffs can be said to retain, is the right of redeeming the mortgage. It is true that in the mortgage decree, which was passed in 1904, the defendants were given an opportunity of redeeming the mortgage before the sale took place. but then, as it has been found, the present plaintiffs were not parties to that decree and so it cannot be said that they were given an opportunity of exercising their right of redemption.

(1) 4 A. L. J. 155; A. W. N. (1907) 70; 29 A. 290.

It has been strongly contended on behalf of the respondents here that the right to redeem is now gone, and certain cases have been cited to me, the strongest of which in favour of the respondents is a Full Bench ruling of the Allahabad High Court reported as Debi Singh v. Jia Ram (2). It was there held in a suit similar to the present that "Where property belonging to a joint Hindu family has been sold by auction in execution of a decree obtained upon a mortgage of such property executed by the father of the joint family, it is open to the sons to sue for the recovery of their shares in the property so sold, if they were not made parties to the suit in which the decree against their father was obtained, provided that the mortgagee had at the time of the suit notice of their interests in the property. But their suit must be based upon some ground which under the Hindu Law would free them from liability as sons in a Hindu joint family to pay their father's debt. A sale once having taken place, the sons cannot succeed in a suit to recover the property sold upon the sole ground that they were not made parties to the original suit." It is argued here that this case covers the facts of the case now before me. It is, however, to be noticed that in the Allahabad case the property had been sold in execution and had been purchased by third parties. It is also material to notice that in that suit the sons did not make any offer to redeem the property. They wanted the mortgage decree set aside and asked for no other relief except recovery of possession of the property which had been sold. In my opinion there is a distinction between this Full Bench case and the case which I am now considering. Here, as I have pointed out in an earlier portion of the judgment, the plaintiffs have offered to pay up any portion of the mortgage debt which may be found to be owing from them. This case is not to be decided solely upon the principles of Hindu Law referred to in the Full Bench case of the Allahabad Court. A question of mortgage law is also involved, and I am unable to hold in favour of the respondents that a party who is interested in the right to redeem and who was not made a party to the mortgage suit can be deprived of his right of redemption. There is no question that, although these sons of Gopal Singh were born subsequent to the date of the mortgage, they were at the date of the mortgage suit persons interested in the mortgage property. They had acquired an interest by birth. They were, therefore, necessary parties to a suit for sale, and although they were nominally parties I have, for the reasons already given, decided that they were not parties in law. Their right to redeem the mortgage, therefore, seems to me to be unaffected by the decree, and this is the error in which I think both the Courts below have fallen. They talk about the mortgage having merged into the decree, forgetting that the decree is not binding upon the plaintiffs, who were no legal parties to it.

Another argument put forward here is this, namely, that the sons were really represented in the suit which was brought against their father the managing member of the joint Hindu family. On this it is sufficient to observe that it cannot be presumed that the mortgagees brought the suit against the father in his capacity as managing member and as representing the rest of the family, for the fact remains that in addition to the father the mortgagees-plaintiffs impleaded both the sons as defendants. Further it is apparent from the nature of the defence which was put forward in the mortgage suit that the father did not put forward a defence which represented the defence open to his own sons. It is, therefore, not one of those cases in which a mortgage decree obtained against the father of a joint Hindu family binds the rest of the family. The case is perhaps a hard one in many ways, for there is no reason to doubt that every possible plea which these plaintiffs could have raised in the mortgage suit was taken and decided against them. On the other hand hard cases must not be allowed to make bad law, and there can be no question that the plaintiffs had no legal guardian representing their interest in the previous litigation. The respondents, moreover, cannot be heard to complain on this score, for after all they were the persons who had the conduct of the suit and upon whom lay the legal obligation of seeing that a properly constituted legal guardian was appointed for the minors. I have decided, therefore, that this appeal must be allowed to this extent, namely, that the plaintiffs must be given an opportunity to redeem the mortgage. It will, I fear, be necessary to remit the case to the lower Court for a finding upon the amount payable by these plaintiffs, for the defendants-mortgagees have been in possession since the date of the sale, and it will be necessary in making up the account between the parties to take into consideration the mesne profits which the mortgagees have received since they took over possession. I send down the case accordingly to the lower Appellate Court for a finding upon the amount payable by the plaintiffs-appellants in respect of the mortgage after taking a full account between the parties. The finding of the Court below will be returned to this Court within two months, and ten days to run from the date of the lower Court's finding will be allowed to the parties to file objections.

(2) 25 A. 214; A. W. N. (1903) 21.

Appeal partly allowed;
Case remanded.

PRIVY COUNCIL.

APPEALS FROM THE SIND JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT

February 17, 1920.

Present:—Viscount Cave, Lord Moulton, Sir John Edge and Mr. Ameer Ali.

FIRM OF RAMCHAND MANJIMAL AND OTHERS—APPELLANTS

versus

FIRM OF GOVERDHANDAS VISHINDAS RATANCHAND AND OTHERS—RESPONDENTS.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), ss. 109, 110—Arbitration Act (IX of 1899), s. 19—Appeal to Privy Council—Final order, what is—Order refusing to stay suit, whether final.

An order is "final" within the meaning of section 109 of the Civil Procedure Code only if it finally disposes of the rights of the parties. [p. 303, col. 1]

An order refusing to stay a suit under section 19 of the Arbitration Act does not finally dispose of the rights of the parties, but leaves them to be determined by the Courts in the ordinary way. It is not, therefore, a "final order" within the meaning of section 109 of the Civil Procedure Code. [p. 303, col. 2.]

Consolidated appeals from six orders of the Court of the Judicial Commissioner, Sind, dated the 16th April 1918, reversing the orders of the Additional Judicial Commissioner, Sind, the acting as District Judge.

FACTS.—The plaintiffs-respondents opposed the defendants' application to stay proceedings in these suits, mainly on the ground that an umpire would have to be appointed under the arbitration clause, and that an umpire so appointed was not likely to be impartial. The first Court granted a stay, but on appeal the Judicial Commissioner's Court (Pratt and Fawcett), after a remand for evidence, found that there was a strong probability that an umpire would have to be appointed and that such umpire would not be impartial, they, therefore, held that it was a case where the Courts should retain their jurisdiction; reversed the trial Judge's order, and directed that the suits should proceed in the usual way. An application was made for leave to appeal to His Majesty in Council. Respondents opposed this application on the ground that the order refusing a stay was not a final order, but the Judicial Commissioner's Court (Fawcett and Raymond), mainly on the authority of Secretary of State for India in Council v. British India Steam Navigation Co. (1), held otherwise and gave leave to appeal.

Sir John Simon, K. C., and Mr. E. B. Raikes, for the Respondents, took the preliminary objection that the appeal was incompetent, inasmuch as the order appealed from was not a final order within the meaning of section 109 (a) of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908.

Mr. Upjohn, K. C., and Mr. Kenworthy Brown, for the Appellants, submitted that this point was no longer open to respondents. They had raised it on the application for leave to appeal: it had been decided against them, and they had not appealed against the decision.

The Board held that the point as to the competency of the appeal was still open.

Sir John Simon submitted that the orders under appeal merely decided what tribunal was to adjudicate upon the rights of the parties: they did not determine those rights at all, but merely left them to be determined by the Courts in the ordinary way instead of by arbitration. An order is final only if it finally disposes of the rights of the parties.

Salaman v. Warner (2) and Bozson v. Altrincham Urban District Council (3).

Mr. Upjohn, K. C., for the Appellants.—The order is final within the meaning of section 109 (a) of the Code of Civil Procedure. If the stay had been granted, it would have finally disposed of the suit. The refusal of the stay finally deprived the defendants of the right which they claimed to refer the matters in dispute to arbitration.

JUDGMENT.

VISCOUNT CAVE.—These are suits for alleged breaches of certain contracts for the sale of cotton. Each contract contained an arbitration clause, and the defendants in each suit applied under section 19 of the Indian Arbitration Act of 1899 for a stay of proceedings with a view to the issues being referred to arbitration under the clause. The first Court granted a stay, but on appeal the Judicial Commissioner at Sind reversed the orders and refused a stay of proceedings. Applications were made to the Judicial Commissioner for certificates under section 109 (a), or in the alternative under section 109 (c) of the Civil Procedure Code of 1908, with a view to an appeal to this Board. The learned Judges of the Judicial Commissioner's Court took the view that the orders refusing a stay were final orders and, accordingly, granted a certificate under section 110 to the effect that the value of the matter in dispute exceeded Rs. 10,000. Thereupon the appeals were brought to His Majesty in Council, and the objection is raised that the orders refusing a stay were in fact not final, and, accordingly, that the appeals do not lie.

Their Lordships have considered the matter, and are of opinion that the preliminary objection succeeds. The question as to what is a final order was considered by the Court of Appeal in the case of Salaman v. Warner (2), and that decision was followed by the same Court in the case of Bozson v. Altrincham Urban District Council (3). The effect of those and other judgments is that an order is final if it finally disposes of the rights of the parties. The orders now under appeal do not finally dispose of those rights, but leave them to be determined by the Courts in the ordinary way.

In their Lordships' view the orders were not final, and accordingly the appeals cannot proceed, and their Lordships will, therefore, humbly advise His Majesty that they should be dismissed with costs.

Two of the appeals have already been withdrawn, as regards certain of the parties, and, therefore, the order will not apply to those.

Appeals dismissed.

Solicitors for the Appellants.—Messrs. Wontner & Sons.

Solicitors for the Respondents.—Messrs. T. L. Wilson & Co.

(1) 9 Ind. Cas. 183; 13 C. L. J. 90; 15 C. W. N. 848.
(2) (1891) 1 Q. B. 734; 60 L. J. Q. B. 624; 39 W. R. 547.
(3) (1903) 1 K. B. 547; 72 L. J. K. B. 271; 51 W. R. 337; 67 J. P. 397; 19 T. L. R. 266; 1 L. G. R. 639.

MOHAMMAD AHMAD v. ANSAR MOHAMMAD.

OUDH JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 37 OF 1919.

January 5, 1920.

Present:—Mr. Lindsay, J. C.

MOHAMMAD AHMAD AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS—APPELLANTS

versus

ANSAR MOHAMMAD AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Muhammadan Law—Succession—Co-heirs, position of—Suit by one heir to recover his share—Some co-heirs not made parties to suit—Non-joinder, effect of—Partition, suit for—Parties necessary.

In a suit for partition it is necessary that all interested parties should be joined either as plaintiffs or as defendants.

On the death of a Muhammadan all his heirs become tenants-in-common of his estate. [p. 305, col. 2.]

A suit by one of several heirs of a deceased Muhammadan to recover his share in the estate left by the deceased is practically a suit for partition, and all the other heirs of the deceased must be impleaded as parties to the suit. If some of the heirs are not joined, the suit cannot proceed. Where their joinder becomes impossible, the suit must be dismissed. [p. 306, col. 1.]

Appeal from the decree of the First Additional District Judge, Lucknow, dated the 11th November 1918, confirming that of the Subordinate Judge, Unao, dated the 7th December 1917.

The Hon'ble Syed Wazir Hasan and Syed Ali Mohammad, for the Appellants.

Syed Zahur Ahmad, for Respondents Nos. 1—4.

JUDGMENT.—The dispute in this case relates to certain property which belonged once to Dildar Mohammad, who died on the 14th of April 1905. At the time of his death Dildar Mohammad left a widow Musammat Habib-un-nisa and a son by her named Anwar Mohammad. By another wife, who had predeceased him, he left four sons defendants Nos. 1 to 4 in this suit and a daughter Musammat Ashraf-un-nisa, who died on the 14th of September 1915. The plaintiffs in the suit are the husband and children of Ashraf-un nisa.

It appears that after the death of Dildar Mohammad a dispute arose between the members of the family regarding the division of the property. The parties went to the mutation Court and Anwar Mohammad, the son of the deceased, claimed half of his father's estate on the ground that the custom of the family was that the property should descend according to the number of wives (stribhag). The other sons of the deceased resisted this claim and alleged that their father had left a Will directing the division of the property in equal shares among the sons. The daughter Ashraf-un-nisa also put in a claim, saying that all the children of the deceased should be admitted to inherit according to the shares appointed by the Muhammadan Law. Anwar Mohammad and his step-brothers made some sort of a compromise agreeing to divide the property in the proportion of 7 annas and 9 annas. An arrangement was made by which a sum of Rs. 10 a month was to be made payable to Ashraf-un-nisa by the brothers, Anwar Mohammad undertaking to contribute one-half and the four step-brothers the remaining half. This agreement, however, was repudiated before effect could be given to it and an order was passed by the mutation Court directing mutation in accordance with the shares laid down by the Muhammadan Law. There was then an appeal to the Deputy Commissioner in which Ashraf-un-nisa was impleaded. In this Court the brothers again came to an arrangement for a division of the property, by which Anwar Mohammad was to be given possession of a 6-annas 6-pies share while the step-brothers were to have a 9-annas 6 pies share. It was also provided that the step-brothers were to pay Ashraf-un nisa a sum of Rs. 10 a month.

The present suit has been brought by the husband and children of Ashraf-un nisa demanding the share in the property which belonged to the lady. For some reason or other which is not explained, Anwar Mohammad was not made a party to the suit although he is admitted to be alive. The facts just referred to were all set out in the plaint, and it was the case of the plaintiffs that they were not bound by the compromise which was effected in the Court of the Deputy Commissioner and in accordance with which the order for mutation was passed. It was said that the lady herself had not consented to the compromise and that the Pleader who was acting for her had no authority to accept any compromise on her behalf. After setting out that the defendants Nos. 1 to 4 (the brothers of Ashraf-un-nisa) were in possession of a 9½ annas share the plaintiffs asked for a decree for proprietary possession of a share in this property, the extent of which was said to be 1·67 annas. There was also a claim for mesne profits. As an alternative relief the plaintiffs prayed that if the compromise come to in the Court of the Deputy Commissioner were held to be binding on Ashraf-un-nisa and the plaintiffs, the plaintiffs should get a decree for possession of land out of the defendants' share which would yield them a profit of Rs. 120 a year. A further prayer was included in the plaint asking the Court in any event to give a decree for the payment by the defendants of an annuity of Rs. 120 a year chargeable on the land in their possession.

The defendants resisted the claim. The first two defendants pleaded that the agreement come to in the Court of the Deputy Commissioner was binding upon Musammat Asharaf un nisa and persons claiming through her. It was further pleaded that under a custom prevailing in the family daughters were excluded from inheritance and lastly a defence was put forward to the effect that the annuity which was payable under the compromise was only for the lifetime of Ashraf-un-nisa. The third and the fourth defendants pleaded that the agreement before the Deputy Commissioner was not binding, but otherwise they made common cause with the defendants Nos. 1 and 2. All the defendants, it may be noted here, raised the plea that Anwar Mohammad and his mother Musammat Habib-un-nisa were necessary parties to the case and that the plaintiffs ought to have joined them.

As issue regarding the non-joinder of these two persons was raised by the Subordinate Judge but was not decided by him. He dismissed the plaintiff's suit on other grounds, holding in the first place that the compromise was binding and in the next place that the annuity of Rs. 10 a month was payable only during the lifetime of Ashraf-un nisa

In appeal the learned Additional Judge has dismissed the plaintiffs' claim on the broad ground that they were not entitled to any decree because the suit had not been framed in the proper manner. It is clear that the plaintiffs failed to implead Anwar Mohammad and his mother, and it is also clear that the Subordinate Judge took no action for the purpose of bringing them upon the record as defendants. By the time the case came before the learned District Judge, any claim against Anwar Mohammad and his mother had become barred by limitation and so it was not possible for him to make any order for joinder of them as parties. The learned Judge dismissed the suit, on the ground that no decree could be given in the absence of persons who were interested in the property and whose rights would necessarily be affected by any decree passed in the plaintiff's favour.

In appeal it has been argued here that the decision of the Court below was wrong and that even if the plaintiffs failed to make Anwar Mohammad and his mother parties, they were nevertheless entitled to receive their legal share in the property at present in the possession of the defendants Nos. 1 to 4, namely, a 9-annas and 6-pies share. The learned Advocate was unable to give any explanation for the omission of the plaintiffs to join Anwar Mohammad and his mother as defendants in the suit. He admitted that the plaintiffs were wrong in not doing so, but he contended at the same time that they were not liable to the penalty of having their suit dismissed in its entirety. It seems to me that the decision of the Court below is correct and that in the absence of Anwar Mohammad and his mother who admittedly are heirs of the deceased Dildar Mohammad, it was not possible to give the plaintiffs the relief they asked for.

It has been admitted before me that there has been no physical division of the immoveable property left by Dildar Mohammad and consequently if the so-called compromise is to be ignored, the position is that after the death of Dildar Mohammad all his legal heirs under the Muhammadan Law became tenants in common of the estate, each of them having a definite share in the property.

The question of the compromise needs no longer to be considered. The first and second defendants, who resisted the plea that this compromise was binding, abandoned it in the Court of the Subordinate Judge before the case was tried out and the subordinate Judge was wrong in treating the compromise as binding. After the withdrawal of this plea by the first and second defendants the question of the compromise went out altogether.

The position then is that in 1905 when Dildar Mohammad died, his heirs including Ashraf-un-nisa became tenants-in-common of the estate. Each of the heirs was the holder of an undivided share of the property and as the lands have not been divided, each of them was a part owner of every bigha of the whole land and by virtue of that right of ownership each of them was entitled to claim either to occupy the lands jointly or to insist that the lands should not be used and occupied by any person otherwise than with their assent. I have already referred to the statements in the plaint and to the nature of the relief claimed by the plaintiffs. The claim, it will be observed, was not a claim for joint possession but for separate and exclusive possession of a certain share of the property alleged to be in the possession of the defendants Nos. 1 to 4. It is argued by the learned Advocate for the appellants that the plaintiffs are entitled to their share in every bigha of land in possession of the defendants, but as there has been no division by metes and bounds, Anwar Mohammad and his mother, who are also heirs, are equally entitled to a share in any lands which may be in the defendants' possession; and it is, therefore, difficult to see how any division of the property could be made in the absence of Anwar Mohammad and his mother. In short the position is that the plaintiffs cannot maintain that the defendants are solely in possession of the property to which claim is laid. On the facts as stated it is clear that no partition by metes and bounds having been made, the legal position is that Anwar Mohammad and his mother are also in joint possession with the defendants Nos. 1 to 4. The mistake of the plaintiffs in not impleading Anwar Mohammad and his mother is a fatal one, which cannot now be remedied because, as I have already said, any claim against these two persons is barred by limitation. The Judge was, in my opinion, perfectly right. The suit was in substance a suit for partition, and it is an inflexible rule of law that in such a suit it is necessary that all interested parties should be joined either as plaintiffs or defendants.

The appeal is, therefore, dismissed with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

PRIVY COUNCIL.

APPEAL FROM THE OUDH JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

December 14, 1919.

Present :—Lord Shaw, Lord Pillimore, Mr. Ameer Ali and Sir Lawrence Jenkins.

Thakur NAGESHAR BAKHSH SINGH —DEFENDANT—APPELLANT

versus

Musammat GANESHA—PLAINTIFF—RESPONDENT.

Hindu Law—Joint family—Presumption of jointness—Separation, proof of—Settlement records, value of, as evidence of title or possession—Settlement of Oudh after Mutiny, entries in, whether recognised existing rights or constituted a fresh root of title.

Given a joint Hindu family, the presumption is, until the contrary is proved, that the family continues joint. That presumption is peculiarly strong in the case of the sons of one father. [p. 312, col. 2.]

It is not any part of the law of India that settlement records are by themselves conclusive evidence of the facts which they purport to record. They have merely to be considered with other evidence. The broad question of partition of rights or separation of interests is not dealt with in such records, and the inference of such a transaction from entries therein may be weak or strong according to circumstances. A definition of shares in revenue and village papers is by itself very slight evidence of an actual separation in a Hindu family and generally quite insufficient to overcome the presumption against partition. [p. 312, cols. 1 & 2.]

Observations of Edge, C. J. in Gajendar Singh v. Sardar Singh, 18 A. 176; A. W. N. (1896) 23; 8 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 824, approved.

Lord Canning's Proclamation after the Mutiny swept away all prior titles in Oudh. But the Government officers conducting the settlements did not proceed upon the notion that prior rights were to go for nothing, and in most cases their proceedings were rather a recognition of those rights than a fresh root of title. [p. 311, cols. 1 & 2.]

Appeal from a decree of the Judicial Commissioner, Oudh, dated the 8th August 1916, reported as 36 Ind. Cas. 780, reversing a decree of the Subordinate Judge, Gonda, dated the 23rd December 1913.

FACTS.—The suit here was brought to set aside a sale deed executed in favour of the appellant's predecessor by three Hindu Pardanashin ladies, Musammats Basanta, Rani and Maharani. The relationships of the parties and the material facts are set out in their Lordships' judgment. The respondent Ganesha is daughter of Rani. It was concurrently found by the lower Courts that the sale-deed was without consideration or legal necessity, and hence respondent would ordinarily be entitled to succeed, the grantors of the deed, all Hindu widows, being dead. But it was contended for the appellant that there had been a partition or separation of shares either between Sheo Dayal and Gokaran themselves or between their widows, and hence that respondent, who was not alleged to be Gokaran's heiress, had no title to anything but the share of Sheo Dayal or his widows, which was taken to be a half. The substantial question on this appeal was whether any such partition or separation had in fact taken place. As to this the Appellate Court found against appellant and accordingly decreed the suit as to the whole of the land in dispute. Hence the present appeal.

Mr. DeGruyther, K.C., and Mr. G. S. Saunders, for the Appellant, contended, in the first place, that the vendors under the sale-deed impeached had absolute ownership and not merely a Hindu widow's estate. Secondly, the documents in the case and especially the khewat and wajib ul arz show that Sheo Dayal and Gokaran were separate in estate.

That the vendors were absolute owners appears from the settlement decree of December 6, 1869, which shows Basanta as owning 8 annas in her own right and Rani and Maharani the other 8 annas jointly. The effect of Lord Canning's Proclamation of March 15, 1858, was to divest all landed property from the proprietors in Oudh: when a re-grant was made to a proprietor, the new title depends entirely on the terms of the re-grant: Nawab Malka Jahan Sahiba v. Deputy Commissioner of Lucknow (1), Prince Mirza Jehan Kudr Bahadur v. Nawab Afsur Bahu Begum (2) and Prince Mirza Jehan Kadr Bahadoor v. Nawab Badshoo Bahoo Sahiba (3); Oudh Sub Settlement Act (XXVI of 1866); Sykes' Compendium, paragraphs 286, 386.

If Sheo Dayal took by survivorship from Gokaran, as contended for respondents, Basanta's name would not be in the decree at all, whereas she is shown as holding 8 annas: this is consistent only with all three having absolute estates. The khewat and wajib-ul-arz support this view and also prove there had been a separation of interests: Basanta holding half the village and Sheo Dayal's widows the other half. "Khewat" is defined in Act XVII of 1876: vide also Oudh Circulars Nos. 20 of 1863 and 24 of 1864.

Mr. Dunne, K. C., and Mr. Dube, for the Respondent.—The Judicial Commissioner's Court has rightly held that Sheo Dayal and Gokaran were joint. The same finding was come to thirty years ago with regard to the Harsinghpur village. Sheo Dayal took not by inheritance but by survivorship, and the respondent is his successor. The settlement decree expressly reserves "the rights of the other shareholders." Upon its true construction it does not confer an absolute estate. As the Judicial Commissioners have pointed out, the reversioners had at the time of the settlement no right to claim possession: till the widows' estate came to an end, it was impossible to say who they would be. "The decree did not profess to confer on the widows greater rights than they had before. The khewat merely records the supposed effect of the decree: it carries matters no further.

Mr. De Gruyther, K. C., in reply.—A settlement decree in Oudh is a root of title and determines proprietary rights: it is not merely based upon possession, as is the case in other parts of India: Mohammed Mumtaz Ali Khan v. Partab Singh (4).

The Settlement Officer did not recognize Rani and Maharani as owners of the whole 16 annas, he included Basanta as being entitled to 8 annas. Under the rules, no one who was not a co-sharer would be included as Lambardar: Basanta's name being mentioned shows that she was deemed to be a co-sharer. He referred to Cursia's Land Revenue Manual, pages 107, 235, and Circular No. 1123 C of 1862—see Parliamentary Papers relating to Oudh, 1865.

JUDGMENT.

LORD SHAW.—This is an appeal from a judgment and decree of date the 8th August 1916 of the Court of the Judicial Commissioner of Oudh, which reversed a judgment and decree, dated the 33rd December 1913, of the Subordinate Judge of Gonda.

(1) 6 I. A. 63; 3 Sar. P. C. J. 244; Rafique & Jackson's P. C. No. 55.

(2) 6 I. A. 76; 4 C. 727; 3 Sar. P. C. J. 865; Rafique & Jackson's P. C. No. 54; 3 Ind. Jur. 222; 2 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 462.

(3) 12 I A. 124; 12 C. 1; 4 Sar. P. C. J. 630; 9 Ind. Jur. 322; Rafique & Jackson's P. C. No. 91; 6 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 1.

(4) Sel. Cas. No. 233 of 1893.

NAGESHAR BAKHSH SINGH v. GANESHA.

In the suit which is brought the plaintiffs pray for a decree for possession of the village of Sonahra, Pargana Paharapur, Tahsil and District Gonda, by cancellation of a certain sale deed thereof executed on the 3 th December 1871 in favour of Thakur Mirtunjai Bakhsh Singh, now represented by the appellant. The grantors of the deed were three Hindu Pardanashin ladies, Musammats Basanta, Rani and Maharani.

A pedigree is given in the papers, which gives the family descent from one Bishan Pershad. Bishan was the owner of, inter alia, two villages, Harsingbpur and Sonahra. No question arises with regard to Harsingbpur in this appeal. It appears, however, that a question analogous to that now raised was settled relative to that village over thirty years ago, and was answered in a sense adverse to the present appellant. It was held in that suit that the sale-deed had not been granted for consideration or with legal necessity, and that Harsinghpur was part of a joint undivided family property with reference to which the deed was ineffective. Their Lordships have, however, considered the present appeal, which is confined to the case of Sonahra, on its own merits.

Bishan Pershad owned, as already mentioned, these two villages. The pedigree as flowing from him is as follows:—

BISHAN PRASAD (dead.)

- Raghubans dead
  - Debi Bakhsh
    - Sheo Dayal died 1865 married
      - (1) Rani died 1908
      - (2) Maharani died 1888.
        - Ganesha (Plaintiff No. 1 Respondent)
          - Kedar Nath (Plaintiff No. 2).
- Jai Gobind (dead)
  - Gokaran died 1858 married Musammat Basanta died 1885.
  - Somant (dead).
- Parmeshar Das (dead)
  - Jawahar (dead).

The facts of the case and relative dates are stated in a judgment passed by the Court of the Judicial Commissioner, dated the 17th December, 1915*:—

"The village in question originally belonged to Santokhi, to whom it was granted under a birt patta by Raja Dut Singh, the Talugdar of the village, in 1128 Fasli. From Santokhi the property passed to his lineal male descendants, the last of whom were Gokaran, . . . representing one branch of his line and Sheo Dayal,.....representing another branch of his line. The summary settlement was made with Gokaran. Gokaran died some time in 1858, leaving a widow Musammat Basanta. Sheo Dayal died in 1865, leaving two widows, Musammat Rani and Musammat Maharani, and a daughter by the former named Musammat Ganesha On the 30th December 1871 Musammat Basanta, Musammat Rani and Musammat Maharani sold the village in dispute to the father of the defendant-respondent. Musammat Basanta died in 1885, Musammat Maharani in 1888 and Musammat Rani in 1903. Musammat Ganesha, the daughter of Sheo Dayal, is alive and one of the plaintiffs to the suit."

It is manifest that if the three ladies, grantors of the deed under challenge, were fully vested owners, the one of an 8 annas share and the other two of a 4-annas share each, of the village, they were in a position to grant a proper title. But of course, on the accepted facts, such ownership in the ladies would be impossible.

Even although, however, they had possessed the village, not as complete owners but as enjoying the same in shares as widows of former proprietors, and also enjoying, it may be, all the powers attaching to that status, it might also be that a valid sale could have been effected under the deed in question. The condition of such validity would, of course, be that the deed was for consideration and was granted by reason of legal necessity.

*The judgment is reported in 34 Ind. Cas. 257.—[Ed.]

It is possible at once to disburden the case of much of the material which entered into the procedure of the Courts below on this last-mentioned issue. For it has been found, after a special remit by the Court of the Judicial Commissioner to the Court of the Subordinate Judge on that topic, that the deed challenged was granted without consideration and without legal necessity. There are concurrent findings to that effect. Were the deed, accordingly, a deed of the widows of deceased owners, with no further rights in or over the village than such widows would have, the challenge must prevail. To this the retort was made that the plaintiffs had not proved that they were reversioners to Gokaran, and as there had been a separation of shares they must fail as to Gokaran's moiety. They alleged such separation. This raises a question fundamental to the case and anterior to the issues just mentioned. That question is one upon which very careful and exhaustive argument was presented to the Board. Was the village or was it not joint undivided family property at the date of the sale? The appellant strongly contends that it was not. It must stand admitted that the village was ancestral property since the early portion of the eighteenth century. But it was maintained that a partition of this joint undivided family property was made. No deed expressly to that effect was executed. The argument, however, is that the facts of the case are sufficient to show that a definite separation of family interests took place, the shares being correctly stated in the Government Returns and papers to be afterwards mentioned as an 8 annas share to Musammat Basanta, widow of Gokaran, who died in 1858, and a 4-annas share to each of Musammats Rani and Maharani, widows of Sheo Dayal, who died in 1865.

Upon this issue, whether it be named "partition," or whether it be named "separation of interests," it is important to ascertain at what date it is alleged that the transaction took place. Upon this subject the Board, notwithstanding repeated enquiries, has found itself unable to ascertain what is the attitude definitely adopted by the appellant. The difficulties are, of course, considerable. Apart from separation, the descent of the property would in ordinary course be, up till the year 1858, to Gokaran, Basanta's husband. When Gokaram died in 1858, the property in its entirety would then pass to Sheo, his nephew, the only other male representative, and Sheo died in 1865. There is nothing in the case to suggest that there was any transaction of the nature of partition between Gokaran and Sheo. If, however, there was no such partition, the ancestral property of this village became that of Sheo in ordinary course, and the whole right of Musammat Basanta therein was a right as Gokaran's widow to maintenance therefrom.

During this period, that is to say, when Sheo was proprietor, it would be impossible to maintain that he executed any deeds of partition of this property; such partition would in short have been in the nature of a conveyance from himself, as owner in entirety, of a certain part of the property to another not in the line of his succession. There is no such evidence. If there had been, serious questions with regard to it might have been raised. Therefore, the whole question is still further postponed to that period of time subsequent to Sheo's death.

Sheo left two widows, and the fact cannot be disputed that in so far as light can be thrown upon the subject by the village records, Basanta did have in her enjoyment an 8 annas share, and Sheo's two widows did each have a 4-annas share of the enjoyment of this village. The real facts appear to be that the three ladies lived together, the dominating personality, if any, among them being naturally the much senior widow Basanta. From these facts and specially from the records the appellant has stoutly argued that separation as a fact is proved. He forcibly founds upon the settlement decree obtained by the three widows, passed by the Settlement Assistant Commissioner of Gonda, and dated the 6th December 1859. In this judgment that officer ordered that "a decree for superior proprietary rights in favour of Rani and Maharani, wives of Sheo Dayal, and Musammat Basanta, wife of Gokaran, be passed."

To this it is instantly answered, first, that to found upon that decree as either a root of title or as conclusively settling it, is to mistake the true nature of the decree itself; and secondly, that the decree not only does not deal with other rights in the property, but expressly reserves these other rights.

On this latter point of reservation there can be no question. It is contained in gremio of the decree. It is no doubt true that, as already mentioned, the decree is in name for superior proprietary rights in favour of the widows, but it is expressly declared that that decree should "be passed subject to the rights of the other share-holders." If it be correct, as alleged by the appellant, that the property had at that time been de facto separated into one 8 annas and two 4-annas shares, and that this decree of December 1869 was a de jure recognition of that fact, then the entirety of the property was disposed of and language of reservation, or the mention of other share-holders, was hardly appropriate, but might be contended to be repugnant to the transaction which is pleaded.

In the opinion of their Lordships, the terms of this decree must be looked upon as a whole. When on the one hand it declares for superior proprietary rights in favour of the widows, and on the other that these are to be given subject to the rights of the other share-holders, it completely conserves such reversionary and other ownership rights as are inherent in the succession to a joint family property and it negatives the idea that partition or separation had been effectuated by law in such a manner as to extinguish other proprietary rights. In short, in the view of the Board, this decree is not equivalent to an affirmation of a partition or separation having taken place, but is entirely consistent with the existence of the property as joint and undivided, and, therefore, with no prejudice being effected to the right of the reversioner therein, who is represented by the respondent.

But the decree of December 1869 has a much more solid value by the testimony which it itself affords of what was the true nature of the property and what was the exact point in dispute in the competition for it. There were three separate claims to the property. One was by Partab Bali and others. Their claim was got rid of (the Commissioner remarking that it would certainly have failed) by a small payment. The second claimant was Rai Sadhan Lal, and after enquiry it was found that his interference with the village was regarded as unlawful, and his claim completely failed. He had been muafi holder and his right expired with the settlement. The third party to the proceeding was the three widows, and their right without any question is dealt with as a right in ancestral property. "To the satisfaction of the Court" they "have been proved to be the old Zamindars." Then an examination of the title is made, and it is solemnly affirmed:—

"Let it be known that on their behalf a birt patra sanad bearing the seal of Raja Dat Singh, dated Jeth Sudi 2nd, 1128, Fasli, has been produced, which shows that the villages Sonahra and Harsinghpur were given by way of Birt to their common ancestor, Santokhi Avasthi, on Rs. 3,562. Its genuineness is proved... ..And fourthly it appears from the evidence on record that their ancestors always remained in possession within and beyond limitation; and lastly, that both the Summary Settlements were made with them."

It thus appears that the property was treated as a unum quid, as ancestral, and as property to which, as an ancestral undivided property, the three widows vindicated their right. Upon the whole this would have been sound evidence in any Court in favour of the continuance as and from that date of the property as joint and undivided. Their Lordships are of opinion that the Court of the Judicial Commissioner was right in so treating it.

The use of the term "superior proprietary rights" in the decree is, in their Lordships' opinion, to distinguish these from any under-proprietary tenure and from any other inferior rights. In short, the possession by these ladies of the whole of the village among them was a broad fact which permitted the Government to make the entry in such a way as to have the full representation of the entirety of the village, with all the responsibilities attached to that representation, on the record. It is and has for many years, under the decisions, been acknowledged that even one or two names may be inserted as representatives of a community of ownership, the details of which need not be minutely recorded.

But, furthermore, it must be remembered that the policy set forth in Lord Canning's Circular of the 28th January 1859, in which it was stated that the rights conferred "on each holder of land are the free and incontestable grant from the paramount power and cannot be called into question by subordinate officers," and that the decision approved by the Chief Commissioner "is considered to be final and lasting," was greatly modified as regards Zamindars and others not being Taluqdars. In a letter issued on the 10th October 1859, which was afterwards appended to Act I of 1860, it was directed:—

"As regards Zamindars and others, not being Taluqdars, with whom a Summary Settlement has been made, the orders conveyed in the Limitation Circular No. 31 of the 28th January 1859 must not be strictly observed. Opportunity must be allowed at the next settlement to all disappointed claimants to bring forward their claims, and all such claims must be heard and disposed of in the usual manner."

The authoritative exposition of this subject was made in Prince Mirza Jehan Kadr Bahadoor v. Nawab Badshoo Bahoo Sahiba (3), and the passage rightly founded upon in the Court below from the judgment of the Privy Council as delivered by Sir Arthur Hobhouse, is here repeated: —

"The first observation on these proceedings is that the Settlement Courts were clearly enquiring into the old titles, as they existed prior to the confiscation. It is true that the confiscation swept away all prior titles, though it may be doubted, as Mr. Lincoln suggests, whether in 1863 that effect was realized to the minds of the Government Officers as it has become since the legal decisions, which establish it. At all events, when engaged in the work of pacifying and settling the country, the Government did not make an arbitrary or wholly new, re-distribution of property, or proceed upon the notion that prior rights were to go for nothing. In very many cases, probably in the great bulk of properties, they enquired who would be entitled if no confiscation had taken place, and effected settlements with those persons. Certainly that was the operation in which the three lower Settlement Courts were engaged with regard to Sohrawan when the case came before Sir Charles Wingfield as the highest Court of Appeal."

The Board does not think it necessary to enter upon much detail with reference to the enjoyment of the property in the time of Sheo Dayal, but they simply note that one document not without importance is printed applicable to the year 1861, that is to say, to the period after the death of Gokaran in 1858. It is dated the 31st December 1861, and is a copy of a Rubkar of the Collectorate of Gonda issued by Captain Ross. The plaintiff in the proceedings was Sheo Dayal himself; the defendant was Ray Sadhan Lal, already mentioned; and the judgment discloses as follows: that "on a perusal of the file it appears that Sheo Dayal Avasthi claims the lease (patta) of villages Sonahra and Harsinghpur on the basis of the Zamindari right set up by him, and by right of inheritance from Gokaran, deceased, with whom the villages were settled in" 1857. The language used is not strictly accurate. Sheo could not claim by right of inheritance, but solely by right of survivorship. But otherwise the proceeding is instructive. It contains a warning to the muafidar to respect Sheo's rights, and there is not a trace of question that the property was treated as having been succeeded to in its entirety by Sheo as successor to Gokaran.

There are further elements in the case which need not be dwelt upon, as, for instance, a transaction by way of mortgage of the whole subject by the three widows themselves, in the year 1865. In this mortgage, dated the 9th November of that year, the property is referred to simply as the village Sonahra, and it is mortgaged as "our ancestral Zamindari under a Birt Patra which has been in our possession and occupation without the co-partnership of anybody else from the time of our ancestors."

But the Board is unwilling to enter into further details and contents itself with expressing the view that no partition as separation of this joint ancestral property has been proved. It should be said, however, that in December 1871, when the sale deed now under challenge was executed, the very form of the deed is somewhat inconsistent with the transaction of shares of divided property. The village is sold as "the entire village." No reference is made to shares of 8 annas or 4 annas. There are circumstances of considerable suspicion attached to the deed, and it seems somewhat surprising that Mathura Nath, their general agent, should not have incorporated in the deed some reference to this transaction of partition (if true) of which so much has been made in the subsequent proceedings.

The state of the records was much pressed upon the Board by the Counsel for the appellant; that is to say, the entries which were contained in the wajib-ul-arz and in the khewat of the village. Of the two the claim made with regard to the khewat is the stronger. Under the wajib-ul arz entries it is pretty clear that the village was treated as a unum quid, even although the shares in the possession were stated as so many annas respectively.

The Court of the Judicial Commissioner, which is no doubt acquainted with entries in such records, does not attach to them the importance which the appellant seeks, and the Board is of opinion that in this it was right. The broad question of partition of rights or separation of interests is not, of course, dealt with in such entries, and the inference of such a transaction from such records may be weak or may be strong according to circumstances.

Records of that character take their place as part of the evidence in the case They do no more. Their importance may vary with circumstances, and it is not any part of the law of India that they are by themselves conclusive evidence of the facts which they purport to record. It may turn out that they are in accord with the general bulk of the evidence in the case; they may supply gaps in it; and they may, in short, form a not unimportant part of the testimony as to fact which is available. But to give them any higher weight than that might open the way for much injustice and afford temptation to the manipulation of records, or even of the materials for the first entry. Birdwood, J., in the Bombay case Bhagoji v. Bapuji (5) said as follows:—

"At the re-hearing the lower Appellate Court should have its attention directed to the ruling in Fatma v. Darya Saheb (6), in which it was held that the Collector's book is kept for purposes of revenue, not for purposes of title. The fact of a person's name being entered in the Collector's book as occupant of land does not necessarily of itself establish that person's title or defeat the title of any other person."

And the Board refer in particular to the judgment of Sir John Edge in Gajendar Singh v. Sardar Singh (7). In their opinion the statements of principle now to be quoted are of significance and are sound as applied not only to Allahabad but to other Provinces in India as a whole. The main proposition is, of course, widely familiar, namely, that "given a joint Hindu family, the presumption is, until the contrary is proved, that the family continues joint. That presumption is peculiarly strong in the case of the sons of one father." The learned Judge further refers to "experience of the manner in which names of Hindus are entered not uncommonly in revenue and village papers in respect of shares;" and the Board sees no reason to differ from, but approves of, his pronouncement to the following effect:—

"A definition of shares in revenue and village papers affords, by itself, but a very slight indication of an actual separation in a Hindu family, and certainly in no case that has ever come before us could we have regarded such a definition of shares standing alone as sufficient evidence upon which to find, contrary to the presumption in law as to jointure, that the family to which such definition referred had separated."

The Board is, on a review of the whole of this case, of opinion that the presumption against partition of this ancestral property has not been overcome and that the property accordingly remains joint, with the consequence that the appeal fails. As to the attempted case of adverse possession by Basanta, it is, in their Lordships' opinion, wholly without foundation. On the facts disclosed as to the actual enjoyment of the property and the conduct of all parties, including Basanta, with regard to it, no plea of adverse possession could be successfully put forward.

(5) 13 B 75; 7 Ind Dec. (N s. 51.
(6) 10 B H. C R. 87.
(7) 18 A. 176; A. W. N. (1896) 23; 8 Ind. Dec. (N. s.) 824.

Their Lordships will humbly advise His Majesty that the appeal stand dismissed with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

Solicitors for the Appellant.—Messrs. Barrow, Rogers & Nevill.

Solicitors for the Respondent.—Messrs. T. L. Wilson & Co.

OUDH JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

First Civil Appeal No 7 of 1919.

February 27, 1920.

Present:—Pandit Kanhaiya Lal, A. J. C.

SRIPAL SINGH—Plaintiff—Appellant

versus

JAGDISH NARAYAN and others—Defendants—Respondents.

Expert evidence as to age, value of—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 90-), O XXXII, r. 3—Guardian ad litem, appointment of, provision as to, object of Court, duty of—Notices to minor and his guardian, whether necessary preliminaries to appointment of guardian ad litem—Failure to issue required notices, effect of—Guardian ad litem, appointment of, effect of—Irregularity or defect in procedure—Minor, whether bound by decree passed in suit—Decree, when can be avoided by minor—Guardian ad litem, powers of, extent of.

The effect of medical testimony as to the age of a person is to render the other evidence adduced in the case as to his age medically probable or improbable. [p. 314, col. 2.]

The object of the provision contained in Order XXXII, rule 3 (4), Civil Procedure Code, is that the Court should be able to satisfy itself that the person described as a minor is really a minor and that the proposed guardian is a fit and proper person to represent him and to put in a proper defence and generally to act in the interests of the minor. [p. 31 , col. .]

Where a lawful guardian ad litem has been appointed, any defect or irregularity in the procedure leading up to such appointment cannot operate to render a decree passed in a suit in which the minor is represented by such a guardian invalid, unless the defect or irregularity has had the effect of prejudicing the interest of the minor or has affected the merits of the case [p. 315, col .]

Thus, where no notice was issued to the minor or to his mother, but a notice was issued to his proposed guardian who was also his brother and the manager of the joint family of which the minor was a member, and this proposed guardian was appointed his guardian ad litem, and the suit having been compromised a decree was passed in terms of the compromise:

Held, that unless there was anything to show that in spite of the appointment of the guardian ad litem the interests of the minor had not been duly protected or that the guardian ad litem had colluded with the plaintiff or had otherwise acted fraudulently or with gross negligence, the decree passed against the minor, in accordance with the compromise entered into by his guardian ad litem with the sanction of the Court, could not be set aside. [p. 315, col. 2.]

Ghanshyam Das v. Musammat Hardei, 32 Ind. Cas. 380: 2 O. L. J. 562; and Bhagwan Dayal v. Param Sukh Das, 28 Ind. Cas. 623; 37 A. 179 at p. 185; 13 A. L. J. 179, distinguished.

The powers of a person who has been appointed guardian ad litem are controlled by the provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure, and what he could have done as manager of the joint family, of which the minor is a member, irrespective of the suit, he cannot do when appointed as such guardian. [p. 316, col. 1.]

Appeal from the decree of the Additional Subordinate Judge, Lucknow, dated the 15th January 1919.

Babus Bisheshwar Nath Srivastava and Rajeshwari Prasad, for the Appellant.

Mr. M. N. Ohak, for Respondents Nos. 1 and 2.

Mr. A. P. Sen, for Respondents Nos. 4 to 8.

Mr. Muhammad Wasim, for Respondents Nos. 4 and 5.

JUDGMENT.—This appeal arises out of a suit brought by the plaintiff for a declaration that the preliminary and final decrees for foreclosure obtained by the defendant, Radhe Lal, against the plaintiff and other persons were void and ineffectual as against the plaintiff.

The allegation of the plaintiff was that he was a minor on the date on which the said decrees were obtained and was not properly represented in the suit which resulted in those decrees, andt hat the said decrees had been obtained by fraud and collusion. There was a further allegation that the entire mortgage money had been satisfied from the usufruct of the mortgaged property before the suit for foreclosure was brought and that Surajpal Singh, who was appointed guardian ad litem of the plaintiff in that suit, had in any event acted with gross negligence in entering into a compromise with the then plaintiff and agreeing to the decretal of his claim. The defendants denied the allegations made by the plaintiff.

The Court below found that the plaintiff had attained majority before three years prior to the suit and that if Article 44 or 95 of the Indian Limitation Act (IX of 1908) was applicable, the claim was barred by time. It further held that Article 120 of the Indian Limitation Act applied to a suit in which a decree was sought to be set aside on the ground that a minor was not properly represented. It then proceeded to discuss whether the present plaintiff was properly represented in the previous suit and, if not, whether the compromise entered into by his brother, Surajpal Singh, who had been appointed his guardian ad litem, was binding on him by reason of his having been the manager of the joint family of which the plaintiff was a member. The conclusion at which it arrived was that though the present plaintiff was not properly represented in that suit inasmuch as no notice of the proposal to appoint Surajpal Singh his guardian ad litem had been sent to him, the compromise entered into by Surajpal Singh, who was the manager of the joint family, was binding on the plaintiff. The other issues raised in the case were left undetermined.

The evidence adduced in the case does not bear out the finding of the learned Subordinate Judge that the plaintiff had attained majority three years prior to the suit. The plaintiff states that he was about 4 or 5 years old when his father died and that he attained majority in the year in which the present suit was filed. His mother, Musammat Maharaja, deposes that the plaintiff was born about a year prior to the mortgage effected by his father in favour of the father of the defendant No. 1, and that he would complete his 19th year in Magh next, i. e., January or February 1919. She further states that her husband died 13 or 14 years ago. The mortgage aforefaid was made on the 15th October 1900. The bulk of its consideration was left for payment to the prior mortgagees.

Kallu Singh, who is married to the sister of the plaintiff, states that the plaintiff has been visiting and staying at his place off and on for the last ten years and that his age in his opinion was about 18 or 19 years. Col. Birdwood, Civil Surgeon, examined the plaintiff on the 9th April 1918, and judging by his teeth and general appearance came to the conclusion that his probable age was between 18 and 19 years and that at the outside he might be 21 or 22 years old. No evidence to the contrary was produced on behalf of the contesting defendants.

The learned Subordintae Judge refused to accept the evidence produced by the plaintiff on the ground that the plaintiff and Kallu Singh had no direct knowledge, while Musammat Maharaja had contradicted herself, firstly, by stating that the plaintiff was born a year before the mortgage and, secondly, by saying that the plaintiff was two or three years younger than the wife of Kallu Singh. There was evidently some confusion in the mind of Musammat Maharaja as to the different mortgages which her husband had executed. She stated that her husband did not tell her about any of those mortgages; and it is not improbable that when referring to the mortgage made by her husband, she had in view some one of the previous mortgages which were satisfied by borrowing from the father of the defendant No. 1. Her statement as to the age of her son, Chhatarpal Singh, does not positively fix the date of his birth. Any attempt to fix the age of the plaintiff with reference to the age of Chhatarpal Singh and that of his sister, who is the wife of Kallu Singh, the estimates of which might be put out by a year or two, might, therefore, lead to uncertain results. As observed by their Lordships of the Privy Council in Banwari Lal v. Mahesh (1), the effect of the medical testimony is to render the other evidence adduced in the case as to the age of a person medically probable or improbable. Here the statement of the plaintiff and his mother that he was about 19 years old is rendered medically probable by the evidence of Col. Birdwood, and in the absence of any rebutting evidence there can be no justification for holding that the plaintiff had attained majority three years prior to the institution of this suit.

Article 15 of the Indian Limitation Act (IX of 1908) applies to a suit to set aside a decree obtained by fraud and allows a period of three years from the date when the fraud becomes known to the party wronged. The plaintiff does not state when the fraud became known to him; but even if limitation be computed from the date when the final decree for foreclosure was obtained, the suit would be within time, as it was brought within three years of the plaintiff attaining majority.

(1) 49 Ind. Cas. 540; 21 O. C. 225 at p. 232; 6 O. L. J. 169; 41 A. 63; 23 C. W. N. 577; (1919) M. W. N. 490; 45 I. A. 284 (P. C.).

With regard to the question of proper representation of a minor, it cannot be disputed that a notice to the minor is one of the necessary preliminaries to the appointment of a proposed guardian. Order XXXII, rule 3, clause (4), of the Code of Civil Procedure requires that no order of appointment shall be made except upon notice to the minor and to any guardian of the minor appointed or declared by any authority competent in that behalf or, where there is no such guardian, upon notice to the father or other natural guardian of the minor or to the person in whose care the minor is. In this case no notice was issued to the minor, or to the mother of the minor but a notice was issued to the proposed guardian who was also the manager of the joint family, of which the minor was member. The object of the provision is that the Court should be able to satisfy itself that the person described as a minor is really a minor and that the proposed guardian is a fit and proper person to represent him and to put in a proper defence and generally to act in the interests of the minor. Where a lawful guardian ad litem has been appointed, any defect or irregularity in the procedure leading up to such an appointment cannot, however, operate to render a decree passed in a suit in which the minor was represented by such a guardian invalid, unless the defect or irregularity has had the effect of prejudicing the interest of the minor or affected the merits of the case. Section 99 of the Code of Civil Procedure provides that no decree shall be reversed or substantially varied, nor shall any case be remanded, in appeal on account of any error, defect or irregularity in any proceedings in the suit, not affecting the merits of the case or the jurisdiction of the Court. Order XXXII, rule 5, provides that every order made in a suit or on any application before the Court in or by which a minor is in any way concerned or affected without such minor being represented by a next friend or guardian for the suit, as the case may be, may be discharged. But no question of discharge can arise where a minor defendant is represented by a guardian ad litem capable of being lawfully appointed and the irregularities are confined to the procedure antecedent to his appointment. The plaintiff was admittedly a minor. The person appointed his guardian ad litem was his brother and the manager of the joint family of which the minor was a member. The interest of the minor and the guardian ad litem with reference to the mortgage effected by their father was in no way differentiable and unless there is anything to show that in spite of the appointment of a guardian ad litem the interests of the minor were not duly protected or that the guardian ad litem colluded with the then plaintiff or had otherwise acted fraudulently or with gross negligence, the decree passed against the minor, in accordance with the compromise entered into by his guardian ad litem with the sanction of the Court, cannot be set aside.

As observed in Halli Jha v. Lal Singh (2), where no lawful guardian ad litem has been appointed to represent a minor, the effect is the same as if the minor had never been made a party to the suit. But as pointed out in Munnu Lal v. Ghulam Abbas (3) and Rambrichh Ram v. Tarak Tewari (4), where the appointment of a guardian has been merely irregular, it does not necessarily follow that the minor must be deemed to have been prejudiced. In Musammat Bibi Walian v. Banke Behari Pershad Singh (5) their Lordships of the Privy Council laid stress on the importance of following strictly the rules regulating the appointment of guardians ad litem; but observed at the same time that where in a suit the interests of the minors were effectively represented by their mother with the con-

(2) 27 Ind. Cas. 425; 21 C. L. J. 454.

(3) 6 Ind. Cas. 788; 32 A. 287; 13 O. C. 123; 11 C. L. J. 557; 1 Bom. L. R. 439; 14 C. W. N. 744; 8 M. L. T. 57; 37 I. A. 77; 20 M. L. J. 591 (P. C.)

(4) 33 Ind. Cas. 805; 14 A. L. J. 589.

(5) 30 I. A. 192; 7 C. W. N. 774; 30 C. 1021; 5 Bom. L. R. 822; 8 Sar. P. C. J. 512.

sent of the Court, the absence of a formal order appointing her and a defect in the service of summons on the minors and their guardian not shown to have caused any prejudice to them, were mere irregularities, which would not be ground for reversing the proceedings either on appeal or in a separate suit for the purpose. In Enuga Sundararama Reddi v. Rezwada Pattabhiramireddi (6) it was similarly held that a mere omission to give notice to a minor party before the appointment of a guardian ad litem to represent him was not in itself sufficient to vitiate the proceedings. The decisions in Ghanshyam Das v. Musammat Hardei (7) and Bhagwan Dayal v. Param Sukh Das (8) do not apply, because in the former case the alleged minor was really major and in the latter a prejudice had resulted owing to the Court Amin having been appointed guardian ad litem of certain minors without any provision having been made to supply him with funds to enable him to defend the suit or to enquire whether any defense was available.

The question of prejudice is intimately connected with the question of fraud, collusion and gross negligence alleged by the plaintiff; and as the latter questions have not been tried, it will be premature to determine whether the proceedings which resulted in the decree for foreclosure can be upheld. It is argued that even if the minor was not properly represented, the compromise would still be binding, because the person appointed guardian ad litem was also the manager of the joint family of which the minor was a member; but as pointed out by their Lordships of the Privy Council in Ganesha Row v. Tulja Ram Row (9), the powers of a person who has been appointed guardian ad litem are controlled by the provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure, and what he would have done as manager of the joint family irrespective of the suit he cannot do when appointed as such guardian. To hold otherwise would be to defeat the object of the enactment.

(6) 42 Ind. Cas. 421; (1917) M. W. N. 495; 6 L. W. 272.

(7) 32 Ind. Cas. 380; 2 O. L. J. 562.

(8) 27 Ind. Cas. 623; 37 A. 479 at 485; 13 A. L. J. 179.

(9) 18 Ind. Cas. 518; 36 M. 295; 17 C. W. N. 765; 11 A. L. J. 589; 15 C. L. J. 1; 15 Bom. L. R. 626; 14 M. L. T. 1; (1913) M. W. N. 575; 25 M. L. J. 150; 40 I. A. 182 (P. C.).

The appeal is, therefore, allowed and the suit remanded to the Court below with a direction to reinstate it under its original number and to dispose of it after determination of the other points involved in the case in the manner provided by law. The costs here and hitherto will abide the event.

Cause remanded.

PATNA HIGH COURT.

FIRST CIVIL APPEAL No. 185 OF 1917.

June 9 and July 4, 1919.

Present :—Mr. Justice Mullick and Mr. Justice Adami.

Pandit BRIJ KRISHNA DAS AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—APPELLANTS

versus

Choudhury MURLI RAI AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFF—RESPONDENTS.

Court-fee, deficiency in, on plaint and appeal—Procedure—Suit for declaratory decree and consequential relief—Court-fee payable.

Where upon the proper valuation of a suit an Appellate Court finds that there is a deficit in the amount of Court-fees paid by the plaintiff on his plaint and memorandum of appeal, the correct procedure for the Court to adopt is to call upon the plaintiff to make good the deficiency and on his failing to do so, to enforce its order by the dismissal of his suit. In such a case the rejection of the plaint is inappropriate, because section 10 of the Court Fees Act enjoins a dismissal without option. [p. 19, col. 2; p. 320, col. 1.]

Where a plaintiff asks for a declaration and consequential relief, he should pay ad valorem fees in proportion to the loss from which he seeks to be relieved. [p. 320, col. 1.]

Appeal from a decision of the Subordinate Judge, Shahabad.

Messrs. P. K. Sen and Parmeswar Dayal, for the Appellants.

Messrs. Siva Nandan Rai and Ganesh Dutt Singh, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.

MULLICK, J.—(June 9, 1919.)—The history of the transactions which led to the present suit is as follows:—

On the 24th of March 1909, Murli, Brij Mohan and others executed a mortgage deed in favour of Mohan Krishna Dar for Rs. 40,000. It was stipulated that a sum of

Rs. 15,000 out of this amount was to be deposited in Court to the credit of Abdul Ghani, who had a decree for that sum upon a simple mortgage executed by Murli and Brij Mohan. It was also stipulated that the balance of Rs. 25,000 was to be paid to Abdul Ghani out of Court in discharge of an usufructuary mortgage in respect of which a suit, viz., No. 112 of 1908, was then pending in the Court of the Subordinate Judge of Arrah.

On the 26th March 1909 Mohan Krishna Dar deposited the sum of Rs. 15,04 in Court in payment of the claim of Abdul Ghani, inclusive of interest, upon the decree above referred to. It was subsequently discovered that Abdul Ghani's claim upon the usufructuary mortgage was not Rs. 25,000 but Rs. 71,000, and on the 16th September 1909 Mohan Krishna Dar served a notice upon the mortgagors asking them to pay into Court the difference between those two sums within one month. The mortgagors having failed to comply, Mohan Krishna on the 11th October 1909 brought the suit numbered 106 of 1909 to recover from the mortgagors the sum of Rs. 15,904. It is alleged that summonses in the suit were served on the 10th of November 1909, and the record shows that, on the 3rd December 1909, an ex parte decree was obtained by the plaintiffs. In execution of this money decree an attachment was effected on the 16th March 1910 of the mortgaged properties. On the 26th March 1910 notices were served under Order XXI, rule 66, of the Code of Civil Procedure. Sale proclamations were served on the 4th May 1910 and the sale was held on the 6th June following. Possession was delivered on the 2.th August and mutation was made in the Collector's registers on the 1st of September. There were then certain proceedings for the appraisement of crops under section 69 of the Bengal Tenancy Act, which are only material for the purpose of showing that Murli had knowledge of the decree. Murli, however, denied such knowledge and, on the 31st of May 1915, he and his minor son instituted Suit No. 40 of 1915, in the Court of the Subordinate Judge of Arrah, to set aside the decree on the ground that it was obtained by fraud.

The present appeal is preferred by the heirs of Mohan Krishna Dar, the defendant in that suit, against the decree of the Subordinate Judge setting aside the ex parte decree of the 3rd December 1909 and the sale of the 6th June 1910, and allowing the plaintiffs to redeem their interest in the property on payment of their proportionate share of the sum secured.

It is necessary to explain here how the redemption of a fractional part of the mortgaged properties came to be allowed. On the 2nd December 1912 Har Prosad and others, representing some of the mortgagors, brought Suit No. 168 of 1912 in the Court of the Subordinate Judge of Arrah to set aside the decree and the sale, so far as they affected their 4 annas share in the property; and, on the 10th December 1912 Suit No. 169 of 1912 was instituted by Inderdeo and others, representing a second batch of mortgagors, in respect of their 5 annas 4 pies share. Those two suits were decreed, and it is alleged that the plaintiffs therein redeemed their 9-annas 4-pies share in the property on the 14th of January 1915 upon payment of Rs. 11,666-10 0 to the mortgagees. There is, next, an allegation in the plaint in the present suit that the defendants have become proprietors of 2 annas, 8 pies in the properties by purchase. The plaintiffs accordingly pray to redeem the residue, which is their 4 annas share, upon payment of their proportionate share of the sum secured.

The Subordinate Judge decreed the suit on the 30th March 1917, notwithstanding the fact that on the 27th March 1917 the High Court had set aside the judgment and the decrees in Suits Nos. 168 and 169 of 1912, holding that the decrees and the sales were valid and dismissing the suits. Though this fact was brought to the notice of the subordinate Judge, and though it was contended before him that the decision of the High Court operated as res judicata, the learned Subordinate Judge was unable to give effect to the objection, and decreed the suit as already stated.

In the present appeal, a preliminary objection is taken by the plaintiffs that the appeal does not lie to this Court as the subject matter is below Rs. 5,000, and that the Court which had jurisdiction to entertain tain the appeal was the Court of the District Judge of Arrah.

In order to deal with this point, it is necessary to examine the reliefs claimed in the plaint. The first prayer is that it may be held that the money decree of the 3rd December 1909 was obtained fraudulently; the second is that it may be held that the sale of the 6th June on the basis of the fraudulent decree was illegal, inoperative and null and void and the third is that the plaintiffs may be allowed to redeem, after setting off their claim for damages in regard to Mouza Ismailpur which is said, subsequent to the auction-purchase, to have been sold for arrears of Government revenue through the negligence of the auction-purchaser.

Now, it is quite clear that the suit comes under section 7, clause 4, of the Court Fees Act and, complying with the provisions of that section, the plaintiffs seem, in paragraph 9 of the plaint, to have valued their relief for Court fee purposes at Rs. 3,976, which sum represents their $\frac{1}{4}$th share in the sum of Rs. 15,904 for which the decree of the 3rd December was made. For the purpose of jurisdiction, however, the plaintiffs appear to have valued the suit at Rs. 15,904 only. Now, for the purpose of Court-fees the valuation put by the plaintiff on a suit under section 7, clause 4 (c), is not to be an arbitrary valuation. It is to accord with the value of the subject-matter and in case of dispute is to be determined by the Court. In the case before us an issue as to the valuation and Court-fee paid was raised, but it was decided by the learned Subordinate Judge in a most perfunctory manner, it being merely stated that there was no evidence to show that the valuation was insufficient. It was the duty of the learned Subordinate Judge to see that the Government revenue was adequately protected. That duty now falls upon us, and the parties having failed to adduce any evidence on the point, we are compelled to make the valuation upon the pleadings.

In this Court the principle has been accepted that where a plaintiff asks for a declaration and consequential relief, he is to pay ad valorem fees in proportion to the loss from which he asks to be relieved. Here if there had been no sale and the decree had merely stood, his loss would have been Rs. 15,904. It has been contended that his loss would have been only a quarter of this sum, but the decree, being a joint decree, it would seem that he is jointly and severally liable for the whole. But the sale having taken place, the plaintiff's loss is now not the amount of the decree but his interest in the property sold. That interest, in the event of a partition, will be $\frac{1}{4}$th and, therefore, the plaintiff's loss is $\frac{1}{4}$th of Rs. 2,20,000, which is alleged in paragraph 5 of the plaint to be the value of the entire properties, that is to say, Rs. 55,000.

As regards the prayer for redemption, it might be viewed either as a relief based upon a separate cause of action and as a distinct subject within the meaning of section 17 of the Court Fees Act or as a consequential relief. Adopting the latter view, we think the plaintiffs must pay ad valorem fees on Rs. 55,000 only, that is to say, Rs. 1,200.

The lower Court appears to have treated the case as one of redemption pure and simple, and it has been contended by the learned Vakil for the plaintiff-respondent before us that the first two prayers are only ancillary to the prayer for redemption. In my opinion this cannot be so, for, till the sale is reversed, the plaintiffs cannot redeem. It would not have been sufficient for them to bring a suit for redemption without making any mention of the decree and the sale, leaving it to the defendants to set up the decree as a bar to the suit. They could not, in a suit so framed, have been permitted to adduce evidence of fraud and get a declaration that the decree and the sale were inoperative. It might have been otherwise if the decree had been without jurisdiction, or if they had been defendants; but here it was of vital importance to them to set aside the decree and the sale by means of a declaratory decree. The result is that a sum of Rs. 975 is still due from the plaintiffs on account of deficit Court-fee.

For the purpose of jurisdiction, the case comes under section 8 of the Suits Valuation Act, and must be valued at Rs. 55,000. The appeal, therefore, lies to this Court.

BRIJ KRISHNA DAS v. MURLI RAI.

In regard to the Court-fee payable on the memorandum of appeal, it must be calculated upon the subject-matter of the appeal. The defendants-appellants seek to recover the plaintiffs' share and to defeat their right of redemption in all the Mouzas, except Ismailpur, the value of which, according to the Subordinate Judge, is Rs. 3,500. The subject matter of the appeal, therefore, is Rs. 55,000 less $\frac{1}{4}$th of Rs. 3,500, i. e., Rs. 54,125. The Court-fee payable, therefore, is Rs. 1,200 and there is a deficit of Rs. 975.

The order, therefore, that we shall pass is that deficit Court fee to the extent of Rs. 975 must be paid by the appellants before the appeal can be entertained. They will have time till the 23rd June for complying with this order. On default, the memorandum of appeal will be rejected. If, and when, the requisite Court-fee upon the memorandum of appeal is paid, the plaintiffs will be called upon, under section 12 of the Court Fees Act, to pay the deficit of Rs. 975 upon their plaint on or before the 30th June. In the event of their failing to do so, their suit will be dismissed without costs and the appeal of the defendants will be decreed with costs throughout.

Upon both parties complying with the orders in the matter of the deficit fees recoverable from them, the appeal will be set down for hearing on the 7th July.

ADAMI, J.—I agree.

ORDER.—(July 4, 1919).—This case has been put up for hearing to-day because of an order made by us on the 9th June 1919, calling upon the appellants to deposit Rs. 975 as deficit due upon their memorandum of appeal.

We held that the suit was not one for redemption, that it fell under section 7, clause (4) (c) of the Court Fees Act, and that Court-fees should be paid upon the value of the relief claimed, which, in this case, was a sum of Rs. 54,125. The appellants have complied with that order and, therefore, so far as they are concerned, the appeal can proceed. But on the last date of hearing we found that the plaintiffs had not in the trial Court paid the full Court-fee, that a further sum of Rs. 975 was due upon their plaint and we directed them, under section 12 of the Court Fees Act, to make good that deficit on or before the 30th June. This they have failed to do. Mr. Ganesh Dutt Singh, on behalf of the plaintiffs, says that he has communicated with his client but has received no reply and consequently is not in a position to say whether or not the plaintiffs intend to comply with our order. But he has addressed an argument to us upon section 12 of the Act, the purport of which is that, under this section, we have no power either to call upon the plaintiffs to pay the money, nor, in the event of the plaintiffs' failure to comply with our order, to dismiss the suit by applying the provisions of section 10. The learned Vakil relies upon certain observations made by a learned Judge of the Allahabad High Court in the case of Narain Singh v. Chaturbhuj Singh (1), and contends that section 12 of the Act only applies to a case in which the plaintiff is the appellant. With great respect, if that is the meaning of the judgment, I venture to differ, and, so far as this Court is concerned, it seems to me that the matter is concluded by the decision in the case of Rajdeo Narain Singh v. Ramdil Singh, in Second Appeal No. 104 of 1919, in which a Division Bench held, that upon the plaintiff-respondent's failure to pay the deficit Court-fee, it was competent to the Appeal Court to call upon him to pay the deficit and, in the event of his being unable to pay, to enforce the order by the dismissal of his suit. I can find nothing in section 12 which would debar the Court from enforcing its order in this manner. The section clearly contemplates that section 10 is applicable, unless the circumstances of the case do not permit. It is contended that all that the Appeal Court can do is to hold the decree, which has been obtained by the defaulting party, in abeyance and to direct that it shall not be executed until such time as the order in respect of the deficit is complied with. It would seem that the Court can, if it so pleases, adopt this remedy in exercise of its inherent powers, but there is nothing in the law which says that this is the only remedy which it is open to the Court to apply. I cannot, therefore, accede to the argument, that the respondent is entitled to be heard in the appeal, that it is only if he loses that we can impose any penalty upon him, and that, in any event, the utmost that the Court can do is to stay the execution of his decree.

(1) 20 A. 362; A. W. N. (1898) 72; 3 Ind. Dec. (N. s.) 592.

The learned Vakil also endeavoured to argue on the authority of Sundar Mal Marwari v. J. C. Murray (2) that section 12 does not at all apply to the case before us. In my opinion that case is of no assistance to him.

Finally it has been contended that even if we decide that the plaintiffs are liable to be called upon to pay the deficit, before they can be heard in the appeal, the proper order that we should make is not that the suit should be dismissed, but that the plaint should be rejected under Order VII, rule 11 of the Civil Procedure Code. In my opinion rule 11 of Order VII and section 10 of the Court Fees Act apply to different stages of a suit. The procedure of rule 11 of the former Act is not applicable to a case in which an Appeal Court acts under section 12 of the latter Act. In such a case the rejection of the plaint is an inappropriate remedy and the law enjoins a dismissal without option, though it may be that the result of the dismissal from the point of view of res judicata is the same as that of a rejection.

In these circumstances, the order made by us seems to be perfectly correct and the appeal has been rightly decreed with costs throughout.

Appeal decreed.

(2) 16 Ind. Cas. 963; 16 C. L. J. 375.

OUDH JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEALS NOS. 84, 88, 89, 90, 91, 147 and 148 OF 1918.

December 11, 1919.

Present :—Mr. Lindsay, J. C.

DRIGPAL SINGH AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—APPELLANTS

versus

NAKCHHED SINGH, DEAD, AND ON HIS DEATH SHEOAMBAR SINGH AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS—RESPONDENTS.

Partition proceedings—Presumption—Co-sharers not parties to proceedings, whether bound—Mortgagees, whether necessary parties to, and whether bound by, proceedings.

The presumption is that when a partition takes place, all the co-sharers in the village are made parties to the proceedings and, therefore, the proceedings must be taken to bind all the co-sharers and all persons who derive title under them. [p. 321, col 2.]

Mortgagees are not necessary parties to partition proceedings, but they are bound by the decision of the partition Court in so far as it affects the interests of the co-sharers who are their mortgagors. [p. 322, col. 1.]

Appeal from the decree of the Subordinate Judge, Sultanpur, dated the 3th January 1918, reversing that of the Additional Munsif, Sultanpur, dated the 18th September 1915.

Messrs. A. P. Sen and H. K. Ghosh, for the Appellants.

The Hon'ble Pandit Gokaran Nath Misra, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—These are seven appeals: all proceed upon common grounds and may be disposed of by one judgment.

The history of the litigation in these cases is fully set out in a judgment of a Bench of this Court reported as Bisheshar Singh v. Brij Bhookhan Singh (1). Shortly put what happened was as follows:—

Nakchhed and several others, plaintiffs, filed seven suits in ejectment against seven sets of defendants with respect to certain plots of land. In all the suits the case for the plaintiffs was that the lands in dispute had been allotted to the plaintiffs at a partition which had been carried out within 12 years from the date of the suit. It was represented that the defendants were refusing to deliver possession of these lands on the representation that they were holding the lands as mortgagees. Pleas were taken that the defendants were mortgagees of long standing. In some instances it was asserted that the mortgage deeds had been lost or destroyed and that the terms of the mortgage contract could not be definitely discovered. In a few of the cases it was further pleaded that the defendants were not under any obligation to disclose the conditions of their mortgages, because the plaintiffs were bound by entries in the partition record and were not in a position to deny that the defendants were mortgagees. In those suits what happened was this. The Court of first instance, finding that the relation of mortgagor and mortgagee had not been proved, decreed the plaintiffs' claims. In the lower Appellate Court the decrees of the Court of first instance were reversed. It was held that for certain reasons the defendants had shown themselves to be mortgagees and that the plaintiffs could not sue in ejectment. Their only remedy was to bring suits for redemption. When these cases came up in second appeal to this Court, it was considered advisable to refer them to a Bench for the purpose of laying down certain principles of decision applicable to cases of this nature. The law was accordingly laid down in the reported judgment to which I have just referred, and the result was that the decrees of the Subordinate Judge having been reversed, the cases were sent back to him for disposal in appeal in accordance with the law laid down in the reported judgment. The Subordinate Judge has now decided against all these defendants that the evidence adduced by them does not establish the existence of the mortgage relation and that the plaintiffs in all cases are entitled to eject them. He has remanded the suits to the Court of first instance for a finding upon the question of damages. Now the defendants come up here in second appeal and seek to have the orders of the lower Appellate Court reversed.

(1) 43 Ind. Cas. 300; 20 O. C. 336; 5 O. L. J. 18.

I have read the judgment of the Subordinate Judge which deals with all these seven cases, and I have no doubt whatever that the Subordinate Judge has correctly apprehended and applied all the principles of decision which were laid down in the judgment of the Bench. He has considered each case separately and has demonstrated that in none of the cases have the defendants been able to produce any definite proof of the mortgages upon which they rely. The evidence consisted for the most part of vague entries in the revenue papers of the village extending, it is true, over a long period of time; but there is absolutely no material upon which the Courts below could possibly have found whether or not these mortgages set up by the defendants were subsisting mortgages. I am satisfied that the evidence has been properly examined and dealt with by the Court below. It has, however, been argued here that in matter of law the decision of the Court below is erroneous. In order to understand the point which has been raised by Mr. Sen on behalf of these appellants it is necessary to say that at the partition, which was held within 12 years before the present suits were brought, a record was made in the partition proceedings to show that certain plots assigned to the shares of certain co-sharers were held in mortgage either by other co-sharers or by persons who were not co-sharers in the village. In the first place, it is contended that persons who were not parties to the partition record are not bound by any of the results of partition. With regard to this argument it is only necessary to state that the presumption is that when partition took place all the co-sharers in the village were made parties and every one, therefore, of the co-proprietors must be taken to be bound by the proceedings. It is further to be observed that a mortgagee cannot put forward the contention that he is not bound by the partition proceedings. He certainly is bound on the ground that any title he holds is derived from co-sharers who were parties. The proceedings bind all parties to them and all persons who derive title under those parties. In the present case, therefore, none of these persons, who call themselves mortgagees, can be heard to say that the partition proceedings are no evidence as against them of the title of the plaintiffs in these suits. The persons who set up these mortgages all admit that they are either original mortgagees from co-sharers in the village or sub-mortgagees. In some cases the original mortgages were made in favour of persons already co-sharers. In one instance, namely, the instance of Debi Dayal whose appeal here is No. 90 of 1918, the mortgage was to a stranger. But the case which Debi Dayal put up was that he was a mortgagee of a co-sharer in the village and so, whether or not Debi Dayal was a party to the partition proceedings, he is not in a position to deny the title which these plaintiffs have acquired by the partition proceedings. Practically the whole of the argument before me has been confined to this point; an attempt has been made to show that certain of these defendants, who were not parties to the partition proceedings, cannot be bound and that, as against them, the plaintiffs have not proved their title. As has been mentioned before, the title upon which the plaintiffs rely is a title which they got in the course of partition. For the reasons which I have given I am unable to entertain this argument. Mortgagees are not necessary parties to partition proceedings and they are bound by the decision of the partition Court in so far as it affects the interests of the proprietors who are their mortgagors. I am satisfied, therefore, that in all these cases the plaintiffs were able to show a title by partition and the evidence, which was led to prove that title, namely, the record of the partition proceedings, was evidence admissible against all the defendants, whether they had been parties to the proceedings or not. The plaintiffs in virtue of the rights acquired by them at the time of partition are entitled to possession unless the defendants can show a better claim to possession; and here we have the finding of the learned Subordinate Judge, with which I agree, that none of these defendants has been able to put forward any definite proof of a mortgage subsisting at the date on which these suits were brought; consequently none of the defendants has been able to establish any claim to possession which would be a bar to the recovery of possession by the plaintiffs.

The result is that I find that the judgment of the lower Appellate Court is correct and these seven appeals fail and are accordingly dismissed with costs.

Appeals dismissed.

PATNA HIGH COURT.

APPEAL FROM ORIGINAL ORDER No. 128 OF 1919.

March 30, 1920.

Present:—Mr. Justice Mullick and Mr. Justice Sultan Ahmed.

Babu DEONANDAN PRASAD SINGH—JUDGMENT DEBTOR—OBJECTOR—APPELLANT

versus

JANKI SINGH AND OTHERS—DECREE-HOLDERS—OPPOSITE-PARTY—RESPONDENTS.

Specific performance of contract of sale, suit for—Possession, whether can be decreed—Appeal to Privy Council—Death of respondent—Appeal heard in ignorance—Decree, whether can be ignored.

In a suit for specific performance of a contract for sale of land, it is open to the plaintiff to join with his prayer for specific performance a claim for delivery of possession, unless the contract expressly disentitles him to such relief. [p. 323, cols. 1 & 2.]

Where, pending the hearing of an appeal before the Privy Council, one of the respondents dies and his legal representatives are not brought upon the record and the appeal is heard in ignorance of the fact of death, the decree pronounced by the Privy Council cannot be ignored by the Courts in India. [p. 324, col. 2.]

Appeal from a decision of the Subordinate Judge, Monghyr, dated the 28th April 1919.

Messrs. S. M. Mullick and S. N. Bose, for the Appellants.

Messrs. S. N. Palit, S. K. Mitter, and N. N. Sen, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.

MULLICK, J.—This litigation arises out of the sale of an estate which was held under Act XI of 1859 in consequence of the default of the proprietors of the twelve-annas share to pay the Government revenue due from that share.

It appears that a separate account has been opened for the 4-annas share and that the residuary 12-annas share stands in the names of plaintiffs Nos. 1 to 20; plaintiffs Nos. 7 to 16 and Nos. 17 to 20 are respectively owners of 9 annas and 3 annas therein; plaintiffs Nos. 1 to 6 claim to be assignees as to portions of the above 3 annas share, while the defendant Deo Nandan Prosad Singh holds an usufructuary mortgage over the same and was the auction-purchaser at the sale.

The plaintiffs brought the suit in the Court of the Subordinate Judge to set aside the auction-sale, on the ground that the defendant No. 1 had fraudulently withheld payment of the Government demand, and they claimed that the defendant should convey the property to the plaintiffs and give possession with mesne profits. An alternative claim for damages was also made, but it was withdrawn with liberty to bring a fresh suit thereon.

The Subordinate Judge dismissed the suit with costs.

On appeal to the High Court it was decreed that the sale was invalid and that upon the plaintiffs paying into Court the purchase money with interest from the date of the sale, the defendant should through his guardian convey the property to the plaintiffs by a proper deed of sale.

On appeal to the Privy Council this decree was modified and their Lordships were of opinion that the declaration in the decree, that the sale and purchase were invalid, was misconceived as a description of the legal position, and that in its place should be substituted a declaration that the property purchased must be held for the benefit of the plaintiffs and the 1st defendant, according to their several interests, and that subject to the re-payment of Rs. 425 with interest there should be a direction for a conveyance as decreed by the High Court on payment of that amount on or before a date to be fixed by the Subordinate Judge. With this variation the decree of the High Court was affirmed in all respects.

The plaintiffs then applied on the 7th of September 1918 for the execution of the above decree. The judgment debtor, defendant No. 1, filed an objection on the 21st November 1918. On the 28th April 1919 the Subordinate Judge of Monghyr dismissed the objection and held that execution must proceed. The present appeal is directed against this order of dismissal.

The first point urged before us is that there can be no delivery of possession in this execution proceeding.

It is contended that their Lordships of the Privy Council only directed the execution of a conveyance and that as the decree is silent as to delivery of possession, the plaintiffs must bring a separate suit on the completed contract.

Now it is admitted that in a suit for specific performance of a contract for sale of land, it is open to the plaintiff to join with his prayer for specific performance a claim for delivery of possession, unless the contract expressly disentitles him to such relief. A contrary view has sometimes been taken, but I think it is now settled that a cause of action for delivery of possession may arise both upon the contract and the completed conveyance. [See Ranjit Sinha v. Kalidasi Debi (1) and Madan Mohan Singh v. Gaja Prosad Singh (2).] Forms Nos. 47 and 48 given in Appendix A in the First Schedule to the Civil Procedure Code also support this view.

Ordinarily the plaintiff would be entitled to ask for both reliefs and a subsequent suit for delivery of possession would, I think, be barred under the provisions of Order II, rule 2, Civil Procedure Code, which in its application to cases of contract merely asserts the principle that the Court will not direct the performance of a part of the contract where the whole can be enforced. As an exception to this rule, the Court will decree a claim for a conveyance only in cases where it embodies the substantial part of the agreement and where the Court can direct its execution without regard to the question whether or not its provisions can be specifically enforced.

Where the right to possession springs out of the contract for sale, delivery of possession would, in my opinion, be included in relief by specific performance. Generally the right arises coincidently with the right to the execution of the conveyance, and if their Lordships of the Madras High Court in Krishnammal v. Manandiar Sundararaja Aiyar (3) intended to lay down a contrary view I would respectfully venture to differ.

The plaintiffs before us did in fact ask that the sale should be set aside and delivery of possession given after the execution of a conveyance, and in my opinion their Lordships of the Calcutta High Court as well as their Lordships of the Judicial Committee intended that the relief as to possession, being ancillary, should be included in the relief as to execution of the necessary document. Therefore, although

(1) 5 Ind. Cas. 205; 37 C. 57; 14 C. W. N. 527.
(2) 11 Ind. Cas. 228; 14 C. L. J. 159.
(3) 22 Ind. Cas. 912; 38 M. 698; 15 M. L. T. 103; (1914) M. W. N. 200; 1 L. W. 147.

their Lordships of the Judicial Committee have not expressly made an order for delivery of possession, that relief follows immediately from the order for the execution of the conveyance.

It has been contended by the learned Vakil for the appellant that other equities may arise and it has been hinted that a decree for delivery of joint possession is in the nature of a declaratory decree and cannot be executed. Such a view has sometimes been taken, but the weight of authority, in my opinion, shows that delivery of joint possession can be made among co proprietors.

Then it is said that the 3 annas share is under usufructuary mortgage and that for this reason and for the reason that assignments have been freely made by the recorded co-sharers, a decree for possession could not be worked out in the execution department. The law, however, merely requires that the vendor shall make to the vendee such delivery of possession as the nature of the property admits of, and in this case I see no difficulty in giving to the plaintiffs that possession which they had at the time of the sale. There is no reason why the plaintiffs should be relegated to a separate suit for obtaining a relief which can without difficulty be given in the execution department, and I cannot conceive that it is the intention of their Lordships of the Judicial Committee that litigation should be multiplied for this purpose.

It is contended that if a suit for possession lies upon the executed conveyance, then delivery of possession should not be made in execution. I do not think section 47, Civil Procedure Code, is any bar. That section says that if the decree gives a certain relief, a separate suit for obtaining that relief will not lie during the pendency of execution proceedings founded on that decree. In the view that I take of the meaning of the decree, delivery of possession can and should be made.

I think, therefore, that the first objection must fail and upon the officer of the Court executing the document on behalf of the judgment-debtor, if he refuses to execute it, a right to possession vests in the decree-holder which can be enforced by the execution Court.

The next point urged on behalf of the appellant is that the decree of their Lordships of the Privy Council is a nullity, inasmuch as the heirs of one of the respondents who had died before the decree were not brought upon the record. It is contended that so far as the interest of the deceased plaintiff respondent is concerned, the suit has abated and as the cause of action has not survived to the remaining plaintiffs-respondents, they cannot execute the decree.

Now apart from the question of fact as to whether or not Eklal, the deceased respondent, had died before their Lordships of the Privy Council heard the appeal, I am unable to accede to the proposition that any Court in India can regard the order of the Sovereign as a nullity. It has been held in Flood v. Egan (4) that where, pending the hearing of the appeal, the respondent died and the Judicial Committee heard the appeal in ignorance of the death, and the appellant was ordered to pay costs, the Court below should refuse to ignore a decree of the Sovereign in Council. The provisions of Will. IV, C. 41, section 23, seem to furnish express statutory authority for this view. Indeed it would be a curious result if the defendant-appellant should now be permitted to take advantage of his own negligence or wilful omission. It was his duty to substitute parties in the Privy Council and it is certain that if he had succeeded in his appeal, he would have strenuously resisted the plea that the decree was a nullity. I think, therefore, that the contention, that the only decree which it was possible to the Subordinate Judge to execute was the decree of the High Court, is untenable and must fail.

But there is a more sustantial ground upon which the appellant's contention must fail. The learned Subordinate Judge has found that Eklal did not die in 1916, as has been alleged by the appellant, and that he was alive at the time that their Lordships heard the appeal. One witness, a karpardaz, has given evidence on behalf of the appellant that Eklal died in 1916. On the other hand the respondents have produced one of their co-sharers named Janki Singh, who says that Eklal died in 1917.

(4) (1869) 20 N. S. W. R. 337.

The learned Subordinate Judge, having taken the oral evidence of both sides into consideration, has come to the conclusion that the judgment debtor has failed to discharge the onus that lay upon him. The appellant also produced a report from an officer of the Collector's office at Monghyr, stating that in a certain death register kept in the Collectorate for the year 1919 the name of Eklal is shown as having died on the 29th March of that year. The report was signed on the 3rd January 1919 and the register in question was destroyed on the 15th March of that year. The original register was, therefore, not available to the respondents in the Court of the Subordinate Judge on the 26th April, when the hearing of the execution case began. It is clearly impossible to place any reliance upon a report of this kind. The respondents had no opportunity of calling for the original register or even obtaining copies of the relevant entries therein with a view to eliciting what was the nature of the register, who was the person who gave the information of the death of Eklal and what was his official status.

It is very pertinently observed by the learned Subordinate Judge that in the execution petition filed by the judgment-debtor on the 21st November 1918 no particulars were given showing that the judgment-debtor would contend that Eklal died on the 29th March 1916, and that the date of his death was not disclosed till the 18th of March 1919, that is to say, 3 days after the destruction of the register. The appellants have also filed two reports from the office of the Collector, Exhibits 2 and 2A, to the effect that in the death register for 1917 there is no entry of Eklal's death. The learned Subordinate Judge observes that Eklal may have died in a village other than the village to which the register relates.

We agree with the learned Subordinate Judge that in this state of the evidence, both documentary and oral, it would be impossible to hold that the onus cast upon the appellant has been discharged.

These are the only two points which have been argued before us and on both the appellant must fail. The appeal is, therefore, dismissed with costs.

SULTAN AHMED, J.—I agree.

Appeal dismissed.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

ORDINARY ORIGINAL CIVIL JURISDICTION.

EXECUTION CASE No. 4 OF 1919.

April 11, 1919.

Present:—Mr. Justice Rankin.

PURUSOTTUM DAS NARAIN DAS—APPLICANT

versus

LOUIS DREYFUS & CO.—RESPONDENT.

Arbitration—Notice to parties, whether essential—Arbitrator, proceeding ex parte, duty of—Award against firm, validity of—Award, how to be enforced.

When arbitrators assume the burden of their duty, their first duty is to see that the parties have had notice, and sufficient notice, to enable them to appear before the tribunal and put their case. If they do not appear before them, it is the duty of the arbitrators to make sure that they have no sort of excuse for not appearing. When the arbitrators have failed to discharge this duty, their award must be set aside. [p. 328, col. 1.]

An award of arbitrators is not bad because it is made against a firm. Under the Arbitration Act an award is not a decree, but it is to be enforced as though it were a decree. The provisions which relate to the execution of a decree against a firm apply in the case of an award which has been filed, the award having been made against the firm. [p. 326, col. 2.]

Rule calling upon the respondents to show cause why a certain award should not be taken off the file or set aside.

Mr. K. P. Basu (for Mr. Langford James), for Louis Dreyfus and Co.

M. S. C. Bose (for Mr. N. N. Sircar) in support of the Rule.

JUDGMENT.—This is an application by the seller under certain contracts to have an award taken off the file, as being bad and not valid against the firm. There is one question on the contract which I cannot now decide, because it requires investigation by means of oral evidence, and that is the question whether on the contract which was originally entered into the words which now appear on the top of the exhibit before me ("Calcutta" will be read instead of "Karachi") were really there; whether they have been interpolated afterwards for the purpose of making it appear that the contract was different from what it really was. I have to consider whether this award is invalid apart from the determination one way or another of that question; and three points have been taken before me independently of that more troublesome point. The first point is that the award is bad because it is against a firm,

The second point is that the award is bad because the arbitrators did not give any notice to the applicants of the fact that they were to determine the matter, and the third point is that this is not a case where a suit over the subject-matter of this award could have been brought in this Court and that, therefore, Act IX of 1899 by sub-section (2) does not apply.

On the first point, that the award is bad because it is against the firm, I am of opinion that that objection will not hold. It is quite true that in Hurdwary Mull v. Ahmed Musaji Saleji (1) there is an opinion of my learned brother Mr. Justice Fletcher to the effect that "this Court cannot make a decree against a firm when it is ignorant as to what persons constitute the firm. This being so, I am of opinion that not only did the arbitrators act improperly in not taking evidence on this issue, but also that the award is bad on the face of it." In my opinion there is no substance in reason for this objection. As I have, during the argument, pointed out, when an action is brought against a firm, the persons who appear as partners must appear in their individual names; so long as one person appears, the action will go on against the firm in the firm's name, and it will be left to proceedings after the decree to ascertain whether other persons are really partners, either by means of an issue being directed or otherwise. At the time the Court passess a decree aginst a firm in the firms's name, there is no constat as to how many partners there are of the firm or who these partners are, and, therefore, the major premise, as it seems to me, on which Mr. Justice Fletcher proceeded, "the Court cannot make a decree against a firm when it is ignorant as to what persons constitute the firm," is I think very much too wide. It is said that in view of the fact that the procedure for suing a firm in the firm's name was only introduced into this country in 1908, I must not read the Indian Arbitration Act of 1899 together with the new provisions in 1908. For the present purpose I do not agree. It is quite true, and I am glad to hear that it is known, that in strictness of law there is no such thing as a firm or partnership. Partnership is a relationship between persons and the law in England, and the law that has been incorporated into this country, recognises these persons as joint proprietors of a business, but does not recognise a partnership as being an entity at all; it is a mere guise or cloak or name by which the individual persons, joint owners, are concealed or pointed out. There is no such thing as a partnership; but the law now does allow for persons who own businesses in co-partnership being sued for convenience by a designation which is the designation commercially employed, and the machinery for doing that has been elaborated in England, and is now in force here. It is perfectly well known in India, just as it has been known for many years in England, that a large proportion of awards in commercial cases are made in favour of or against the firm. Business cannot be carried on unless commercial men who have constituted themselves into firms can be allowed to deal with firms, and I shall be doing something that I should be extremely sorry to do, causing much inconvenience and trouble, giving much opportunity for fraud and collusion, if I give my assent to the argument which has been put before me. Under the Indian Arbitration Act the award is not a decree, but it is to be enforced as though it were a decree and a decree of this Court. I certainly hold—and I have held in Chambers before to day—that the provisions which relate to the execution of a decree against a firm apply in the case of an award which has been filed, the award having been made against the firm. In my opinion, the dictum of Mr. Justice Fletcher proceeded upon a wide principle which is inaccurate. If there is one thing more firmly established than another in law it is the maxim "Id certum est quod certum reddi potest"—that is certain which is capable of being made certain, capable of being ascertained with a little trouble. In this case the machinery is provided by which you can for all the purposes of execution ascertain who are the partners in the firm, and I am not going to deprive the commercial community of the benefit of the system of arbitration and award by reason of a technical objection which, I think, is unfounded in principle and has got no commercial substance. So much for the point.

The next point that is taken is the question whether this Court has any jurisdiction to entertain an award upon this contract. Section 2 of Act IX of 1899 was pointed out, and that clearly enough lays down the test. The test is, would the subject-matter as taken to arbitration here be properly made the subject matter of a suit in this Presidency Town? Now, I look to this contract, and it appears to me that although there is to be an advance against railway receipt at Patna, speaking in terms of the contract, and speaking in the ordinary meaning of the English language, in terms of substance, this is a contract for delivery, not at Patna at all, but at a place which is called in the original contract Karachi, and which according to the evidence which is in dispute and which I have already mentioned, would be Calcutta. On that view if Mr. Basu's client be right, upon further investigation of that fact I should be prepared to hold that this Court had jurisdiction. Therefore, at present and without going into the question of what the contract was, whether the words have been interpolated or not, I cannot set aside this award on that ground.

(1) 1 Ind. Cas. 871; 13 C. W. N. 468.

Now I have come to the last of the three grounds that have been taken against this award, and that is that the arbitrators did not give notice to the sellers. Now I very much regret indeed that I think this point is fatal. What happened was that the buyers nominated their arbitrator; they nominated Mr. Nicashi of Messrs. Petrocochino Brothers to act for them by a letter of the 19th November 1918, and they asked "Please let us have the name of your arbitrator within seven days or we shall, without further notice, proceed with the arbitration ex parte." Now, under the contract what they were entitled to do was this. They were entitled, if a party failed to nominate an arbitrator within seven days from the date of request, to nominate both arbitrators. That was the measure of their right. They were entitled to nominate both of them, and in fact they did nominate both arbitrators, and so far everything was absolutely correct. But it is a principle which I have already had occasion to, lay down in these cases that when arbitrators assume the burden of their duty, their first duty is to see that the parties have had notice and sufficient notice, to enable them to appear before the tribunal and put their case. That being their duty, I have to examine first of all whether the arbitrators carried their duty out, and secondly, whether there was enough in the conduct of the sellers to entitle the arbitrators to say that the duty no longer existed. What happened was this. The arbitrators gave no notice of their being about to go into this matter at all. The buyers had asked the sellers to nominate their arbitrator. The sellers wrote back to the buyers in their letter of the 25th November 1918: "We are surprised to see that you want to refer the matter to the arbitration of one living in Calcutta. You must note that the dealings were effected in Patna and we have no concern with Calcutta and that unless arbitrators living in Patna be chosen, we cannot consent to any such proceeding. We have further to add that your agent or broker never fully explained the contract to us, nor gave us a copy of the terms thereof. However, as you want on the strength of the said contract to refer the matter to arbitrators, we would request you to send us a copy of the said contract at any early date. Under the circumstances unless you furnish us with a copy of the contract and we consent to the reference to arbitration your action, if any, taken ex parte will be at your risk and costs and cannot be legally binding on us."

Now, in my opinion, that was not such a letter as made it right or safe for the arbitrators to proceed without giving the sellers any notice that they were going to try the case. This letter states the objection to a Calcutta arbitration, it is true; but it goes on to say: "We have not got a copy of the contract. No doubt as you have acted under the contract, there may be something in it that is against us. We want to see it; but unless we consent to the reference to arbitration what you do will be at your own risk." It is not a final irrevocable, conclusive refusal to have any thing to do with this arbitration. It is an objection; what it says is that when we see the contract to know our rights, there is a chance that we may consent to the reference. That is the fair meaning of the letter. To my mind although it may be quite true, where a man refuses utterly and in all events to have any thing to do with an arbitration, that nobody is obliged to give any further notice because it will be useless, I do not think that this letter was sufficient to justify the party or the arbitrators in going on without any further notice whatsoever. As I have said recently, arbitrators, when they begin to take upon themselves the burden of their duty, must remember that it is laid upon them to see—not upon anybody else, but upon them as tribunal—that the parties have notice to appear before them; if they do not appear before them, to make sure that they have no sort of excuse for not appearing. I very much regret that I have to set aside this award, but I think the arbitrators of the buyers have so conducted themselves as to infringe this important principle. That being so, the award must be set aside, and I must set it aside with costs.

Rule made absolute.

OUDH JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

FIRST CIVIL APPEAL No. 111 OF 1918.

February 11, 1920.

Present:—Mr. Lindsay, J. C.

BANKE LAL AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS NOS. 4 TO 6—APPELLANTS

versus

SWAMI DAYAL AND ANOTHER—PLAINTIFFS NATHTHA AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS NOS. 1 TO 3—RESPONDENTS.

Guardians and Wards Act (VIII of 1890), ss. 27, 31 (2)—Admission by guardian of time barred debt, whether act of prudence—Order sanctioning transfer by guardian, contents of—Necessity for and advantage of transfer not recited in order, effect of Evidence Act (I of 1872), s 67 Document not required by law to be attested—Execution, proof of.

The provisions of section 31 (2) of the Guardians and Wards Act are mandatory and not merely directory, and an order made by a District Judge granting sanction to the guardian to transfer his ward's property, which fails to recite the necessity for or the advantage of the transfer, is not a legal order which can be pleaded as sufficient sanction for the transfer by the guardian. [p. 329, col. 2; p. 330, col. 1.]

Gopal v. Musammat Mahtaba, 2 Ind. Cas. 237; 12 O. C. 78, followed.

Rameshwar Singh Bahadur v. Dhanpat Singh, 5 Ind Cas 834: 11 C. L. J. 197, considered.

It is not an act of ordinary prudence on the part of a guardian within the meaning of section 27 of the Guardians and Wards Act, to admit that his ward is liable for a debt which cannot be legally recovered owing to the lapse of time. [p. 333, col. 1.]

In the case of a document not required by law to be attested, it is absolutely necessary under section 67 of the Evidence Act that some evidence should be given to show that the executant executed the document, i. e., that he signed it or put his mark on it. [p. 333, col. 1.]

Appeal from the decree of the Subordinate Judge, Sitapur, dated the 2nd August 1918.

The Hon'ble Syed Wazir Hasan, for the Appellants.

The Hon'ble Pandit Gokaran Nath Misra, for Respondent No. 1.

JUDGMENT.—The suit out of which this appeal has arisen was brought for the purpose of obtaining a declaration that a certain sale of property, effected under a deed dated the 19th of May 1914, was not binding on the plaintiffs. The original plaintiff in the case was one Swami Dayal, who at the time this sale was made was a minor. At the time the suit was brought one Murli was impleaded as a defendant, but subsequently he was allowed to join in the suit as a plaintiff. It is not disputed that the property affected by the sale-deed in question was the property of both these persons. Murli was still a minor at the time the suit was brought.

When this sale was made, the minors were under the control of a guardian appointed by the Civil Court—one Naththa, who was impleaded as a defendant. It was alleged in the plaint that Naththa had improperly sold this property to two persons, Ram Autar and Sheo Baran. It appears that after the purchase by these last named persons they transferred the property by sale to two other persons, namely, Bhesher and Mahraj Singh. The plaintiff alleged that one Banke Lal, who was also impleaded as a defendant, was interested in this latter transfer.

In the fourth paragraph of the plaint it was stated that Naththa, the guardian, was a man of weak intellect and in the fifth paragraph it was urged that the purchasers, Ram Autar and Sheo Baran, had brought influence to bear on the guardian for the purpose of bringing off this sale on the 10th of May 1914. The property, it is said, was at the time of the sale held by one Balgobind who was a mortgagee with possession. In the sixth paragraph of the plaint it was stated that certain false items had been entered in the sale-deed as being portions of the consideration. The eighth paragraph of the plaint set out that the sale was collusive, without legal necessity and injurious to the interests of the minors. In the ninth paragraph it was said that no permission for the sale had been obtained from the Court of the District Judge, and it was further pleaded that the Court was not put in possession of all the facts in order to enable it to determine whether the sale was for necessity or not. Lastly the allegation was that the second set of purchasers had bought the property with knowledge of all the above facts.

The main defence was that the sale had been held with the permission of the District Judge and that consequently the suit was not maintainable. The Subordinate Judge held that no valid permission for the sale had been given by the learned Judge. He, therefore, entered upon an inquiry for the purpose of ascertaining which of the items set out in the sale-deed were binding on the plaintiffs. In the event he found that the plaintiffs were bound to the extent of Rs. 2,281-14-0. He, therefore, decreed the claim of the plaintiffs subject to a payment by them of Rs. 231-14-0 to the defendants Nos. 4 to 6, the ultimate purchasers of the property. In case of default the suit was to stand dismissed with costs.

The first question to be dealt with in appeal is whether there was a valid permission for the sale given by the District Judge so as to bar the entertainment of the suit. The law relating to the powers of a guardian in the matter of disposal of his ward's property is laid down in sections 29 of the Guardians and Wards Act (VIII of 1890). Under that section no guardian appointed by the Court is allowed to transfer by mortgage, sale, gift, or exchange or otherwise without the previous permission of the Court. Section 30 declares that a disposal of immoveable property by a guardian in contravention of the terms of section 29 is voidable at the instance of any other person affected thereby. Section 31 provides that permission to alienate the property shall not be granted by the Court except in case of necessity or for evident advantage to the ward. Sub-section 2 of this section directs that the order of the Court granting the permission shall recite the necessity or advantage, as the case may be, describe the property with respect to which the act permitted is to be done, and specify such conditions, if any, as the Court may see fit to attach to the permission. It is further required that the order shall be recorded, dated and signed by the Judge of the Court with his own hand or when from any cause he is prevented from recording the order with his own hand, it must be taken down in writing from his dictation and be dated and signed by him.

It is common ground that no order framed in strict compliance with the requirement of sub-section 2 of section 31 was drawn up by the District Judge of Sitapur prior to the sale now complained of. The entire file of the guardianship case has been put in evidence and it is certain that no such order was prepared. The learned Judge of the Court below in dealing with this question of law relied upon a decision of a Judge of this Court reported as Gopal v. Musammat Mahtaba (1). In that case it was laid down by Mr. Greeven that the provisions of sub section 2 of section 31 of the Guardians and Wards Act are mandatory and not merely directory, and he expressed the opinion that an order which failed to recite the necessity for or the advantage of the transfer was not a legal order which could be pleaded as sufficient sanction for a sale by the guardian. If that ruling is to be applied to the facts of the present case, the judgment of the learned Judge of the Court below is correct and the defendants were not entitled to plead that there had been a sale under a valid permission given by the Court. There has been a great deal of argument here, as there seems to have been in the Court below, on this matter. The learned Judge who tried the case was referred to a number of authorities regarding the interpretation of section 31, sub section 2. The case which is most in point is a decision of the Calcutta High Court reported as Rameshwar Singh Bahadur v. Dhanpat Singh (2), where it was held that when an order permitting a sale was endorsed on the back of an application in which the necessity or advantage was referred to, it might be presumed that in granting the application containing those statements the Judge adopted them and that in such a case there would be a substantial compliance with the provisions of section 31, clause 2. It seems to me that I ought in this case to follow the ruling of our own Court and agree with the Court below that in this instance there was no valid sanction for the sale. To me it seems that Mr Greeven's interpretation of section 31, sub-section 2, is a sound one, and in view of the peremptory language in which the sub-section is couched, I am not prepared to say that he has put an unduly narrow construction upon its provisions. In this view it is hardly necessary for me to say anything more on this point. But as it has been argued that there was a substantial compliance with the spirit of the law and that the Judge did really make an investigation for the purpose of satisfying himself regarding the necessity for this sale, I think it right to say that having examined all the proceedings as they are set out in the file of the guardianship case, I am not satisfied that there was any proper inquiry. It appears from the record in the guardirnship case that one Raghubar was originally appointed as the guardian of the persons and property of these minors. After his death the other guardian Naththa was appointed in the year 1913. While Raghubar was alive, he made an application to the learned Judge for permission to sell a portion of the property of the minors in order to discharge certain debts. The Judge ordered the Munsif of Biswan to enquire into the matter and to report whether the property was encumbered and whether it would be expedient to sell a portion of it. The Munsif reported that the whole property, namely, a 16-pies share was worth about Rs. 6,000 and that 5 pies of it might be sold for the purpose of discharging the debts. In his report the Munsif stated that the principal creditor, a mortgagee, had put forward claims on certain bonds which were not admitted by the then guardians Raghubar. He stated that no investigation as to the genuineness of those documents could be held in the course of his proceedings. The learned Judge accepted the recommendation of the Munsif and gave permission for the sale of a 5-pies share. This permission, however, was never availed of by Raghubar till the time of his death. When Naththa was appointed, he put in a petition on the 26th of November 1913. In this petition he stated that there were encumbrance on the minors' property in favour of one Balgobind Dass, who, he said, held the whole of the minors' property in his possession under a mortgage with the exception of 25 bighas of sir land. Naththa represented to the Judge that Balgobind Dass was pressing for his money and there was no money available to pay off the debt. He proposed to the Court that a 9-pies share of the property might be sold to satisfy the claim of Balgobind Dass, thus saving a 7-pies share for the minor. In that petition he stated that the principal sum due to the mortgagee was Rs. 950, and that the interest came to Rs. 1,000 in addition. On this the learned Judge passed an order as follows:—

(1) 2 Ind. Cas. 237; 12 O. C. 73.
(2) 5 Ind. Cas. 334; 11 C. L. J. 197.

"This has been sanctioned already. See the order of the 8th August 1913. Let a draft deed be put up for approval."

It may be observed here that the order of the Judge was quite erroneous. There had been no previous sanction for a sale of a nine-pies share of the minors' property and further there was no order of the 8th of August 1913. The previous order passed on the Munsif's report was dated the 3rd August 1911.

On the 27th of February 1914 Naththa put in another petition before the District Judge. In this he declared that a sum of Rs. 7,432 was owing to the mahajans. He said that the only way to satisfy this debt would be by selling a portion of the property. He proposed that a 12-pies share should be sold for the purpose of discharging the debt. The remaining 4 pies share, it was represented, would bring in an income of Rs. 75 per annum which would be sufficient for the minors. Leave was, therefore, asked to sell a twelve pies share to the mortgagee Balgobind Dass and to another man Sant Bakhsh, who appears to have been an agent of Balgobind Dass. A statement of the debts was attached to this petition, from which it appears that Rs. 7,275 were owing to Balgobind Dass; Rs. 100 to the petitioner himself and a sum of Rs. 75 to one Ram Ratan. On this the Judge passed an order as follows:—

"Sanctioned. Let a draft be filed"

On the 5th of March 1914 a draft was filed, whereupon the Judge ordered a report to be called for from his office as to whether the draft was in accordance with the report of the Munsif of Biswan and whether the total amount of the debts was correctly shown. A report was prepared on the same date, drawing attention to the report which had been furnished by the Munsif in 1911 and pointing out that the Munsif had reported that only Rs. 3,000 was due to Mohan Dass, who was the predecessor-in-title of Balgobind Dass. After examining this report the District Judge ordered that the petitioner should attend on the 17th of March with all the documents and with the minors. Then on the 24th of March he recorded a further order saying that the documents had been produced by the guardian and by Sant Bakhsh, the agent of the mortgagee. He ordered that the documents should be examined in the office. An office report was accordingly made on the 25th of March 1914, in which it was stated that 12 deeds had been produced—six of them registered and six unregistered. There were also a rukka and copies of five decrees. The principal moneys came to Rs. 3,270 odd. It was reported that the rukka had become time-barred. It was stated with respect to two of the decrees that they had been discharged by the execution of a bond for Rs. 400 in favour of Ram Autar. It was further reported that there was a claim for arrears of rent amounting to Rs. 520 odd. After an examination of the various items the office reported that the total sum for which it was proposed to sell the property was a sum of Rs. 7,000. The office asked for orders regarding the interest claimed by Balgobind Dass. On this the Judge passed an order that the guardian was to make up a proper account and to show what was really due for principal and interest. The guardian was directed to attend at the Court and to furnish the information to the office. The Judge directed that time barred debts would not be recognised. On the 26th of March 1914 there was a further report by the office saying that a sum of R. 4,016 6-0 was claimed as principal and a sum of Rs. 3,117-7-6 on account of interest. The total came to Rs. 7,133-13-6. It was stated in the report that the whole property was in possession of the mortgagee Balgobind Dass. The Judge thereupon sanctioned the draft sale-deed, which had been put in after making certain additions to it. The draft proposed that the property should be sold to Balgobind Dass himself for a sum of Rs. 7,000. As a matter of fact the sale which took place in May 1914 was not to Balgobind at all but, as already mentioned, to Sheo Baran and Ram Autar. I do not see how it could reasonably be contended that in these proceedings the learned Judge really made any valid investigation regarding the extent to which these claims were good. It is indeed an extraordinary thing that his suspicions were not roused after comparing the first petition, which had been filed by the guardian, with the second petition filed on the 27th of February 1914. In the first petition the only debt mentioned was one of Rs. 1,950 in favour of Balgobind Dass. In the second petition filed only three months later the debt due to Balgobind Dass was shown as Rs. 7,275.

I need not, I think, discuss this matter any further. I am unable to accept the argument that there was a substantial compliance with the requirements of the law for the purpose of ascertaining that these debts were really debts due from the minors' estate and that the proposed sale was for the minors' advantage. The finding of the learned Judge must, therefore, be accepted.

I have now to deal with the various items which the Court below has found not to be chargeable to the account of the plaintiffs.

The sale deed sets out a consideration of Rs. 7,000 made up as follows:—

(1) Rs. 6,175 left with the purchasers for redemption;

(2) Rs. 400 payable to Ram Autar (one of the purchasers under a bond);

(3) Rs. 200 payable to the other purchaser Sheo Baran;

(4) Rs. 75 cost of the stamps, and

(5) Rs. 150 received by the vendor Nathu at the time of registration.

To begin with the smaller items, I take first the sum of Rs. 400 alleged to have been due to Ram Autar. The bond is Exhibit A 41. As regards this the Subordinate Judge finds that there is absolutely no evidence on record to show that Ram Autar advanced this money to the guardian Naththa for the purpose of satisfying two decrees. It was recited in the bond that the money had been lent for this purpose. The only evidence to which I have been referred is a statement of Sheo Baran, one of the original purchasers. All he could say was that Naththa borrowed Rs. 400 from Ram Autar on a bond. He admitted this bond was not written in his presence. He says that he saw it when it was returned by Ram Autar to Naththa at the time the sale-deed was executed. There is not a scrap of evidence to show that this money was applied by the guardian for the purpose of satisfying any decree binding upon the minors. The Judge was, therefore, quite right in disallowing this item.

The next item, one of Rs. 200, was alleged to be due to Sheo Baran himself. Sheo Baran's story was that this sum had been advanced on an oral contract to the first guardian Raghubar a few days before his death. All he could say was that Raghubar had informed him that the money was being taken for certain purposes of the minors. Rs. 150 of this sum represents principal and Rs. 50 interest. As the Judge of the Court below observes, there is no convincing evidence to show that this money was applied for the minors' benefit.

Next there is the item of Rs. 150 cash advanced to the guardian Naththa at the time of the sale. Naththa's story was that Rs. 100 of this was due to himself from the minors and that a sum of Rs. 50 had been spent for their benefit. No evidence whatever was forthcoming on this point, except the statement of Naththa himself which in the circumstances cannot be accepted as sufficient proof.

I come to the large item of Rs. 6,175. This sum is composed of a number of items said to have been due upon various documents. Six deeds of mortgage, Exhibits A3, A4 A5, A6, A7 and A8, were put forward in this connection. The Court below allowed the full sums claimed in respect of the two documents, Exhibits A3 and A4. With regard to the remaining four documents the learned Judge has allowed only the principal sums. It appears that these documents of mortgage provided for the redemption of properties mortgaged to prior mortgagees and it was agreed that so long as the subsequent mortgagee, that is, Balgobind Dass, remained out of possession, he was to be entitled to interest. The Subordinate Judge found that no evidence had been given as to the date on which the subsequent mortgagee had obtained possession of the mortgaged properties and consequently he was unable to say for what period the interest was to run. He was of opinion that it lay upon the subsequent mortgagee to prove the date upon which he came into possession in order to enable the Court to decide the question. It has been argued here that it lay upon the plaintiffs to prove that the mortgagee was in possession prior to the date of the sale in 1914 and that he was not entitled to claim interest up to that date. This argument cannot be accepted. There seems to be no doubt whatever that Balgobind Dass was in possession at the date of the sale and the matter being one peculiarly within the knowledge of the mortgagee himself, the burden of proving on what date he got possession lay upon him. The Court below, in my opinion, took a perfectly correct view and the order refusing interest on these four mortgages cannot be interfered with.

Next there were two items, D. W. No. 3 and D. W. No 4 Each of these was a bond debt. Both have been disallowed on the ground that it was not proved that they had been executed by the minors' father. With regard to the document D. W. No. 4 there is no longer any dispute. The learned Counsel for the appellants says he cannot contest the finding of the Court below. The decision regarding the other bond (D. W. No. 3) is attacked. The facts relating to this matter are as follows:—The document was produced and was proved to have been witnessed by a man named Baldeo. Evidence was forthcoming for the purpose of showing that the signature of Baldeo on the document was in fact in his writing. There was, however, no evidence to prove that the mark purporting to be the mark of the executant Hargobind was in the latter's writing. It cannot, I think, be argued that because it is proved that the signature of the witness Baldeo was in his writing that it must, therefore, be taken to be proved that the mark was made by Hargobind. This document was not a a document required by law to be attested and the ordinary rule regarding proof of execution as laid down in section 67 of the Evidence Act applies. It was absolutely necessary that some evidence should be given to show that the mark of the executant was in fact made by him. The decision of the Court below is, in my opinion, correct.

Next it was claimed that moneys owing under four decrees A46, A47, A48 and A49 were included in the large item of Rs. 6,175. The Court below allowed the claim regarding A46 and A47. As regards the other two decrees the claims were rejectsd. It was proved that these two decrees had been passed more than three years before the date of the execution of the sale, and as the learned Subordinate Judge observes, there was nothing to show that these decrees were alive and capable of execution at the time when the sale-deed was drawn up. In the absence of evidence to this effect the presumption is that they were time-barred. It has been argued before me that even if these decretal debts were time-barred, they could form consideration of this sale. I am unable to agree with this contention. The guardian of a minor's property is under section 27 of the Guardians and Wards Act bound to deal with the property carefully as a man of ordinary prudence would deal with it, if it were his own. I do not consider that it would be an act of ordinary prudence to admit that his wards were liable for a debt which could not be legally recovered owing to lapse of time. I think the learned Judge took a correct view of the matter.

Next a sum of Rs. 1,168 was claimed in respect of four bonds. Neither the originals of these bonds were produced nor certified copies. It seems from other evidence that these documents were all unregistered. The only proof of the existence of these bonds is contained in Exhibit A50, a certified copy of the list of debts which Naththa the guardian put in before the District Judge. That would certainly be no evidence against the plaintiffs of the execution of these bonds by their father or by any one who was in a position to bind them. Naththa, the guardian, was examined regarding these bonds and all he could say was that he had no personal knowledge of them. Then again the learned Judge of the Court below thought that even if the bonds existed they were time-barred. In any event it is clear that no adequate evidence was offered upon which it was possible to find that these bonds were binding on the minors.

Lastly it seems that some claim was made in respect of payments made under seven receipts. These payments are said to have been made by Sheo Baran, but after an examination of the evidence I agree with the argument of the learned Counsel for the respondent here that these payments do not represent independent payments. The receipts were only vouchers for the purpose of showing that Sheo Baran had paid off the various sums which he was liable to pay under the sale-deed, that is to say, sums which were left with him to be paid off to satisfy other claims. In his examination he deposes to this effect. He says that he produced these receipts in a pre-emption suit for the purpose of proving payment of the purchase-money. It was not possible, therefore, that the Court below should allow any credit to the defendants in respect of these sums. I am satisfied on the evidence that the sums which the learned Judge of the Court below has allowed credit for were the only sums which were proved to be payable by the minors and I uphold his judgment in this respect. As regards the claim for Rs. 75 on account of stamp, he has allowed Rs. 25 which I think is sufficient.

Lastly it was argued that as the appellants here were subsequent purchasers for value, they were not affected by any defect in the order for permission given by the Judge. As regards this argument all that it is necessary to say is that section 30 of the Guardians and Wards Act provides that a disposal of immoveable property by a guardian in contravention of the provisions of section 29 is voidable at the instance of any other person affected thereby. Having already found that the permission given by the Judge was not a legal permission, it must be held that the sale was voidable. This being the case, the original purchasers Ram Autar and Sheo Baran must be deemed to have acquired only a defeasible title and they could give no better than this to the subsequent purchasers, Banke, Bisheshar and Mahraj Singh. It cannot, therefore, be argued by the appellants that they were in any better position than the original purchasers, Sheo Baran and Ram Autar. The result of all this is that I find that the decision of the Court below is perfectly correct.

The appeal fails and is dismissed with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

APPEAL FROM APPELLATE DECREE No. 925 OF 1917.

June, 19, 1919.

Present:—Mr. Justice Fletcher and Mr. Justice Cuming.

UMESH CHANDRA DUTT AND OTHERS—JUDGMENT-DEBTORS—APPELLANTS

versus

BIBHUTI BHUSHAN PAL CHOWDHURY—DECREE-HOLDER—RESPONDENT.

Appeal—Costs, question of—Judgment not involving question of principle.

An appeal which raises a question of costs only and in which no question of principle is involved is not competent. [p. 334, col. 2; p. 335, col. 1.]

Appeal against the decree of the District Judge, Nadia, dated the 8th December 1916, modifying that of the Subordinate Judge, Nadia, dated the 22nd December 1915.

Babus Bipin Bihari Gosh (Jr.) and Dwijendra Nath Mukerji, for the Appellants.

Babu Brojalal Chakrabarti, Gurudas Singha and Khagendra Bhooshan Ray, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.

FLETCHER, J.—This is an appeal preferred by the defendants judgment-debtors against the decision of the learned District Judge of Nadia, dated the 8th December 1916, modifying the decision of the Subordinate Judge of the same place. The facts out of which the present appeal arises are as follows:—The plaintiffs brought a suit for recovery of possession of certain land and for mesne profits. They succeeded in that suit. The case then went before a Commissioner for ascertainment of mesne profits and demarcation of the land of which possession was to be recovered. Before the Commissioner, the parties arrived at an agreement, and under the terms of that agreement, the matters were adjusted between the parties and the question of costs was dealt with in this way in clauses 3 and 4: "Regarding the costs of this execution case, the Court costs incurred in taking possession and in ascertaining the amount of wasilat, which will be decided by the Court to be legally due to the decree-holders will be obtained by the decree-holders, from the judgment debtors"; and "besides the above, the decree-holders will get from the judgment-debtors an additional sum of Rs. 50 as costs." The case then went before the Subordinate Judge and he allowed certain sums as costs payable under the terms of the arrangement arrived at between the parties. The plaintiffs, being dissatisfied with those amounts, appealed to the Court of the District Judge, and the District Judge has allowed further and other sums than those allowed by the Subordinate Judge. Now, if it is assumed in the present case that this is a decree or an appealable order, then an appeal would involve a question of costs only. If it is a non-appealable order, it is quite clear that there cannot be an appeal. Now, what is the question of principle involved in this case? There is nothing except that one Judge thinks that the plaintiffs should be awarded more than what the first Court allowed. There is no question as to any difficult construction of the terms of the agreement arrived at between the parties or any similar question. Similarly, there is no question as to what amount must be allowed to the plaintiffs under the terms of the arrangement. It is quite clear that, in a case like this, the appeal raising the question of costs only, where no question of principle was involved, was not competent and could not be heard and decided by the learned District Judge. In my opinion, we ought to set aside the judgment and order of the learned District Judge and restore the judgment and order of the Subordinate Judge. The defendants must have their costs in this Court and in the lower Appellate Court.

CUMING, J.—I agree.

Appeal allowed.

OUDH JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

MISCELLANEOUS APPEAL No. 43 OF 1919.

April 9, 1920.

Present:—Mr. Stuart, A. J. C., and Pandit Kanhaiya Lal, A. J. C.

THE BENARES HINDU UNIVERSITY THROUGH BABU JWALA PRASAD—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

SRI KISHEN DAS AND ANOTHER—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Probote—Corporation aggregate, probate, whether can be granted to—Benares Hindu University, whether capable of obtaining probate—Benares Hindu University Act (XVI of 1915), s. 20.

A Court is competent to grant probate to a corporation aggregate as executor, although the enactment creating the corporation does not distinctly provide authority for it to be an executor, where the granting of the probate is not only in no way repugnant to its functions, but is merely a prelude to the obtaining of benefits under the Will which it is permitted to accept both generally and under the provision of the enactment creating it. [p. 336, cols. 1 & 2.]

The Benares Hindu University is not incapable of obtaining probate of a Will as an executor. [p. 336, col. 1.]

Appeal against the order of the District Judge, Lucknow, dated the 29th August 1919.

The Hon'ble Pandit Gokaran Nath Misra, Pandits Jagmohan Nath Ohak and Harkaran Nath Misra, for the Appellant.

The Hon'ble Dr. Tej Bahadur Sapru, Mr. A. P. Sen, Babus Bisheswar Nath Srivastava, Hari Kishen Dhaon and Gulab Chand Srimal, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—This appeal raises points of interest. A certain Sah Bindraban Das is said to have made a Will on the 11th November 1913. He died on the 13th June 1919. Under the terms of this Will he appointed as executor the Hindu University Society—a society registered under Act XXI of 1860—or in event of this society having been absorbed in the Benares Hindu University, he appointed the Benares Hindu University as executor. At the time that the Will was made, the Hindu University Society was in existence and the Benares Hindu University was not in existence but steps were then being taken to create the latter body and hand over to it the functions of the society. An Act was subsequently passed (Act XVI of 1915) which effected that purpose. It was a matter of common knowledge in 1913 that many influential persons were endeavouring to obtain legislative sanction for the creation of the new University and the testator was clearly aware that such was the case. On the testator's death the Benares Hindu University applied for probate of the Will before the District Judge of Lucknow. The nephew of the deceased and the brother's wife of the deceased opposed the application. The learned District Judge has dismissed the application on a preliminary point. He found that the Benares Hindu University had no power under its constitution to be a trustee or an executor. The University appeals against this decision.

The Probate Act, having effect, (Act V of 1881), does not treat at any length of the question as to who is capable of being an executor. Beyond stating in section 8 that probate cannot be granted to any person who is a minor or of unsound mind, the Act is silent on the subject. The point must be decided according to the principles laid down in England in so far as they are not repugnant to the testamentary law of India. We have first to consider what is the legal personality possessed by the Benares Hindu University. The answer to that question presents no difficulty. The Benares Hindu University is a corporation aggregate, the creature of Act XVI of 1915. It is generally accepted in England in the present day that a corporation aggregate can be an executor.

"Doubts have been entertained whether a corporation aggregate can be executor; principally because they cannot prove a Will or at least cannot take the oath for the due execution of the office. But there are authorities in favour of the capability and it is said to be now settled, that on their being so named, they may appoint persons, styled Syndics, to receive administration with the Will annexed, who are sworn like other administrators." (Williams on Executors, tenth Edition, Volume I, pages 153 and 159).

In India there would never have been any force in the now obsolete objection in England against corporations aggregate being executors because they cannot take an oath, as the taking of an oath is not required from executors in India. The learned Counsel for the respondents, while accepting this view of the law, supports the decision of the learned District Judge on the following argument. He draws our attention to the provisions of Act XVI of 1915, particularly to the provisions of section 3 (3). The Benares Hindu Unviversity was incorporated, as the Act says, for the purpose of making provision for imparting education, furthering original research and giving instruction in Hindu theology and religion. His case is that, unless the Act distinctly provides authority for the Benares Hindu University to be an executor or a trustee, the Court is debarred from granting probate to the University as executor. We cannot accept this argument. There would be much to be said for the proposition that the Court could not grant the University authority to do acts which were repugnant to its functions. But here the granting of probate is in no way repugnant to the functions of the University and is merely a prelude to the obtaining of benefits under the Will which the University is permitted to accept both generally and under the provisions of section 20 of Act XVI of 1915. We know of no authority in English or Indian Law which would prohibit the University from accepting such an executorship. A Bench of the Calcutta High Court decided under somewhat similar Acts affecting the constitution of the Calcutta University that it was open to the University to accept a testamentary disposition beneficial to their purposes subject to the grantor's conditions, Jittindra Nath Palit v. Lokendra Nath Palit (1). Thus such authority as there is supports our view.

We accordingly set aside the order of the learnad District Judge. He decided the question on a preliminary point that the Benares Hindu University qua Benares Hindu University was incapable of obtaining probate in any circumstances. We reverse his decision on that point and remand the case to him for retrial and decision on the merits. Costs here and hitherto will follow the result.

Cause remanded.

(1) 34 Ind. Cas. 657; 22 C. L. J. 593.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

APPEAL FROM ORIGINAL CIVIL No. 40 OF 1919
IN INSOLVENCY CASE No. 39 OF 1919.

June 2, 1919.

Present:—Sir Lancelot Sanderson, KT., Chief Justice, and Justice Sir John Woodroffe, KT.

BHURAMULL BANKA—INSOLVENT —APPELLANT

versus

THE OFFICIAL ASSIGNEE OF BENGAL—RESPONDENT.

Presidency Towns Insolvency Act (III of 1909), s. 33—Official Assignee, order by, directing insolvent to attend, whether should be in writing—Failure to comply with order—Contempt of Court—Application for committal for contempt, affidavit in support of, service of—Procedure—Irregularity, effect of.

It is not necessary that an order of the Official Assignee directing an insolvent to attend at his office, in pursuance of section 33 (2) (c) of the Presidency Towns Insolvency Act, should be in writing: a verbal order is valid, and casts upon the insolvent the duty to comply therewith. Where in pursuance of a verbal order the insolvent fails to perform the duty imposed upon him, he is guilty of a contempt of Court. [p. 338, col. 2.]

There is no express provision requiring the affidavit in support of an application to commit an insolvent for contempt of Court to be served at the same time as the notice of the application. [p. 339, col. 1.]

An irregularity in the proceedings of an Official Assignee, which is not in any way prejudicial to the insolvent, or does not occasion any failure of justice, does not invalidate the proceedings. [p. 339, col. 2 p. 340, col. 1.]

In future if the Official Assignee intends to apply for a committal order for contempt of Court, he will be well advised to put his order into writing and have it served on the person intended to be proceeded against, with a notice that if the order is not complied with proceedings for contempt will be taken Further it is eminently desirable from all points of view that the procedure laid down by the rules should be strictly complied with. [p. 339, col. 2.]

Appeal from the order of Mr. Justice Rankin, sitting as Commissioner in insolvency.

Messrs. N. Sircar and S. R. Das, for the Insolvent.

Mr. Lingford James, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.

SANDERSON, C. J.—This is an appeal by the insolvent against an order of committal made by Rankin, J.

On the hearing of the appeal, the merits of the matter were not discussed by the learned Counsel for the insolvent and no attempt was made to justify his conduct.

It appears that the appellant was adjudicated insolvent on the 21st March 1919 at the instance of a creditor, and shortly before that, viz., on the 26th February 1919, a suit in which the insolvent's grandmother was the plaintiff and the insolvent was defendant was filed, and in that suit by consent of the parties the Official Receiver was appointed on the 10th March 1919 receiver of the book-debts, outstandings, cash, money, properties and assets of the insolvent's firm.

Notice of an application for an order of committal dated the 5th May 1919 was served on the insolvent on the 6th May. The notice was as follows:—

"Take notice that on Tuesday the 13th day of May 1919 at 11 o'clock in the forenoon or so soon thereafter as the matter may be heard an application will be made before the learned Commissioner in insolvency for an order that you be committed for contempt under section 24 (3) and section 33 (2) (c) and (e) and (4) on the following grounds:—

"1. That the order of adjudication passed against you on the 21st March 1919 was served on you on the 5th April 1919, and that you have failed to file your schedule.

"2. That you were ordered by the Official Assignee personally on the 9th day of April 1919 to attend his office from day to day in order to make a list of the books belonging to your estate which had been removed to the Official Assignee's office. You have neither attended his office nor have you made a list of the books.

"3. That you were directed by the Official Assignee on the same date to make enquiries and report to him as to the whereabouts of your current books. You have taken no notice whatsoever of such directions.

"4. That you were directed by the Official Assignee to enquire and report as to the books, papers, belonging to your estate taken possession of by the Official Receiver appointed in the suit of Radha Bibee. You have failed to do so."

On the 13th May the insolvent applied for an adjournment, which was granted by the learned Judge, and the application was heard on the 16th.

The learned Judge came to the conclusion that the insolvent was deliberately trying to play off the Official Receiver against the Official Assignee and that in the insolvency he had done nothing, or as near as possible to nothing, for a period of a month, that he had deliberately done this with the idea that the Court would take no notice of it, if he gave sufficient trouble.

As I have already stated, there has been no attempt made to question the learned Judge's finding which, on the materials before us, was, in my judgment, amply justified.

It was, therefore, a case in which, as far as the merits are concerned, an order for committal was properly made.

The appellant's learned Counsel, however, raised several technical points, none of which were taken in the Court of first instance or referred to in the grounds of appeal. But having regard to the nature of the case, we allowed these points to be argued.

It was argued that the leaned Judge had not committed the insolvent on the first ground and that the insolvent should not have been committed on grounds Nos. 2, 3 and 4 of the application.

The first reason alleged was that the orders of the Official Assignee were verbal and as such were not sufficient basis for committal. It was argued that if the insolvent did not attend, in pursuance of the order made by the Official Assignee on the 9th April referred to in ground No. 2 of the notice, the Official Assignee should have applied to the Court for an order for the insolvent's attendance, that the Court's order should have been in writing, that it should have been served personally on the insolvent, that it should have contained a notice that unless he complied with it he would be committed for contempt, and that the insolvent could not be committed unles the above procedure had been carried out.

In my judgment, this question must depend upon the terms of section 33 of the Presidency Towns Insolvency Act, 1909. Sub-section (2) of that section provides that "the insolvent shall...(c) wait at such times and places on the Official Assignee or special manager...(e) generally do all such acts and things in relation to his property and the distribution of the proceeds amongst his creditors, as may be required by the Official Assignee or special manager or may be prescribed or be directed by the Court by any special order or orders made in reference to any particular case, or made on the occasion of any special application by the Official Assignee or special manager, or any creditor or person interested."

Sub-section (4) is as follows :—

"If the insolvent wilfully fails to perform the duties imposed upon him by this section, or to deliver up possession to the Official Assignee of any part of his property, which is divisible amongst his creditors under this Act and which is for the time being in his possession or under his control he shall, in addition to any other punishment to which he may be subject, be guilty of a contempt of Court and may be punished accordingly."

There is nothing in the section to show that an order of the Official Assignee to attend his office in pursuance of section 33 (2) (c) must be in writing. Consequently, the order given verbally on the 9th April was a valid order and there was then a duty upon the insolvent to comply with the order. This section further provides in sub-section (4) that if the insolvent wilfully fails to perform the duties imposed upon him by the section, he shall, in addition to any other punishment to which he may be subject, be guilty of a contempt of Court and may be punished accordingly. So that in this case when the insolvent failed to attend at the Official Assignee's office in accordance with the order of the Official Assignee, he failed to perform a duty imposed upon him by the section and he was guilty of a contempt of Court. The contempt was complete and he was liable to be punished accordingly.

Consequently, in my judgment, having regard to the terms of the section, there was no need for the Official Assignee to pursue the procedure indicated above, which the learned Counsel for the appellant urged, was necessary, before proceedings for contempt could be properly taken.

The next point urged was that there was no time specified in grounds Nos. 3 and 4. I do not think it necessary to consider this at any length; the learned Judge has found that the insolvent did practically nothing for a month : further, this point does not touch ground No. 2 of the application and that ground alone, having regard to the facts of this case and the finding that the insolvent was deliberately trying to play off the Official Receiver against the Official Assignee with the idea that if he gave sufficient trouble, the Court would take no notice of it, would be sufficient to justify the order for committal.

It was next argued that the affidavit filed on behalf of the Official Assignee should have been filed together with or before the notice of application, and should have been served on the insolvent at the same time as the notice of application : and reference was made to the Insolvency Rules Nos. 36, 37 and the preceding rules 17 to 20. The notice of application was served on the insolvent on the 6th May ; on the 9th May the Official Assignee sent copies of the affidavits which he intended to use in support of his application for contempt. On the 10th May the notice of application and the affidavits were filed by the Official Assignee. On the 13th May the matter was before the learned Judge; at the insolvent's request the application was adjourned until the 15th. At the hearing of the application on the 16th the insolvent relied upon an affidavit put in by him, which he had affirmed on the 15th, and in which he replied to the allegations contained in the affidavit filed on behalf of the Official Assignee.

There is no express provision that the affidavit in support of the application should be served at the same time as the notice of application, but assuming that there was any irregularity in the procedure, the learned Counsel for the Official Assignee relied upon rule 200 of the Insolvency Rules and the decision in Rendell v. Grundy (1).

In this case the insolvent was served with the notice on the 6th May, one week before the day originally fixed for the hearing : the notice set out the grounds of the application. On the 9th copies of the affidavits intended to be used were sent by the Official Assignee.

The insolvent affirmed his affidavit on the 15th and the case was heard on the 16th.

(1) (1895) 1 Q. B. 16; 64 L. J. Q. B. 135; 14 R. 19; 71 L. T. 564; 43 W. R. 50.

The insolvent had everything, to which he was entitled, and he has not been prejudiced in any way and in my judgment on the facts of this case the non-compliance with the rules, if any, does not invalidate the proceedings.

The learned Counsel for the insolvent argued that the application was in the nature of a criminal proceeding and, therefore, that there could be no question of waiver : in my judgment, on the facts of this case, it was not necessary for the Official Assignee to rely on the doctrine of waiver.

For these reasons, in my judgment, this appeal must be dismissed.

In this case there was no doubt as to the verbal orders, which were made by the Official Assignee. We think, however, that in future, if the Official Assignee intends to apply for a committal order for contempt of Court, he will be well advised to put his order into writing and have it served on the person intended to be proceeded against, with a notice that if the order is not complied with, proceedings for contempt will be taken. Further, it is eminently desirable, from all points of view, that the procedure laid down by the rules should be strictly complied with.

The Official Assignee will get his costs out of the assets—the costs will be as between Attorney and client.

WOODROFFE, J.—The contention that a written order of the Court was necessary, which order had to be served on the appellant, in practice amounts to this that if the orders of the Official Assignee are repeatedly disobeyed and then an order is made by the Court which is obeyed, no punishment by way of contempt can follow under the Act upon the repeated disobedience, though according to the Act the offence is complete immediately the Official Assignee's directions are disobeyed. It would be possible in this way to delay, and to some extent to defeat, the insolvency proceedings. In my opinion, no order in writing was requisite either from the Official Assignee or from the Court, though as regards the former it may be, as the learned Chief Justice has pointed out, desirable for the Official Assignee to put his directions into writing. The other alleged irregularities of procedure are [illegible] my opinion, not made out: but if they were, they have not in fact occasioned any failure of justice. The merits are not the subject of discussion before us, the question before us merely being whether the technical grounds have been established which would justify this Court in holding that the appellant should not be committed for acts which call for the proceedings which have been taken against him.

I agree, therefore, that the appeal fails and should be dismissed.

Appeal dismissed.

BOMBAY HIGH COURT.

FIRST CIVIL APPEAL No. 172 OF 1916.

September 16, 1919.

Present:—Mr. Justice Shah and Mr. Justice Hayward.

BALKRISHNA NARAYAN SAWANT—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

JANKIBAI SITARAM SANZGIRI AND OTHERS—DEFENDANT—RESPONDENTS.

Court Fees Act (VII of 1870), s. 7 (iv) (c)—Suits Valuation Act (VII of 1887), s. 8—Suit for declaration and injunction—Valuation for purposes of Court-fees and jurisdiction.

A plaintiff in a suit for a declaration and for an injunction by way of consequential relief has the right to put his own valuation on the claim for purposes of Court-fees under section 7, clause (iv) (c) of the Court Fees Act, and under section 8 of the Suits Valuation Act, the same value must determine the value for the purpose of jurisdiction. [p. 341, col. 1.]

In a suit for a declaration and for an injunction by way of consequential relief the plaintiff valued the claim at Rs. 135 for purposes of Court-fees and at Rs. 16,000 for purposes of jurisdiction. The suit was heard by a First Class Subordinate Judge under his special jurisdiction and was dismissed. Plaintiff filed an appeal in the High Court. On the appeal coming on for hearing, the plaintiff-appellant raised a preliminary point that the value of the claim for purposes of jurisdiction must be taken to be Rs. 135 in accordance with the provision of section 8 of the Suits Valuation Act and that the appeal accordingly lay to the District Judge and not to the High Court:

Held, that under the circumstances of this case, it must be held that the valuation was incorrectly stated for Court-fees and correctly stated for purposes of jurisdiction and that the appeal, therefore, lay to the High Court. [p. 342, cols. 1 & 2; p. 343, col. 2.]

First appeal from the decision of the First Class Subordinate Judge at Ratnagiri, in Civil Suit No. 319 of 1913.

Messrs. G. S. Rao and A. G. Desai, for the Appellant.

Messrs. Jayakar and G. S. Mulgaonkar, for Respondent Nos. 1 and 2.

Messrs. P. B. Shingne and T. N. Walavalkar, for Respondent No. 3.

Mr. V. S. Sanzgiri, for Respondents Nos. 4 and 5.

JUDGMENT.

SHAH, J.—In this appeal, a preliminary point has been raised on behalf of the appellant that the appeal lies to the District Court, and not to this Court, and that the memorandum of appeal should be returned to him now to be presented to the District Court.

It will be convenient to state the facts bearing on this point. One Sitaram left his native place for Benares in 1902: he has not been heard of since and is presumed to be dead. There were disputes as to his property in the hands of third persons: the claimants were his widow, Jankibai, his brother, Narayan, and his nephew, Balkrishna (Narayan's son). The widow claimed as an heir, the brother, by survivorship on the footing that he and Sitaram were joint, and the nephew under the Will of Sitaram. Jankibai filed a suit in 1913 on the original side of the High Court against the stake-holders, to which other claimants were added as parties later on. This suit was ultimately transferred to the Court of the First Class Subordinate Judge at Ratnagiri to be tried along with two other suits, which were filed in that Court by the brother and the nephew respectively. The brother filed Suit No. 319 of 1913 against the widow and the stake-holders for a declaration that he was jointly interested in the property of Sitaram and for an injunction restraining defendants Nos. 1 and 2 (the widow and her brother) from receiving, and defendants Nos. 3, 4 and 5 (the stake holders) from handing over to them, the property of Sitaram. Other minor reliefs claimed by him are not material. He valued the claim for the declaration and the injunction at Rs. 135 (Rs. 130 for declaration and Rs. 5 for injunction) for the purpose of Court-fees. He stated that the value of the subject-matter for the purpose of jurisdiction was about Rs. 16,000. This suit was filed under the special jurisdiction of the First Class Subordinate Judge of Ratnagiri, and not under his ordinary jurisdiction. The other suit was filed by Balkrishna against the widow and other defendants. That also was a suit for a declaration and an injunction, the valuation for the purpose of Court-fees being Rs. 135, and the value of the subject-matter of the suit for the purpose of jurisdiction being over Rs. 5,000. This also was a suit filed under the special—and not the ordinary—jurisdiction of the First Class Subordinate Judge. These two suits and the widow's suit transferred to that Court were tried and decided together. Several appeals have been filed from the different decrees to this Court. Narayan, whose suit was dismissed, has filed the present appeal, which, it is now contended, lies to the District Court. In Balkrishna's suit the widow has appealed to this Court on the merits, and Balkrishna has appealed as to costs. We are not concerned with the appeals in the widow's suit as regards this preliminary point.

It is significant that Narayan alone raises the point of jurisdiction in his appeal. The point, if good, equally affects the two appeals arising out of Balkrishna's suit. The appellants in those two appeals do not raise this point. On the contrary the widow contends that the appeals are properly filed in this Court. I shall deal with the preliminary point in this appeal in which it has been raised: for if it fails here, it must fail as regards the appeals arising out of Balkrishna's suit.

There can be no doubt that it is open to the plaintiff to put his own valuation on the claim for the purpose of Court-fees under section 7, clause (iv) (c), and that in the present case he purported to value it at Rs. 135. It is also clear that under section 8 of the Suits Valuation Act, 1887, the same value must determine the value for the purpose of jurisdiction. The decisions of this Court are to the same effect: and the course of the decisions on this point has been approved by the Privy Council recently in Sunderbai v. Collector of Belgaum (1). An attempt has been made on behalf of the widow to show that the present case is governed by the decision in Rachappa Subrao v. Shidappa Venkatrao (2). But I think that the injunction relates to the whole property, in respect of which the declaration is sought, and is a proper consequential relief. The suit, therefore, falls under clause (iv) (c) of section 7 of the Court Fees Act. I do not see how the present case can be treated on the same footing as the case of Rachappa Subrao v. Shidappa Venkatrao (2).

If the matter rested there, it would follow that the appeal would lie to the District Court and we would be bound to give effect to the contention that the appeal lies to the District Court, even though that conclusion would involve a further delay for no useful purpose in the disposal of these appeals.

The facts of the case are somewhat peculiar, and, on the particular facts of the case, I think the plaintiff should not be allowed to contend that the true value for the purpose of Court fees is Rs. 135. It is clear from the plaint that he filed the suit in the Court of the First Class Subordinate Judge with a definite allegation that the suit was filed under the special jurisdiction of the Court as the value of the subject-matter for that purpose was about Rs. 16,000. The value for the purpose of Court-fees was stated to be Rs. 135. If the lower Court had considered the question of Court fees and jurisdiction, as it should have, after the plaint was filed, the inconsistency between the two statements would have been realised and the plaintiff would have been at once called upon either to amend the value for the purpose of Court-fees so as to bring the case within the special jurisdiction of the Court, or to take back the plaint to be presented to the Court of the Second Class Subordinate Judge at Malvan, which would have jurisdiction to entertain the suit on the basis of the value for Court-fees being Rs. 135. That was not done. The defendants raised no objection as to the deficiency of Court-fees or want of jurisdiction. The result was that the suit of 1913 was tried by the First Class Subordinate Judge and decided by him in 1916, on the footing that it was a suit within his special jurisdiction as contemplated by section 25 of the Bombay Civil Courts Act (XIV of 1869). The plaintiff took advantage of the trial of the suit by a Court of higher jurisdiction; and he followed it up with an appeal to this Court in 1916 on the same basis. All these appeals are now ready for hearing; and for the first time it is urged on behalf of the plaintiff that the value of Court-fees as mentioned in the plaint is the true value for the purpose of jurisdiction also. The point now urged suggests not only want of jurisdiction in this Court to entertain the appeal, but also want of jurisdiction in the trial Court. Not only the plaintiff Narayan but other parties to this litigation and the lower Court have acted upon the allegation in the plaint that the true value of the subject-matter of the suit is over Rs. 5,000. It is inconsistent with the value of the claim for the purpose of Court-fees being only Rs. 135. The inconsistency might have been removed if it had been noticed in time by the plaintiff amending the value of his claim for the purpose of Court fees or that for the purpose of jurisdiction. Under the circumstances I think that the plaintiff can be fairly taken, and ought to be taken, to have really valued his claim for the purpose of Court-fees not at Rs. 135 as he has apparently done, but at a sum exceeding Rs. 5,000, as he has himself acted and induced others to act on that basis. He cannot be allowed to use either of these inconsistent valuations in different Courts according to his convenience. At this stage he can be properly held to have valued his claim for Court-fees and jurisdiction at Rs. 16,000 or at some figure exceeding Rs. 5,000. It may be that he has not paid sufficient Court fees from this point of view: but we are not now concerned with the question of sufficiency of Court fees either for the plaint or for the memorandum of appeal. We are concerned with the question of jurisdiction. On the special facts of this case I am of opinion that the plaintiff must be taken to have filed the suit properly in the Court below under its special jurisdiction, and to have filed the appeal properly in this Court. The appeal must, therefore, be heard on the merits. It follows that Appeals Nos. 177 and 218 of 1916 have been properly filed in this Court and must be heard on the merits.

(1) 52 Ind. Cas. 897; 46 I. A. 15; 21 Bom. L. R. 1148; 23 C. W. N. 753; (1919) M. W. N. 254; 43 B. 376 (P. C.).

(2) 50 Ind Cas. 280; 46 I. A. 24; 21 Bom. L. R. 489; 17 A. L. J. 418; 25 M L. T. 298; 36 M. L. J. 437; 29 C. L. J. 452; 43 B. 507; 10 L. W. 274; 24 C. W. N. 33; 1 U. P. L. R. (P. C.) 83 (P. C.).

I have reached this conclusion on the special facts of this case, and desire to make it clear that I do not mean to depart in the slightest degree from the recognised rule, to which I am bound to give effect, that the plaintiff has the right to value his claim for the purpose of Court-fees in a suit for a declaration and for an injunction by way of consequential relief, and that the value for the purpose of jurisdiction is the same. In this particular case I hold that the plaintiff must be taken to have really valued the claim for the purpose of Court fees at about Rs. 16,000, though in terms he purports to put a different and lower value.

First Appeal No. 172 is not pressed on the merits, and, is, therefore, dismissed.

Respondent No. 1 to get her costs from the appellant, the other respondents to bear their own costs.

We see no reason to disturb the order made by the trial Court as to costs of the stake-holders.

We dismiss the cross-objections of respondent No. 3 with costs.

HAYWARD, J.—I concur with the conclusions and have only a few words to add to the reasons of my learned brother.

Narayan, the father, and Balkrishna, the son, both brought suits for declarations and injunctions against the widow of the last holder for property worth Rs. 15,000 in the hands of stake-holders. These suits were filed the same day and were Suits Nos. 319 and 321 of 1913 in the Court of the First Class Subordinate Judge of Ratnagiri. They appear to have assessed their claims for declarations at Rs. 130 and injunctions at Rs. 5 and thereon to have paid Rs. 10 6-0 as Court-fees. But at the same time they stated definitely that the value of the property was some Rs. 15,000 and that the suits were, therefore, not within the jurisdiction of the Second Class Subordinate Court of Malvan, but were within that of the First Class Subordinate Court of Ratnagiri. It is difficult to follow the precise method by which they arrived at Rs. 10 6 0 as the appropriate Court-fees. If they had treated the claims for declarations separately, it would not have been necessary to have given them any value. If, however, they had valued them and did so at Rs. 130 for the purposes of ad valorem fees, then the appropriate fees would have been Rs. 9-12-0, while the ad valorem fees for claims for injunctions valued at Rs. 5 would have been annas 6, making a total of Rs. 10-2-0 as the appropriate Court-fees. If on the other hand, they had, treated, as they ought logically to have done, the claims as claims for declarations with injunctions valued at total sums of Rs. 135, then Rs. 10-8-0 would have been the appropriate ad valorem Court-fees. But they neither paid Rs. 10-2-0 nor Rs. 10-8-0. They fixed on the intermediate sums of Rs. 10-6-0 and they paid those sums without specific explanations as the Court-fees, so that even on their own showing they did not pay the right Court-fees in accordance with section 7, clause 4, and Schedule II, Article 17, clause 3 of the Court Fees Act, 1870.

They then proceeded apparently to make a further mistake and to overlook the provision that the valuation for Court-fees must be deemed the same as the valuation for jurisdiction under section 8 of the Suits Valuation Act, 1887. For they valued their suits at Rs. 15,000 for the purposes of jurisdiction: and upon that valuation they deliberately brought their suits not in the Court of the Second Class Subordinate Judge of Malvan, but, as no doubt suited them better, in the Court of the First Class Subordinate Judge of Ratnagiri. They must have been aware at the time they selected the trial Court that an appeal from the former would lie to the District Court of Ratnagiri and an appeal from the latter would lie to this High Court. It is clear that they did realize this and that they had deliberately filed their suits accordingly, because Narayan, the father, proceeded to file Appeal No. 172 of 1916 in this High Court, and no objection was taken by Balkrishna, the son, to the widow filing her Appeal No. 177 of 1916 also in this High Court. It is only now some three years later that they have denied practically the jurisdiction both of the trial Court and the appellate jurisdiction of this High Court. It seems to me that in these circumstances the only possible course is to hold that they were wrong in their statements as to the valuations for Court-fees, which in any case were incorrect according to the amounts actually paid as Court-fees and which were directly opposed to the actual valuation of the property in the suits, upon which valuation they had deliberately brought their suits in the superior Court of the First Class Subordinate Judge of Ratnagiri and had brought their appeals or suffered the appeals to be brought in this High Court. The proper course, therefore, in my opinion, must be to hold that the valuation in both the suits was incorrectly stated for Court fees and correctly stated for the purposes of jurisdiction both of the trial Court and of this High Court.

It seems to me further, to hold otherwise would lead to a most unfortunate result. Owing to the technical course which would have to be followed in order eventually to bring these appeals for final decision in this High Court, there would ensue a further serious delay which might extend to years before the widow would succeed, if she be entitled to succeed, in establishing her rights to this large sum of money in this High Court. To allow such a result would, in my opinion, be encouraging an abuse of the proceedings both of the First Class Subordinate Court of Ratnagiri and of this High Court, and it is, in my opinion, our incumbent duty to prevent any such abuse under the powers inherent in us under section 151 of the Civil Procedure Code.

Appeal dismissed.

PATNA HIGH COURT.

FIRST CIVIL APPEALS NOS. 196 OF 1916 AND 19 OF 1919.

March 17, 1920.

Present :—Mr. Justice Das and Mr. Justice Adami.

IN F. A. No. 196 OF 1916

Babu BRAHMANAND SINGH AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS 1ST PARTY—APPELLANTS

versus

DUND BAHADUR SINGH AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS—RESPONDENTS.

IN F. A. No. 19 OF 1919

JIVAN RAUT AND OTHERS—APPELLANTS

versus

NIRSU SINGH AND OTHERS—RESPONDENTS.

Bengal Alluvion and Diluvion Regulation (XI of 1825), s. 4 (1)—Gradual accession, what is—"Gained," meaning of—Common Law of England, applicability of, to India—Possession and dispossession—Land in condition unfit for actual enjoyment.

The word "gained" in clause (1) of section 4 of the Bengal Alluvion and Diluvion Regulation does not mean land washed away and afterwards identified as having reformed on its old site. [p 346, col .]

A case under clause (1) of section 4 of the Bengal Alluvion and Diluvion Regulation is not made out where the land in dispute is shown to have reformed on its old identifiable site. [p. 346, col. 1.]

The rules of the Common Law of England have no application to the Mofassil towns of India, except as rules of justice, equity and good conscience. [p. 346, col. 1.]

Where land has been shown to have been in a condition unfitting it for actual enjoyment in the usual modes at such a time, and under such circumstances that the state naturally would, and probably did, continue till within twelve years before suit, it may properly be presumed that it did so continue, and that the plaintiff's possession continued also, until the contrary is shown. [p. 347, col 1]

Appeals from a decision of the Subordinate Judge, Durbhanga.

Messrs. C C. Das, G. D. Singh and Jal Gobind Prasad Singh, for the Appellants.

Messrs. Fakhruddin and Gour Chandra Pal, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.

DAS, J.—On the main question that has been urged before us, the appeal is concluded by the decision of this Court in the case of Lachmi Narayan Lal v. Maharaja Kesho Prasad Singh (1).

The plaintiffs claim the land in dispute as land reformed on its old site. They say that the land in dispute formed part of their Mauza Mahindwara at the time of the preparation of the Revenue Survey map and as such was assessed to Government revenue as part of their Mouza Mahindwara, and that, in the year 1318, the river Chota Bagwati swallowed up the land in dispute but has now restored it again on the other side of the river. To adopt the words of Lord Justice James in the case of Lopez v. Muddun Mohun Thakoor (2), the plaintiffs say: "This was my property. The river, which swallowed it, has again yielded it up and I claim my property, which, having been buried and lost to sight, has again re-appeared."

The learned Subordinate Judge has found that the land, having reformed on its old site, belongs to the plaintiffs. This finding has not been challenged before us, but Mr. C. C. Dass on behalf of the appellants very strongly and forcibly contends that the land having gradually accreted to his Mauza must in law belong to him.

Precisely the same argument was put forward in Lopez's case (2). With reference to that argument, Lord Justice James said as follows: "It is to be observed, however, that that clause," referring to the fourth clause of the Regulation, "refers simply to cases of gain, of acquisition by means of gradual accession. There are no words which imply the confiscation or destruction of any private person's property whatever. If a Regulation is to be construed as taking away anybody's property, that intention to take away ought to be expressed in very plain words, or be made out by very plain and necessary implication. The plaintiff here says: 'I had the property. It was my property before it was covered by the Ganges. It remained my property after it was submerged by the Ganges. There was nothing in that state of things that took it from me and gave it to the Government. When it emerged there was nothing that took it from me and gave it to any other person,' and in answer to such a claim it would certainly seem that something more than mere reference to the acquisition of land by increment, by alluvion or by what other term may be used, would be required in order to enable the owner of one property to take property which had been legally vested in another." Stopping here for a moment, the passage cited seems to me to be a definite pronouncement on the question whether there is any room for a gain by accretion, when the land is clearly identifiable as land belonging to another owner as a reformation in situ. Lord Justice James proceeded to say as follows: "In truth, when the whole words are looked at, not merely of that clause, but of the whole Regulation, it is quite obvious that what the then legislative authority was dealing with, was the gain which an individual proprietor might make in this way from that which was part of the public territory, the public domain not usable in the ordinary sense, that is to say, the sea belonging to the State, a public river belonging to the State; this was a gift to an individual whose estate lay upon the river or lay upon the sea, a gift to him of that which, by accretion, became valuable and usable out of that which was in a state of nature neither valuable nor usable."

(1) 52 Ind Cas. 127; 5 P. L. J. 1; 1 P. L. T. 193; (1920) Pat. 102.

(2) 13 M. I. A. 437; 14 W. R. P. C. 11; 5 B. L. R. 521; 2 Suth. P. C. J. 336; 2 Sar. P. C. J. 594; 20 E. R. 625.

Mr. Das contends that there is no justification for this view on a plain reading of the Regulation itself. If there is not, still we would have to adopt, with all humility, the construction which the Judicial Committee has placed on the Regulation. But, in my view, it can bear no other construction. According to the Regulation accretion is land gained from the recess of a river or of the sea. It is difficult to understand how land confiscated from another proprietor can be said to be land gained from the recess of the river. But it is said that there is a decision of this Court in which the construction put upon the Regulation by Lord Justice James has not been accepted. In the case of Puri Dass v. Kanhu Behera (3) Mullick, J., is reported to have said: "The only thing that he can show us is the case of Lopez v. Muddun Mohun Thakoor (1) and he relies upon certain observations of their Lordships of the Privy Council as a foundation for the proposition that their Lordships intended to make a distinction between a river which is private property and a river of which the bed belongs to the Crown. In my opinion the judgment of their Lordships does not in clear terms make any such distinction. The section itself is perfectly intelligible without any such distinction, and I see no reason why any words of limitation should be inserted into it when no such limitation is necessary on the face of the enactment itself. On the contrary if the contention of the learned Vakil for the appellants is to be accepted, and rivers which are the property of the Crown are the only rivers to which the Regulation refers, then it is difficult to see what necessity there was for importing clause 4 into the Regulation. That clause makes special reference to island chars, thrown up in small and shallow rivers. There would have been no necessity whatsoever for legislating for this class of rivers, if by hypothesis the whole Regulation was intended to be inapplicable to it." With great respect, I am wholly unable to take this view. It was the defendant's contention in Lopez's case (2) that the recession of the river caused a gradual accession to his land, and an increment by annexation to his estate, notwithstanding that the land had been reformed on the ascertainable and ascertained site of the plaintiff's Mauza. To this contention, Lord Justice James replied that there are no words in the Regulation which imply the confiscation or destruction of any private person's property whatever and that it is "quite obvious that what the then legislative authority was dealing with, was the gain which an individual proprietor might make in the way from that which was part of the public territory, the public domain not usable in the ordinary sense, that is to say, the sea belonging to the State, a public river belonging to the State." In my view, it is impossible to misunderstand the clear and unequivocal words employed by Lord Justice James, and I do not think that it is open to this Court or to any Court to construe the Regulation differently. The same view was taken by Sir Barnes Peacock in the case of Ramanath Thakoor v. Chundernarain Chowdhry (4), and identically the same view has been taken in certainly three subsequent cases that I have been able to trace, cases reported as Mohini Mohun Dass

(3) 38 Ind. Cas. 135; 1 P.L.J. 636.

(4) 1 Marsh. 136; 1 Ind. Jur. (o. s.) 44.

v. Juggobundoo Bose (5), Dwarkanath Roy Chowdhry v. Dinobundho Singh (6) and Jugdish Chunder Biswas v. Chowdhry Zuhoor-ul Huq (7)] In my view, the word "gained" in clause 1, section 4 of the Regulation, does not mean land washed away and afterwards identified as having reformed on its old site. But although this is my view, I cannot differ from the view taken in the decision of this Court without referring the question to the decision of the Full Bench. It is unnecessary in this case to rest my decision on the meaning of the word "gained." It is sufficient to say that a case under clause 1 of section 4 of the Regulation is not made out when the land in dispute is shown to have reformed on its old identifiable site.

It was, however, argued by Mr. Das that the rule enunciated by Lord Justice James was based on the Common Law as it was then understood, and as the Common Law, as now understood, embodies a different principle, the old principle should no longer guide us. It may be conceded that it has been definitely laid down in England that gradual accretion of land from water belongs to the owner of the land gradually added to, and that the qualification suggested by Britton, namely, that the rule should not apply "if certain boundaries are found," has been finally rejected. But it may be remembered that the Common Law of England has no application to the Mofassil towns of India except as rules of justice, equity and good conscience. Now on what principle is the Common Law of England based? It is based upon the impossibility of determining year by year, to whom an inch or a foot or a yard belongs. In other words, the rule laid down in England is a rule of necessity. But, in India, the conditions are different. As was pointed out by Lord Sumner in the case of Srinath Roy v. Dinabandhu Sen (8), what would be almost miraculous in the case of English rivers is normal and commonplace in the case of Indian rivers. For instance, an addition of over 600 acres in the course of a single flood season could not be described as slow and gradual according to the standard of additions by alluvion in English rivers, but there is nothing abnormal in such a phenomenon in Indian rivers. It seems to me, therefore, that the rule of English Common Law, based on conditions which are entirely different, should not be extended to the Mofassil towns of India. But, if it is at all extended, it must be extended for the first time by the Judicial Committee, and, until that is done, we must be guided by the decision of the Judicial Committee in Lopez's case (2).

The identical point was, however, decided by this Court in the case of Lachmi Narayan Lal v. Maharaja Kesho Prasad Singh (1). That decision is binding on us and in accordance therewith, I must hold that the plaintiffs having shown the land as a reformation on its old site, they are entitled to succeed in the action, unless their claim is barred by limitation.

It is just as well to record my finding on the question whether the land in dispute can be said to have accreted to the defendants' Mouza within the meaning of clause 1, section 4 of the Regulation. The defendants, in my view, have adduced no evidence on this point. It is necessary to remember in this connection that the defendants have deliberately withheld the measurement khasras which are admittedly in existence, and which would throw a great deal of light on the question. We are entitled to draw the presumption that the measurement khasras, if produced, would support the case of the plaintiffs and not that of the defendants. The defendants rely on two leases, one granted on 15th July 1901 in respect of 15 bighas of accreted lands, and the other granted on 31st October 1905 in respect of 20 bighas inclusive of 15 bighas covered by the lease of 15th July 1901. The argument is that if 15 bighas accreted by the 15th July 1901, and 5 bighas accreted between that date and 31st October 1905, the accretion must have been gradual. On referring to Exhibit E2, the lease of 31st October 1905, it will appear that 15 bighas covered by the lease of the 15th July 1901 were formed on the old bed of the river. It is clear, therefore, that the lease of 15th July 1901 was not in respect of any portion of the disputed land. If the lease of 15th July 1901 goes out, then the only other document with which we are concerned is the

(5) 9 W. R. 312.
(6) 15 W. R. 461.
(7) 24 W. R. 317.
(8) 25 Ind. Cas. 467; 42 C. 489; 18 C. W. N. 1217; (1914) M. W. N. 654; 1 L. W. 733; 16 M. L. T. 319; 12 A. L. J. 1193; 20 C. L. J. 385; 16 Bom. L. R. 901; 41 I. A. 221 (P. C.).

lease of 31st October 1905, which shows that the defendants settled 5 bighas of Bharan lands with some of the tenants. There is nothing to show that the remaining portion of the disputed land did not come out of the river at the same time. I hold, therefore, that the defendants have failed to show that they have a title to the land in dispute by gradual accretion.

I now come to the question of limitation. I agree with the learned Vakil that it lies on the plaintiffs to prove possession and dispossession within twelve years of suit, but it must be remembered that possession is not the same thing as actual user. The "true rule" was stated by Wilson, J., in the following words: "That where land has been shown to have been in a condition unfitting it for actual enjoyment in the usual modes at such a time, and under such circumstances that that state naturally would, and probably did, continue till within twelve years before suit, it may properly be presumed that it did so continue and that the plaintiff's possession continued also, until the contrary is shown. This presumption seems to us to be reasonable in itself, and in accordance with the legal principles now embodied in section 114 of the Evidence Act." See Mahomed Ali Khan v. Khoja Abdul Gunny (9).

The cadastral survey map published in 1897 shows that the plaintiffs were in possession of the land in dispute in that year. The defendants' case is that the land began to go under water after 1897. It may, therefore, properly be presumed that the plaintiffs' possession over the land in dispute remained so long as the land was under water and continued until the contrary is shown. The only document that bears on the point is Exhibit E 2, the lease of 31st October 1905. That is the only document which shows the contrary, but the lease was within twelve years of the suit and cannot, therefore, defeat the plaintiffs' claim. On the other hand, Exhibits 10 A, 11 A, 10 B, 11 B, 10 C, 11 C show that the plaintiffs were recovering decrees for rent in respect of portions of the disputed land in 1910. I hold, therefore, that the suit is within time and is not barred by limitation.

(9) 9 C. 744 F. B.; 12 C. L. R. 257; 4 Ind. Dec. (N. s) 1145.

It was further argued on behalf of the appellants that defendants Nos. 8, 9 and 12, having been inducted into the land by a de facto owner, cannot be ejected from the land in dispute. I am not in sympathy with this argument. I cannot look upon the defendants, the owners of Mauza Sreedib, as de facto owners of the lands in dispute. It was also argued that as the defendant 3rd party, who owns a 15 ganda share in the Mauza, has not joined the plaintiffs in bringing the suit, the plaintiffs cannot recover a decree for joint possession. The point is entirely without merit. That objection must come from the defendant 3rd party and not from the contesting defendants.

I am of opinion that the decision of the Subordinate Judge is right and must be affirmed. There are, however, two errors in the decree which must be corrected. In Suit No. 99 of 19 4 out of which First Appeal No. 19 of 1919 arises, the plaintiff claimed to recover joint possession of 49 bighas 9 kuttas 12 dhurs. The Commissioner found 44 bighas to be the land in dispute. In Suit No. 100 of 1914 out of which First Appeal No. 196 of 1916 arises the plaintiffs claimed to recover joint possession of 73 bighas 2 kuttas 2 dhurs. The Commissioner found 61 bighas 3 kuttas to be the land in dispute. It has not been shown that the Commissioner's report is wrong. The plaintiffs, therefore, are entitled to a decree according to the Commissioner's report. On the question of mesne profits too there is an error. The Court made a distinction between tenanted lands and lands in direct possession of the Maliks. So far as tenanted lands are concerned, the Court gave the plaintiffs a decree for mesne profits at the rate of Rs. 4 per bigha. So far as Zarait lands are concerned, the Court adopted another principle. The decree as drawn up makes no distinction between the two. This is wrong. The Commissioner's report shows the area held by the tenants and the area in the khas possession of the Maliks. The decree must be modified accordingly in accordance with the Commissioner's report. Subject to this modification, the appeals fail and are dismissed with costs.

ADAMI, J.—I agree.

Appeals dismissed; Decree modified.

GOKUL PRASAD v. SITLA PRASAD.

OUDH JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

FIRST CIVIL APPEALS NOS. 14 AND 30 OF 1919.
November 14, 1919.
Present:—Mr. Stuart, J. C.

GOKUL PRASAD AND ANOTHER—DEFENDANTS—APPELLANTS IN BOTH

versus

SITLA PRASAD AND ANOTHER—PLAINTIFFS RESPONDENTS IN BOTH.

Mortgage—Mortgagee, right of, to take possession on default—Waiver—Penal clauses—Suit by mortgagee to recover possession—Consideration, payment of, whether can be gone into—Redemption, whether can be permitted.

A mortgage-deed was to the following effect. The principal and interest was to be paid within a fixed period. If default was made in payment of any portion of the interest, the balance was to be converted from simple interest to compound interest at the same rate. If the total amount due on the deed was not paid by the time fixed, the mortgagee was at liberty either to bring the mortgaged property to sale and recover the amount due from the sale-proceeds or, in the alternative, to enter into possession of the property and remain in possession until such time as the mortgage was redeemed or in perpetuity if the mortgage was not redeemed. Default was made in the payment of principal and interest and it was found that the mortgagee had accepted certain deeds of further charge in respect of some of the unpaid arrears of interest:

Held, (1) that the acceptance of the deeds of further charge by the mortgagee did not amount to a waiver of his remedy as to taking possession of the mortgaged property; [p. 349, col. 1.]

(2) that the mortgage deed contained no penal clause and that the condition permitting possession was a good condition. [p. 349, col. 2.]

The question as to whether the full consideration for a mortgage was paid can be gone into only when a suit for its redemption is filed and not in a suit by the mortgagee for possession of the mortgaged property. Nor can the mortgagor be allowed to redeem the mortgage in such a suit. [p. 349, col. 2.]

Appeal from the decree of the Subordinate Judge, Bara Banki, dated the 28th February 1917.

Babu Ishwari Prasad, for the Appellants in both appeals.

Babu Bisheshwar Nath Srivastava, for the Respondents in Appeal No. 14 of 1919.

Babu Bisheshwar Nath Srivastava and Syed Zahur Ahmad, for the Respondents in Appeal No. 30 of 1919.

JUDGMENT.—These two appeals can be decided by the same judgment. The facts are as follows:—

Manzur Ahmad executed a deed of mortgage on the 15th January 1907 and a second deed of mortgage on the 22nd June 1907. Separate properties were mortgaged by these two deeds. The property mortgaged by both the deeds was brought to sale in execution of a simple money decree and purchased by Gokul Prasad in 1916. Manzur Ahmad has ceased to have any interest in the mortgaged property. Both properties are now in possession of Gokul Prasad, who is in the position of the mortgagor. The mortgagees sued for possession of the properties mortgaged and have obtained decrees. Gokul Prasad and the representative of a prior mortgagee have appealed in Appeal No. 30 against the decree passed on the mortgage of 15th January 1907, and Gokul Prasad alone has appealed in Appeal No. 14 against the decree passed in respect of the property mortgaged by the mortgage deed of 22nd June 1907. I have examined the deeds. They are both to the same effect which is as follows:—Manzur Ahmad agreed in the first deed to pay the principal and interest within four years. He agreed in the 2nd deed to pay the principal and interest within three years. In event of his failing to pay any portion of the interest the balance was to be converted from simple interest to compound interest at the same rate. In event of his not paying up the total amount due on the deed of 15th January 1907 within four years and the total amount on the deed of 22nd June 1907 within three years, the mortgagees were at liberty either to bring the mortgaged properties to sale and recover the amount due from the sale-proceeds or, in the alternative, to enter into possession of the mortgaged properties and remain in possession until such time as the mortgages were redeemed or in perpetuity if the mortgages were not redeemed. They have sought and obtained the last named remedy in the Court below. The appeals raise the following points:—

The first is that no suits for possession lay because the mortgagees had deliberately elected to waive their claim for possession and accepted in lieu certain deeds of further charge in respect of the unpaid arrears of interest. It is perfectly true that the suits for possession were not filed when the defaults took place, but the suits for possession were filed well within limitation, the limitation being governed by the provisions of Article 138 of the First Schedule of Act IX of 1903, and it is further to be noted that although the mortgagees took deeds of further charge in respect of certain unpaid instalments of interest, there are arrears of interest which are not covered by these deeds of further charge and the deeds of further charge naturally have had no effect upon the principal. In these circumstances it is difficult to see how the question of waiver or estoppel can be raised and I decide the point against the appellants. I am of opinion that the mortgagees have neither by act or omission deprived themselves of the right to obtain possession of the mortgaged property.

The next point raised is that no suit for possession should have been brought until specific notice had been given to Gokul Prasad of the desire of the mortgagees to obtain possession. The argument is here based upon a dictum in a case from the Punjab, Banu Mal v. Pars Ram (1). The dictum in question goes no further than to lay down that in the particular circumstances of the appeal a mortgagee who has waived the right to claim possession of the mortgaged land must, if he desires to avail himself of that right upon a future default, give the mortgagor reasonable notice of his intention. I should not go so far as to say that in this case there had been any waiver. So it is unnecessary to discuss whether the view taken in the Punjab Chief Court is a view which should or should not be followed because there being no waiver, the case has no application. Similarly I find that the decision of the Bombay High Court in Chagan Chunilal v. Suka Barku (2), which has also been relied on by the learned Counsel for the appellants, has no application to the facts of this case. I cannot consider that the suits should fail because the mortgagees gave no notice to the mortgagor of their desire to obtain possession of the property.

That third point raised is that Manzur Ahmad was a habitual drunkard, a reckless borrower, and a man of extravagant habits and that the onus was on the plaintiffs-respondents to prove that he was paid the full consideration of the mortgage deeds. Manzur Ahmed appears to have been somewhat intemperate, but the description of him given in the grounds of appeal is hardly fair to him. He was not such a weak or foolish character as the appeals make out. But in any circumstances there can be no doubt as to the fact that the deeds were executed for good consideration. The point does not arise here whether the full consideration was or was not paid. The question as to whether the full consideration was paid can be gone into when a suit for redemption is filed and should not be prejudged now. It is sufficient to say that the deeds in question were for consideration and were good deeds. It is unnecessary to say anything more.

The next point taken is that the mortgages are vitiated as containing a penal clause. I do not agree here. I cannot find that the mortgages contain any penal clause and I find that the condition permitting possession is a good condition.

The last point taken, which has been very strongly pressed, is that the appellants should be allowed to redeem the mortgages in the present suits. That cannot be permitted. They must first give possession. After they have done so they will, of course, be at liberty to file suits for redemption.

For the above reasons I dismiss these appeals with costs.

Appeals dismissed.

(1) 48 Ind. Cas. 656; 35 P. W. R. 1918; 30 P. R. 1918; 47 P. L. R. 1918.

(2) 12 Ind. Cas. 384; 35 B. 511; 13 Bom. L. R. 891.

BOMBAY HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No 175 OF 1917.

September 19, 1919.

Present:—Mr. Justice Shah and Mr. Justice Hayward.

RAMCHANDRA VITHAL BHAT—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

GAJANAN NARAYAN DESHMUKH AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), ss. 47, 66, O. II, r. 2, O. XXI, rr. 69, 96—Mortgage decree—Execution of decree—Purchase by benamidar for decree-holder, validity of—Benamidar, suit by, to recover possession, maintainability of—Mortgagee, whether necessary party—Leave to bid not obtained by mortgagee, effect of—Suits against different per-in respect of distinct properties at different times, maintainability of.

Where in execution of a mortgage decree the property is purchased by a benamidar for the mortgagee, the former is entitled to sue in his own name to recover the property vested in him as a benamidar, and the original mortgagee for whom he is alleged to have purchased the property at the Court sale is not a necessary party to the suit. [p. 351, col. 1.]

Such a suit is not barred by the provisions of section 47 of the Civil Procedure Code, inasmuch as the plaintiff-purchaser is not the decree-holder himself but a third person. For purposes of procedure the auction-purchaser, even though a benamidar for the decree-holder, is a third party. [p. 352, col. 1.]

Where in such a case it appears that the mortgagee did not obtain any leave to bid for or purchase the property, the omission would not render the purchase by the benamidar void. The purchase is merely liable to be set aside at the instance of the judgment-debtor in proceedings properly framed for that purpose and until so set aside, holds good. [p. 351, col 2.]

An auction-purchaser brought a suit to recover possession of certain property included in his purchase and obtained a decree. Subsequently he brought another suit against a different set of defendants to recover possession of certain other property which was also included in his purchase:

Held, that the suit was not barred by the provisions of Order II, rule 2, of the Civil Procedure Code. [p. 352, col. 2.]

Appeal from the decision of the District Judge, Thana, in Appeal No. 150 of 1915, confirming the decree passed by the Acting Subordinate Judge at Roha, in Civil Suit No. 360 of 1914.

Messrs. Jayakar and P. V. Kane, for the Appellant.

Messrs. G. S. Rao and W. B. Pradhan, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.

SHAH, J.—It will be convenient to set forth the facts which have given rise to this second appeal.

One Narayan and his other brothers mortgaged a two-anna share in the Khoti Takshim to one Vinayak Tilak with all the Khasgi lands and other rights appertaining to the Takshim. The mortgagee filed Suit No. 194 of 1902 on his mortgage and obtained a decree. In pursuance of that decree the property mortgaged was sold by the Court and the present plaintiff purchased it at the Court sale on the 16th June 1908 for Rs. 1,200. The sale was confirmed in July 1908. The auction-purchaser applied to have possession of the property and he recovered possession in December 1903 of the Takshim. It was stated, however, at the time by him that certain properties to which the sale certificate related were in the actual possession of the defendants and that he had not received possession of those properties. Those properties were not specified; but generally speaking, the main property described in the sale certificate, viz, the Khoti Takshim, was taken possession of under section 319 of the Code of Civil Procedure which was then in force. The present plaintiff filed Suit No. 118 of 1910 against some of the defendants to the mortgage suit for possession of certain Survey Numbers which were in the possession of those defendants. To that suit the present defendants Nos. 2 and 3 were joined as parties, but they had nothing to do with the lands then in suit. In that suit it was found that the plaintiff was not a Benamidar for the original mortgagee and decree-holder, and that the lands then in suit were covered by the sale certificate. Accordingly a decree was passed in his favour for possession of the lands, and that was upheld by both the Appellate Courts in appeals preferred by the defendants in that case who were in possession of the lands then in suit. The plaintiff filed the present suit in 1914 against defendants Nos. 2 and 3, alleging that the 1st defendant who was the tenant of defendants Nos. 2 and 3 was really in occupation of the land in suit at the date when he recovered possession in 1903 under the sale certificate and that subsequently he had transferred possession wrongfully to defendants Nos. 2 and 3. Defendant No. 1 did not claim any interest in the property, and defendants Nos. 2 and 3 contended that the land in suit was not included in the sale certificate, that it was a Khoti Kulargi land, that the plaintiff was a Benamidar for the original decree-holder and that the suit was barred under Order II, rule 2, by the previous Suit No. 118 of 1910. The trial Court came to the conclusion that the plaintiff was not a Benamidar and that he was entitled to recover possession of the lands in suit, as the terms of the sale certificate were sufficient to convey the lands to the plaintiff. The objection based on rule 2 of Order II of the Code of Civil Procedure was overruled, with the result that a decree was passed in favour of the plaintiff. The defendants Nos. 2 and 3 appealed to the District Court. That Court came to the conclusion that the plaintiff was a Benamidar for the original decree holder, that the latter was a necessary party to the suit, and that the present suit was not maintainable. The learned District Judge accordingly dismissed the plaintiff's suit with costs throughout. The plaintiff has appealed to this Court.

The appeal has been argued before us on the footing that the plaintiff is a Benamidar for the original mortgagee and the decree-holder, as found by the lower Appellate Court. It is also now common ground between the parties that the land in suit, though not expressly mentioned in the sale certificate, is included therein, and that the purchaser has a title under the sale certificate to the land in suit as he has to the two-anna Takshim.

The first question that arises in this appeal is whether the lower Appellate Court is right in holding that the original mortgagee was a necessary party to the suit and that in his absence the plaintiff could not maintain the suit. It is clear, in my opinion, that the original mortgagee, for whom the plaintiff is supposed to have purchased the property at the Court sale, is not a necessary party and that the plaintiff, though a Benamidar, can sue in his own name to recover the property vested in him as a Benamidar.

The judgment in Gur Narayan v. Sheo Lal Singh (1) is a clear authority in favour of this view. Their Lordships observe at page 9* of the report that "so long, therefore, as a Benami transaction does not contravene the provisions of the law, the Courts are bound to give it effect. As already observed, the Benamidar has no beneficial interest in the property or business that stands in his name; he represents, in fact, the real owner, and so far as their relative legal position is concerned he is a mere trustee for him. Their Lordships find it difficult to understand why, in such circumstances, an action cannot be maintained in the name of the Benamidar in respect of the property, although the beneficial owner is no party to it. The bulk of judicial opinion in India is in favour of the proposition that in a proceeding by or against the Benamidar, the person beneficially entitled is fully affected by the rules of res judicata. With this view their Lordships concur. It is open to the latter to apply to be joined in the action; but whether he is made a party or not, a proceeding by or against his representative in its ultimate result is fully binding on him." This was a case of a private Benami purchaser. But, in my opinion, it makes no difference that in the present case the plaintiff is a purchaser at a Court sale. In the case of Ravji Appaji v. Mahadev Bapuji (2) Mr. Justice Ranade, after reviewing the various reported cases, summed up as follows:—"This review of the authorities shows clearly that appellant No. 1 as benami purchaser had full right to bring the suit. If the true owner holds back, a decree against the Benamidar owner would bind him as res judicata. The present suit was, therefore, properly instituted. The addition of appellant No. 2's name made no difference in the character of the suit." This was said with reference to a case in which the plaintiff was a purchaser at a Court sale.

It is urged, however, on behalf of the respondents that this rule holds good so long as the Benami transaction does not contravene the provisions of the law and that in the present case the provisions of section 294 of the Code of 1882 have been contravened, in so far as the decree-holder did not obtain any leave to bid for or purchase the property. It seems to me that the omission on the part of the mortgagee to obtain such a leave does not render the purchase by the Benamidar invalid or unlawful. It is clear that so far as the apparent title of the Benamidar is concerned, the sale, when it has been confirmed, has the effect of vesting the property in the purchaser and that under section 66 of the present Code of Civil Procedure and the corresponding provisions of the Code of 1882 even the real owner cannot maintain a suit against the Court purchaser. Further, section 294 of the Code of 1882 and the corresponding provisions in the present Code show that the omission on the part of the decree holder to obtain the necessary leave has not the effect of rendering the Benami purchase void; but such a purchase is liable to be set aside. It is an admitted fact in this case that none of the defendants in the mortgage suit applied under section 294, paragraph 3, to have the sale set aside. The application for setting aside a sale under that paragraph could have been made within the period prescribed by the law of limitation. No such application was made, and having regard to the fact that the original mortgagors were all brothers and that some of the defendants, who were parties to the suit of 1910, had specifically raised the point that the plaintiff was a Benamidar for the original decree holder, it cannot be said that the defendants were really ignorant of any fact which could have prevented them from making a proper application for setting aside the sale. There is no allegation in the present case that the defendants were ignorant of the real nature of the purchase by the plaintiff during all the time preceding the present suit. The sale certificate, therefore, must be taken as a valid certificate giving the plaintiff a title to the land in suit which he is entitled to enforce.

(1) 49 Ind. Cas. 1; 46 I. A. 1 at p. 9; 17 A. L. J. 66; 36 M. L. J. 68; 9 L. W. 335; 23 C. W. N. 521; 1 U. P. L. R. (P. C.); 1 46 C. 566; 12 Bur. L. T. 122.

*Page of 46 I. A.—Ed.

(2) 22 B. 672 at p. 679; 11 Ind. Dec. (N. s.) 1020.

It is further urged that though the present defendants Nos. 2 and 3 may not be in a position to have this sale set aside by a proper application under paragraph 3 of section 294 or under the corresponding provisions in the present Code on account of the bar of limitation, it is open to them to plead by way of defence that the title of the plaintiff is vitiated by fraud. In support of this contention reliance is placed upon Rangnath Sakharam v. Govind Narasinv (3) and Minalal Shadiram v. Kharsetji Jivaji (4). It is not necessary in this case to express any opinion as to whether such a plea could be raised by way of defence, though any suit based on that ground would be time barred. Assuming in favour of the defendants that such a defence is open to them, it seems to me that on the merits that defence must fail. In the first place, no such plea of fraud was raised in the written statement; and the only fraud suggested in the argument before us is that the property which was roughly valued at Rs. 1,500 fetched only Rs. 1,200 at the Court sale. In my opinion this is no fraud whatever. In the first place there is nothing to show that the property was really worth Rs. 1,500: it only shows that in execution proceedings the Court had estimated the value at that figure, and the difference between the estimated value and the price actually realized is not so great as to indicate any kind of fraud on the part of the decree-holder or any other person. In connection with this point the learned Pleader for the respondents relied upon the case of Thathu Naick v. Kondu Reddi (5). The facts of that case were quite different, and I do not see how that case could be treated as an authority in favour of the view that in the present case the fact of the property having fetched Rs. 300 less than its estimated value amounts to fraud.

It is urged in support of the decree of the lower Appellate Court on behalf of the respondents that the present suit is barred under rule 2 of Order II. The contention is that the plaintiff should have included in the suit of 1910 his claim for the possession of all the properties to which he acquired a title under the sale certificate and that if he failed to do so, his present suit would be barred. It is urged that the plaintiff having omitted to sue in respect of the property now in suit in 1910, he cannot now sue in respect thereof. The question is whether the cause of action in the present suit is the same as that in the previous suit. Several cases have been cited in the argument in connection with this point; but I do not consider it necessary to refer to these cases. The point, it seems to me, must be decided with reference to the facts of this case. It is clear that the cause of action in the present suit cannot be treated as the same as that in the previous suit. The plaintiff no doubt acquired a title to several properties under a general description of the Khoti Khasgi lands under one and the same sale certificate. But his cause of action in respect of the lands in the possession of different persons cannot be treated as the same. It was open to him to have sued the several defendants in possession of the different lands including the present defendants in the suit of 1910; but I do not think that the plaintiff was bound to do so. The property in this suit is different. The parties in possession sued now are different, and the cause of action alleged is also different. For the purposes of this point, however, I assume that the cause of action is simply that the defendants have withheld possession from him although he is entitled thereto under the sale certificate, and to leave out of consideration the special allegations which the plaintiff has made. With regard to these special allegations as to the land being in the possession of defendant No. 1 and the possession having been subsequently transferred by defendant No. 1 to defendants Nos. 2 and 3, the trial Court found in favour of the plaintiff and the Appellate Court does not seem to me to have recorded any specific finding on that point. In the view I take of the case, I consider this allegation to be immaterial and it is not necessary to have any finding on that question. Assuming that there was no intervention of defendant No. 1 and the position of defendants Nos. 2 and 3 was throughout as I have stated it, I think that the cause of action would not be the same as that in the suit of 1910 in which different properties were involved and different defendants were in possession of the properties in that suit. The evidence in the present case may be similar, but it cannot be said to be identical. Besides the plea raised by the defendants that the land in suit is Kulargi land shows that the evidence in this suit must be different. Taking the meaning of the expression 'cause of action' most favourable to the defendants' contention, I am satisfied that the cause of action in the present case is not the same as that in the suit of 1910 and that rule 2 of Order II presents no bar to the maintainability of the present suit.

(3) 28 B. 639; 6 Bom. L. R. 592.
(4) 30 B. 395; 8 Bom. L. R. 296.

(5) 1 Ind. Cas. 221; 32 M. 242; 5 M. L. T. 248.

It remains only to notice the point which has been made by the lower Appellate Court but which has not been pressed before us. The learned Judge has held, relying on Sadashiv v. Narayan (6), that the proper remedy of the plaintiff is not a suit but an application in execution under section 47 of the Code of Civil Procedure. That was, however, a case in which the decree-holder himself was the purchaser. The view taken in that case has not been applied to a case in which the decree holder himself is not the purchaser but where a third person has purchased Benami for him. For the purposes of procedure the auction-purchaser, even though a Benamidar for the decree-holder, is a third party. The ruling in Sadashiv v. Narayan (6) really can apply to a case where the decree-holder himself is the purchaser at the Court sale. The present suit is a suit by an auction-purchaser, who is not the decree-holder for the purposes of procedure and who is, therefore, entitled to sue to recover possession of the property which he has purchased.

In my opinion, therefore, this appeal should be allowed, the decree of the lower Appellate Court reversed and that of the trial Court restored with costs here and in the lower Appellate Court on defendants Nos. 2 and 3.

HAYWARD, J.—I concur. I have no doubt that the Benamidar was entitled to sue. The certificate of sale was good title until set aside in regular proceedings. The general proposition of law has clearly been wrongly stated by the lower Appellate Court. It would be sufficient to refer to the Privy Council case of Gur Narayan v. Sheo Lal Singh (1). But it has been argued that the Benamidar had no permission to bid at the sale and that it was, therefore, a nullity.

But no steps were taken to avoid the sale as they might have been in execution on that account, nor was it alleged in the written statement that there was any fraud. It was not even alleged in the first Appeal Court. It has, as a final resource, been alleged here, but it has, in my opinion, not been established. It would appear to me, therefore, no good reason for treating the sale as a nullity, whether or no it was open to the defence to raise the plea of fraud in view of the provisions of Article 166 of the Schedule of the Indian Limitation Act.

It has been somewhat difficult to follow the line of reasoning in the remainder of the judgment of the first Appeal Court. The learned Judge devoted a material part of his judgment to the proposition, not raised as an issue, that the real remedy for recovering possession was by execution and not by way of suit, and he held that there was no real possession recovered in execution and apparently (the point was not clearly stated) that there was no remedy left by suit. But he did not explain precisely why even in default of recovery of possession in execution there should not have been a regular suit to recover possession upon the title-deed, that is to say, the certificate of sale of the Court.

(6) 11 Ind Cas. 987; 35 B. 452; 13 Bom. L. R. 661.

The learned Judge held, on the other hand, on the issue raised that there was no bar to the suit under Order II, rule 2. of the First Schedule of the Civil Procedure Code. But he has not given, so far as it would appear from the judgment, any reasons for that conclusion. It would appear to me, however, to have been correct. For he has found as a fact that the previous suit was to recover possession of different properties from different defendants. If that were so, it was, in my opinion, clear that recourse could not be had to Order II, rule 2, of the First Schedule of the Civil Procedure Code. My detailed reasons for holding this need not be further stated as they have already been given in the case of Sonu Khushal Khadake v. Bohinibai Krishna (7).

It seems to me, therefore, that we ought to restore the decree of the trial Court and reverse that of the first Appeal Court.

Appeal allowed.

(7) 33 Ind. Cas. 950; 40 B. 351 at p. 357; 18 Bom. L. R. 545.

OUDH JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 454 OF 1918.

January 12, 1920.

Present:—Mr. Lindsay, J. C.

Lala GANESH PRASAD—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

BISHWA NATH—DEFENDANT—RESPONDENT.

Construction of document—Shankalap, grant by way of—Grantor reserving no right to herself—Property to be held bila lagan with heritable and transferable rights—Under-proprietary rights.

Where a deed of grant declared that the grant was made by way of shankalap, that after the date of the deed the grantor was to have no sort of right or claim to the granted property, and that the grantee was to hold it for ever bila lagani with heritable and transferable rights:

Held, that the deed conferred under-proprietary rights on the grantee. [p. 356, col. 2; p. 357, col. 1.]

Appeal from the decree of the District Judge, Lucknow, dated the 14th September 1918, upholding that of the Subordinate Judge, Unao, dated the 12th March 1918.

Mr. H. K. Ghosh for Mr. A. P. Sen and Chaudhri Ram Bharose Lal, for the Appellant.

Babu Bisheshwar Nath Srivastava, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—The plaintiff, who is the appellant here, brought a suit in the Court of the Subordinate Judge of Unao for the purpose of obtaining a declaration that the defendant Bishwa Nath had no proprietary or under proprietary right in an area of 110 bighas 10 biswas situated in Mauza Niwarna Taraf Budhu.

It appears that this village belonged at one time to Babu Ram Sahae, who died on the 26th of July 1890 leaving a widow Musammat Krishna Dei. This lady got possession of the village and remained in possession up till the time of her death in December 1897. While she was still alive, two suits were brought against her by Bisheshwar Prasad and Ram Charan for a declaration that they were the nearest reversioners to Babu Ram Sahae and that they would be entitled to succeed on the death of the widow. These suits were decreed. After the death of Krishna Dei in December 1897 one Musammat Ram Dei, who was the widow of an elder brother of Ram Sahae, took possession of Ram Sahae's estate including this village Niwarna. Suits in ejectment were then brought by Bisheshwar Prasad and Ram Charan, who eventually succeeded in obtaining possession of the property. Bisheshwar Prasad and Ram Charan died and were succeeded by their sons Ganesh Prasad and Jamuna Prasad. These two men effected a partition of the property, in the course of which the village of Niwarna fell to the share of Ganesh Prasad, who is the plaintiff in the present suit.

It is proved that the defendant Bishwa Nath has been in possession of the area in dispute for a very long time. His case was that the lands had been granted to his father Gurdin Lal partly by Ram Sahae and partly by the widow Krishna Dei. In support of this plea he produced a document (Exhibit A 1), being a deed of gift executed on the 10th of September 1891 by Musammat Krishna Dei. In this document the lady, after reciting that her husband had made a gift by way of shankalap to Gardin Lal of three separate areas, namely, 48 bighas of sir matahti, 22 bighas 6 biswas grove land, and 14 bighas 9 biswas of muafi lands, went on to declare that she also was giving him a shankalap grant of 26 bighas of land "bila lagani" In this document she recorded that she was confirming both the shankalap grants. In the last clause of the document it was declared that the lady had drawn up the deed as a shankalap-nama. There appears to be no doubt that mutation was effected in favour of Gardin Lal on the strength of this document and it is proved that ever since Gardin, and after him the present defendant, has been in possession of the lands in dispute. In the year 1913 the present plaintiff brought a suit in the Revenue Court for resumption of the area now in question The case for the plaintiff was that the lands were held rent-free and were liable to resumption under Chapter VIIA of the Oudh Rent Act. The defendant Bishwa Nath resisted the claim and set up proprietary rights. The Revenue Court directed the plaintiff to the Civil Court for the purpose of obtaining a declaration that the defendant had neither proprietary nor under proprietary rights. In this way the present suit for declaration came to be filed on the 19th of June 1917. Shortly put, the case for the plaintiff is that the defendant is nothing more than a tenant holding land rent free. Various pleas were raised by way of defence and among others the plea of ownership. The case for the defendant was that he was the owner of the property in dispute.

The learned Judge of the Court below has come to the conclusion that whatever view may be taken of the origin of the title of the defendant to these lands, he has by adverse possession acquired a title as full owner. As a result of this finding the plaintiff's claim was dismissed in toto. The learned Judge was also of opinion that the suit was barred by limitation.

The finding of the learned District Judge on the question of adverse possesion has been attacked here in appeal, and the first matter to be considered is whether the judgment is correct in this respect. If it is not, then the plaintiff was not liable to have his suit dismissed in its entirety, unless indeed it can be shown that it was barred by the rule of limitation.

I have already mentioned that there can be no dispute that the lands to which this suit relates have been in the possession of the defendant and his father since at least the year 1892. It is also to be borne in mind that the widow Krishna Dei died in the year 1897 and that as against the present plaintiff adverse possession could only begin to run from the date of the lady's death. It is proved by a reference to the village papers that the name of the defendant has been continuously recorded for a very long period as a "shankalapdar bila lagan." The first entry to this effect appears in the khewat of the year 1303 Fasli, corresponding to 1895-1896. Copies of the khewats of the years 1892 to 1894 were produced in the Court below, which show that the name of the defendant's father was not recorded in those years. From 1303 Fasli onwards, however, there is a continuous record of the name of the defendant's father or the defendant himself, and the peculiar thing to be noticed is that the entry is made in what is called Register No. 3, that is to say, the register of proprietary interests. It is this fact which is mainly relied upon by the defendant for the purpose of showing that he has full proprietary title to the lands in dispute. As against this the plaintiff has appealed to a document (Exhibit 15), which is a copy of an application made by the defendant to the Revenue Court on the 23rd of July 1906 for the purpose of having mutation effected in his favour after his father's death. In column 7 of that application it was necessary for the defendant to state the name of the owner of the mahal in case there was any interest which had to be recorded in the registers prepared under clauses (b) and (c) of section 32 of the Land Revenue Act. These registers relate to under-proprietary tenures. The defendant admittedly filled in this column and recorded that Jamuna Prasad and Ganesh Prasad Talukdars were the owners of the mahal. According to the plaintiff's case this was an admission of his proprietary title to the property in dispute, and consequently the defendant is not in a position to say that he was holding himself out as the proprietor of the area in question. It is, however, to be observed that notwithstanding the form in which this application for mutation was made, the defendant's name was entered in the proprietary khewat (Register No. 3). The learned Judge of the Court below has taken into consideration all these circumstances and also taken into consideration the language of the deed of gift which was executed in favour of Gurdin Lal by the widow Krishna Dei and he has come to the conclusion, therefore, that there was a transfer of full proprietary interest made to Gurdin Lal and that ever since he has been claiming full proprietary rights in the property. I may say at once that I agree with the finding of the learned Judge that the defendant has been in possession adversely to the plaintiff. But after a careful consideration of all the evidence I am not prepared to agree with him that the defendant or his predecessor was setting up a full proprietary title to this area of $110\frac{1}{2}$ bighas. It cannot, I think, be doubted that at the time when Krishna Dei died and the plaintiff became entitled to possession, the defendant's father was in possession and his name was recorded in the revenue registers. I agree with the learned Judge that the plaintiff must be taken to have had notice of the defendant's possession and also of the nature of the possession, regard being had to the entries in the revenue papers. The real matter in issue is what was the nature of the defendant's possession. The plaintiff claims that he is not bound by the deed of gift which was executed in favour of Gurdin Lal by the widow Krishna Dei. That, however, is not the point. Although the deed may not be binding upon the plaintiff, nevertheless it is apparent that the defendant's possession had its origin in this deed and it is, therefore, permissible to refer to the language of the document for the purpose of determining what was the nature of the possession which was conferred by the deed. I have already referred briefly to the contents of this document (Exhibit A1). Gurdin Lal, the defendant's father, was a Brahman and a priest in the family of Ram Sahae and the deed of gift executed by the widow sets out that he had been a faithful servant of herself and her husband. In the deed she clearly sets out that the grant had been made by her husband on account of Gurdin Lal's services as the family priest, and she describes the nature of the gift made by her husband by saying that it was a grant in shankalap. Similarly, when she comes to describe the grant which she was making herself, she describes it as a shankalap grant. Prima facie, therefore, this document purports to confer upon Gurdin Lal the interest of a shankalapdar. Shankalap tenure is well-known in Oudh and its nature and incidents are set out in Sykes' Compendium of Taluqdari Law. The tenure is there described as a well-known under-proprietary tenure, and I have never before heard the proposition advanced that a grant in shankalap was a grant of a full proprietary estate. The learned Counsel for the respondent admits that he cannot refer me to any authority or decision to the effect that a shankalap grant confers full proprietary rights. He argues, however, that the word "shankalap" ought not to be interpreted in its strictly technical sense in construing this deed (Exhibit A1) executed by Krishna Dei. According to his interpretation and to the interpretation of the learned Judge, the grant was a grant of a full proprietary interest because the lady declared that after the date of the deed she was to have no sort of right or claim to the property. The transferee was to hold it for ever with heritable and transferable rights. Language of this description, however, is just as appropriate to the case of a grant of an under-proprietary tenure as it is to the case of a grant of proprietary rights; and I do not think that merely because the lady reserves to herself no rights in the property after the making of the grant, it necessarily follows that it must be construed as a transfer of the full title to the property. Effect must be given, so far as is possible, to every word in the document, and I cannot ignore the use of the word "shankalap" and the recital of the lady to the effect that the gifts made by her husband and herself to the Brahman Gurdin Lal were made by way of reward for his faithful services as the family priest. Again the use of the words "bila lagani" in the document is a matter of some importance. The learned Judge of the Court below thought that the word "lagan" referred to the Government revenue and he cited a judgment of this Court in which the word "lagan" had been similarly interpreted; but in the case to which he is referring the words were "lagan sarkari" which obviously could mean nothing else than the Government revenue. To my mind the use of these words "bila lagani" is significant. If the intention was to grant the entire proprietary right in the property, there would have been no necessity for using these words, for transfer of full proprietary rights would necessarily imply that no rent was to be demanded of the transferee.

With regard to the entries in the revenue papers, I have already pointed out that the names of the defendant and his father have been continuously recorded in proprietary khewat. At the same time the language of the entry does not necessarily justify the position now taken up by the defendant, to the effect that he and his father have all along been asserting full proprietary rights. In the khewat entry for 1303 Fasli, Gurdin Lal was shown as holding 110 bighas and 10 biswas "bazarie shankalap," and the entry has continued in this form down to the present time. Further as I have pointed out, there is the document Exhibit 15, a copy of the application for mutation made by the defendant after his father's death. The entry in column No. 7 of that document speaks for itself and is to my mind proof that the defendant was conscious of the fact that he was the owner of an under-proprietary interest and of nothing more. If his case was that he was the full owner of the property, then there was no necessity for his making any entry in column No. 7. It has been suggested here that the entry was made by mistake, but this suggestion cannot be entertained. The defendant did not go into the witness-box to explain how he came to make this entry and I am not, therefore, prepared to assume in his favour that the entry was a mistake. In short all the documentary evidence before me points to the conclusion that the defendant and his father before him were in adverse possession of the property in suit under a claim to hold as shankalapdars, and that being so, the proper conclusion seems to me to be that the title which has thus been acquired by adverse possession is an under-proprietary title. I may also remark here that the defendant has produced no evidence to show that he has ever paid the Government revenue in respect of the property in suit. The presumption must be that the revenue has been paid by the plaintiff talukdar. For these reasons I hold that the defendant has shown himself to be an under proprietor only.

In this view the order of the learned Judge dismissing the claim in toto cannot be supported. If the defendant has acquired an under proprietary title by adverse possession, the proprietary title of the plaintiff still remains; and as regards limitation, the suit for declaration must be deemed to be within time in so far as it relates to the question of proprietary title. In the year 1913 when the plaintiff filed his case in the Revenue Court under Chapter VIIA of the Oudh Rent Act, the defendant put forward a claim to proprietary rights and consequently a cause of action for a declaration regarding the proprietary right of the plaintiff accrued to him within six years from the date of the suit. The appeal must, therefore, be allowed in part and the decree of the Court below must be modified. The plaintiff will be given a decree that the defendant has no proprietary right in the property in suit. I leave the parties to bear their own costs.

Appeal partly allowed.

RAMANATHAN CHETTIAR v. MUTHIAH CHETTY.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

CIVIL APPEAL No. 97 OF 1917.

December 3, 1919.

Present:—Sir Abdur Rahim, KT., Offg. Chief Justice, and Justice Sir William Ayling, KT.

M. P. M. R. M. N. RAMANATHAN CHETTIAR—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

K. R. S. V. MUTHIAH CHETTY AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS AND LEGAL REPRESENTATIVES OF DEFENDANT No. 2—RESPONDENTS.

Accounts, suit for, by minor against agent appointed by guardian, maintainability of—Arbitrators, settlement by, when liable to be re-opened—Fraud, proof of.

An agent appointed by the guardian of a minor is not liable to account to the minor for his acts as an agent on the principle applicable to trustees or persons intermeddling with the trust estate. The rule laid down with respect to trustees de son tort cannot be extended to persons in the position of agents of the guardian of a minor. [p. 359, col. 2.]

A settlement made by arbitrators cannot be re-opened except on the ground of fraud. [p. 360, col. 1.]

Appeal against the decree of the Court of the Temporary Subordinate Judge at Sivaganga, in Ordinary Suit No. 98 of 1914.

FACTS appear from the judgment.

The Hon'ble Mr. S. Srinivasa Ayangar, Advocate General (with him Mr. T. V. Muthukrishna Iyer), for the Appellant.—The suit lies on behalf of the minors. The 1st and 2nd defendants, agents appointed by the guardians of the minor plaintiffs, are in the position of trustees de son tort. Having meddled with the minor's estates, they are in a position of accountability to the minors. See Barnes v. Addy (1), Mara v. Browne (2) and Barney, In re, Barney v. Barney (3).

In the present case defendants Nos. 1 and 2 are in possession of the minors' estate, and the liability to account attaches.

Messrs. K. V. Krishnaswami Iyer and C. A. Seshagiri Sastri, for the Respondents.—There is no analogy between the case of trustees and that of agents appointed by guardians. No authority has been shown by the other side for the position that such agents are in the position of trustees de son tort and it would be dangerous to make undue extensions of that doctrine. In Chidambaram Chetti v. Pichappa Chetty (4) it was laid down that an agent appointed by an administrator cannot be proceeded against by the person entitled to the estate on the contract of agency. The principle applies to agents appointed by the guardians of minors. The agent is liable only to his principal. The appointors of these agents have not been impleaded in this case and any decree that might be passed would not reach them.

(1) (1874) 9 Ch. App. 244; 43 L. J. Ch. 513; 30 L. T. 4; 22 W. R. 505

(2) (1886) 1 Ch. D. 199; 65 L. J. Ch. 225; 73 L. T. 639; 44 W. R. 330.

(3) (1892) 2 Ch. D. 265; 61 L. J. Ch. 555; 67 L. T. 28; 40 W. R. 637.

(4) 30 M. 243; 2 M. L. T. 326.

JUDGMENT.

ABDUR RAHIM, OFFG. C. J.—There were two brothers belonging to the Nattukottai Chetty community, namely, Narayana Chettiar and Muthiah Chettiar. The plaintiff is the son of the former and defendants Nos. 4 to 6 are sons of the latter. The two brothers carried on money-lending business in the name of M. P. M. R. M. They had business in various places. Narayana Chettiar died fifteen years ago, and Muthiah Chettiar died about 10 years previous to the suit. At the time of the latter's death, plaintiff and defendants Nos. 4 to 6 were all minors and the family was undivided. The 1st defendant in the suit is maternal uncle of defendants Nos. 4 to 6. He was appointed as agent by the mother of these defendants to manage and look after their share in the family property and the business. The 2nd defendant, who is the maternal uncle of the plaintiff, was similarly appointed by the plaintiff's mother. The suit was instituted by the plaintiff, who attained majority in 1911, for a decree directing defendants Nos. 1 and 2 to render an account to him of their management of the affairs of the family of the plaintiff and the defendants during his minority and for other reliefs.

The first question that arises is, whether the suit is maintainable. It is to be noted that the mothers of plaintiff and defendants Nos. 4 to 6, who appointed defendants Nos. 1 and 2 as agents, have not been made parties. It is contended by the learned Advocate General on behalf of the appellant (plaintiff) that defendants Nos. 1 and 2 must be treated as trustees de son tort and as such liable to account to the plaintiff.

His argument is that the guardians of the plaintiff and defendants Nos. 4 to 6 occupied the position of trustees and defendants Nos. 1 and 2, having intermeddled with the estate of the minor and having received the properties of the minor, are liable to account to him. He has cited a number of rulings, but it is sufficient to point out that all those rulings relate to the liability either of trustees or of persons accountable as trustees for intermeddling or for being connected with breaches of trust of the trust property. The leading authority on the point is the case of Barnes v. Addy (1). The other cases cited by the Advocate-General, Mara v. Browne (2) and Barney, In re, Barney v. Barney (3), simply follow the principle laid down in that case at page 251. There Lord Selborne states the principle in these words:—"Those who create a trust clothe the trustee with a legal power and control over the trust property imposing on him a corresponding responsibility. That responsibility may no doubt be extended in equity to others who are not properly trustees, if they are found either making themselves trustees de son tort or actually participating in any fraudulent conduct of the trustees to the injury of the cestui que trust. But, on the other hand, strangers are not to be made constructive trustees, merely because they act as the agents of the trustees in transactions within their legal powers, transactions, perhaps of which a Court of Equity may disapprove, unless those agents receive and become chargeable with some part of the trust property, or unless they assist with knowledge in a dishonest and fraudulent design on the part of the trustees. Those are the principles, as it seems to me, which he must bear in mind in dealing with the facts of this case. * * * But, on the other hand, if persons dealing honestly as agents are at liberty to rely on the legal power of the trustees, and are not to have the character of trustees constructively imposed upon them, then the transactions of mankind can safely be carried through and I apprehend those who create trusts do expressly intend, in the absence of fraud and dishonesty, to exonerate such agents of all classes from the responsibilities which are expressly incumbent, by reason of the fiduciary relation, upon the trustees." And Lord Justice James added: "I have long thought, and more than once expressed my opinion from this seat, that this Court has, in some cases, gone to the very verge of justice in making good to cestui que trust the consequences of the breaches of trust of their trustees at the expense of persons perfectly honest but who have been, in some more or less degree, injudicious. I do not think it is for the good of cestui que trust or the good of the world that those cases should be extended."

The learned Advocate-General admitted that there is no authority for the proposition that an agent appointed by the guardian of a minor is liable to account to the minor as if he was a trustee de son tort because he received property belonging to the minor. On the other hand, there is a ruling of this Court which seems to be opposed to such a proposition, Chidambaram Chetti v. Fichappa Chetty (4). There it was held that an agent appointed by the administrator of an estate as such cannot be proceeded against on such contract of agency by the person entitled to the estate, and it makes no difference that the administrator obtained the grant as the attorney of the mother and guardian of the person entitled.

The learned Advocate General, however, drew our attention to a passage in the judgment to the effect that no claim was made against the defendant on the ground of his possession of property belonging to the plaintiff, and he argued that where such an agent is in possession of the property, the law makes a difference. But we do not think that, in the absence of any clear authority, it would be safe to hold that an agent appointed by the guardian of the minor is liable to account to the minor for his acts as an agent on the principle applicable to trustees or persons intermeddling with the trust estate. If there were any force in the contention of the appellant, one might reasonably expect that there would have been some authority forthcoming in support of it. It would be unsafe to extend the rule laid down with respect to trustees de son tort to the persons in the position of agents of the guardian of the minor. Under the ordinary law an agent is liable to the principal. The state of accounts between an agent and a principal and the liabilities of the agent to the principal would be on a very different footing from the account which a trustee or a person intermeddling with the trust estate has to render to the cestui que trust. Besides, as mentioned above, in this case the mothers, who appointed defendants Nos. 1 and 2 as agents, have not been made parties and any decree in this case would not exempt the agents from their liability to their principals. The conclusion of the learned Subordinate Judge on this point is right.

The 2nd point relates to a sum of Rs. 14,000 and odd which the plaintiff paid to the 1st defendant on behalf of defendants Nos. 4 to 6. The Subordinate Judge has found that this was settled by arbitration and the question cannot be re opened. On the other hand, the case of the plaintiff is that it is a matter of stated and settled accounts and if he is able to show errors in the account, he is entitled to re open the question. Exhibit III makes it clear that the settlement was made by arbitrators or mediators. Such a settlement is not liable to be re-opened, except on the ground of fraud which is not alleged in this case.

The third point arises under the 2nd issue. Plaintiff claims to recover from the 1st defendant a certain book of account called Oorkanakku. The Subordinate Judge upon the evidence found that the 1st defendant was not in possession of the account. Besides that, it is doubtful, if the plaintiff is not entitled to ask the 1st defendant to render an account to him, that he can ask him to hand over any account.

The appeal fails on all the points and must be dismissed with costs.

AYLING, J.—I agree.

M. C. P.

Appeal dismissed.

NAGPUR JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

FIRST CIVIL APPEAL No. 94 OF 1919.

February 4, 1920.

Present:—Sir Henry Drake-Brockman, KT., J. C., and Mr. Kotval, A. J. C.

BALDEOPRASAD—APPELLANT

versus

R. S. Seth GHASIRAM—RESPONDENT.

Court Fees Act (VII of 1870), s. 7 (iv) (c), Sch. II, Art 17 (3)—Suit to set aside decree on ground of fraud, nature of—Court-fee payable.

A suit to set aside a decree on the ground of fraud falls under sub-clause (c of clause (iv) of section 7 of the Court Fees Act and ad valorem Court-fees must be paid on the value set on the claim for purposes of jurisdiction. [p. 361, col. 1.]

Appeal against the decree of the Additional District Judge, Narsinghpur, dated the 8th December 1919.

Mr. Atmaram Bhagwant, for the Appellant.

Mr. D. T. Mangalmurti, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—This is an appeal from an order rejecting a plaint under clause (c), rule 11, Order VII, 1st Schedule, Civil Procedure Code.

The relief claimed in paragraph 15 of the plaint is "that the decree absolute obtained by defendant No. 1 on 25th April 1916 be set aside on the ground of fraud and declared null and void against the plaintiff."

The plaint is written upon a ten-rupees stamp paper. The defendants raised a preliminary objection to the sufficiency of the stamp. The lower Court held that the suit was governed by clause (iv) (c), section 7 of the Court Fees Act, and directed ad valorem Court fee to be paid on the value set upon the claim by the plaintiff for purposes of jurisdiction. The plaintiff failed to supply the requisite stamp and the plaint was in consequence rejected.

It is urged that the suit is governed by clause (3), Article 17, Schedule II, Court Fees Act, which refers to a plaint in a suit "to obtain a declaratory decree where no consequential relief is prayed." The question for decision is whether the decree sought to be obtained is purely a declaratory one or whether consequential relief is also asked or involved in the suit.

The cases relied on by the appellant are Karam Khan v. Daryai Singh (1), Shrimant Sagajirao v. Smith (2) and Zinnatunnessa Khatun v. Girindra Nath Mukerjee (3). In Zinnatunnessa Khatun v. Girindra Nath Mukerjee (3) and Shrimant Sagajirao v. Smith (2) there was not as a matter of fact any prayer for setting aside the decree. The head-note

(1) 5 A. 331; A. W. N. (1883) 55; 3 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 317.

(2) 20 B. 736; 10 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 1061.

(3) 30 C. 788.

in the latter case appears to be incorrect. It appears from the judgment at page 741 that the only prayer was that the decree may be declared null and void. At page 742 it is observed:—

"The suit is analogous to one under section 39 of the Specific Relief Act (I of 1877) merely to have the decree adjudged void; leaving it to the Subordinate Judge to do what he likes with his decree if he so adjudges it void."

In the present case the decree is sought to be set aside so that nothing will be left to be done by the Court passing it. In Karam Khan v. Daryai Singh (1) a suit for the cancellation of a mortgage deed was held to be in the nature of a simple declaratory suit. This case has been dissented from in Samiya Mavali v. Minammal (4) and Parvatibai v. Vishvanath (5). In the case last mentioned a prayer for an order to have a sale-deed cancelled was held to be a prayer for a relief as distinguished from a mere declaration which is not a relief. In the present case both a declaration and a relief are sought: declaration that the decree is null and void and relief that the decree be set aside. In Deokali Koer v. Kedar Nath (6) it was held that a suit to set aside a decree is not a suit for a declaration within the meaning of section 42 of the Specific Relief Act for which alone a Court-fee of Rs. 10 is sufficient. In Arunachalam Chetty v. Rangasawmy Pillai (7) it was held by a Full Bench that a suit for a declaration that a decree passed against the plaintiff is not binding on him is, although it asks for a mere declaration, nonetheless a suit for a declaratory decree with consequential relief within the meaning of clause (iv) (c) of section 7, Court Fees Act.

We are of opinion that a prayer to set aside a decree is not of a declaratory nature and that the present suit is one for both a declaration and consequential relief and is governed by clause (iv) (c) of section 7, Court Fees Act. Ad valorem Court-fees should, therefore, have been paid. The plaint was rightly rejected. This appeal is dismissed with costs. Pleader's fee Rs. 30.

Appeal dismissed.

(4) 23 M. 490; 10 M. L. J. 240; 8 Ind Dec. (N. S.) 744

(5) 29 B. 207; 6 Bom L R. 1125.

(6) 15 Ind Cas 427; 39 C 704; 16 C. W. N. 838.

(7) 28 Ind. Cas 79; 38 M. 922; 28 M. L. J. 118; 17 M. L T 154; (915) M. W. N. 118.

BOMBAY HIGH COURT.

APPEAL FROM ORDER No. 18 OF 1917.

August 25, 1919.

Present:—Mr. Justice Shah and Mr. Justice Hayward.

RUKMINIBAI KRISHNARAO TAMBVEKAR—APPELLANT

versus

LAXMIBAI NARAYAN TAMBVEKAR AND OTHERS—RESPONDENTS.

*Hindu Law—Gift—*Agrahar gift, nature of—Condition restricting residence, whether enforceable—Public policy.

A religious gift (agrahar) to a Brahmin for his maintenance is a private and an absolute gift according to law, and is entirely distinguishable from a religious endowment in favour of a deity of a public character, and where such a gift imposes a condition restricting the residence of the donee, and there is no rule of Hindu Law necessitating the enforcement of such condition, the condition is opposed to public policy and has no legal effect [p. 363, col. 2; p. 364, col. 2; p. 365, col. 2; p. 366, cols. 1 & 2.]

Appeal from an order passed by the Assistant Judge at Satara, in Appeal No. 3 0 of 1914, reversing the decree passed by, and remanding the suit to, the Joint Subordinate Judge at Karad, in Civil Suit No. 139 of 1912.

Mr. G. N. Thakor, for the Appellant.

Mr. D. R. Satwardhan, for Respondent No. 1.

Mr. Nilkanth Atmaram, for Respondents Nos. 2 and 3.

Mr. J. R. Gharpure, for Respondent No. 6.

JUDGMENT.

SHAH, J.—The plaintiff in this case sued the defendants to recover a certain sum said to have been wrongfully withheld by defendant No. 10 and for a perpetual injunction against the defendants, restraining defendant No. 10 from receiving the dues and defendants Nos. 1 to 9 from paying the dues to her in respect of the property in suit. The relief was claimed on the footing that the plaintiff was entitled to the Inam rights in the property in suit under a conveyance in his favour, dated the 18th of September 1911, by one Ramkrishna, who traced his title to the said rights under a deed of gift in favour of his father, dated the 13th of October 1880. This deed of gift was passed by the members of the Tambvekar family. The gift was described as a 'religious Agrahar Inam.' The land and the house described in the deed were given by way of gift to the donee in these terms: "So you, your sons and grandsons and succeedig generations should enjoy the said land and house and ground, etc., according to the deed of gift, dated the 5th of the Sudha half of Shravan in the Shake year 1801, and should live in peace at the holy place of Markandeya, otherwise known as Monje Malkhed." The earlier informal deed of the Shake year 1801 (A. D. 1879) is not forthcoming. It is found by both the lower Courts that the conditions of the gift were the same as the conditions laid down in the document of the year 1799 A. D. executed by the members of the Tambvekar family in favour of several Brahmins in respect of different lands described in detail in that document.

The trial Court found that according to the conditions of the gift the donee was bound to live in the village and that the donee got a "limited interest, limited to specific purpose and liable to be defeated on Ambekar (the donee) leaving the village of Malkhed and going to reside elsewhere." It was found as a fact that Ambekar had left the village at the time when he conveyed the property in suit to the plaintiff, and that the plaintiff acquired no title as his vendor had no subsisting title at the time of the conveyance. The trial Court accordingly dismissed the plaintiff's suit.

The plaintiff appealed to the District Court, and the learned Assistant Judge, who heard the appeal, found that the donee was bound to fulfil the condition as to residence in the village, and that "Ambekar had to leave the village temporarily in search of maintenance on account of the hostile attitude of the Inamdars, that his absence from the village under those circumstances is insufficient to prove a positive breach of the conditions of the gift, that he was competent to nominate his successor according to the terms of the gift and that in making the transfer in plaintiff's favour, he (Ambekar) has substantially complied with the conditions imposed by the original donor." On the basis of this finding the lower Appellate Court reversed the decree of the trial Court and remanded the suit for a fresh decision.

The defendant No. 10 has appealed to this Court from the said order, and it is urged on her behalf in support of the appeal that the finding of the lower Appellate Court that there was a substantial compliance with the condition attached to the gift as to residence in the said village should not be accepted by this Court on the ground, first, that the point was not made in the trial Court, and, secondly, that it is in effect based on no evidence but is largely conjectural. On the other hand on behalf of the plaintiff it is urged not only that this finding should be accepted as binding in this appeal, but that the finding of the lower Courts that the condition as to residence is good in law and enforceable is erroneous.

The finding of the lower Appellate Court as to substantial compliance with the condition laid down in the deed of gift as to residence, assuming that such a condition is otherwise valid, seems to me to be open to the objections urged against the finding on behalf of the appellant; and if the decision of this appeal depended in any way on that finding, I could not have accepted it without a further inquiry.

The principal question of law, which has been argued and which requires a careful consideration, is the question whether the condition as to residence is valid. In order to appreciate the contentions on either side with reference to this condition, it will be convenient to set forth the important passages from the deed of gift of the year 1799, because it is now common ground that the conditions of the gift in favour of Ambekar in 1880 were the same as the conditions laid down in the earlier deed of gift in favour of several Brahmins. It is recited in this deed that originally the village of Malkhed was given in gift to the Tambvekar family by Gopalji Bhonsle in the year 1772 on the occasion of a solar eclipse. In the year 1799 the members of the Tambvekar family made a gift to several Brahmins, and we find the following recitals in that deed:—

"At that time our Vadil desired to build houses and give them to Brahmins in the name of God as Agrahar (gift). Therefore, houses were built at that place and you all Brahmins were installed and gifts of land were given to you to help you in your maintenance. Since then some changes have occurred on account of the management. In consequence of the same this writing is given to you for Vahivat."

Then after describing the names of the donees and the extent of the land given to each one of them and after referring to certain letters which were originally received by the Tambvekars and given over to the donees, it provides as follows:—

"In all fourteen letters were obtained by the Vadil in his name. I have given to you, all the Brahmins, these and this deed of gift passed by me and have established you; you and your descendants, i. e., sons and grandsons, etc, should enjoy the said lands and reside in the respective dwelling houses and perform the six-fold religious duties, viz., performance of the Sandhya worship at twilights and in the afternoon and take care of the Agrahar and live in peace....None of these persons (donees) should abandon his house and go to another place and enjoy his Vritti given to him in connection with the Agrahar from that place. In case any one of them wished to leave the said village and live elsewhere, he should substitute in his place a Brahmin equally learned and who has a large family and who is approved by all, and should hand over to him the house and the Vritti and pass to him a writing in his name and approved by all. We have given to you these houses and Vrittis of our free will and pleasure. You should, therefore, enjoy the same and remain in peace. If any one of you has to go out, (you can go) after having got nothing to do (with the Agrahar). If instead of acting in this manner any one through obstinacy live at another place and desire to enjoy the income of the Vritti in connection with the Agrahar relying upon his own strength or upon the strength of other persons, his conduct shall be considered an act of irreligiousness and the whole body of Brahmins residing at the Agrahar should appoint another Brahim who is learned and is a man of large family and hand over to him the house and the Vritti (of the man who may go) and pass to him a writing in the name of all the Brahmins and establish him. This Danpatra (i. e., deed of gift) is given having been approved by all. Nobody should cause any obstruction to this act of charity."

And then follow a number of verses pointing out to the successors of the donors the merit of preserving the gift and of not disturbing it in any way. It is an earnest appeal to the descendants of the donors to see that their act of charity was upheld by their successors. It is needless to quote any of these verses cited in the document pointing out the merit of allowing the gift to continue.

It is urged on behalf of the appellant that the condition as to residence in the village attaching to the gift has been explicitly mentioned in the document, that the gift must be taken to be subject to that condition and that the donees and their successors are bound to fulfil it. Both the lower Courts so far have decided in favour of the appellant's contention. On a careful consideration of the arguments urged on both sides with reference to this point, which is important and difficult, and the terms of the document, I have come to the conclusion that this Agrahar gift is a private gift to the donees and absolute gift according to law, and that the further provision as regards the residence in the same village is only a recommendation and an appeal to the religious conscience of the donees and their descendants, and that as a condition it is not valid and enforceable in law. The words of the gift are "you and your descendants, i.e., sons and grandsons, should enjoy the said land and reside in the respective dwelling houses," the corresponding words in Marathi being Tuhmi wa tumche puttarpautradi wanshparamprenen apalya ghari rahun sadrahu jaminicha upbhog gheun. These words by themselves would indicate an absolute gift. It is doubtless described as an Agrahar gift. The dictionary meaning of the word 'Agrahar' in Sanskrit is "a grant of land given by Kings (to Brahmins) for maintenance" and in Marathi "villages or lands assigned to Brahmins for their maintenance." The word indicates that it is a religious gift to a Brahmin for his maintenance. No idea of any limitation upon the absolute character of the gift is necessarily involved in the meaning of the word In effect it is a private gift to a Brahmin and is entirely distinguishable from a religious endowment in favour of a deity of a public character. The words of the gift must, therefore, in my opinion, be allowed to have their natural scope and cannot be understood to have any limited meaning, simply because the gift is an Agrahar gift. The clauses in the deed relating to the necessity of the donees residing in the same village, in my opinior, amount to no more than an expression of a pious wish on the part of the donors to see that the donees fulfilled the purpose of the gift by staying in the village and by living the ceremonial life of a Brahmin. This is indicated by the provision in the document that if any one through obstinacy or through any other reason fails to live in the village, it shall be considered an act of irreligiousness, and the whole body of Brahmins residing in the village should appoint another Brahmin in his place. It is contended on behalf of the appellant that the provision in the document, that the other Brahmins would have the right of appointing a substitute equally learned and of large family in case the condition as to residence is not fulfilled, indicates a legal right vested in the other Brahmins living in the village and that as a condition it is valid and ought to be enforced. On the best consideration that I can give to the question I have come to the conclusion that it is really an absolute gift and that the further provision in the document relating to the residence is in the nature of a recommendation to the donees. The consequences of non-observance of this direction are purely religious, and we are not concerned with the gravity of these consequences. That is a matter for the donees to consider.

This view is further strengthened, in my opinion, by the fact that there is an earnest appeal to the successors of the donors to see that the gift is not in any way disturbed. According to Hindu Law a religious gift is not revocable. The last verse of Yajnavalkya with Vijnanesvara's commentary thereon in the chapter on "resumption of gifts" clearly emphasizes this point. (See Gharpure's Translation of the Mitakshara, Vyavahara Adhyaya, pages 313—316.) Though the appellant maintains that she does not wish to revoke the gift, her attitude does involve that result in a sense.

But taking it that she only means that the donee, who fails to fulfil the condition as to residence, loses his right to the property and that the right for the disposal of the property in favour of a fit substitute is vested under the deed among the other donees in the village fulfilling the condition as to residence, the condition as to residence seems to me to be not valid in law It imposes not only upon the donees but upon their sons and grandsons and descendants in perpetuity the obligation not to leave the village without forfeiting the gift. Such a condition seems to me to involve a very serious restriction upon the enjoyment of the property, and should not be enforced, unless there is any special rule of Hindu Law necessitating its enforcement. No such rule has been referred to in the argument before us, and I am not aware of any such rule. The enforcement of such a condition appears to me to be opposed to public policy; and it seems to me to be in consonance with the general spirit of Hindu Law to hold that the gift is absolute and the words of restriction as to residence have no legal effect.

The provisions of the Transfer of Property Act have no direct application to this case. But it may not be inappropriate to refer to section 11 of that Act as indicating that such a serious restriction upon the ordinary enjoyment of the property given by way of gift cannot be treated as valid, apart from any special rule of Hindu Law validating such a restriction.

The only reported case relating to an Agrahar gift cited before us is Anantha Tirtha Chariar v. Nagamuthu Ambalagaren (1). This was a case of an Agrahar gift and the condition considered by the Court in the case related to the restrictions against alienation. The judgment delivered by Mr. Justice Muttusami Ayyar shows that the condition imposing a restriction on alienation was held to be invalid, that the Agrahar gift was treated as a gift with a religious motive and that the grant was held not to stand on the same footing with a religious endowment. The point of importance is that the restriction as to alienation was held to be bad according to the ordinary rule of law, even though the grant was an Agrahar grant. It is true, as pointed out by the learned Pleader for the appellant, that in that case the condition laying down the restriction against alienation was not inserted in the deed of gift, but was to be found in a contemporaneous separate document, and that the decision in terms refers to that circumstance. I am, however, unable to accept this fact as affecting in any way the ratio decidendi of that case relating to the application of the rule for not enforcing restrictions against alienation to an Agrahar gift. In that case the learned Judges did not decide the question as to whether the grant was subject to residence in the Agrahar and to the study of religious books, as it did not arise in that case. In the present case the question as to the validity of the condition relating to residence does arise; and it seems to me, having regard to the decision in that case, that that condition could not be treated on any footing other than that on which the condition relating to restrictions against alienation was treated. Though in terms the condition as to residence does not involve any restriction against alienation, it seems to me that it is a condition of the same nature and that indirectly it involves a restriction upon the power of alienation. On a construction of the document in question I have come to the conclusion that the condition as to residence is not enforceable and that view seems to me to derive support from the decision in Anantha Tirtha Chariar's case (1).

(1) 4 M. 200; 1 Ind Dec. (N. S.) 874.

I am, therefore, of opinion that the order of the lower Court reversing the decree of the trial Court and remanding the suit is correct, though on different grounds.

In the view I take of the condition as to residence it is not necessary to examine the finding of the lower Appellate Court as to whether the condition has been duly fulfilled by the donee in question.

I would affirm the order of the lower Appellate Court and dismiss the appeal.

The appellant to pay the plaintiff respondent's costs of this appeal. The other respondents will bear their own costs.

I would make the same order in the other appeal (No. 20 of 1917) from order.

HAYWARD, J.—I agree. The Agrahar grant by the original deed of 1799 included these terms:—

"I have given to you, all the Brahmins, this deed of gift and have established you; you and your descendants, i. e. sons and grandsons, etc., should enjoy the said lands and reside in the respective dwelling houses and perform the six-fold religious duties and should dwell in the village. None of these donees should abandon his house and go to another place and enjoy his Vritti given to him in connection with the Agrahar. In case any one of them wishes to leave the said village and live elsewhere, he should substitute in his place a Brahmin equally learned and who has a large family and who is approved by all, and should hand over to him the house and the Vritti. We have given to you these houses and Vritti of our free will and pleasure. You should, therefore, enjoy the same and remain in peace. If any one of you has to go out, you can go after having got nothing to do with the Agrahar. If, instead of acting in this manner, any one through obstinacy live at another place and desire to enjoy the income of the Vritti in connection with the Agrahar, his conduct shall be considered an act of irreligiousness and the whole body of the Brahmins residing at the Agrahar should appoint another Brahmin and hand over to him the house and the Vritti."

One Ambekar obtained, what has been taken to be, a re-grant of these rights in 1888, and he enjoyed the proceeds of the property up to 1899. He left the village in 1904 and sold his rights in 1911. The plaintiff, who purchased them from him, brought this suit in 1912 to recover the property as private property. The defendant objected as the successor of the grantor that he was not entitled to do so, as the grant had been forfeited by his vendor having left the village contrary to the terms of the grant. The question, therefore, to be decided was this: whether the condition as to residence in the village was a restriction on the grant which was valid in law.

There is unfortunately an absence of authority as to what an Agrahar grant exactly is. The question, therefore, before us is one of considerable difficulty. But it would appear that such a grant is a grant given for private religious purpose, and there would not appear to be authority for holding that a necessary part of such a grant was the grantee residing upon the property. This appears not inconsistent with the recited terms of this grant. It was an absolute grant to "you and your descendants, viz., sons and grandsons." It was no doubt thereafter stated that the grantee should not abandon his house and that if he did, another should enjoy the Vritti. But there was no express clause that in such a case the grant should be forfeited to the grantor. The penalty was on the contrary stated to be, what from a religious point of view would no doubt be a heavier penalty, the penalty of being branded as irreligious and of having another person appointed to his place by the other Brahmins. If this is the true interpretation of the grant as a private religious grant, then the condition as to residence would not be binding, but would have to be regarded as no more than a pious wish expressed by the grantor, similar to such wishes held not to be binding in Wills. But it seems to me that even if the condition could be placed on a higher level than this, it would not be binding. It would offend against the general rule of law that where an interest is created absolutely in favour of any person, but the terms of the transfer direct that such interest should be enjoyed by him in a particular manner, that person shall be entitled to receive such interest as if there were no such direction. This general rule would apply in default of any special rule of Hindu Law by reason of sections 2 and 11 of the Transfer of Property Act. The general rule was applied to the Agrahar grant in the case of Anantha Tirtha Chariar v. Nagamuthu Ambalagaren (1) by the Madras High Court, and no other case has been quoted before us nor has reference been made to any special rule of Hindu Law. It has been said that grants for pious purposes might be accompanied by conditions such as that the donor should be maintained by the donee during his lifetime, and that his exequial ceremonies should be performed after his death, that the donee should defray expenses of the worship of the idol, and that the property should pass to another in a particular event, yet provisions which are repugnant to the nature of a grant, such as restraint upon alienation or partition, would be invalid, and where the gift is in itself good, conditions which are repugnant are ineffectual, but the gift itself remains good. These remarks are quoted from paragraph 375 of the 8th Edition of Mayne's Hindu Law. It is true that the general rule applied in the case of Anantha Tirtha Chariar v. Nagamuthu Ambalagaren (1) was that against a condition restraining alienation prescribed by section 10 and not that against the unrestrained enjoyment of property prescribed by section 11 of the Transfer of Property Act. But it seems to me that the reasoning which was applied to the one rule would equally apply to the other, and that if a restriction against alienation were invalid under section 10, equally so would a restriction against the full enjoyment of the property be invalid under section 11 of the Transfer of Property Act. That decision would also support the view that a grant of this particular nature should be regarded as one for private religious purposes and would not stand on the same footing as a public religious endowment. Considerations of a different nature would apply to the latter, and it might in such a case be possible to enforce restrictive terms in a regular suit under section 92 of the Civil Procedure Code

It seems to me, therefore, that the view taken of this matter was incorrect both in the original and Appellate Courts. There seem to me also serious difficulties in the way of the view, that the condition as to residence had not been broken, taken by the lower Appellate Court. But it is not necessary to discuss further this latter view, as the remand order must, in my opinion, be upheld upon the particular view of the law relating to such grants for religious purposes taken by this Court.

Order affirmed.

PATNA HIGH COURT.

APPEAL FROM ORIGINAL DECREE No. 238 OF 1917.

March 23, 1920.

Present:—Mr. Justice Das and Mr. Justice Adami.

MR. JOHN PIERPONT MORGAN AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—APPELLANTS

versus

Babu RAMJEE RAM—PLAINTIFF—RESPONDENT.

Bengal Tenancy Act (VIII B. C. of 1885), ss. 22

PIERPONT MORGAN v. RAMJEE RAM.

(3), 17[2]—Thikadar, purchase of occupancy right by, effect of—Purchase made before 1907, validity of—Purchase made after expiry of thica—Agreement in lease not to set up occupancy rights, validity of.

Prior to the Bengal Tenancy (Amendment) Act of 1907 the acquisition by a thikadar of an occupancy right by purchase was not barred by section 22 (3) of the Bengal Tenancy Act, and the amendment of the Act in 1907 did not take away rights of occupancy which had already vested in a thikadar. [p. 369, col. 2; p. 370, col. 1.]

Section 22 (3) of the Bengal Tenancy Act relates only to acquisitions of occupancy rights made by an ijaradar while still holding the ijara It has no application to purchases of such rights made after the expiry of the ijara. [p. 371, col. 2.]

A thikadar who purchases an occupancy holding acquires it as a non-occupancy holding [p. 371, col. 1.]

Any agreement in a lease not to set up rights of occupancy in lands in which such rights have accrued is void under section 178 of the Bengal Tenancy Act. [p. 371, col. 2.]

Appeal from a decision of the Subordinate Judge, Muzafferpore, dated the 1st August 1917.

Messrs. Pringle Kennedy and A. K. Roy, for the Appellants.

Messrs. L. N. Singh and Gargadhar Das, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.

ADAMI, J.—This appeal comes before us after remand to the Subordinate Judge, Muzafferpore, for the determination of certain issues.

It appears that in the year 1903 there was a Collectorate partition of Mouza Rela Narain, and the plaintiff's predecessor-in-title obtained an eight-annas share in the Mauza which was formed into a separate Patti bearing Touzi No. 295. While the Mouza was still in joint possession of all the Maliks, a thika lease was granted of its entire area to the India Development Company who owned an indigo factory known as Athur Factory, and it seems that this Company were in possession under successive leases for the period of about 40 years. On the 6th July 1905 Mr. Hickley, as manager of the company's factory, obtained from the plaintiff's father a fresh lease of the Patti bearing Touzi No. 295 for the period of five years, at an annual rent of Rs. 672-11-6 During the period of this lease the defendants, who are a firm carrying on the business of growing indigo and sugar-cane, purchased the right, title and interest in the Athur Factory and the lands covered by the lease from the Indian Development Company. The lease should have expired in July 1910 but by consent the defendants were allowed an extension of one year, so that it actully expired on the 6th July 1911.

It will be convenient to set forth here the following extracts from the kabuliyat which are necessary for the proper understanding of the case:—

"(1) I, therefore, give this kabuliyat in writing (and do declare) that I, the declarant, shall year after year, till the term of this kabuliyat, appropriate the produce of the land by personally cultivating it or getting it cultivated by others with indigo or sugarcane, or by entering into any negotiations or settlement with tenants according to my wishes.

"(2) That I shall not allow any land declared by the survey as khudkasht to go into the kasht of any tenant.

"(3) That if within the term of the thika I, the declarant, bring any suit against any tenant for arrears of rent and purchase at auction the kasht of any tenant in execution of the decree obtained therein, I shall keep it in my possession till the term of the thika and after the expiry of the term of this thika I shall give up possession of the same on receiving the purchase money from the Malik and shall not bring forward any excuse in doing so.

"(4) After the expiry of the term of this kabuliyat in 1317... I shall give up possession of the land and to this I, the declarant, my heirs and representatives shall have no objection, that I, the declarant, shall not set up right of occupancy to any land except in respect to the land purchased at auction from the tenants, which, according to the terms laid down above, the said Malik may not have taken back on payment of purchase money after the expiry of the term of the thika, that if contrary to this, I, the declarant, set up any claim, the said Malik is and will be entitled to take possession of the Dakhili land of me, the declarant, and to realise mesne profits up to the date of delivery of possession at the rate of Rs. 25 per bigha per annum by bringing a suit in Court."

It is the plaintiff's case that in the Patti leased to the defendants there were 99 bighas 12 kathas 1 dhur 8 karants of zeriat and bakasht land and that on expiry of the lease, while giving up possession of the rest of the lands in the Patti, the defendants continued in possession of the 99 bighas 12 kathas 1 dhur and 8 karants, and even when, on the 5th February 1913, a notice was served on them to relinquish these lands, the defendants delivered possession of 27 bighas 14 kathas only, claiming to have a right of occupancy, obtained by purchase, in the rest which, they alleged, measured 63 bighas 7 kathas.

The plaintiff, therefore, brought this suit on the 27th September 1915 for a declaration of his proprietary right to 71 bighas 18 kathas 6 dhurs still in possession of the defendants and for the ejectment of the defendants therefrom. He also claimed mesne profits at the rate of Rs. 25 a bigha per annum up to 1320 in respect of the 27 bighas 14 kathas delivered up in 1913, and up to the date of the suit in respect of the other lands.

The defendants resisted the suit, claiming that they had acquired occupancy rights in all the lands of which they were still in possession, measuring 68 bighas 6 kathas 13 dhurs, having purchased the occupancy right of tenants either privately or in execution of rent decrees before, during and after the terms of their ijara lease, and that, therefore, they could not be ejected. They denied that any of the land was zeriat. They relied on the terms of the lease whereunder the plaintiffs, on the expiry of the lease, were to get back the lands purchased by the defendants from tenants on payment to the defendants of the purchase price, and contended that, as no offer of payment had been made within three years of the expiry, the plaintiffs must be taken to have waived their right and were now barred by limitation from enforcing it.

With regard to mesne profits the defendants characterised the rates claimed as incorrect and excessive and alleged coercion and undue influence. They denied that there had been any usurpation, since the plaintiffs had failed to pay the purchase price to them.

The learned Subordinate Judge came to the conclusion that the greater part of the land in suit was landlord's bakasht at the date of the lease, though it is difficult to discover on what evidence he based this conclusion. We cannot find sufficient material in the record to justify it. Having formed this opinion he held that under the terms of the lease the defendants could not claim occupancy rights in landlord's bakasht and that they were mere trespassers after the lease expired, while during the lease, the thikadars stood in the shoes of the proprietor and any purchase made by the former would enure to the benefit of the latter. He held that under sub-section (3) of section 22 of the Bengal Tenancy Act, as it stood both before and after the amendment of the Act in 1907, the thikadar could not claim either an occupancy right or any kind of tenancy. With regard to wasilat the learned Subordinate Judge believed the plaintiff's case that the defendants did not surrender the 27 bighas till the receipt of the notice in February 1913 and granted wasilat for all the rest of the land claimed, except 13 bighas proved to have been purchased in auction, for the three years preceding the suit, that is to say, for 1320—1322. He found that the wasilat must be paid at the rate of Rs. 25 a bigha according to the terms of the lease, as no undue influence or coercion was proved and the bargain was not hard or unconscionable. He allowed Rs. 248 to be deducted from the claim on account of purchase money advanced by the defendants.

On appeal to this Court the question was raised whether the lands covered by the kabalas and sale certificates, relied on by the appellants to prove their purchase before and after the term of the lease, could be identified as lying within the ambit of the plaintiff's Patti. As there was no material for the ascertainment of their identity, two issues were remanded to the lower Court for trial, one relating to the lands purchased before the lease and the other to those bought after it had expired. It seems that an Amin was taken to the lands by the defendants and that this Amin with the help of a Tahsildar, and by inquiries from villagers, came to certain findings as to the identity of the lands. The Amin and the Tahsildar were examined by the lower Court, who relied on their evidence and decided the two issues accordingly. The plaintiff did not produce any witness who could give evidence as to identi y.

Mr. Kennedy for the appellants had, when the appeal first came before this Court, classified the lands in their possession under three separate headings :

(1) 31 odd bighas of land in which they acquired raiyati interest prior to the lease of July 6th, 1905 ;

(2) 15 odd bighas of land in which they acquired raiyati interest during the pendency of the lease; and

(3) 12 odd bighas of land in which they acquired raiyati interest after the expiry of the lease.

The findings of the lower Court on remand show that out of the 31 bighas covered by the kabalas and sale certificates showing purchases before 1905, only 20 bighas 18 kathas 13 dhurs are within the plaintiff's Patti and that out of the 12 bighas covered by the sale certificates granted after 1911, only 2 bighas 6 kathas 10 dhurs fall therein. Mr. Kennedy admits that he can claim the protection of occupancy rights only with regard to the 15 bighas bought during the term of the lease and the 20 bighas 18 kathas 13 dhurs and 2 bighas 6 kathas bought before and after it respectively, in all 38 bighas odd, and that his client will be liable to pay damages for retaining possession of the remainder of the land in suit, amounting to 30 bighas or so. He points out, however, that on the 12th September 1917 the defendants appellants, having relinquished all the lands in suit pending decision of the appeal, made petition before the Executing Court that notice might be given to the decree-holders, present respondents, that possession had been given up and such notice was accordingly served. The appellants cannot, therefore, be made liable for damages subsequent to that date.

The main question in this appeal deals, then, with 38 bighas within the Patti, which have been purchased by the defendants from tenants who held them as occupancy raiyats, and we have to determine whether the defendants, by the purchase, obtained occupancy rights in the purchased land which will save them from ejectment.

The lands are divided into three categories; those purchased before, those purchased during and those purchased after the term of the lease, and each class must be considered separately.

First, as regards the 20 bighas 18 kathas 13 dhurs bought previous to the lease of 1905, namely, in 1894, 1893, 1889, 1891 and 1895: There appears to be no doubt that the defendant's predecessors, when they made the purchases, were thikadars under their then existing leases, and the question is whether under the terms of section 22 (3) of the Bengal Tenancy Act, they could, as such, acquire an occupancy right by purchase. Before 1907, sub-section (3) ran :—

"(3) A person holding land as an ijaradar or farmer of rents shall not, while so holding, acquire a right of occupancy in any land comprised in his ijara or farm."

The question then arose whether the word "acquire" was to be taken to relate only to acquisition under the provisions of the Act, or would include acquisition by purchase or other forms of transfer. It was held in Ramrup Mahto v. H. Manners (1) that the word would not include "purchase" but was confined to acquisition of the status of occupancy raiyat as described in the Act. The Bengal Tenancy Act was amended in 1907, and, to make it clear that any kind of acquisition of occupancy right was to be barred, the words "by purchase or otherwise" were inserted after the word "acquire" in sub-section (3) of section 22. Then, in 1911, in the case of Raghubir Mahto v. H. Manners (2) Mukerjee, J., questioned the decision in Ramrup Mahto v. H. Manners (1), and expressed the opinion that the amendment merely gave effect to what had always been the law. The fact remains that before the amendment the Court interpreted the sub-section as excluding acquisition by purchase and the Legislature, by finding it necessary to make the amendment, admitted that it was not clear that such acquisition was included. We must hold, I think, that prior to the Act of 1907 the acquisition by a thikadar of an occupancy right by purchase was not barred by section 22 (3) and that, therefore, the defendants acquired such a right in the 20 bighas 18 kathas 13 dhurs.

(1) 4 C. L. J. 209.
(2) 11 Ind. Cas. 389; 13 C. L. J. 568.

Learned Counsel argues that the defendants by their conduct have shown that they did not claim raiyati rights in the land, and throughout treated the holding as belonging to the Maliks He points out that the defendants themselves looked after the survey proceedings and had these 20 bighas described in the Record of Rights published in 1897 as bakasht thikadar. It is true that the defendants are not recorded as raiyats of the lands, but a Settlement Officer, finding that they were thikadars of the Patti and that they were themselves cultivating the lands would naturally enter them bakasht thikadar, which simply means that they were lease lands which the thikadar was cultivating himself. The amendment of the Act in 1907 could not take away rights of occupancy already vested in the defendants.

There is no good evidence that these lands were the landlord's bakasht at the date of the lease, or that the lands were zeraiat. It is contended that, at the time the lease of 1905 was executed, the defendants did not set up any kashtkari right, and, in fact, agreed not to claim such right. There is no evidence that in any previous lease the defendants agreed not to claim the right, and whatever they may have undertaken in this respect in the lease of 1905 could not affect the occupancy right which, we have found, was acquired by purchase previous to 1907. Any such agreement in the later lease would be void under the provisions of section 178 of the Bengal Tenancy Act.

The condition in the lease as to giving up the kasht of any tenant purchased at auction refers only to purchases made during the term of the lease, and not to previous ones.

We next come to the acquisitions made during the term of the lease. It is not contended by the appellants that they could acquire an occupancy right by purchase after 1907. Mr. Kennedy urges, however, that though no occupancy right could be obtained, section 22 (3) does not bar the purchase of a non-occupancy right and further, that, under the conditions of the lease, the defendants can set up a right of occupancy in land purchased at auction from the tenants for which on the expiry of the lease the plaintiff has not offered to the defendants the auction purchase money paid by them. It is, I think, plain that the defendants could not acquire occupancy rights in these lands. There is the express provision in the law against it, whatever may be the terms of the contract. The question to be decided in regard to these lands is whether the purchase gave the defendants non-occupancy rights. If it did, the suit to eject the defendants from these lands is clearly barred by limitation under Schedule III to the Bengal Tenancy Act.

Mr. Kennedy relies on the cases of Jawadul Huq v. Ram Das Saha (3) and Rom Mohan Pal v. Sheikh Kachu (4), in contending that where an ijaradar purchases an occupancy holding, such holding does not cease to exist but only the occupancy right is terminated, and also on Sheonandan Singh v. Ramhit Singh (Deo Saran Singh) (5), where it was held held that an ijaradar who has purchased an occupancy holding acquires it as a non-occupancy holding. Both of the two first mentioned cases deal with the purchase of an occupancy right by a co owner and with section 22 (2), but they decided that it is the occupancy right and not the holding which is extinguished by the transfer: the holding is merely divested of the incidents which attach to an occupancy holding. The principle laid down in those cases would apply in a case under sub section (3) which does not bar an ijaradar from acquiring non-occupancy rights. On the other hand Mr. Singh cites the cases of Raghubar Mahto v. H. Manners (2) and Manners v. Satroghan Das (6). The decision of Mukerjee, J., in the former would seem to disagree with the opinion he formed in Sheonandan Singh v. Ramhit Singh (Deo Saran Singh) (5), cited above, but it is clear that the facts were different. In neither Raghubar Mahto v. H. Manners (2) nor Manners v. Satroghan Das (6) was the main question the effect of the purchase of an occupancy holding by the ijaradar. In both of them the question

(3) 24 C. 143; 1 C. W. N. 166; 12 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 761.

(4) 32 C. 386; 9 C. W. N. 249 (F. B.); 1 C. L. J. 1.

(5) 13 Ind. Cas. 598; 15 C. L. J. 647.

(6) 36 Ind. Cas. 178; 20 C. W. N. 800.

seems to have been mainly whether the lease was a cultivating lease or the lease of a tenure and whether occupancy rights had accrued through long possession, though in the former the ijaradar seems to have induced the tenants to give up lands to him. In Manners v. Satroghan Das (6) Sharfuddin, J., considered the case from the point of view of merger. Now if it was contemplated that when an ijaradar purchases an occupancy holding the occupancy right merges in the ijara, the framers of the Act would surely have found it sufficient to omit the word "permanent" from sub-section (1) of section 22, which would then have the desired effect in the case of a purchase by an ijaradar. It is clear that sub-section (3) does not mean that the occupancy right merges; it simply means that no occupancy right passes.

In Sheonandan Singh v. Ramhit Singh (Deo Saran Singh) (5) Mukerjee, J., states: "Assume, therefore, for a moment that a person holding land as an ijaradar is not entitled, while so holding, to acquire by purchase a right of occupancy in any land comprised in his ijara. The result is that if an ijaradar purchases an occupancy holding, he acquires it as a non-occupancy holding."

In the present case, as was held in the one just cited, the defendants' character as purchasers conferred upon them the status of raiyats, but not of occupancy raiyats. It may be contrary to the intention of the framers of the Act that landlords and tenure-holders should be allowed to acquire raiyati rights, but until sub-section (3) is amended it cannot prevent the acquisition of non-occupancy rights.

Having found, then, that the defendants were, on the expiry of the lease, non-occupancy raiyats of these 15 bighas, we must hold that under Schedule III to the Bengal Tenancy Act, the suit to eject them from those lands is out of time.

With regard to the undertaking in the kabuliyat to give up the kasht lands purchased in execution of rent suits against the tenants on receipt of the purchase money, and not to set up a right of occupancy in such lands except where the plaintiff failed to offer to pay the purchase money, it need only be remarked that the plaintiffs up to the date of the suit had not offered payment of the purchase money. The reason they give is that there was so much wasilat due from the defendants that it was only necessary to set off the purchase money. That reason, however, was not a good one. They were bound to make the offer if they wanted the lands.

With regard to the last class of lands, those purchased after the expiry of the lease in execution of decrees for rent which fell due during the lease, there is, I think, no doubt that the defendants must be held to have acquired occupancy rights, for section 22 (3) relates specifically only to acquisitions of occupancy rights made while still holding the ijara.

We hold, therefore, that the defendants acquired occupancy rights in the lands purchased before 1905 and after 1911, and that they cannot now be ejected from the lands purchased during the lease, in which they have non occupancy rights, because the suit was instituted beyond time.

The last point to be decided is that of wasilat or damages. Under the terms of the kabuliyat the defendants' predecessors undertook to pay mesne profits at the rate of Rs. 25 a bigha per annum if, on the expiry of the term of the lease, they did not give up possession of the lands and if they set up any claim to a right of occupancy in respect of any lands other than lands purchased at auction from tenants for which the lessors had not offered payment according to the terms of the lease.

So far as concerns the lands in which the defendants have been found to have acquired occupancy rights before the lease was executed, it is clear that no mesne profits or damages are payable, the lease referred only to occupancy holdings purchased during its term. The defendants have a right to remain in possession of those lands. Any agreement in the lease not to set up right of occupancy in lands in which such right had accrued would be void under section 178, Bengal Tenancy Act.

We have found that, with regard to occupancy holdings purchased during the term of the lease, the suit to eject the defendants is barred by limitation, they being in possession as non occupancy raiyats. The defendants, however, undertook to give up these lands on the expiry of the lease if the plaintiff offered payment of the sum paid by the defendants as auction-purchasers, and it was agreed that the rate of Rs. 25 per bigha should not be payable by the defendants in respect of the lands if the lessor did not make payment of the purchase price. The lessor has not offered payment up till the date of the institution of the suit, which was over three years after the expiry of the lease. The defendants contend that this offer of payment was not made within a reasonable time and that the lessor must be taken to have elected not to exercise his option.

What is a reasonable time depends on the facts in every case, but it is not necessary for us to decide the question in this case, since we have found that the defendants were up to the date of the suit in rightful possession as non occupancy raiyats and cannot be ejected, and offer of payment of the purchase-money had not up till then been made.

For lands in which occupancy rights have been acquired by purchase after the date of the suit mesne profits will of course not be payable since before the expiry of the lease and the date of the acquisition, such lands were in possession of occupancy raiyats. Thus we find that no mesne profits are payable in respect of the raiyati lands acquired by the defendants before, during, and after the lease, that is to say, an area of 33 bighas 4 kathas 13 dhurs.

For the remaining area out of the total of the 68 bighas 6 kathas 13 dhurs, namely, 30 bighas 2 kathas, Mr. Kennedy admits that wasilat will have to be paid up to the date when notice of abandonment of the lands was given to the plaintiff, namely, up to 12th September 1917, but contends that the rate of Rs. 25 per bigha per annum is far too high and was fixed as a penalty.

The learned Subordinate Judge has found that there was no undue influence or coercion and that the bargain to pay at this rate was not hard and unconscionable.

The plaintiff's witnesses themselves have deposed that the highest rate for land in the village is Rs. 10 per bigha per annum and that the usual rate is Rs. 8, so that it is clear that the rate of mesne profits stipulated for is far above the ordinary rate. The defendants contracted to hold the land for the term of the lease paying an annual rental of Rs. 672-11-6 and to deliver up the land under certain conditions on the expiry of five years. If they failed to deliver up possession or made any claim, they were to pay mesne profits to the lessor at the rate of Rs. 25 per bigha, that is to say, they were to pay Rs. 2,475 a year for the 99 bighas. The contract to pay mesne profits is a secondary one intended to secure the fulfilment of the primary contract to relinquish the land on the expiry of the lease: it may be just and reasonable that the lessor should be thus secured, but the high rate agreed on is clearly by way of a penalty and it is open to this Court to award reasonable compensation in lieu of such an excessive rate.

We are of opinion that the highest rate of rent for land in the village as shown by the plaintiff's witnesses would be a fair rate in this case and we accordingly decide that the defendants should pay at the rate of Rs. 10 per bigha per annum for the 30 bighas 2 kathas.

As a result the appeal will be allowed in part, and the decree of the lower Court will be modified to the extent that the plaintiff will be declared entitled to recover possession of the said 30 bighas 2 kathas of the lands mentioned in schedule II and will be allowed wasilat at the rate of Rs. 10 per bigha per annum for the 27 bighas of land of schedule II for 1320, and for the 30 bighas 2 kathas out of the lands mentioned in schedule II, wasilat at the same rate for three years from 1320 to 1322 F. S. There will be no deduction on account of purchase money paid by the defendants.

The parties will get costs in both Courts proportionate to their success.

DAS, J.—I agree.

Appeal partly allowed.

RAM LAL SEN v. BIDHUMUKHI DASI.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

ORIGINAL CIVIL SUIT No. 44 OF 1916.

July 3, 1919.

Present:—Mr. Justice Greaves.

RAM LAL SEN—PLAINTIFF

versus

BIDHUMUKHI DASI AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS.

Hindu Law—Will, construction of—Bequest to wife for life with remainder to sons—Accumulation, direction for, validity of.

A direction in the Will of a Hindu testator to accumulate the surplus income of devised property with a gift of the accumulations is not fundamentally bad: it only fails if it offends some independent rule of Hindu law [p. 376, col. 2; p. 377, col. 1]

A testator by his will appointed his wife his executrix and trustee and "gave devised and bequeathed unto her the rest and residue" of his moveable and immoveable properties for her life and after her death to his five sons in equal shares, with directions to incur certain expenses and to accumulate the surplus income for the benefit of the sons:

Held, that the provision for accumulation of the surplus income was not bad. [p. 378, col. 1.]

Mr. N. N. Sircar (with him Messrs. L. P. E. Pugh, H. C. Majumdar and B. C. Ghose), for the Plaintiff.

Mr. B. Chakraverty (with him Mr. C. C. Ghose), for the Defendants Sankar Lal and Rash Behary.

Mr. N. Mukerjee, for the Defendant Champa Dasi.

Mr. S. C. Bose, for the Defendant Bipin Behary Sen.

Mr. S. N. Banerjee, for the Defendants, Manik, Nitya and Gour.

Mr. D. Bose, for the Defendant Barai Dasi.

Mr. S. K. Chukerbutty, for the Defendant Gosto Behary Sen.

Mr. B. K. Ghosh (with him Mr. H. D. Bose), for the Defendant Sham Lal Sen.

Mr. C. R. Das (with him Mr. B. L. Mitter), for the Defendant Bidhumukhi Dasi.

JUDGMENT.—The plaintiff in this suit seeks to have the Will of one Ram Gopal Sen construed and the rights, shares and interests under the said Will of the parties to the suit ascertained and for administration of the estate of Ram Gopal Sen under the direction of the Court and for an account of the estate from the defendant Bidhumukhi Dasi from the testator's death and for partition. The plaintiff is a son of Ram Gopal Sen, the 1st defendant is his widow and the executrix of his Will, the defendant Sham Lal Sen is a son, the defendants Manick Lal Sen, Nitya Lal Sen and Gour Lal Sen are sons of a deceased son Heera Lal Sen who survived the testator and died after the institution of the suit, the defendants Sankar Lal Sen, Rash Behary Sen and Gosto Behary Sen are sons of another son of the testator named Bolai Chand Sen who survived the testator and died in the year 1895, the defendant Champa Dassi is the widow of another son Adhar Lal Sen who survived the testator and died in 1885 without leaving a son but leaving four daughters, three of whom are dead, two of them having left male issue, the defendant Bepin Behary Sen is a son of Doyal Chand Sen, a son of the testator who predeceased him, and the defendant Srimati Barai Dassi is a daughter of another son of Doyal Chand named Amrito who is dead. Srimati Barai had a son born to her last April. Amrita had a son Ganesh who died some time in or after the year 1905.

Ram Gopal Sen died on the 16th November 1880 a Hindu governed by the Bengal School of Hindu Law leaving a Will, dated the 9th October 1878, probate whereof was granted out of this Court in the year 1882 to the defendant Srimati Bidhumukhi Dasi, the executrix therein named. The heirs of Ram Gopal Sen at the time of his death were his five sons Bolai Chand, Sham Lal, Ram Lal, Adhar Lal and Heera Lal, and his two grandsons Bepin Behari and Amrita Lal.

The testator by his said Will appointed his wife, the defendant Srimati Bidhumukhi Dasi, executrix and trustee thereof and directed her to pay his debts and funeral and testamentary expenses and to expend a certain sum therein named on his first Sbrad and after giving certain legacies, including a sum of Rs. 20,000 in Government 4 p. c. securities, to his wife for her life, to the end that she might spend and enjoy the interest thereof during her life, gave, devised and bequeathed the rest and residue of his estate moveable and immoveable unto his wife and her assigns for life interest to collect the rents, issues and profits thereof and to pay the ground rents, taxes and assessments payable in respect of the immoveable property and to keep the same in repair, and in the second place to expend according to her discretion a sum of not more than Rs. 3,600 a year towards the maintenance and education of his family, consisting of his wife his five sons thereinafter named, and their wives and children and the widow and children of his deceased son Doyal Chand Sen, and in defraying other family and customary expenses, and in the next place to accumulate the surplus income for the benefit of his said five sons, they all living in commensality in his dwelling house, and he directed that in case any of his said sons should live apart from the rest of his family he should be paid a monthly sum of Rs. 25 for his maintenance. The testator then upon the death of his wife gave, devised and bequeathed his house No. 30, Sunker Halder Lane, and certain shares to his infant grandsons Amrita Lal and Bepin Behary in equal shares, subject to the charge of maintaining their mother, and provided that in the event of either of them dying without male issue his share would pass to the survivor, subject to the charge of maintaining his widow and female issue (if any) and marrying the latter, and he provided that in the event of both his grandsons dying without male issue the bequest, except the Railway shares which were to pass to the survivor's heirs, should revert to and become a part of his residue, to devolve on his said five sons and their heirs subject to the limitation thereunder provided. And he gave the rest and residue of his estate moveable and immoveable on the death of his wife to his five sons, whom he named, in equal shares and proportions, but he provided that in the event of the death of any of them without male issue his share should pass to the survivors or survivor, subject to the charge of maintaining his widow and marrying the daughter of the son so dying, should he leave any, and paying to such widow or daughter Rs. 1,000 or more, at the same rate if more than one.

The plaintiff contends that the provision for accumulation is bad not on the ground of the length of the period of accumulation but as being repugnant, and he contends that if there is no gift until the wife dies there is an intestacy as to the amounts directed to be accumulated until her death. The widow contends that the accumulation is good and that the suit is premature and that nothing is divisible until her death; alternatively she contends that she takes a life estate in the whole income, the provision for accumulation being merely discretionary, and in the further alternative she contends that she gets a life estate by implication.

If the widow's main contention, namely, that the provision for accumulation is not invalid, prevails, then no question at present arises for decision and the suit is premature as no case for an account has been made out. But it seems to me that to decide if the provision for accumulation is valid, it is necessary first to see whether under the Will the sons took immediate vested interests under the Will or if vesting is postponed until the widow's death. If the sons took vested interests at the testator's death, then one of the arguments levelled against the provision for accumulation goes, namely, that the accumulations having no owner until the widow's death the provision for accumulation is bad. The argument is based on a passage in Trevelyan's Hindu Law, 2nd Edition, page 41, where it is laid down that every part and interest in a property must have an owner, it cannot remain in suspense or abeyance without an owner, it must vest in some one.

Now the clause in the Will directing the accumulations contains no express gifts of the accumulations and I do not think that any gift can be implied from the words "for the benefit of my said five sons." The sons are entitled to be maintained out of the sum of Rs. 3,600 or if they separate, they get Rs. 25 a month from the estate, and if the words "for the benefit of my said five sons" were intended to confer an immediate gift of surplus income, it is at least unlikely that there would have been as well provision for their maintenance. Presumably, therefore, if the provision for accumulation is valid, the accumulations fall into residue and pass under the gift of the rest and residue of the estate to the five sons on the death of the widow. Did then this gift vest in the sons on the death of the testator or is vesting postponed until the widow's death? I think that the gift vested on the death of the testator. Section 47 of the Hindu Wills Act, which is section 106 of the Succession Act, provides that where by the terms of a bequest the legatee is not entitled to immediate possession of the thing bequeathed, a right to receive it at the proper time shall, unless a contrary intention appears by the Will, become vested in the legatee on the testator's death and shall pass to the legatee's representatives if he dies before that time and without having received the legacy, and in such cases the legacy is, from the testator's death, said to be vested in interest, and the explanation to the section states that an intention that a legacy to any person shall not become vested in interest in him is not to be inferred merely from a provision whereby the payment or possession of the thing bequeathed is postponed or whereby a prior interest therein is bequeathed to some other persons or whereby the income arising from the fund bequeathed is directed to be accumulated until the time of payment arrives or from a provision that if a particular event shall happen the legacy shall go over to another person. I cannot see that in the Will before me any contrary intention appears, and the fact that there is a gift over to the surviving sons, in certain events, of a son's share (and the expression "his" share certainly looks like a vested interest) is not in my opinion a contrary intention and in fact the section so states.

That such a gift is a valid gift see section 59 of the Hindu Wills Act and it does not make the interest any less a vested interest but merely divests in certain events the estates or gift which has already vested. I think the five sons upon the death of the testator took immediate vested interests in the residue, which includes the accumulations, but I think that the estate of any son was liable to be divested upon his death without male issue during the lifetime of the widow. Counsel for Champa Dassee contended in reliance on Poultney, In re; Poultney v. Poultney (1) that "dying without male issue" meant death in the testator's lifetime, but unfortunately for his argument he has failed to notice that the decision of Joyce, J., in Poultney, In re; Poultney v. Poultney (1) was reversed on appeal see Poultney, In re; Poultney v. Poultney (2). I think that "dying without male issue" upon the true construction of the clause means death in the widow's lifetime and that Adhar's vested interest was divested upon his death in the widow's lifetime, without male issue, but of course under the terms of the Will the share of Adhar passed to the surviving sons, subject to the charge imposed on the gift of residue of maintaining Champa Dassee when the residue falls into possession and of making the payments to the widow and daughters directed by the Will. It did occur to me that a possible solution of any difficulty with regard to the accumulations might be found in holding that as under the gift of residue the accumulations pass to the sons eventually, they might upon the principle of Saunders v. Vautier (3) and like cases stop the accumulations at any time and claim the surplus income as it accrues. But two difficulties present themselves, (i) the gift over to the surviving sons in the event of a son dying without male issue in the lifetime of the tenant for life, (ii) the rights of Champa Dassee and her daughters respectively to maintenance and legacies out of Adhar's divested share of the residue, which includes the accumulations. The 1st point might be got over by the sons agreeing inter se to give up their rights of survivorship, but the 2nd point remains and could only be got over by Champa Dassee releasing her right of maintenance against the accumulations and by payment to her and her daughters of their legacies. But as matters stand I am of opinion that the principle of Saunders v. Vautier (3) has no application.

It remains, therefore, to consider under the circumstances of this case whether the provision for accumulation of surplus income during the lifetime of the widow is valid according to Hindu Law, bearing in mind the fact that according to the construction which I have put upon the residuary gift, the sons took immediate vested interests upon the testator's death. Now the question of the validity in a Will of a provision for accumulation of surplus income was recently discussed by the Appeal Court in Watkins v. Administrator General of

(1) (1912) 1 Ch. 245.
(2) (1912) 2 Ch. 541; 81 L. J. Ch 743; 107 L. T. 1; 56 S. J. 667.

(3) (1841) Cr. & Ph. 240; 10 L. J. Ch. 354; 54 R. R. 286.

Bengal, Suit No. 611 of 1907, Appeal No. 92 of 1913.* The case has escaped the vigilance of the reporters or perhaps I should rather say is unreported owing to their lack of vigilance. There Sir Lawrence Jenkins in delivering the judgment of the Court in unequivocal terms lays down, after discussing the cases that "A direction to accumulate with a gift of the accumu-

*The following is the judgment in Appeal No. 92 of 1913, dated March 4, 1914, decided by Sir Lawrence Jenkins, Kt., Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Woodroffe

JENKINS, C J.—Once more the Will of Haridass Dutt is before the Court

The testator by this Will made provision, as he thought, for the adoption of a son or sons He died in 1877, and in the following year an adoption ceremony was performed as contemplated by the Will. In 1881 the boy died and after the lapse of a month the testator's widow, Swarnamoyee Dassee, again purported to make an adoption, the boy this time being Amrita Lal Dutt This boy was married in the family and throughout treated as a validly adopted son until he instituted a Suit No. 535 of 1894 against Swarnamoyee Dassee and her daughter and their sons, claiming the corpus of the estate and in any event the surplus income notwithstanding the provision for postponment of vesting and accumulation contained in the Will

By way of defence the validity of Amrita's adoption was denied and this plea was upheld by this Court on appeal and by the Privy Council. Since then the Will has been the subject of two more appeals to the Privy Council, and if the forecast of Counsel is correct, there are probably as many more appeals to that tribunal in store.

The determination of this suit turns on the true construction of clause 9 of the Will which is in these terms:—

"I direct my executors and executrix and trustees to pay out of the income and interest of my estate and effects monthly all necessary household expenses as well as for the worship of our family idol Sri Sri Radha Gobindji and to pay my wife monthly during her natural life for her sole and separate use the sum of Rupees two hundred and also the sum of Rupees fifty monthly to such adopted son, who shall live and attain his full age of 18 years, after his so attaining such age of 18 years during the lifetime of my said wife, provided he remains under her control and bears a good character, and if my said executrix and executors and trustees think fit and are satisfied with his conduct and behaviour, and for the purposes of such monthly expenditure my executrix, executors and trustees shall set apart and retain out of the interest and income of my estate a sum sufficient to meet such expenditure for six months and invest the rest and residue of such income and interest in Government securities in their joint names, but in no case shall such adopted son have or exercise any control, dominion over my estate and effects until the death of my wife, after which event I direct my said executors and trustees to make over the whole of my estate and effects both real and personal immoveable or moveable whatsoever and wheresoever and of what nature or quantity soever to such adopted son who shall survive my wife, if he shall have attained his age of 18 years during the lifetime of my wife or on his so attaining such age after her decease, to whom and his heirs I give, devise and bequeath the same. But in case none of such adopted sons survive my said wife or in case of either surviving my said wife and dying under the said age without leaving a son or sons, I desire and direct my executors after the death of my said wife or the death of such son after her but under such age of 18 years without leaving a son or sons to make over and divide the whole of my estate both real and personal unto and between my daughters in equal shares to whom and their respective sons I give, devise and bequeath the same, but should either of my said daughters die without having any male issue surviving but leaving my other daughter her surviving, then in such case the surviving daughter and her sons shall be entitled to the share of the deceased daughter or in case of the death of other daughter leaving sons the share of such daughter is to be paid to such her son or sons share and share alike"

As there was and could be no adopted son, it is necessary to see what the testator's family was at his death Besides his widow Swarnamoyee, he left two daughters, Ranimoni Dasi and Premmoni Dasi, and three grandsons Radha Prasad Mullick, Kassi Prasad Mullick and Jyoti Prasad Mullick. After the testator's death two other sons were born to Premmoni Dasi, Peary Lall Mullick and Behari Lal Mullick, while Ranimoni claims to have taken Jugal Kishore in adoption in 1908.

The present suit was instituted on the 17th April 1907 by Mr. Watkins, described as the administrator pendente lite of the property and credits of Haridass Dutt, against the Administrator-General of Bengal as executor of the last Will of Swarnamoyee and Lal Mohan Dutt and Preolal Dutt as the executors of the Will of Dwarka Nath Dutt. With these Dutt defendants we now have no further concern, for the suit has been dismissed as against them Since the institution of the suit there have been several amendments On the 7th May 1909 Sreemati Premmoni Dasi and her son Radha Prasad Mullick were added as plaintiffs Both Mr Watkins and Premmoni died before the hearing and thereby Radha Prasad Mullick became and continued up to decree to be the sole plaintiff

Since the institution of the suit Ranimoni Dassi and Jugal Kishore Sen have been added as defendants as also the plaintiff's brothers Kassi Prosad Mullick, Peary Lal Mulick and Behari Lal Mullick.

The prayers to the plaint are numerous, but in effect what the plaintiff seeks to establish is that certain properties named or indicated in the plaint as well as the surplus income accrued during the widow's life form part of the trust estate: and that he and the added defendants are together entitled thereto to the widow's exclusion

This claim has been based on two alternative grounds. First, it is said that in the events which lations is not fundamentally bad: it only fails if it offends some independent rule of Hindu Law. Thus it may infringe the rule against perpetuities, and so far as that goes it must be a question for consideration in each case whether there is such an infringement or not. Or the direction to accumulate may happened the daughters took vested interests in possession from the death of the testator, so that the whole income was payable to them from that date; failing that it is urged that the trust for accumulation was good, so that the daughters and their sons between them became entitled to the income and capital of the accumulated fund.

---

The Administrator-General on the other hand maintains that the daughters' interests did not vest in possession until the widow's death, that the trust for accumulation during her life was invalid, and that the income was not disposed of, and so went as on an intestacy to the widow as her husband's next heir.

The literal sense of the words in clause 9 of the Will makes the gift to the adopted son conditional on his surviving the widow and attaining the age of 18, and postpones the vesting of the daughters' interests until the death of the widow if there was no adopted son

This in effect is the interpretation placed on the Will by the Privy Council in Amrito Lal Dutt v. Surnomoye Dasi (1), for it was there said by their Lordships "By the ninth clause the testator provided an income for his wife and adopted son during the life of his wife and directed accumulation of the surplus income The adopted son is to take the property if he survives the widow and attains 18, otherwise it is given over to the daughters" See page 10(1. Later their Lordships describe the testator as "postponing enjoyment during the widow's life and making the boy's interest in the corpus contingent on his surviving the wife and attaining 18." Had the authority to adopt been effective any other construction would obviously have led to results that could not have been intended, seeing that successive adoptions were contemplated.

Though the possibility of an adopted son was out of the question from the first, still in form the gift to the daughters and their sons was on failure of the adopted son and after the death of the widow, and that this gift was good was decided by the Privy Council in Radha Prasad Mullick v. Ranee Mani Dasee (2). It was there held that the daughters were entitled to the testator's estate in equal shares for life with a remainder over to their sons.

The decision makes no special mention of the accumulations. But whether they be claimed by the widow as heiress, or the daughters and their sons as universal legatees, they are claimed as part of the testator's estate. The gift in the Will is of the "whole of my estate both real and personal," why then should not the accumulations pass to the universal legatees?

It is contended for the Administrator-General, first, that a direction to accumulate is absolutely bad, and secondly, that if not, still the direction here never had any effective operation as it was a part of a futile scheme for providing for the adopted son and nothing more.

---

The Will is governed by the Hindu Wills Act which makes applicable to the Wills of Hindus certain portions of the Indian Succession Act, 1865, that is to say, sections 46, 48, 49, 50, 51, 5 and 57 to 77 both inclusive, sections 81, 82, 85, 88 to 113 (both inclusive, sections 106 to 177 (both inclusive) and sections 178.

It is noticeable that sections 104 and 105 are not made applicable section 15 imposes a bar on bequests to religious or charitable works: section 104 is aimed against directions for accumulation. This omission was (in my opinion deliberate

It is no doubt provided by section 3 that nothing contained in the Act shall authorise any Hindu to create in property any interest which he could not have created before the 1st day of September 1870, but it cannot be said that every direction to accumulate comes within this ban

No case goes this length, though there is a diversity of opinion as to the extent to which accumulations can be validly directed

As far back as 1836 no less an authority than Colville, C.J., delivering the judgment of the Supreme Court, expressed the opinion that it was competent to a Hindu testator expressly to provide for the accumulations of the surplus income of his estate within the limits allowed by law and to make those accumulations subject to a limitation order as there described: Sreemutty Soorjeemoney Dossee v. Denobundoo Mullick (3), while in Bissonauth Chunder v Sreemutty Bamasoondery Dossee (4) Lord Romilly, delivering the opinion of the Privy Council, refers to the absence from the Will of any direction to accumulate as a matter deserving of observation, a remark that would hardly have been made had it been their Lordships' opinion that the direction to accumulate was necessarily void

In Rajendra Lall Agarwalla v Raj Coomari Dabi (5) Harrington, J., held that there was nothing illegal in a direction to accumulate made by a Hindu and that, if such a direction was neither so unreasonable in its conditions as to be void as against public policy nor given for the purpose of carrying out an illegal object nor in its effect inconsistent with Hindu Law, it should be given effect to.

In Natar Chandra v Ratanmala Debi (6) it was held that a direction to accumulate for the purpose of providing for the marriage expenses of the testator's son was good, while in Jamnabai v. Dharsey (7) a direction to accumulate the income

(1) 27 C. 936: 27 I. A. 128; 4 C. W. N. 549; 2 Bom. L. R. 446; 7 Sar P. C. J. 633; 14 Ind. Dec. N. s. 652.
(2) 35 C. 886: 12 C. W. N. 729 P. C.; 35 I. A. 118 4 M. L. T. 28; 18 M. L. J. 287; 5 A. L. J. 460, 10 Bom. L. R. 604; 8 C. L. J. 48.
(3) (1855) 1 Boulnois 223; 3 Ind. Dec. (o. s.) 133.
(4) 12 M. I. A. 1; 2 Sar P. C. J. 344; 20 E. R. 256
(5) 34 C. 5; 11 C. W. N. 65.
(6) 7 Ind Cas. 921; 15 C. W. W. 66; 18 C. L. J. 85.
(7) 4 Bom. L. R. 893.

be repugnant and so void, as an attempt to deprive a person of the enjoyment of that which has become his property." And later in the judgment he states "What then is the period during which an accumulation can be validly directed? On principle I think it must be for so long a time as the absolute vesting of the entire interest can be withheld" (and I take him to mean by absolute vesting vesting in till a boy to be adopted attained the age of 16, was upheld.

---

In Benode Behari Bose v. Srimati Nistarini Dassi (8) the question of accumulation arose and their Lordships expressed the opinion, not that the direction was void, but that the widow, who in the circumstances was solely entitled to the fund directed to be accumulated, could release the directions for accumulation and enjoy the whole income.

It is true the direction to accumulate for 99 years which came under consideration in Kumara Asima Krishna Deb v. Kumara Kumara Krishna Deb (9) was held to be bad, but it obviously offended the rule against perpetuities. And so a direction which aims at postponing the enjoyment of a presently vested interest created by the testator's Will fails for repugnancy, and to this may be referred the decisions in Srimati Bramamoyi Dasi v. Joges Chandra Dutt (10) and Mokoondo Lall Shaw v. Gonesh Chunder Shaw (11).

So far the cases present no great difficulty, but n Amrito Lall Dutt v Surnomoni Dasi (12), Trevelyan, J., in reference to the direction now under consideration said: "I cannot see how a direction to accumulate can be valid unless there be a present gift to support the direction to accumulate."

I do not clearly understand what the learned Judge here intended to lay down. But though he evidently considered the direction to accumulate in Haridass Dutt's Will void, even he conceded that there might in appropriate circumstances be a good direction to accumulate.

He no doubt remarks that the fact that where there is a minor accumulation can be allowed, and that an accumulation for the purpose of paying debts did not help. Lord Eldon, however, when delivering judgment in the House of Lords in Thellusson v. Woodford (13) evidently regarded the fact that there would be of necessity an accumulation during lunacy as pertinent to the question whether a direction to accumulate was good. It is worthy of notice that the other members of the Bench declined to express agreement with the views of Trevelyan, J. How then does the matter stand on principle? Under the ruling of the Privy Council "the intention of the testator was to create in favour of his daughters an estate for life with remainder over to their sons." [Radha Prasad Mullick v. Ranee Mani Dassee (2).]

This gift to the daughter was of the whole of the testator's estate after the death of their mother.

(8) 32 I. A. 193 at p. 200; 15 M. L. J. 331; 7 Bom. L. R. 887; 33 C. 180; 2 C. L. J. 189; 9 C. W. N. 961.

(9) 2 B. L. R. (O. C.) 11.

(10) 8 B. L. R. 400.

(11) 1 C. 104; 1 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 68.

(12) 25 C. 662; 2 C. W. N. 389; 13 Ind. Dec. (N. S) 435.

(13) (1805) 11 Ves. 112; 8 R. R. 194; 1 Bos. & P. N. R. 357; 32 E. R. 1030.

The gift has been held to be good so far as it relates to the property of the testator at the death. Why should it be bad so far as it relates to the income of that property up to the widow's death?

A direction to accumulate with a gift of the accumulations is not fundamentally bad, it only fails if it offends some independent rule of Hindu Law. Thus it may infringe the rule against perpetuities, and so far as that goes it must be a question for consideration in each case whether there is such an infringement or not. Or the direction to accumulate may be repugnant and so void, as an attempt to deprive a person of the enjoyment of that which has become his property. But if, as the decisions I have cited imply, it was within the power of a Hindu testator to direct the accumulations of property to be added to or made part of his own property, then there would seem to be no difficulty in the way of his making a gift of it to a person who under the same gift may become entitled to the original corpus of the testator's property.

What then is the period during which an accumulation can be validly directed?

On principle, I think it must be for so long a time as the absolute vesting of the entire interest can be withheld, or for so long a time as that during which the corpus of the property can be rendered inalienable, or its course or its devolution can be directed and controlled by a testator.

I know of no other test, and if that be the true test, then the direction to accumulate in this Will is within its bounds and valid.

Therefore, the accumulations passed under the gift to the testator and his sons as a part of the testator's estate.

I think there is no force in the argument that the direction to adopt was inoperative as it merely was an incident of the scheme to make provision for an adopted son. It may be that the expectation that there would be an adopted son was the leading motive for the direction, but it did not on that account cease to operate merely because there could not be an adopted son.

The testator's intention was that the intermediate surplus income should go first to his adoted son and failing that to his daughters and their sons, and that it should so go in the form of accumulations.

The income according to the plaintiff's case has in fact been accumulated, and even if the accumulation had been unnecessary that could not deprive the donees of their right to it. But while I am so far in favour of the plaintiff, I do not think the decree in its present form can stand, for it delegates to the Official Referee the trial and determination of complicated questions of law and fact which should be tried and determined by a Judge of the Court.

possession), "or, for so long a time as that during which the corpus of the property can be rendered inalienable or its course or devolution can be directed and controlled by a testator." This decision of course is binding on me and I have not accordingly thought it necessary to refer to the authorities which are discussed and referred to in the judgment. It remains to apply this decision to the Will before me. Now accumulation is only directed during the lifetime of the widow, consequently there is no perpetuity as this is a period, namely, a life in being, during which the corpus can be rendered inalienable and its course and devolution directed and controlled by the testator. Nor in my opinion is the provision for accumulation repugnant having regard to the form of the residuary gift, and for the reasons which I have already stated. Consequently I hold upon the authority of the above case that the provision for accumulation of surplus income in the Will now before me is not invalid. This disposes of the suit and it is not necessary in the view I take for me to decide whether the widow took a life-estate in the whole income, as I understand that she only desired to press this in the event of the provision for accumulation being held bad. I have expressed my view with regard to Adhar Lal's share, as it was I think necessary for me to do so for the purposes of this judgment; but I do not propose to make any declaration with regard to this share as Adhar Dal's daughters and their representatives are not before the Court and accordingly no declaration which I made would be binding on them. The suit accordingly fails and must be dismissed.

Suit dismissed.

It is specially necessary that the hearing should be before a Judge in view of the difficult points of limitation that may arise.

The suit was instituted on the 12th August 1907, two days within the period prescribed by Article 98 of the Limitation Act of 1877.

The sole plaintiff was Nowell Shaw Watkins. He died before the trial and no one was substituted in his place. Radha Prasad Mulick and Premmoni were not added as plaintiffs till the 5th May 1909.

Over and above this it is suggested that Mr Watkins, was not a competent plaintiff. These matters must be borne in mind when the defence of limitation comes to be considered.

The parties before us have asked us not to deal decisively with the question of limitation at this stage, but to leave this matter to be decided when the case of both parties has been fully placed before the Court.

All, therefore, that we now do is to set aside the decree of Fletcher, J., except so far as it ordered that an entry of the death of Mr. Watkins be made in the register of this suit and that the cause title in the said register be amended by striking out therefrom the name of Mr. Watkins.

And we direct that the case be remanded to the Court of first instance to be tried according to law.

WOODROFFE, J.—I agree.

Appeal allowed:
Case remanded.

PATNA HIGH COURT.
CIVIL REVISION No. 234 OF 1919.
March 22, 1920.
Present:—Mr. Justice Jwala Prasad.
SURAJ PRASAD PANDEY—DEFENDANT—PETITIONER
versus
MR. W. W. BOUCKE—PLAINTIFF—OPPOSITE PARTY.

Acknowledgment of debt, effect of—Suit, whether can be based on acknowledgment—Account stated, what is.

An acknowledgment of a debt only enures to the benefit of the creditor for the purpose of saving limitation if it is made before the original debt is time-barred; but the basis of a suit is always the original debt. No suit can be maintained upon a mere acknowledgment of a debt. [p. 380, col. 1.]

"An account stated" is one where several cross-items are set off one against the other and the balance is struck off in favour of one of the parties In such a case the law implies a new promise by the other party to pay the balance in consideration not merely of past debts but also of the extinguishment of the old debts on each side, and hence it is not necessary that a statement of account should be made within the period of limitation for the recovery of several cross-items. [p. 380, col. 1.]

Second appeal from a decision of the Additional District Judge, Mozuffarpore, dated the 19th May 1919.

Messrs. Parmeshwar Dayal and Ambica Prasad Upadhya, for the Petitioner.

JUDGMENT.—The plaintiff's case as stated in the plaint is that the defendant used to take loans from the plaintiff from time to time and that an account of what was due from him was made up on the 8th October 1917. On that day a sum of Rs. 359-12-0 was found due from the defendant to the plaintiff. The defendant acknowledged it and affixed his signature in the account book of the plaintiff. The basis of the plaintiff's case is stated in paragraph 4 of the plaint to be the said adjustment of account on the 8th October 1913 acknowledged and signed by the defendant.

No suit can be maintained upon a mere acknowledgment of a debt. An acknowledgment only enures to the benefit of the creditor for the purpose of saving limitation under Article 19 of the Limitation Act if the acknowledgment is made before the original debt is time-barred, but the basis of a suit is always the original debt. No doubt under Article 64 of the Limitation Act a suit may be brought within three years upon accounts stated between the parties. "An account stated" is one where several cross-items are set off one against the other and the balance is struck off in favour of one of the parties. In such a case the law implies a new promise by the other party to pay the balance in consideration not merely of past debts but also of the extinguishment of the old debts on each side, and hence it is not necessary that a statement of account should be made within the period of limitation for the recovery of several cross-items, Hargopal v. Abdul (1).

But the entry in the account of the plaintiff of the 8th October 1913 is merely a statement of the balance which was on that date due to the plaintiff from the defendant and cannot possibly be said to be an "account stated" between the parties under Article 64 of the Limitation Act. Hence the entry in the plaintiff's account book, call it an adjustment of accounts, a balance or an acknowledgment of past debts, cannot in itself be the foundation of a suit in Court. Suits based upon similar entries in account books were dismissed in the following cases:—Ganga Prasad v. Ram Dayal (2), Tribhovan Gangaram v. Amina (3), Shankar v. Mukta (4), Debi Prosad v. Ram Ghulam Sahu (5) and Ishar Das v. Harkishan Das (6) (Punjab Chief Court). There is, therefore, concurrent opinion of all the High Courts on the point. The plaintiff's suit must, therefore, be dismissed with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

(1) 9 B. H. C. R. 429.
(2) 23 A. 50.; A. W. N. (1901) 150.
(3) 9 B. 516. 5 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 343.
(4) 22 B. 513; 11 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 923.
(5) 25 Ind. Cas 89; 19 C. L. J. 233.
(6) 35 Ind. Cas. 577; 148 P. W. R. 1916; 7 P. L. R. 1917.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.

FIRST APPEAL FROM ORDER No 80 OF 1919.

February 23, 1920.

Present:—Mr. Justice Piggott and Mr. Justice Walsh.

Musammat SHARIF-UN-NISSA—

—APPELLANT

versus

Qazi MASOOM ALI AND ANOTHER—

RESPONDENTS.

Succession Certificate Act (VII of 1889), s. 19, cls. (d), (e)—Succession certificate, grant of, in respect of entire debt. Partial revocation or modification, when can be ordered.

If a certificate has once been granted in respect of an entire debt, and it becomes apparent to the Court that circumstances have subsequently changed so as to bring into operation clause (d), or (e), or both, of section 19 of Act VII of 1889, it is open to the Court to pass orders having the effect of a partial revocation of the succession certificate once granted, or to modify the terms of that grant in such manner as the interests of justice may seem to require. [p. 382, col. 1.]

First appeal from the order of the Second Additional District Judge, Aligarh, dated the 2 th of April 191?.

The Hon'ble Mr. Narain Prasad Asthana, for the Appellant.

Mr Iqbal Ahmad, for Respondent No. 1, and Mr Haidar, for Respondent No. 2.

JUDGMENT.—This is a first appeal from an order passed under the Succession Certificate Act. The first point taken is that the order complained of is not an order refusing a certificate, but is an order refusing to revoke a certificate against which no appeal is provided by section 19 of Act VII of 1889. In our opinion the order is in effect one refusing to grant a certificate to Musammat Sharif-un nisa, the applicant, and we are bound to entertain the appeal. On the merits the case seems a clear one, except for one difficulty which has greatly influenced the decision in the Court below, namely, the principles laid down in the case of Ghafoor Khan v. Kalandari Begam (1) as to the granting of a succession certificate for the collection of the dower debt of a Muhammadan widow when her husband has died without satisfying her claim in respect of the same. The essential facts of this case are quite simple. The appellant before us is the daughter of Kazi Masum Ali by his wife Musammat Kifayat Fatima. That lady died with her dower-debt unpaid. Her heirs under the Muhammadan Law were her husband, to the extent of a one-fourth share, a brother named Husain Ali to the extent of a one-fourth share, and her daughter, the appellant, in respect of the remaining half share. Husain Ali applied for a succession certificate and the Court to which he applied, following the principles laid down in the ruling to which reference has already been made, compelled him to take out a succession certificate in respect of the entire amount of the dower-debt which was stated in his application at Rs. 25,000. On the strength of this certificate Husain Ali proceeded to institute a suit against Masum Ali, but in this suit he claimed only his own one fourth share of the dower debt. He made no attempt to recover on behalf of and for the benefit of Musammat Sharif-un-nisa the half share in the debt to which that lady was entitled. We understand that Husain Ali has obtained a decree but that this decree is still under appeal in this Court. Musammat Sharif-un nisa thereupon applied to the Court below asking either that the certificate granted in favour of Husain Ali should be revoked and a fresh certificate made out in her name, or in the alternative that her name should be associated with that of Husain Ali in the same certificate to the extent of the half share claimed by her. The Court below has held that no adequate case is made out under the provisions of section 18 of the Succession Certificate Act (No. VII of 1889) for the revocation of the certificate granted to Husain Ali and that, on the principles laid down by the Full Bench of this Court in the ruling already referred to, it is impossible to grant a certificate in any form which would be of any use to Musammat Sharif un-nisa. The appeal before us is against the order of the Court below rejecting her application in toto. The position arrived at is, in our opinion, an impossible one and calls for rectification by this Court. As matters now stand, Musammat Sharif-un nisa is absolutely precluded from instituting a suit for the enforcement of what on the facts stated seems to be a perfectly just claim. We think that the Court below could have revoked the certificate granted to Husain Ali, or at least have revoked the same in part, on more than one ground. In the first place, the proceedings which took place when Husain Ali obtained his certificate were seriously defective in substance within the meaning of clause (a) of section 18 of Act VII of 1889. Musammat Sharif-un-nisa was at the time a minor and her father, whose interest in this matter was obviously opposed to hers, he being the debtor whose liability it was sought to enforce by means of the application, was allowed to accept service of notice on her behalf. We are not saying that Husain Ali himself was to blame for this; but there was this serious defect in the procedure adopted by the Court. Over and above this, the certificate granted to Husain Ali has now become practically inoperative so far as Musammat Sharif-un nisa's share in the debt is concerned, and the decree made in his favour by a competent Court for the recovery of a fractional share only of the dower debt renders it proper and desirable that some further order should be passed enabling Musammat Sharif-un-nissa to claim her legal rights. The learned District Judge would probably have taken very much the same view, but he felt himself constrained by the decision of this Court in Ghafoor Khan v. Kalandari Begam (1) to hold that he could only choose between one of two courses, namely, rejecting Musammat Sharif-un nisa's application, or revoking altogether the certificate in favour of Husain Ali and granting a fresh certificate to Musammat Sharif-un-nisa for the recovery of the entire amount of the dower-debt. The difficulties felt by the learned Judges of this Court in applying the terms of the Succession Certificate Act to the case of a debt of a peculiar nature like the dower-debt of a Muhammadan widow are obvious enough from the judgment delivered in the case above referred to. Undoubtedly it is impossible in dealing with the matter under the Succession Certificate Act to treat the dower-debt as anything but a single debt due to the deceased woman, and the procedure laid down under the Act does not afford any suitable method for deciding conflicting claims as between the heirs of the deceased lady to specific shares in the debt claimed. We do not, therefore, desire to express any dissent from the principles laid down by the Full Bench of this Court, which indeed we are bound as a Divisional Bench to follow. At the same time it seems to us unnecessary to apply those principles beyond the original granting of the certificate. We are of opinion that, if a certificate has once been granted in respect of the entire debt, and it becomes apparent to the Court that circumstances have subsequently changed so as to bring into operation clause (d) or (e), or both, of section 18 of Act VII of 1889, it is open to the Court to pass orders having the effect of a partial revocation of the succession certificate once granted, or to modify the terms of that grant in such manner as the interests of justice may seem to require. It might be possible for us to treat Musammat Sharif-un nisa's share in the dower debt as representing the only debt now remaining to be paid to the heirs of the deceased lady; but this would involve treating the decree passed in favour of Husain Ali as equivalent to complete realisation of his share, which is not precisely the case, more particularly in view of the fact that an appeal is pending against the decree. Nor do we wish to pass any order which should throw difficulties in the way of Husain Ali's realising his claim, presuming it to be a just one. We think, however, that it is competent to us under the terms of the Act to pass the following order.

(1) 9 Ind. Cas. 127; 33 A. 327; 8 A. L. J. 79.

We revoke the certificate granted in favour of Husain Ali to the extent of half of the sum specified in the said certificate, namely, to the extent of Rs. 12,500, and we direct that a certificate for the realisation of this amount, as a debt alleged to be due from Masum Ali to Musammat Kifait Fatima, be granted in favour of the appellant Musammat Sharif-un-nisa. The appellant is entitled to her costs of this appeal, including fees on the higher scale.

Appeal allowed.

NAGPUR JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 185 OF 1916.

November 30, 1916.

Present:—Mr. Mittra, A. J. C.

HARSALSA—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

BAPU—DEFENDANT—RESPONDENT.

Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), s. 54—Sale-deed, unregistered, of immoveable property of the value of Rs. 20, admissibility of, to prove nature of possession.

Defendant relied upon an unregistered sale-deed to prove a sale of an open site for Rs. 20. There was oral evidence of the delivery of the site in dispute:

Held, (1) that the sale-deed did not require registration under the provisions of the Registration Act, but it created no title to the site by virtue of section 54 of the Transfer of Property Act; [p. 383, col. 1.]

(2) that although inoperative as a conveyance, the sale-deed was admissible as evidence of the agreement in pursuance of which delivery of possession took place. [p. 383, col. 2.]

Second appeal by the plaintiff against the appellate decree of the District Judge, Nimar, confirming on the 23rd December 1915 the decree of the Munsif, Khandwa, decided on the 8th September 1915.

Mr. V. R. Pandit, for the Appellant.

Mr. S. Ramdas, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—One Nathu and his brother were Malguzars of a village. The plaintiffs derive their title from them under two documents, one executed in 1910 and the other in 1913. The plaintiffs seek to eject the defendant from a plot in the abadi after the removal of building, he having purchased from one Ghansiam who, in his turn, obtained a house under a Will executed by Madho Sonar. The plaintiffs' case is that none of these people had a transferable interest in the site. The defence was that Madho Sonar purchased the site in dispute from Nathu, the then Malguzar, under an unregistered sale-deed, dated the 25th June 1895, for a consideration of Rs. 20. Exhibit D-1. The lower Appellate Court has dismissed the suit. The District Judge has found that Exhibit D-1 was executed by Nathu, and that the site conveyed by it is identical with the plot in dispute. Both these findings have been questioned before me. I have, after careful consideration of the argument advanced by the learned Counsel for the appellants, come to the conclusion that these findings cannot be successfully impeached in second appeal. With regard to the identity of the plot, there was no plan attached to the sale-deed, and the description given is clearly of a very imperfect character, and the oral evidence on the record justifies the findings of the District Judge.

Now the document (sale-deed) being for Rs. 20 was admissible in evidence, so far as the provisions of the Registration Act are concerned, but under the Transfer of Property Act, it did not create a title. As pointed out in Musammat Rupa Telin v. Bisambar Teli (1), there is nothing to prevent the defendant proving a title by delivery of possession, as required by section 54 of the Transfer of Property Act. This has been found in favour of the defendant, but in determining the question as to the identity of the plot, the lower Appellate Court has relied upon the sale-deed to find the dimensions of the plot sold. It is urged for the appellants that this is in effect treating the unregistered document as a sale-deed. There is some force in the argument. The finding of the lower Court would have been equally justified by the oral evidence, which vaguely refers to the plot in the possession of the defendant, but having regard to the nature of the controversy raised by the plaintiff, it was difficult to avoid all reference to the boundaries and dimensions given in the sale-deed. If the document had been one for the validity of which registration was essential, as was the case in the two cases cited for the appellants, I would have agreed with this contention: Parmanand v. Birkhu (2), Narayan Bisnoi v. Jaswant Singh (3). I think the document may be regarded as an agreement to sell, on the principle laid down in the case of Burjorji v. Muncherji (4). At page 151, West, J., referring to the document in the case before him says: "It is, in terms, a conveyance, that is an instrument translative of ownership. * * I could not consider it as in its purport nothing more than an agreement to convey....But that principal purpose failing, the secondary one becomes the principal, and the document might, I think, be used to ascertain what the formal and final conveyance ought to be." The document, Exhibit D-1, fails to be operative as a conveyance. It is, however, admissible in evidence and may, therefore, be regarded as evidence of the agreement, in pursuance of which the delivery of possession took place.

It is urged that the document merely conveys a right to occupy the site and does not purport to sell the site. Such a construction cannot be adopted. It was an open site without any building on it. The instrument is described as a sale-deed and the site is sold for Rs. 20. I see nothing improbable in a Malguzar selling a small site in 1895 to a non-agriculturist for Rs. 20.

It is urged that Nathu's brother Govind Rao did not join in the conveyance, and, therefore, a good title has not been made out. The answer to this is that any right which Govind Rao may have had to object to the sale by his elder brother was barred by limitation long before the date of the suit, even prior to the purchase of the village by the plaintiffs, and it is not, therefore, open to the plaintiffs to raise any such plea.

The appeal fails and is dismissed with costs.

Appeal dismissed

(1) 8 C. P. L. R. 1.
(2) 1 Ind. Cas. 903; 5 N. L. R, 21.
(3) 1 N. L. R. 147.
(4) 5 B. 143; 3 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 96.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

CIVIL MISCELLANEOUS APPEAL No. 52 OF 19 9.

September 18, 1919.

Present:—Mr. Justice Seshagiri Aiyar and Mr. Justice Moore.

PONNUSWAMI CHETTY AND ANOTHER—DEFENDANTS NOS. 2 AND 3—APPELLANTS

versus

THE VELLORE COMMERCIAL BANK, LTD., BY AGENT KUMARASWAMI AIYAR —PLAINTIFF—RESPONDENT.

Promissory note—Evidence, admissibility of, to fix date of payment—Cause of action, accrual of—Limitation Act (IX of 1908), Sch. I, Arts 69, 80.

Where a promissory note is executed for a loan, evidence is receivable to fix the date of payment. [p. 385, cols. 1 & 2.]

Defendant applied to the plaintiff Bank for a loan on one of the Bank's printed forms, and mentioned therein six months as the period for repayment; his application was accepted and he executed a promissory note in favour of the Bank Upon a suit by the Bank to recover the amount of the promissory note:

Held, (1) that the application to the Bank was admissible in evidence to fix the date of payment; [p. 385, col. 2.]

(2) that the cause of action arose on the expiry of the six months mentioned in the application, and that either Article 69 or 80 of Schedule I to the Limitation Act provided the period of limitation for bringing the suit. [p. 385, col. 2.]

Appeal against the order of the Court of the Temporary Subordinate Judge, Vellore, in Appeal Suit No. 130 of 1918, preferred against the decree of the Court of the District Munsif, Vellore, in Original Suit No. 587 of 1916.

FACTS appear from the judgment.

Mr. A Viswanatha Aiyar, for the Appellants.—The suit is barred. The cause of action arose on the date of the pro note. Neither the application for loan nor the endorsement thereon could be looked into to supplement what is not expressly stated in the pro note. The promissory note should itself fix the time for payment. Besides, under rule 24 of the Bank's Rules the Bank has the option of suing before the due date.

The proviso to Article 73 of the Limitation Act does not apply, as Exhibit B neither restrains nor postpones the right to sue. Article 69 will apply only when the promissory note in terms fixes the period for payment.

Mr. N. Chandrasekhara Aiyar, for the Respondent.—The pro-note and the loan application should be read together. The latter is admissible to supplement the terms of the pro note. Exhibit A contains a promise to pay and the contemporaneous document, Exhibit B, fixes the time for payment. The cause of action arises only on the expiry of that period. Article 69 or Article 80 governs the case.

Rule 24 of the Bank's Rules is a provision intended for the Bank's benefit and does not affect the accrual of the cause of action.

JUDGMENT.—The suit was brought upon a promissory note, Exhibit A. The question is when the cause of action arose for the suit. The defendant applied to the Bank at Vellore by Exhibit B for a loan. The application is in a printed form and he filled up the blank by inserting the words "for 6 months' thavanai." Thereupon the application was referred to an officer of the Bank who made an endorsement to this effect: "The applicants are responsible men. I am of opinion that Rs. 3,000 may be lent to them for six months' thavani at 12 annas per mensem." On the same date the promissory note was executed. In the accounts of the Bank, Exhibit C, six months' interest was deducted from the money paid to the defendant. On these facts the question is whether the cause of action arose on the date of the note or whether it arose only after the six months provided for in the application form, Exhibit B. Mr. Viswanatha Aiyar referred us to one circumstance which may be disposed of at once. He referred to rule 24 of the Rules of the Bank, which provided for the Bank anticipating the due date and suing before the six months are over. That was a provision made in the interests of the Bank and certainly has no effect upon the date upon which the cause of action starts. That provision was doubtless made to enable the Bank to bring a suit, if it found that the defendant had become an insolvent or was likely to leave the jurisdiction of the Court. In our opinion that provision could not in the least affect the starting period of limitation. The learned Vakil for the appellant argued that the exception provided for in Article 73 can have no application to this case. There is something to be said for this argument, because the article speaks of an agreement in writing restraining or postponing the right to sue.

It is doubtful whether Exhibit B really restrains or postpones the right to sue. The proper mode of looking at Exhibit B is to regard it as forming part of the same transaction as Exhibit A and as fixing the period of payment six months after the date on which the document was executed.

The first question is whether this document is receiveble in evidence. If we understand Mr. Viswanatha Aiyar's arguments rightly, he seemed to suggest that if Exhibits A and B are read together, then stamp duty will be payable as on a promissory note payable six months after date. But we regard Exhibit A as containing a promise to pay and Exhibit B, which is contemporaneous with Exhibit A, as fixing the time for payment. That such a document is receivable in evidence is clear from the judgment of Lord Dunedin in Motabhoy Mulla Essabhoy v. Mulji Haridas (1). In that case there was a promissory note for Rs. 50,000 and there was also a contemporaneous oral agreement that the document should not be sued on but that another document should be given for the amount. The suit was brought on a promissory note. The Judicial Committee, differing from the Courts below, held that this agreement, which had the effect of substituting a new contract for the promissory note, could be pleaded in defence and was receivable in evidence. The principle of the decision is applicable to the present case. It is open to defendant to plead that, notwithstanding the language of Exhibit A it was agreed between the parties that the cause of action for the money was not to commence until after six months of the date of the note. Further Cumming v. Shand (2) points out that the custom of the trade can be read into a promissory note or bill of exchange executed by a customer to the Bank. Here the printed form makes it clear that it is customary for the Bank to fix a period for payment. Therefore, the promissory note must be taken to have been given subject to that proviso. To the same effect is the ruling in Brown v. North (3).

For these reasons we are of opinion that the document, Exhibit B with the endorsement thereon, is receivable in evidence.

If they are receivable in evidence, the next question is under what article of the Limitation Act does the present suit fall. As we said at the outset, it may be open to argument whether Article 75 in terms is applicable. But we fail to see why Article 65 or Article 80 should not apply to this case. Article 69 provides for a suit upon a bill of exchange or money payable at a fixed time and the third column is "when the bill or note falls due." It was contended for the appellant that unless the promissory note itself in terms embodies this stipulation as to the period of payment, the article is not applicable. We are unable to agree with this contention. If evidence is receivable to fix the date of payment, then that would explain the contract which has been entered into and would have the effect of supplementing the contract on a matter on which it is silent and which is not in conflict with the terms of the note. Similarly, as regards Article 80, it is a general article which refers to all suits and promissory notes and the third column makes time commence when the bill or note or bond becomes payable. On our view that Exhibit B is receivable in evidence, that document makes the promissory note payable 6 months after the date of the execution of Exhibit A. For these reasons we are of opinion that the Subordinate Judge is right in holding that the cause of action arose six months after the execution of Exhibit A and not immediately after. We are supported in our view by the decision of the Full Bench in Annamalai Chetty v. Velayuddu Nadar (4), although this exact point was not decided in it.

We dismiss the appeal with costs.

M. C. P.

Appeal dismissed.

(1) 23 Ind. Cas. 223; 42 I. A. 103: 17 M. L. T. 402; 28 M. L. J. 589; 13 A. L. J. 529; 19 C. W. N. 713; 21 C. L. J. 507; 17 Bom L. R. 460; 2 L. W. 524; (1915) M W. N. 522; 39 B. 399 (P. C.).

(2) (1860) 5 H. & N. 95; 29 L. J. Ex. 129; 8 W. R, 182; 1 L. T. 300; 157 E. R. 1114; 120 R. R. 498.

(3) (1852) 8 Ex. 1 at pp. 10, 16; 22 L J. Ex. 49; 91 R. R. 318.

(4) 32 Ind. Cas 869; 39 M. 129; 3 L. W. 38; 19 M. L. T. 64; 30 M. L. J. 51; (1916) 1 M. W. N. 93.

COURT OF THE BOARD OF REVENUE, UNITED PROVINCES.

THIRD APPEAL No. 10 OF 1918-19.
February 11, 1920.

Present :—Mr. Ferard, S. M., and Mr. Harrison, J. M.

Musammat RAJ RANI—APPELLANT

versus

RAM KISHORE—RESPONDENT.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XLI, r. 17 (2)—Failure of respondent to appear—Duty of Court—U. P. Land Revenue Act (III of 1901), s. 219—Revision—Material irregularity.

The absence of the respondent on the date fixed for hearing an appeal is no justification for decreeing the appeal Under rule 17 (2) of Order XLI of the Civil Procedure Code the Court is bound to hear the appeal and record a judgment, and its failure to do so amounts to a material irregularity within the meaning of section 219 of the U. P. Land Revenue Act, involving interference by the Board of Revenue.

Third appeal from the order of the Commissioner, Jhansi Division, dated the 22nd of May 1919, in the case of correction of papers.

JUDGMENT.

FERARD, S. M.—(January 15, 1920.)—This is a third appeal under the Land Revenue Act, III of 1901. Musammat Raj Rani is appellant. Ramkishan is respondent. Musammat Rajrani won in the first two Courts. Ramkishan appealed to the Commissioner. The Commissioner, in a summary order with no apparent attempt to consider the merits of Ramkishan's appeal, gave him a decree simply because the respondent before him, Musammat Rajrani, had not appeared to reply to the appeal at the date fixed. This procedure on the Commissioner's part was too summary altogether. When an appellant does not appear, a Court may make a simple order dismissing the appeal under Order XLI, rule 17 (1), but when the appellant appears but the respondent does not, he has to hear the appeal under rule 17 (2) of the same Order (XLI), and he has further to write a judgment, as is apparent from the opening words of Order XLI, rule 21, and a judgment has to contain reasons for the decision on the points in dispute, under rule 31 of the same Order, which is made applicable to cases under the Land Revenue Act by rule 26 of Board's Circular 8-II.

Unless the Commissioner thinks the appellant's case a good one and gives reasons for so doing, he is not entitled to allow his appeal merely because the respondent has not turned up.

It is, however, argued that I cannot interfere in third appeal because of the specific section 201 of the Land Revenue Act. No doubt section 200 covers respondent as well as appellant and the word "order" in section 201 may be construed having in that section a wider meaning than it has in Order XLI, rule 17 (1), Civil Procedure Code, but this is immaterial in the present case. Taking the case to be that an appeal does not lie, a remedy is open by treating the case in revision under the latter portion of section 219, Land Revenue Act. The late Commissioner's order contained material irregularity and I would set it aside in revision and direct that the case be restored to his file and heard and decided on merits, opportunity being given to the appellant Musammat Rajrani to appear and reply as respondent before the Commissioner. Parties will pay their own costs in the present proceeding. Other costs will be determined by the Commissioner when he finally decides the appeal.

HARRISON, J. M.—(February 11, 1920).—I agree. Rules 17 and 21 of Order XLI are made applicable by rule 24 of the Board's Circular 8-II.

Order set aside.

NAGPUR JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

FIRST CIVIL APPEAL No. 10 OF 1916.
January 29, 1917.

Present:—Mr. Mittra, A. J. C.

NARHAR—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

NARAIN—DEFENDANT—RESPONDENT.

Hindu Law—Joint family Purchase in name of one member—Benami transaction—Real owner, whether bound by result of litigation to which benamidar is party—Limitation Act (IX of 1908), s. 22—Party already represented, joinder of, after expiry of limitation, effect of—Trusts Act (II of 1882), s. 83—Resulting trust—Purchase in name of one person with money supplied by several, effect of Person interested in litigation but not party to suit, whether bound by result.

NARHAR v. NARAIN.

A purchase in the name of one member of a joint Hindu family is a benami transaction, especially when that member is not the managing member or a representative of the family. [p. 388, col. .]

A benamidar is allowed to represent the real owner in suits both as plaintiff as well as defendant, and a decree obtained by a benamidar or against a benamidar is binding upon the real owner. [p. 388, col. 1.]

If a person is already represented in a suit by a party to the suit, his joinder is not the joinder of a new plaintiff or a new defendant, within the meaning of section 22 of the Limitation Act. [p. 388, col. 1.]

A resulting trust takes place where several persons jointly furnish the purchase-money and the purchase is made in the name of one of them [p. 388, col. 1.]

A person interested in a litigation is not bound to apply to have himself made a party and in default to be bound by the result of that litigation. [p 389, col 2.]

First appeal against the decree of the Additional District Judge, Nagpur, decided on the 30th October 1915.

Mr. D. T. Mangalmurti, for the Appellant.

The Hon'ble Sir B. K. Bose and Mr. M. B. Kinkhede, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—One Balaji died in 1883 leaving a widow Chandrabhaga and a stepmother Kaveri. Chandrabhaga died on the 21st December 1898 as found by the lower Court, and the present suit was instituted on the 19th December 1910 by the plaintiff, who is admittedly one of the nearest reversioners of Balaji. Chandrabhaga had executed four mortgages in the name of defendant No. 1, who was the sole defendant when the suit was instituted. Upon the basis of these mortgages two suits were instituted for foreclosure by defendant No. 1 and two decrees absolute were passed in his favour and possession was taken by him in 1895. The plaintiff's case is that there was no legal necessity for the mortgages, and that the plaintiff is entitled to recover possession of half share of the property either unconditionally, or subject to payment of so much of the mortgage money as is legally binding upon the reversioner. One Amrit, who is the grandson of the plaintiff's brother, has refused to join in the suit, and the plaintiff, therefore, claims only half share. Upon an objection raised by the defendant, by an order of the Court, his father and brother who were admittedly members of a joint Hindu family, were made parties after the period of limitation had expired. The lower Court has held that the mortgagee made enquiries as to the necessity for loans and was satisfied about its existence, and the lower Court has also held that the whole suit was barred by limitation.

There are two questions which arise for decision in this case. The first is whether the plaintiff's suit is barred by reason of joinder of the other defendants when more than twelve years had elapsed from the date of the cause of action. The second is whether there is legal necessity for the various loans and which of them.

I will take up the point of limitation first. The defendant No. 2, the father of the first defendant, who is since dead, was at the time of mortgage in the Government service, and in order to evade the rule relating to the conduct of Government servants, had the mortgage taken not in his own name, as a manager of a joint Hindu family, but in the name of his son, the defendant No. 1. It was this defendant who brought the two suits without joining his co-parceners. It was he in whose name mutation took place in revenue records. He is, therefore, a "benamidar" for the joint family consisting of himself and his co-parceners. It is urged before me that a transaction of this kind is not a "benami" transaction inasmuch as it is a purchase in the name of one member of a joint and undivided family, and it is argued that a resulting trust only takes place when property is acquired by one man in the name of a perfect stranger having no interest in the property so transferred. The answer to the first argument is to be found in the passage from the judgment of Mr. Justice Mitter in Ohunder Nath Moitro v. Kristo Komul Singh (1), cited by Mayne:—"So far as the ordinary and usual course of things is concerned, the practice of making benami purchases in the names of female members of joint undivided Hindu families is just as much rife in this country, as that of making such purchases in the names of male members." It follows that a purchase in the name of one member of a joint Hindu family is a benami transaction, especially when that member is not the managing member or a representative of the family. As regards the principle of resulting trust embodied in section 83 of the Indian Trusts Act, the wording of the section is consistent with the view that a resulting trust takes place when three persons jointly furnish the purchase money, and the purchase takes place in the name of one of them. I have not been shown any authority against this view. Now a benamidar is allowed to represent the real owner in suits both as plaintiff as well as defendant. A decree obtained by a benamidar or against a benamidar is binding upon the real owner. If then he represents the real owner, the joinder of the other defendants was unnecessary, inasmuch as the decree even without their joinder would have been binding upon them. This view is supported by the decision of the Bombay High Court in Ravji v. Mahadev (2). The joinder of the real owner, after the period of limitation had expired, was held to be not a case contemplated by section 22 of the Limitation Act. The principle, I understand, is that if a person is already represented by a party to the suit, his joinder is not the joinder of a new plaintiff or a new defendant. Acting on this principle I hold that the suit was not barred by limitation.

(1) 15 W. R. 357.

I now proceed to discuss whether there was any legal necessity for the various mortgages which culminated in the foreclosure decrees. The lower Court finds that the defendant No. 2 made proper enquiries from not only the father of Chandrabhaga and her Muktiar but also from two persons Madho and Chintaman who are now dead. There is no doubt in my mind that there was necessity for the loan in favour of Jairam for Rs. 1,000. This was required for the purpose of obtaining possession of the estate of Chandrabhaga's husband which was then in the hands of his step mother. But it does not follow that there was necessity for all the loans which were taken to embark in the various litigations in which Chandrabhaga had figured. After obtaining possession of her husband's estate from Musammat Kaveri, Chandrabhaga embarked upon a litigation for rendition of accounts and mesne profits against Musammat Kaveri and her agent. Rs. 599 are said to have been advanced for this purpose as recited in the mortgage-deed Exhibit D-35. There was, of course, no necessity for this litigation. It was a foolish litigation, for it does not appear that anything could have been recovered from either of the persons against whom the suit was filed. It is impossible for me to pass this item as one incurred for legal necessity or binding upon reversioners. The taxed costs of suit for possession against Musammat Kaveri, which I have held to be a proper litigation, amounted to Rs. 492. The whole of the amount originally borrowed from Jairam, Rs. 1,000, would be more than enough for that litigation. On the mortgage deed, Exhibit D-34, therefore, I allow Rs. 1,042 8-0 paid to Jairam. On the date when Exhibit D-34 was executed, a decree had already been passed a week previously for possession of the estate. Therefore, I can find no justification for raising another item of Rs. 600 for the purpose of litigation. The slightest enquiry would have shown that no such money was needed. I think Rs. 1,042-8 0, is all that can be claimed as binding upon the reversioners under Exhibit D-34. Now dealing with the second mortgage Rs. 101-4-0, expenses in connection with a criminal case brought by Kaveri against Chandrabhaga may be passed as properly incurred. Similarly Rs. 202-4-0 taken for costs in a suit instituted by Kaveri for maintenance may be allowed, for Kaveri was claiming Rs. 15 per month as maintenance and the Court eventually reduced the claim to Rs. 10 per month. Rs. 65 borrowed for expenses in connection with the Sradh ceremony of Chandrabhaga's father-in-law appears to be a legitimate item. In the third mortgage-bond, Exhibit D 36, the purpose for which the money was taken is not recited. I am dealing with the case of a creditor who in the previous bonds gives full details of the purposes of the loans but deliberately omits to mention the purpose in this bond. I cannot accept the defendant No. 2's statement about enquiries and allow his claim under this bond at all. The fourth mortgage bond ostensibly for Rs. 2,500 was never given full effect to. Money was borrowed by Chandrabhaga for filing a suit for specific performance against one Ahalya for the purchase of a village for Rs. 1,800, which she according to defendant No. 2 expected to sell for Rs. 3,000, thus making a profit of Rs 1,500. This was a speculation and it is obvious that the money borrowed for such a purpose cannot be held binding upon the reversioners: as a matter of fact only Rs. 816 were advanced under this bond and items regarding Court-fees and Pleader's fees in connection with this suit must be disallowed. The only other item to make up the total of Rs. 816 is Rs. 500 said to be due on a bond not produced but defendant No. 2 as witness says is a bond in connection with the suit for rendition of accounts and mesne profits. I have already held that was not a proper suit to have embarked upon and the money advanced for it cannot be claimed for the reversioners.

(2) 22 B. 672; 11 Ind Dec. (N. S.) 1030.

The lower Court has relied upon certain loose papers supposed to contain the accounts of Chandrabhaga and produced by D. W. No. 12. They are merely copies and the original was not called for and they are not admissible in evidence. Apart from this I cannot place any reliance upon these loose sheets of paper. Balkrishna who produced them makes a significant remark that he kept these papers with him, as he anticipated a claim from the plaintiff in respect of Chandrabhaga's estate. An agent may keep for his own protection copies of accounts for a few years during which he may be sued: but it is strange that he should have kept these carefully preserved and filed them in 1914. I think these accounts filed by D. W. No. 12 must be rejected.

The suit in which the first foreclosure decree was passed was instituted for the recovery of money due under the mortgage-deeds Exhibits D 34, D 35 and D-36. A decree was passed for the total amount due under them. It is in evidence that the present plaintiff knew of the first of the three mortgages. It is argued that although the plaintiff was not made a party, he ought to have redeemed so much of the mortgage or such of the mortgages as was binding upon the reversioners. No doubt if the suit had been based solely upon a mortgage binding in its entirety on the reversioners, a foreclosure decree obtained thereupon would have been binding upon the reversioners. But in the suit instituted by the defendant No. 1 against Chandrabhaga, he joined all three mortgages and so the reversioners could not have very well been asked to redeem part of the mortgage. Not being made parties, the reversioners were not bound to redeem and the widow's inaction in the matter cannot in the least prejudice the reversionary rights. The argument before me is that as the reversioner knew of the suit he should have applied to be made a party and sought to redeem so much of the mortgage as is binding. No authority has been cited in support of the proposition that a person interested in certain litigation is bound to apply to have himself made a party and in default to be bound by the result of that litigation. It is true that when a suit is carried on on behalf of a person not made a party he may be bound by the result of that litigation, but this was not a case of that kind. Here the suit was against Chandrabhaga and not against the reversioner. I hold that there is no force in the argument that the knowledge of the plaintiff of the litigation bars his making the present claim.

The plaintiff had knowledge and was present when the money was paid by Jairam. He in fact received Rs. 18 advanced to Chandrabhaga out of the consideration money from Jairam. Under the circumstances the propriety of the loan in favour of Jairam must be presumed. On this ground I will allow the whole of Rs. 1,042-8-0 paid by the defendant to Jairam. But the consent obtained from Chintaman when he was executing a bond in favour of the defendant is also relied upon as raising a presumption. Chintaman was then separate from his brother, the present plaintiff. It was, therefore, the consent of one of two reversioners or rather ratification by him. Ordinarily a presumption in favour of the propriety of a transaction is made when it has the consent or is subsequently ratified by the next reversioner, but the circumstances of the present case entirely rebut the presumption. The recitals of the document completely prove that money was being advanced for litigation, which was useless and unnecessary. Therefore, I am not prepared to differ from the lower Court in its view that in regard to mortgages other than the one in favour of Jairam no presumption of their propriety should be made.

A small amount in respect of proportionate costs of stamp and registration would have to be added to the above items. The learned Pleader for the respondent tells me that the amount which I have declared to be a proper charge on the estate may be taken as satisfied out of the usufruct and, therefore, there need be no further enquiry as to the profits received by the defendants. The result is that the plaintiff's suit succeeds. The decree of the lower Court is set aside and in lieu thereof a decree for possession is passed as prayed for in the plaint. The respondent will pay the costs in both the Courts.

Decree set aside.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

LETTERS PATENT APPEAL No. 7 OF 1919.

August 12, 1919.

Present:—Justice Sir John Woodroffe, KT., and Mr. Justice N. R Chatterjea.

NAKUL CHANDRA BARUA AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—APPELLANTS

versus

SASTI CHARAN BISWAS—PLAINTIFF—RESPONDENT

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 11—Res judicata—Revenue sale—Purchaser, position of—Decree obtained by ex-proprietor, whether can be taken, advantage of—Tenants, position of.

The purchaser of an estate at a revenue sale is not bound by the act of the ex-proprietor. He gets the estate as it stood at the time of the Permanent Settlement. But it is open to the purchaser, if he wishes, to accept a previous decision between the ex-proprietor and his tenants as binding on himself and take advantage of it. If he does so, the tenants cannot object, because the purchaser is not in any worse position than the ex-proprietor and may elect to take advantage of the decree obtained by the latter, although the decree is not res judicata as between the purchaser and the tenants. [p. 391, col. 1.]

Letters Patent Appeal against the decree of Mr. Justice Beacheroft, dated the 26th of November 1918, in Appeal from Appellate Decree No. 1109 of 1917, reported as 49 Ind. Cas. 959, reversing that of the District Judge Chittagong, dated the 29th of March 1917.

FACTS appear from the judgment.

Babu Chandra Sekhar Sen, for the Appellants.

—Defendants are appellants here This appeal arises out of a suit for enhancement of rent on the ground of rise in the price of foodstuffs and also on the ground of the rent being lower than the prevailing rate.

In 1903 the ex-proprietor of the estate instituted a suit for ejectment or assessment of rent in the alternative. The 1st Court thought that the previous decree would be binding and decreed the suit. The lower Appellate Court found it would not be binding and dismissed the suit. Mr. Justice Beacheroft in this Hon'ble Court held that the previous suit was res judicata and would be binding and decreed the suit.

My first submission is that the decree in the previous suit would not be binding as between the tenant and the auction-purchaser of the estate at the revenue sale.

Sections 33—35 of the Bengal Tenancy Act show the modes prescribed by the Bengal Tenancy Act for enhancement of rent.

The rent-decree of 1903 cannot be said to be res judicata because the soil has undergone change since 1903.

The presumption under section 27 of the Bengal Tenancy Act would not arise in this case. Upon the findings of the Court of Appeal below no appeal lay before this Court.

[CHATTERJEA, J.—Fifteen years have not yet expired since the last enhancement in 1903.]

In section 37 the manner prescribed refers to sections 30, 31A, 31B, 32, 35 and 36 of the Bengal Tenancy Act.

Section 37 is only a part of the substantive law and limits the power of the landlord to enhance the rent. It is not a part of procedure.

Did the Legislature contemplate different procedure in case of contract and suit?

I submit it did not. If the ex-proprietor makes a contract and then the present proprietor institutes a suit, an anomalous position will arise under section 37. Therefore, section 37 is not a part of the procedure Refers to Moonshee Buzlool Rahman v. Iran Dhun

Dutt (1).

The previous suit is not res judicata. See Radha Gobind Koer v. Rakhal Das Mukherjee (2), Gadadhar Bose v. Radha Charan Poddar (3).

If the auction-purchaser does not derive his title from ex-proprietor, the previous decision does not affect the rights of the parties.

If these decisions are not binding, I submit that the finding that no evidence was there to assess an equitable rent is conclusive. His Lordship Mr. Justice Beachcroft is in error in deciding that point in second appeal.

Babus Jogesh Chandra Roy and Charu Chandra Sen, for the Respondents, were not called upon.

JUDGMENT.

WOODROFFE, J.—I do not decide this appeal as a question of res judicata for it may be said that the auction-purchaser was not a party to the previous litigation nor did he claim under the ex proprietor within the meaning of section 11 of the Code of Civil Procedure. The purchaser is not bound by the act of the ex-proprietor. He gets the estate as it stood at the time of the Permanant Settlement. But the position here is this. The matter would have been res judicata if the question had arisen between the ex-proprietor and the tenants and in such case the latter would be bound to pay the rent previously adjudicated, and it is open to the purchaser, if he wishes, to accept the previous decision as binding on himself and the advantage of it. If he does so, it seems to me that the tenant cannot object. The purchaser is certainly not in any worse position than the ex-proprietor and may elect to take advantage of the decree obtained by the latter. If this were not so, then at each and every sale all previous litigations might be re opened and the purchaser in such a case might be worse off than the ex proprietor from whom he had purchased. I do not decide here what would be the effect if the purchaser had not accepted the previous decision. No doubt mutuality is a test of res judicata, but this is not a question of res judicata as between the purchaser and the tenant, but it is a case in which the tenant would have been bound towards his previous landlord and in which the purchaser at the revenue sale has elected to succeed to the right in this respect of the ex-proprietor. The rights of the tenants are in no way enlarged by the revenue sale.

In my opinion, therefore, there is no ground for reversing the decision of this Court and the appeal must be dismissed with costs.

CHATTERJEA, J.—I agree.

Appeal dismissed.

(1) 8 W. R. 222.
(2) 12 C. 84; 6 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 56.
(3) 34 C. 868.

PRIVY COUNCIL.

CONSOLIDATED APPEALS FROM THE MADRAS HIGH COURT.

March 18, 1920.

Present:—Viscount Cave, Lord Moulton, Sir John Edge and Mr. Ameer Ali.

ADUSUMILLI KRISTNAYYA AND OTHERS —APPELLANTS

versus

ADUSUMILLI LAKSHMIPATHI AND OTHERS - RESPONDENTS.

Hindu Law—Mitakshara—Dravada School—Adoption by widow—Consent of nearest sapindas, whether necessary—Consent of more distant relatives, whether sufficient.

Under the Mitakshara Law as administered in the Dravada country, a Hindu widow, although not authorised by her husband to adopt a son to him, may nevertheless make such an adoption with the consent of his nearest sapindas. [p. 392, col. 1]

The consent required is that of a substantial majority of those agnates nearest in relationship who are capable of forming an intelligent and honest judgment on the matter. [p 392, col. 2.]

Save in exceptional cases, e g, minority, lunacy or absence in a distant country, the consent of the nearest sapindas must be asked and if it is not asked, it is no excuse to say that they would certainly have refused; but where a sapinda is clearly proved to have withheld his consent from corrupt or malicious motives, his dissent may be disregarded. [p 392, col. 2.]

The absence of consent on the part of the nearest sapindas cannot be made good by the authorisation of more distant relatives [p 392, col. 2.]

Veerabasavaraju Pantulu v. Balasurya Prasada Rao, 48 Ind Cas. 706; 45 I. A. 265; 41 M. 998; 25 M. L. T. 1; 17 A. L J. 34; 36 M. L. J. 40; 23 C. W. N. 251; 29 C. L. J 184; 9 L. W. 243; 21 Bom. L. R. 238; 1 U. P. L. R. (P. C.) 18, followed.

Consolidated appeals from a decree of the Madras High Court (Wallis, C. J, and Seshagiri Aiyar, J.), dated October 27th, 1915, reported as 32 Ind. Cas. 253, which (substantially) affirmed a decree of the Temporary Subordinate Judge, Masulipatam ADUSUMILLI KRISHNAYYA v. ADUSUMILLI LAKSHMIPATHI.

FACTS of the case and the arguments adduced sufficiently appear from their Lordships' judgment. The case lays down no new law, having been for all practical purposes concluded by their Lordships' judgment in Veerabasavaraju Pantulu v. Balasurya Prasada Rao (1) delivered after these appeals were filed: but it is reported for the succinct summary which the judgment contains of the law of adoption by a Hindu widow in the Dravada country.

Mr. De Gruyther, K. C., and Mr. Dube, for the Appellants.

Mr. Dunne, K. C., and Mr. Parikh, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.

VISCOUNT CAVE.—These are consolidated appeals from a decree of the High Court of Judicature at Madras, which affirmed, with variations, a decree of the Subordinate Judge of Masulipatam. The question for determination is whether the adoption of the first appellant, Adusumilli Kristnayya, is valid under the Hindu Law as administered in the Madras Presidency.

The parties are subject to the Mitakshara Law of adoption as administered in the Dravada country: and that law, which has been considered by the Judicial Committee in several recent cases, is now free from doubt. It was decided in the Ramnad case [Collector of Madura v. Moottoo Ramalinga Sathupathy (2)] that under the law here referred to a Hindu widow, although not authorised by her husband to adopt a son for him, may nevertheless make such an adoption with the consent of his sapindas. In a later case, Vellanki Venkata Krishna Rao v. Venkata Rama Lakshmi (3), it was said that:—

"There should be such proof of assent on the part of the sapindas as should be sufficient to support the inference that the adoption was made by the widow, not from capricious or corrupt motives in order to defeat the interest of this or that sapinda, but upon a fair consideration by what may be called a family council of the expediency of substituting an heir by adoption to the deceased husband."

The reference in the last mentioned case to a "family council" gave rise to some doubt whether where there were agnatic relations closely related to the deceased, the assent of those standing in a remoter degree was either necessary or sufficient; but this doubt was resolved in the recent case of Veerabasavaraju Pantulu v. Balasurya Prasada Rao (1), where it was held that the absence of consent on the part of the nearest sapindas cannot be made good by the authorisation of distant relatives whose assent is more likely to be influenced by improper motives. This does not mean that the consent of a near sapinda who is incapable of forming a judgment on the matter, such as a minor or a lunatic, is either sufficient or necessary; nor does it exclude the view that, where a near relative is clearly proved to be actuated by corrupt or malicious motives, his dissent may be disregarded. Nor does it contemplate cases where the nearest sapinda happens to be in a distant country, and it is impossible without great difficulty to obtain his consent or where he is a convict or suffering a term of imprisonment. The consent required is that of a substantial majority of those agnates nearest in relationship who are capable of forming an intelligent and honest judgment on the matter. It must, however, be added that, save in exceptional cases such as those mentioned above, the consent of the nearest sapindas must be asked and if it is not asked it is no excuse to say that they would certainly have refused [Venkamma v. Subramaniam (4)]. Regard must also be had to the following observations of the Board in Sri Virada Pratapa Raghunada Deo v. Sri Brozo Kishoro Patta Deo (5):

"But it is impossible not to see that there are grave social objections to making the succession of property, and it may be in the case of collateral succession, as in the present instance, the rights of parties in actual possession, dependent on the caprice

(1) 48 Ind. Cas. 706; 45 I. A. 265; 41 M. 998; 25 M. L. T. 1; 17 A. L. J. 34; 36 M. L. J. 40; 23 C. W. N. 251; 29 C. L. J. 184; 9 L. W. 243; 21 Bom. L. R. 238; 1 U P L R. (P. C.) 18.

(2) 12 M. I. A. 397; 10 W. R. P C. 17; 1 B L. R. (P. C.) 1; 2 Suth. P. C. J. 135; 2 Sar. P C. J. 361; 20 E. R. 389; 3 Mad. Jur. 298; 1 Ind. Dec. (N. s.) 1.

(3) 4 I. A. 1; 1 M. 174; 1 Ind Jur. 63; 16 W. R. 21; 3 Sar. P. C. J. 669; 3 Suth. P. C. J. 353; 1 Ind. Dec. (N. s.) 116 (P. C.).

(4) 34 I. A. 22 at p 26; 9 Bom. L R. 89; 20 M. 50; 4 A L. J. 150; 5 C. L. J. 143; 11 C. W. N. 345; 17 M. L. J 114; 2 M. L. T. 91.

(5) 3 I A. 254; 1 M. 69; 11 Mad Jur 188; 25 W. R. 291; 3 Sar. P. C. J. 682; 3 Suth P. C. J. 263; 1 Ind. Dec. (N. s.) 45 (P. C.).

of a woman, subject to all the pernicious influences which interested advisers are too apt in India to exert over women possessed of, or capable of exercising dominion over, property. It seems, therefore, to be the duty of the Courts to keep the power strictly within the limits which the law has assigned to it."

Turning now to the facts of the present case, the relationship between the parties will be explained by the following pedigree:—

ADSUMILLI VENKATRAMUDU.

- Krishnamman, deceased
  - Janardanudu, defendant No. 5, died pendente lite
    - Venkataramayya, defendant No. 4, married Punnamma, defendant No. 2.
    - Venkata Gopaludu, defendant No. 6.
- Lakhminarayana, deceased,
  - Lakshmipathi, plaintiff No. 1.
- Lingarayudu, deceased
  - Venkatramanjaneyalu, plaintiff No. 3, died pendent lite,
    - Lingarayudu, plaintiff No. 5.
- Venkanna, deceased,
  - Venkatramudu, plaintiff No. 2.
  - Rama-Sastrulu, plaintiff No. 4.
  - Pulliah, deceased.
  - Subbiah, deceased.
- Sheshadri, died in 1887, married Narasamma, died in April, 1908,
  - Venkata Subbaiya, died in 1888, last male owner of the suit properties.
  - Sobanadamma, daughter, defendant No. 3
    - Punnamma, daughter, defendant No. 2, married Venkataramayya, defendant No. 4.
  - Kristnayya, alleged to have been adopted on February 20th, 1908, defendant No. 1.

Sheshadri, who was separated from his brothers, died in the year 1887 leaving a widow, Narasamma, and an only son, Venkata Subbaiya, who was then about thirteen years of age and unmarried. In the month of October 1888 this son was murdered, and his mother succeeded to the property of her husband, taking a Hindu widow's estate. Pulliah and Subbiah, two of the sons of Sheshadri's brother Venkanna, were charged with the murder, but were acquitted. They were then charged with the theft of some jewels which were on the person of the murdered boy before his death, but Pulliah died before the trial and Subbiah was ultimately acquitted on this charge also. On the 8th September 1901 Narasamma called a meeting of her husband's gnatis and obtained from 14 of them a deed authorising her to receive in adoption to her husband any boy she might like. At that time the nearest sapindas of Sheshadri were six in number, viz., the fifth defendant Janardanudu, and the five plaintiffs; but of these only Janardanudu signed the deed, and the other signatories were gnatis of remoter degrees. Narasamma did not at once act on this authority, but upwards of six years afterwards, viz, on the 20th February 1908, she adopted the defendant Kristnayya, who was then of age. Before making the adoption she entered into agreements with Kristnayya and his natural father under which the greater part of the property of Sheshadri was put at her absolute disposal, and she, in fact, disposed of it in favour of the issue of her daughter. Narasamma died in April 1908 and shortly afterwards this suit was brought by the plaintiffs to set aside the adoption.

From the above statement of facts, standing alone, the obvious conclusion would be that the adoption was invalid for want of the assent of five out of the six nearest sapindas. But the defendants by their written statement in the case alleged that Narasamma had applied, first to Venkanna (the only brother of Seshadri who survived him), and after his death to the plaintiffs and Subbiah, for their authority to make an adoption; and that all those persons, "out of dishonest and corrupt motives" and by reason of the long-standing enmity caused by the charges of murder and theft made against Pulliah and Subbiah, and with the desire to succeed to the property of Venkata Subbaiya, had refused or neglected to grant the authority asked for. In support of this plea the defendants called evidence of four attempts to obtain the desired authority. First, it was alleged that Narasamma, through her gumasta, applied to Venkanna for his consent, and that he put off his reply and died shortly afterwards without giving the desired authority. Secondly, it was alleged that Narasamma personally requested the third plaintiff, Venkatramanjaneyulu to consent to an adoption and to get the other plaintiffs and Subbiah to consent, that he promised to consult them and let her know, but that he never, in fact, gave her a reply. Thirdly, it was stated that the plaintiffs and Subbiah were invited to and were present at the meeting of gratis on the 8th September 1901 and that on being requested to agree to an adoption they replied that "there was no hurry" and shortly afterwards left the meeting. Fourthly, it was alleged that shortly before the actual adoption in 1908 Narasamma again sent an emissary to the plaintiffs (Subbiah being then dead) and asked for their consent to an adoption, but that they refused to give it except on payment of Rs. 10,000. The evidence relating to these allegations was examined both by the Subordinate Judge and by the High Court, and both tribunals came to the conclusion that none of the alleged requests had been proved. Notwithstanding these concurrent findings, their Lordships were pressed by Counsel for the appellants to examine the evidence on this question; and as the findings of the Subordinate Judge were by no means clear and his reasons were somewhat inconsistent, they have considered the evidence which was brought to their notice by Counsel on both sides. As the result of this consideration they have come to the following conclusions:—

1. The finding of the Courts on the question of these alleged applications was mainly based upon the view that, having regard to the hostility existing between the plaintiffs and Narasamma, it was unlikely that they would have been asked for their consent: but the evidence as a whole does not appear to support this view. The first plaintiff was not on unfriendly terms with Narasamma and at one time got her lands cultivated for her; and the Subordinate Judge in one part of his judgment says that there was "no ill feeling" between them The third plaintiff was plainly on speaking terms with Narasamma and was from time to time consulted by her; and the Subordinate Judge himself says that "it is not unlikely that he was requested by Narasamma to give his consent and also ascertain the wishes of his cousins, as probably the other persons were not quite so well disposed towards Narasamma as the third plaintiff." As to the other plaintiffs there was no clear evidence; and although it is very probable that the charges made against their brothers caused an estrangement between the second and fourth plaintiffs and Narasamma, the Subordinate Judge expressed a doubt whether this feeling continued in the same intensity down to the year 1901. Upon the whole, the true inference appears to their Lordships to be that, while there was some unfriendliness between Narasamma and two of the plaintiffs, this did not extend to the other plaintiffs and was not in any case such as to prevent Narasamma from asking for their consent to an adoption. Further, in no case is there evidence of such malice on the plaintiffs' part as would prevent them from forming an honest judgment on the matter.

2. It appears probable that Venkanna was asked for his consent: but as he died without giving a reply and there is no evidence of ill feeling on his part, this circumstance is immaterial.

3. It is also not improbable that shortly before the meeting of September 1901, the third plaintiff was consulted on the question of an adoption and was asked to ascertain the views of the other plaintiffs and Subbiah; but there is nothing to show that he did in fact ask for their consent or that his reply was delayed by reason of spite or malice. This circumstance, therefore, is also of little importance.

4. With regard to the meeting of the 8th September 1901 the evidence is conflicting. The defendants' witnesses say that the plaintiffs were present, and on being consulted said that there was no hurry about the matter and went away; but this is denied by the surviving plaintiffs. The defendants' witnesses were not believed by the Subordinate Judge, and it must be held that this allegation is not proved.

5. As to the alleged request in 1908, the defendants' evidence is conflicting and unreliable, and this allegation also breaks down.

The result of the above survey of evidence is that, in their Lordships' view, Narasamma is proved to have applied for the consent of the third plaintiff, but not of the other four plaintiffs, and that none of these five nearest sapindas is proved to have withheld his consent for any malicious or corrupt reason. It follows that the necessary assent of sapindas was not obtained, and the adoption was invalid.

Counsel for the appellants put forward an alternative argument, viz, that in view of the finding of the Courts in India that there was great hostility between the plaintiffs and Narasamma, it was unnecessary for her to ask for their consent; but this argument cannot be entertained. It is inconsistent, not only with the defendants' pleading, but with the whole of their evidence and arguments in the Courts below; and it is not open to them to make an entirely new case before this Board. In any case the argument derives no support either from the facts or from the law as above explained.

Apart from the absence of the necessary assent, other objections to the adoption were put forward on behalf of the respondents. It was said (1) that an authority given by sapindas to adopt "any boy at any time" is invalid [see Suryanarayana v. Venkataramana (6)]; that an authority given by sapindas in 1901 could not validly be executed in 1908 when several of the signatories were dead and the opinion of others might have altered; and (3) that an authority to adopt asked and given for religious motives and in order to keep up the line of succession to Seshadri was not properly exercised by the adoption of Kristnayya on the terms that he should give up to the adopting widow or to her relatives the greater part of her late husband's estates. These questions, although raised in the Courts below, were not the subject of decision there; and their Lordships accordingly refrain from expressing any opinion upon them. But it is certain that these circumstances do not detract from the obligation imposed upon the Courts in cases of this character to require a strict compliance with the conditions imposed by law.

For the above reasons their Lordships will humbly advise His Majesty that these appeals be dismissed with costs.

Appeals dismissed.

Solicitor for the Appellant:—Mr. Douglas Grant.

Solicitors for the Respondent:—Messrs. Barrow, Rogers & Nevill.

(6) 26 M. 681.

PRIVY COUNCIL.

CONSOLIDATED APPEALS FROM THE MADRAS HIGH COURT.

February 20, 1920.

Present:—Viscount Cave, Lord Moulton, Sir John Edge and Mr. Ameer Ali.

RAMATHAI VADIVELU MUDALIAR —APPELLANT

versus

PERIA MANICKA MUDALIAR AND OTHERS —RESPONDENTS.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 66, object of—Court sale—Agreement by purchaser to convey property purchased, whether enforceable.

The object of section 66 of the Code of Civil Procedure is to put an end to purchases at Court auctions by one person in the name of another. [p. 398, col.]

An agreement by an auction-purchaser subsequent to the purchase to convey a portion of the property to another is not affected by section 66 of the Civil Procedure Code and is enforceable. [p. 395, col 1]

Amrutam Venkatappa v. Vavilala Jalayya, 51 Ind. Cas 111; 42 M. 615; 9 L. W. 598; 26 M. L. T. 46; (1919) M. W. N. 355; 37 M. L. J. 98 (F. B.), approved.

Consolidated appeals from the decrees of the High Court, Madras, dated 10th April 1916, reversing the decrees of the Subordinate Judge, Chingleput.

FACTS.—These were suits to enforce an agreement to convey land purchased by the defendant at an execution sale. The facts are fully set out in their Lordships' judgment. The trial Court dismissed the suits on facts alone and did not deal with the issue as to whether the suits were barred by section 66 of the Code of Civil Procedure. On appeal the High Court found that the auction-purchaser was a real purchaser but that he had agreed to convey to the plaintiffs such portions of the property for which they had already paid or had under such agreement to pay the balance of the purchase-money which took the case out of the purview of that section, and granted plaintiffs decrees.

Mr. Dube, for the Appellant.—The agreement, if proved, and even as found by the High Court, established that appellant was a benamidar and was governed by section 66 of the Code of Civil Procedure. That section requires (1) a suit to be brought against a certified purchaser, and (2) based upon the ground that the purchase was made on behalf of a person other than the certified purchaser. The suits were, therefore, not maintainable.

Kishan Lal v. Goruruddhuraja Prosad Singh (1), Ganga Baksh v. Rudar Singh (2), Suroj Narain v. Ratan Lal (3).

Mr. Kenworthy Brown, for the Respondents.—The purchasers at the Court auction sale were real purchasers who had agreed to convey to the plaintiffs in these suits or their predecessors in-title such portions of the property for which they had already paid or for which a balance remained to be paid under the agreement. The plaintiffs were beneficially interested in the purchase and in no way affected by section 66. Ganga Sahai v. Kesri (4).

The original agreement had been ratified on two occasions subsequent to the sale: the agreements subsequent to the sale were unaffected by the section and were enforceable. Amrutam Venkatappa v. Vavilala Jalayya (5), Kumbalinga Pillai v. Arisputra Padiachi (6).

Mr. Dube replied.

JUDGMENT.

VISCOUNT CAVE.—These are consolidated appeals from two decrees of the High Court of Judicature at Madras reversing two decrees of the Subordinate Judge of Chingleput, and giving judgment in both suits for the plaintiffs. The following statement of the facts is founded upon the findings of the High Court, which, for reasons which will hereafter appear, their Lordships accept as correct.

One Sundarammal was the owner of certain lands in the village of Kovur and elsewhere in the Chingleput District, subject to a first mortgage for Rs. 25,000 and interest and to a second mortgage for Rs. 9,500 and interest, and had incurred other debts. In the year 1902 the second mortgagees brought a suit to enforce their mortgage, obtained a decree for the sale of the mortgaged property, and themselves purchased it at the auction at a low price. Thereupon Sundarammal, in order to get this sale set aside under section 310A of the Civil Procedure Code and to provide for her other debts, entered into an agreement with four persons named Murugappa, Kandasami, Munisami and Ponnambala, for the sale of the whole property to them at the price of Rs. 65,000, being a sum sufficient to pay off the mortgage and other debts and to provide a small balance for the vendor. These persons were friends of Sundarammal, and it was understood that they should dispose of the lands

(1) 21 A. 238; A. W. N. (1899) 42; 9 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 861.

(2) 22 A. 434; A. W. N. (1900) 152; 9 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 1327.

(3) 40 Ind. Cas. 988; 44 I. A. 201; 21 C. W. N. 1065; 20 O. C. 211; 2 P. L. W. 40; 33 M. L. J. 180, 19 A. L. J. 684; 19 Bom. L. R. 737; 22 M. L. T. 121; 26 C. L. J. 267; 6 L. W. 509; (1917) M. W. N. 477; 4 O. L. J. 762; 40 A. 159 (P. C.).

(4) 60 Ind. Cas. 265 42 I. A. 177 at p. 182; 19 C. W. N. 1175; 18 M. L. T. 203; 29 M. L. J. 329; 2 L. W. 837; 13 A. L. J. 999; 17 Bom. L. R. 998; 37 A. 545; 22 C. L. J. 408; (1915) M. W. N. 713 (P. C.).

(5) 51 Ind. Cas. 111; 42 M. 615; 9 L. W. 598; 26 M. L. T. 46; (1919) M. W. N. 355; 37 M. L. J. 98 (F. B.).

(6) 18 M. 436; 5 M. L. J. 200; 6 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 653.

piecemeal and, after paying out of the proceeds of sale the mortgage and other debts of Sundarammal and any money due to themselves, should pay over to her any balance which might remain. The property was accordingly conveyed to the four persons above named (who will be referred to as "the vendees") on the 10th August 1902; and on the 15th August 1902 they paid into Court a sum of Rs. 15,598, being a sum sufficient to satisfy the second mortgagees, and got the sale to those mortgagees set aside. On the 27th September 1902 the vendees divided amongst themselves about sixty acres of the land, which were taken to represent in value the amount which they had paid for redeeming the second mortgagees; and some time afterwards, as no sale could be made of the remaining lands in Kovur, the vendees made a similar division of those lands among themselves on the understanding that each of them should be responsible for his share of the debts. On this division a part of the land was reserved for Sundarammal, apparently in satisfaction of her interest in the ultimate balance to arise on realisation. Murugappa died, and his interest in the lands became vested in his widow and certain alienees from her. Meanwhile the first mortgagees, who had not been parties to the arrangements above recited, became dissatisfied; and in the year 1904 they took proceedings to enforce their mortgage, and on the 14th March 1904 obtained a decree for sale. The sale was fixed for the 3rd May 1905; and it is obvious that the persons claiming under the deed of 1902 ran the risk, unless they made some arrangement, of losing the benefit of their purchase and of the monies which they had found to satisfy the second mortgagees. They accordingly determined to bid for the property and for that purpose got together a sum of about Rs. 10,000, which they contributed in unequal shares. It was then ascertained that the appellant Vadivelu and two other persons named Vythilingam and Dharmakartha Kandasami were also proposing to bid, and it was in order to meet this difficulty that the agreement giving rise to these suits was entered into. The agreement was entered into orally between the three persons last named, that is to say, the appellant, Vythilingam and Dharmakartha Kandasami, and the four original vendees or their representatives, and was to the effect that the vendees should not bid for the property but should permit the above named three persons to buy, that if they bought the vendees should advance to them the above sum of about Rs. 10,000 to assist them in providing the deposit and completing the purchase, and that whichever of them became the purchaser of any property allotted on the first or second division to any of the original vendees (with an exception to be immediately mentioned) should convey such property to such vendee or his representative, on payment by him of such proportion of the auction price as might be found to be due from him on an adjustment of accounts. An exception was made in the case of Ponnambala, one of the four vendees, who was not anxious to get back the property allotted to him on the second division; and, so far as he was concerned, the arrangement applied only to the property passing under the first division, and it was understood that, as regards the properties allotted to him on the second division, the appellant should stand in his shoes.

The auction accordingly took place, and the appellant was declared the purchaser of Lot No. 3, comprising about 115 acres of the Kovur lands, for Rs. 21,500, other lots being purchased by Vythilingam and Dharmakartha Kandasami. The vendees duly made the contribution of Rs. 10,000 which they had promised; the balance required was raised from other sources, and sale certificates were issued to the purchasers and possession given to them. The lots purchased by Vythilingam and Dharmakartha Kandasami have been dealt with in accordance with the agreement and need not be further referred to.

In February or March 1906 there was an adjustment of accounts between the appellant and the vendees or their assignees in accordance with the arrangement above referred to. The decision of the questions which arose on the adjustment was entrusted to a panchayat; and it appears from the evidence that the appellant and the other persons concerned signed a written undertaking to abide by the award of the panchayatdars. In the course of this adjustment a slight variation was made in the allotment which had been previously made of the lands; and this variation was accepted by all parties and embodied in the award which fixed the amount payable by each of the vendees on taking his conveyance. The appellant was then quite willing to deal with the allotted lands in the manner agreed before the auction sale and was a party both to the agreement to abide by the award of the panchayatdars and to the agreement to vary the allotments.

In the year 1907, the appellant having shown reluctance to carry out the arrangement, a suit (No. 6 of 1907) was brought against him by certain persons who were nominees of Munisami and Kandasami. This suit did not go to trial but was settled by a compromise, by which the appellant agreed to convey to the plaintiffs in that suit about fifty acres of the lands purchased by the appellant. At the time of this compromise the other persons representing the original vendees, that is to say, Ponnambala and the persons claiming under Murugappa, insisted upon the appellant conveying to them also their respective shares in the property; and the representative of the appellant, while pointing out that an agreement to execute such a conveyance could not be included in the razinama in which the compromise then in question was to be embodied, undertook that the conveyance should afterwards be made. At the same time a variation was made in the original agreement so far as the representatives of Murugappa were concerned, those persons undertaking to take over from the appellant certain further properties and to pay an additional Rs. 2,600 for them.

Notwithstanding the above mentioned transactions, the appellant afterwards refused to convey to Ponnambala and to the representatives of Murugappa the properties to which they were entitled under the arrangement; and ultimately, viz., in the years 1912 and 1913, these suits were brought to enforce such a conveyance. The plaintiffs in one suit were the persons claiming under Murugappa, and the plaintiffs in the other suit were Ponnambala and persons claiming under him, the appellant being the defendant in both suits.

At the hearing of the suits two main points were raised by the appellant, viz., (1) that the appellant had not in fact entered into the agreement alleged or received the contribution of Rs. 10,000; and (2) that in any case the suits were barred by section 66 of the Code of Civil Procedure. The Subordinate Judge, by whom the suits were tried, found the first issue in favour of the appellant, and accordingly it was unnecessary for him to deal with the second question. On appeal, the High Court overruled this decision and held that the appellant had received the Rs. 10,000 and had agreed to convey the properties in manner alleged by the plaintiffs. The Court also held that section 66 of the Civil Procedure Code was not a bar to the suits, and accordingly passed decrees in favour of the plaintiffs. Thereupon this appeal was brought.

Upon the issue of fact their Lordships have no hesitation in accepting the decision of the High Court. The finding of that Court is precisely in accordance with and is practically based upon a statement made by the appellant himself in the Suit No. 6 of 1907 above referred to. The appellant in the course of the trial maintained that the statement which he had himself put forward in 1907 was wholly untrue and was made for some indirect purpose; but the High Court declined to accept this explanation, which was not supported by the other facts in the case, and their Lordships entirely agree with this view.

The alternative defence is based on section 66 of the Code of Civil Procedure, which is in the following terms:—

"No suit shall be maintained against any person claiming title under a purchase certified by the Court in such manner as may be prescribed on the ground that the purchase was made on behalf of the plaintiff or on behalf of some one through whom the plaintiff claims."

The question to be determined is whether the facts proved by the plaintiffs in these suits bring them within this section. This point was dealt with in the judgment of the High Court as follows:

"On the first question, from the facts which we find to have been proved in this case, it is clear that section 66 is not a bar to the plaintiffs' claim for specific performance of the contract. Their case is not that the first defendant or Vythilingam or Dharmakartha Kandasami were merely benamidars, but that they were to be real purchasers, but they agreed to convey to the plaintiffs in each of these suits or to their predecessors in title such portions of the property for which (as we find) they had already paid or had to pay under that agreement the balance of the purchase money. That, we think, is a sufficient answer to the plea under section 66 of the Civil Procedure Code."

It was argued by Counsel for the appellant that the agreement relied upon by the plaintiffs, even as found by the High Court, amounted in substance to an agreement that the appellant should purchase as to certain parts of the property on behalf of the respondents or of the persons whom they represent; and he was able to point to certain expressions both in the plaints and in the evidence of some of the plaintiffs' witnesses which supported that view of the transaction. If the agreement entered into before the auction stood alone, there would be considerable force in this contention. The object of section 66 was to put an end to purchases by one person in the name of another; and the distinction between a purchase on behalf of another, and a purchase coupled with an undertaking to convey to another at the price of purchase, is somewhat narrow. But whatever doubt might be caused by the character of the original agreement is removed by the events which happened after the sale. It was decided in Amrutam Venk tappa v. Vavilala Jalayya (5) that an agreement subsequent to a purchase is not affected by the section, and there can be no question as to the correctness of that decision. In the present case agreements were entered into after the sale, namely, first, at the time of the panchayat in 1906, and secondly, on the occasion of the compromise of the suit of 1907, by which the appellant bound himself to carry out the original contract with the respondents, with certain variations which were then agreed to and accepted by all parties. These subsequent agreements are unaffected by the section and are accordingly enforceable against the appellant.

For the above reasons their Lordships will humbly advise His Majesty that these consolidated appeals fail and should be dismissed with costs.

Solicitors for the Appellant:—Messrs. Barrow, Rogers and Nevill.

Solicitors for the Respondents:—Messrs. T. L. Wilson & Co.

Appeals dismissed.

BOMBAY HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 709 OF 1917.

August 25, 1919.

Present:—Mr. Justice Shah and Mr. Justice Hayward.

SADASHIV RAMCHANDRA DATAR AND ANOTHER—DEFENDANTS—APPELLANTS

versus

TRIMBAK KESHAV VAZE—PLAINTIFF—RESPONDENT.

Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), s. 443—Minor—Mother, as guardian of minor, consenting to arbitration and decree—Omission by Court to appoint guardian, effect of—Decree, whether binding on minor.

An arbitration can be entered into on behalf of a minor by his natural guardian, provided it is for his benefit, or reasonable and proper for the protection of his property, but the award would not be binding if that were not the case [p. 402, col. 1.]

Where a mother, as the natural guardian of her minor son, consented to a reference to arbitration and accepted the award on behalf of the minor and raised no objection to the passing of a decree in terms of the award, but no appointment of the mother as guardian of the minor had been made, as required by section 443 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1882, and the subsequent result of the decree was a sale of the property in dispute for an undervalue:

Held, that the minor's interests had not been duly protected; that the omission to appoint a guardian was not a mere irregularity which could be condoned, and that the decree based on the award and the sale of the property were null and void. [p. 401, cols. 1 & 2.]

Second appeal from the decision of the Assistant Judge, Poona, in Appeals Nos. 230 and 231 of 1914, varying the decree passed by the Joint Subordinate Judge at Poona, in Civil Suit No. 298 of 1912.

Messrs. Jayakar and V. V. Bhadkamkar, for the Appellants.

Messrs. Patwardhan and V. D. Limaye, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.

SHAH, J.—The facts which have given rise to this second appeal are these:

The father of the present plaintiff mortgaged the house in suit on the 4th of December 1896 to defendant No. 1 for Rs. 1,000 with interest at 6 per cent.

The plaintiff's father died in 1899 leaving a son, the present plaintiff, and a widow, the plaintiff's mother. In 1901 the mortgage claim was refered to arbitration by the defendant No. 1 and the mother of the plaintiff who was then a minor. An award was made in May 1901, under which the minor represented by his mother was to pay Rs. 1,000 and Rs. 200 and odd as interest with further interest at 6 per cent. on the principal within one month and the property was to be sold in case the money was not paid within the time specified. The present defendant No. 1 applied to the Court on the 12th of June 1901 to have a decree in terms of the award, and the present plaintiff's mother filed a statement on the 13th of June 1901, in which she consented to a decree being passed in terms of the award and stated that she had no objection to the award being filed in Court. She appeared through a Pleader. A decree was accordingly passed in terms of the award on the 19th of June 1901. In execution of the decree the house was sold in November 1902 and purchased by the present defendant No. 1 for Rs. 1,700.

On the 10th of August 1912 the plaintiff after attaining majority filed the present suit to set aside the decree passed in terms of the award. The defendants contested the suit and several issues were raised representing the rival contentions between the parties.

The trial Court on a consideration of the evidence found that the plaintiff was not bound by the decree on the award, nor by the sale in execution of that decree and that he was entitled to the relief on the footing of the original mortgage of 1896. The accounts were taken under the Dekkhan Agriculturists' Relief Act as the plaintiff was an agriculturist, and a decree was passed in respect of the amount that was found due to the mortgagees on the mortgage.

The defendants appealed to the District Court of Poona, and the learned Assistant Judge has affirmed the decision of the trial Court on the main point that the plaintiff was not bound by the decree on the award, and subject to a certain variation in the amount payable to the mortgagees, has upheld the decree of the trial Court.

The defendants have appealed to this Court, and it is urged on their behalf that the decree is binding upon the present plaintiff. It is urged that it was open to the mother as the natural guardian of the plaintiff to refer the matter to an arbitration and that as neither fraud nor undue influence is proved, the award must be taken to be binding upon the parties. It is also urged that though there may have been some irregularity in the proceedings to file the award in Court in so far as no formal order was made appointing the mother as the guardian of her minor son, under the circumstances it must be taken to be a mere irregularity, which has not in any way prejudiced the interests of the minor.

It is conceded before us that apart from this objection relating to the decree on the award there is no further objection to the decree as passd by the lower Appellate Court, that is, if the plaintiff is entitled to have relief on the footing of the mortgage of 1896 without any reference to the award proceedings, the decree now under appeal is not open to any objection. The principal question, therefore, is whether the lower Courts are right in holding that the decree in terms of the award is not binding upon the minor and that it is liable to be set aside at his instance.

It has been urged in support of the view taken by the lower Courts that there was no appointment of a guardian as required by section 443 of the Code of 1882 and that all the proceedings which resulted in the decree and the sale of the property are null and void, and further that under section 462 of the Code of 1882, corresponding to Order XXXII, rule 7, of the present Code the leave of the Court for filing the award was necessary and that in the absence of such leave the decree based on the award is voidable at the instance of the minor.

The lower Appellate Court has found that in the present case there has been a serious prejudice to the minor, as he has been deprived effectively of the benefit of the provisions of the Dekkhan Agriculturists' Relief Act, as the full amount was found payable by him without taking any account under the Dekkhan Agriculturists' Relief Act, as no instalments were allowed and as the time fixed for the payment of the whole sum was only one month. The lower Appellate Court has not gone into the question of the valuation of the house and has not expressed any opinion on the finding recorded by the trial Court that the house was in fact sold for nearly half the amount of its real market value.

I shall first deal with the point relating to the irregularity in the proceedings initiated by the present defendants on the award arising in consequence of no appointment of a guardian for the minor defendant having been made in those proceedings. It is clear that under section 443 of the Code then in force it was incumbent upon the Court to appoint a proper person to be the guardian for the minor defendant in those proceedings which under the provisions of the Code were to be treated as a suit. All the papers connected with those proceedings are before the Court; and it is clear from those papers—and that is the conclusion reached by the lower Appellate Court—that as required by section 443 no appointment of the mother or any other person as the guardian of the minor defendant was made. The question is as to the effect of this omission to appoint a guardian. When due regard is had to all the circumstances connected with these proceedings, it is difficult to avoid the inference that the minor's interests were not protected. The appearance of the mother as soon as the application for a decree in terms of the award was presented through a Pleader who is now stated by the mother to have been selected for her by the present defendant No. 1, and her consenting to a decree being passed in terms of the award are circumstances of some suspicion. When we have due regard to the terms of the award and the subsequent result of the decree, namely, a sale for an undervalue in favour of the defendants, the conclusion of the lower Appellate Court that the minor's interests had not been duly protected must be accepted. The inference is clear that the minor was not effectively represented in the proceedings initiated by the present defendants in 1901 and that the decree passed in those proceedings on the award and the subsequent proceedings in execution resulting in the sale of the property in favour of the defendant No. 1 must all be treated as null and void.

It is not necessary to refer to all the decisions which have been cited in the course of the argument: but I may refer to the case of Partab Singh v. Bhabuti Singh (1) as supporting the above conclusion. The appellants have relied upon the decision in Musammat Bibi Walian v. Banke Behari Pershad Singh (2), but the ratio decidendi seems to me to be against the appellants. Their Lordships clearly point out in that case that it is obligatory upon the Courts to comply with the provisions of section 443, and the irregularity in that case was condoned on the ground that on the particular facts, the minor was held to have been effectively represented.

In the present case the question whether the omission on the part of the Court to comply with the provisions of section 443 should be condoned on a similar ground or not, is a matter which must be decided with reference to the facts of this case. Both the Courts have taken the view on the facts against the defendants, and it seems to me that the conclusion reached by the lower Courts on this point is right.

In view of this conclusion it is not necessary to consider the further question which has been argued at some length in this appeal, as to whether the leave of the Court under section 462 was necessary to give effect to the consent of the mother that a decree might be passed in terms of the award. This question involves the consideration of the point as to whether, when the mother appeared through a Pleader on the 13th of June 1901 and gave her consent to a decree being passed in terms of the award, she acted in pursuance of any agreement between her and the defendant No. 1 or not. If the facts could reasonably give rise to the inference that there was such an agreement between the parties, no doubt the provisions of section 462 would apply and the absence of any leave of the Court for such an agreement with reference to the suit to

(1) 21 Ind. Cas. 288; 40 I. A. 182; 17 C. W. N. 1165; (1913) M. W. N. 785; 14 M. L. T. 299; 25 M. L. J. 492; 11 A. L J. 901; 16 O. C. 247; 18 C. L. J. 384; 15 Bom. L. R. 1001; 35 A. 487 (P. C.).

(2) 30 I. A. 182; 5 Bom. L. R. 822; 7 C. W. N. 774; 30 C. 1021 (P. C.); 8 Sar, P. C. J. 512 file the award in Court would entitle the minor on attaining the age of majority to avoid the decree. Whether there was such an agreement between the plaintiff's mother and the defendant No. 1 is really a question of facts. It is urged for the plaintiff that the facts justify an inference as to such an agreement between his mother and the defendant No. 1 and that the decision in Mahadev Balkrishna Kelkar v. Krishnabai (3) supports their contention. On the other hand, it is urged that apart from the agreement to refer the matter to an arbitration there is no further agreement with reference to the suit to file an award in Court, and Mr. Jayakar has relied upon the recent decision of the Full Bench in Hanmantram Raghakisan v. Shivnarayan Asuram (4) It is not necessary to pursue this point, or to discuss the cases which have been cited with reference to the applicability of section 462 to facts such as we have in this case.

The appeal, therefore, fails and the decree of the lower Appellate Court is confirmed with costs

The cross objections which are not pressed are dismissed with costs.

HAYWARD, J.—I agree An arbitration can be entered into on behalf of a minor by his natural guardian, provided it is for his benefit or reasonable and proper for the protection of his property, but the award would not be binding on him if that were not the case. The question of its binding effect could of course be decided in subsequent proceedings in which the minor was properly represented by his guardian. Such proceedings would include those taken for filing the award, because the jurisdiction to file it would depend upon the question whether or not the award had been based upon due authority given on behalf of the minor by his natural guardian. It was held that that was a question to be decided in such proceedings in decisions on section 526 of the old Civil Procedure Code, and the substance of those decisions has been incorporated in the opening words "where the Court is satisfied that the matter has been referred to arbitration" of section 21 of the Second Schedule of the present Civil Procedure Code. Where the question of the legality of the reference is not taken in such proceedings, the ordinary inference would be that it was held to have been legal, so that here, where the legality was not called in question, the point to be considered would be whether the minor was only represented in the proceedings by his natural guardian, i. e. in the proceedings taken to file the award. Now a minor would not ordinarily be properly represented unless his guardian was formally appointed as such by the Court. But on the other hand where the guardian was tacitly accepted throughout the proceedings as a proper person representing the minor and where the irregularity of not formally making the appointment in writing had not affected the merits, then no doubt the minor would be held to have been duly represented by his guardian by reason of the provisions of section 578 of the old Civil Procedure Code, which is now section 99 of the present Code. So that the real question, in my opinion, has been reduced to this: whether the minor was or was not prejudiced by the irregularity of his natural guardian, his mother, not having been formally appointed by the Court. It has been definitely held that there was prejudice by the first Appeal Court, and it seems to me difficult for us to say that that finding is wrong in view of the several circumstances which were brought to light. It was thus found that the ordinary procedure for settling the dispute between the parties would have been one in which the whole history of past transactions would have been enquired into under the provisions of the Dekkhan Agriculturists' Relief Act and that in place of this ordinary procedure the special procedure was adopted of referring the matter to the sole arbitration of an arbitrator specially selected by the minor's opponents. It was prima facie not for the benefit of the minor to substitute this special procedure before the Special Judge chosen by his opponents, and this prima facie conclusion was proved to have been correct by the subsequent result. The award was for the whole amount claimed and ordered it to be paid within one month, instead of the six months which would have been the least allowed by the ordinary procedure, quite apart from the

(3) (1898) P. J. 609.

(4) 48 Ind. Cas. 238; 43 B. 258; 20 Bom. L. R. 970 (F. B.).

question whether or no instalments could not have been granted under the provisions of the Dekkhan Agriculturists' Relief Act. Then the sale that resulted was far from satisfactory. The property was sold for Rs 1,700 and was bought by the minor's opponents. The real value would appear to have been anything from Rs. 2,500 to Rs. 3,500. These latter facts were elicited at the trial, though they have not been referred to in the judgment of the first appeal Court. It seems to me that that is sufficient to justify us in holding that the irregularity of not formally deciding whether the minor's natural guardian, his mother, was or was not a proper person to represent him in the proceedings did affect the merits. It would seem to me that this circumstance tends strongly to show that the irregularity did most certainly affect the merits and prejudice the minor. If the question had been carefully considered, as it ought to have been, there is every probability that some other guardian would have been appointed such as the Nazir of the Court, who would have fully enquired into the circumstances of the arbitration. It seem to me that on this ground we ought to uphold the decree of the first Appeal Court.

It is not necessary in these circumstances to consider the other question argued before us, that is to say, whether there was an agreement between the minor's natural guardian, his mother, and the minor's opponents that the award should be filed without objection in Court. If there had been any such formal agreement, then no doubt it would have been necessary to have obtained the formal sanction of the Court. But it is not necessary here to discuss that matter further, as upon the other ground it seems to me clear that we ought to uphold the decree of the first Appeal Court and dismiss this appeal with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

PATNA HIGH COURT.

FIRST CIVIL APPEALS NOS. 95, 126 AND 127 OF 1917.

April 15, 1920.

Present:—Sir Dawson Miller, KT., Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Coutts.

IN F. A. No 95 OF 1917

Syed ABBAS alias ABOO SAHEB AND OTHERS—APPELLANTS

versus

MISRI LAL AND OTHERS—RESPONDENTS.

IN F. A. NOS. 126 AND 127 OF 1917.

Babu PURAN MAL AND OTHERS—APPELLANTS

versus

Babu MISRI LAL AND OTHERS—RESPONDENTS.

Mortgage—Co-mortgagees, position of—Payment to one co-mortgagee, whether discharges mortgage.

Co-mortgagees must, unless the contrary is shewn, be regarded as having a separate interest in the money advanced, although they take a joint security, and must be treated as in the position of tenants-in-common and not joint tenants Therefore, a payment of the mortgage-debt to one of two mortgagees would not amount to a discharge of the mortgagor's liability to the other mortgagee. [p. 410, cols. 1 & 2.]

Appeals from a decision of the Subordinate Judge, Patna, dated the 14th March 1917.

IN F. A. No. 95 OF 1917.

Messrs. S. H. Imam, K Husnain and A. B. Mukherji, for the Appellants.

Messrs. P. K. Sen, Fakhrud lin, G. Das, B. C. Sinha and S. Lal, for the Respondents.

IN F. A. NOS. 126 AND 127 OF 1917.

Messrs. K. Sahay and B. Lal, for the Appellants.

Messrs. P. K. Sen, B. C. Sinha and S. Lal, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.

MILLER, C. J.—These appeals arise out of two suits Nos. 49 and 82 of 1915, which were tried together before the Subordinate Judge of Patna on the 14th March 1917. In the former Misri Lal and his minor son Ram Birich Lal claim to recover possession of their share of certain properties with mesne profits held under a zarpeshgi lease or mortgage granted by Syed Abbas, the defendant No. 1 in that suit, to Saudagar Mahton, the father of Misri Lal, and Puran Mal the defendant No. 2. The defendants Nos. 3 to 11 are members of Puran Mal's family. The defendants Nos. 12 to 21 are subsequent ijaradars holding under the mortgagor Syed Abbas and are now in possession of the property. The remaining defendants Nos. 22 to 27 are pro forma defendants, being other members of the plaintiff's family.

Misri Lal the plaintiff and Puran Mal the defendant No. 2 held a zarpeshgi lease of the property from Syed Abbas, and the latter contends that he redeemed the mortgaged property by payment of the zarpeshgi money to Puran Mal, co mortgagee with the plaintiff's father, on the 29th June 1915 and subsequently granted an ijara to the defendants Nos. 11 to 21 who are now in possession. The plaintiff claims in the alternative against Puran Mal and his family to recover the sum of Rs. 21,800, half the zarpeshgi money paid to him, in the event of the Court finding that such payment was a valid discharge of the debt due to both the mortgagees. Puran Mal's case is that the money was rightly paid to him, as he alone advanced the whole sum of Rs. 43,600 to Syed Abbas and that Saudagar Mahton's name was merely added as a mortgagee owing to an arrangement between them, whereby Saudagar was to remain in actual possession and manage the property for Puran Mal taking as payment therefor a half share in the profits after providing for interest on the loan and other outgoings.

In the second suit No. 82 of 1917 Puran Mal and other members of his family sued Misri Lal and the members of his family for an account of the profits arising from the management of the mortgaged property, of which Saudagar and after his death in 1907 his son Misri Lal are said to have been in possession as agents for Puran Mal.

The two cases were tried together before the Subordinate Judge of Patna on the 14th March 1917, who found that payment to Puran Mal was not a valid discharge of Misri Lal's interest in the mortgage debt and directed that Misri Lal should recover joint possession of a half share in the property in suit together with Syed Abbas and the ticcadars, and awarded him mesne profits from those defendants from the date of his dispossession. He further found that Saudagar Mahto and after him Misri Lal had been in possession of the properties as mortgagees under the zarpeshgi lease to the extent of their half share, and not as agents for Puran Mal and accordingly dismissed Suit No. 82 in which Puran Mal claimed an account from Misri Lal of the profits realised during the currency of the mortgage.

From this decision three appeals have been preferred. Appeal No. 95 of 1917 arises out of Suit No. 49 of 1915 and is brought by Syed Abbas, who contends that the payment made to Puran Mal was a valid discharge of the debt. Appeal No. 127 arising also out of Suit No. 49 is brought by Puran Mal, who contends that the money advanced in consideration of the mortgage was advanced by him alone and that Misri Lal had no interest in the same. Appeal No. 126 arises out of Suit No. 82 and is brought by Puran Mal, claiming that he is entitled to an account from Misri Lal on the grounds already stated.

The properties in suit consist of three villages named Subanwa, Bhabhandigha and Kalyanpur, which form part of a wakf estate of which Syed Abbas is the mutwalli. It appears that in the year 1900 Saudagar Mahton held from Syed Abbas a zarpeshgi ticca of the villages in question at a rent of Rs. 4,500. He had also advanced a sum amounting to one year's rent to be repaid at the termination of the lease. The properties of the wakf estate, including the three villages in question, were hypothecated to one Baijnath Singh under a simple mortgage which took priority over Saudagar's zarpeshgi and which had then fallen due. The amount due to Baijnath amounted to Rs. 54,000, but Syed Abbas was unable to raise the whole of this money. Saudagar had been in possession of these villages as ticcadar since about the year 1890 on apparently advantageous terms and as he had an unexpired term of three years to run, it was to his interest that the mortgage to Baijnath should, if possible, be discharged. As Syed Abbas required financial assistance to raise the greater part of the money necessary to liquidate his debt to Baijnath, he approached Saudagar with a view to obtaining a loan of Rs. 46,300 for this purpose proposing to grant him a fresh zarpeshgi lease of the property for a period of 10 years on somewhat more favourable terms than the existing lease. Saudagar was not in a position to advance the whole of the money required, but according to the plaintiff Misri Lal's case he was able and willing to advance half that sum if he could find any one prepared to join with him in the transaction and advance the other half. He, therefore, approached Puran Mal, a Mahajan residing at Patna, with a view to obtaining the balance required. According to Misri Lal's case Puran Mal agreed to advance half the amount at an interest of 11 annas per cent. per mensem and in conjunction with Saudagar to take a zarpeshgi lease of the villages for a period of 10 years at a rent of Rs. 5,300, out of which the interest on the advance amounting to Rs. 3,597 and the Government revenue and cesses, etc., amounting to Rs. 1,701-2-5 were to be deducted, leaving a trifling balance of under Rs. 2 payable to the landlord. The rents of the villages amounted to considerably more than Rs. 5,300 and the net profits were to be divided equally between the two mortgagees. Each party was to be put in possession either by himself or his agents and collect half the dues recoverable by him. Saudagar lived on the spot at Kalyanpur. His Patwari was one Nanrangi Lal and according to the case of Misri Lal he was appointed to act for both parties as Patwari whilst Puran Mal appointed as his Gomashta Bishun Singh and subsequently Shakawat Hussain, and by this arrangement half the proceeds were paid over to Bishun Singh and afterwards to his successor Shakawat Hussain, the other half going to Saudagar and after his death to Misri Lal. An instrument in writing dated the 19th August 1900 was accordingly drawn up and executed by the parties to carry out the arrangement come to. By the terms of this document a zarpeshgi lease or mortgage was granted by Syed Abbas to Puran Mal and Saudagar Mahton for a period of 10 years. After reciting the necessity of borrowing money, it proceeds, "accordingly Babu Puran Mal and Saudagar Mahton have agreed to take lease by making an advance of the sum of Rs. 46,300 carrying interest at 11 annas per cent. per mensem for a period of 10 years" of the Mauzas in question. Provision was then made for paying off Saudagar's advance of Rs. 4,500 at the end of three years. The rent was also to remain at the old rate of Rs. 4,500 for the same period and from this the sum of Rs 3,597 was to be deducted for interest on the new loan and the balance of Rs. 903 was to be paid to the mortgagor. For the remainder of the term of 10 years the rent was to be Rs. 5,300 including Government revenue and cesses and the balance, as already stated, of something under Rs. 2 was payable as hakhajri to the mortgagor. The mortgagor also had the option of paying off the whole or a portion of the advance of not less than Rs. 5,000 during the currency of the term, in which case the rent would be increased by the amount of interest proportionate to the sum repaid. The whole of the zarpeshgi money or such portion as had not been repaid under the above option was payable at the end of Jeyth 1317 F. (June 1910 A. D.), when the lease should come to an end and the mortgagor would be entitled to get direct possession. But in the event of non payment of the whole zarpeshgi money by last year of the term, the lease with all its conditions was to remain in force until the whole or such part of the debt as was still due had been paid up.

There can be no doubt from the terms of this document that both Saudagar Mahton and Puran Mal are referred to as the persons advancing the money and acquiring the interest in the property. In addition to the passage already quoted the following clause appears:—

"Therefore, of our own free will and accord we" (Syed Abbas and his brother who at that time also had an interest in the property) "have given in lease as detailed below for 10 years on receipt of Rs. 43,600 in advance carrying interest at 11 annas per cent. per mensem to Babu Puran Mal * * * * and to Saudagar Mahton * * * * the whole and entire 16 annas of each of the Mauzas."

Throughout the document these two are referred to as the lessees. Only one other passage in this document need be referred to. It provides that "till payment of the zarpeshgi money the said Mauzas shall stand mortgaged and liable." The effect of this document was to create a mortgage over the leasehold interest in the property as security for the re-payment of the advance, with the stipulation that the lease should continue in any event for 10 years on payment of the reserved rent notwithstanding the earlier discharge of the debt. The lessor could only redeem on re-payment of the loan, otherwise the lessees' interest would continue indefinitely.

No portion of the loan was repaid during the currency of the term and Saudagar having died in 1907, his son Misri Lal succeeded him as karta of the family. The 10 years' term expired on the 30th Jeyth 1317 F. (June 1910 A. D.). But nothing was then done by way of repayment and the lessees remained in possession until 5 years later, when a sum of Rs. 41,770-6-9 was paid to Puran Mal on the 29th June 1915, i. e., on the 2nd Asarh 1322 F. or two days after the end of Jeyth that year. The balance of the zurpeshgi money, amounting to Rs. 1,829-9 3, was deducted on account of certain sums said to be due from Misri Lal to Syed Abbas for rent of another Mauza and other small items which Puran Mal agreed to settle in account with his co lessee. It was alleged on behalf of Syed Abbas that Misri Lal and Puran Mal went together at his request to his house some 3 or 4 days before the 30th Jeyth and that they both agreed on that occasion to these deductions, and said they would come again on the 30th Jeth and receive, the money, but that Misri Lal alone came on the 30th, Puran Mal not being present, and on that occasion the money was tendered to Misri Lal, who said that he had not the patta in his possession as it was with Puran Mal who would return it. This evidence was given by Raghubans Sahay, the Mukhtar-am of Syed Abbas. This witness further stated that later on in the evening of the 30th Jeyth Puran Mal did turn up, but for some reason not explained the money was not tendered to him then. The next day was a holiday and on the following day the 2nd Assarh the money was paid to Puran Mal as already stated. Between the 30th Jeyth and the 2nd Assarh Raghubans consulted his employer's Vakil, Rai Bahadur Purnendu Narain Sinha, as to how payment should be made and was advised that as the money was payable to joint mortgagees he could get a good discharge by paying it to one. The Rai Bahadur was called as a witness on behalf of Puran Mal. Syed Abbas had been his client for some years and he had been present when the zarpeshgi deed of the 19th August 1900 was executed and was an attesting witness thereto. He had no very clear re-collection of anything that Puran Mal told him about the document on that occasion, but he was evidently stating the facts impartially to the best of his re-collection, and he says that he was informed by Puran Mal when the deed was executed that the money was to be repaid to both Misri Lal and Puran Mal. He further says that when Raghubans asked his advice as to the manner of payment in 1915, he was told by him that Misri Lal was endeavouring to avoid payment and did not turn up at the time when payment was due which was the 30th Jeyth. The complaint was that Misri Lal was endeavouring to evade payment within the month of Jeyth. The evidence of this witness can undoubtedly be accepted as accurate but it materially differs from the story put forward by Raghubans and as far as it goes, corroborates that of Misri Lal which will be referred to presently. The evidence of Raghubans was that Misri Lal agreed to everything suggested and was willing that the deductions referred to should be made from the zurpeshgi money, and that he in fact turned up at the house of Syed Abbas on the 30th Jeyth and that it was Puran Mal who did not come on that occasion and that Misri Lal was quite agreeable to the money being given to Puran Mal The account given by Misri Lal differs materially from that of Raghubans. His story is that on the 2nd Assarh a servant of Syed Abbas told him that the latter wanted to see him about paying off the zarpeshgi, whereupon he pointed out that as the 30th Jeyth had passed it was too late to take payment that year. Nothing else happened and he did not go to Patna or ever ask Syed Abbas or any one else to pay his share to Puran Mal or authorise the latter to receive it, nor did he agree to any deductions nor was any money ever tendered to him. The view he took of the zarpeshgi lease apparently was that it could only be terminated by payment at the end of Jeyth in any year and as that date had passed, the lease must continue for at least another year. If this story be accepted as it was by the learned Judge it follows that Misri Lal's interest as mortgagee was never redeemed; nor was any tender ever made to him of what was due. The learned Judge, who dealt very carefully with the evidence, arrived unhesitatingly at the conclusion that Misri Lal's story was true and that that of Raghubans and Puran Mal and the other witnesses for the defendants could not be accepted. He was very unfavourably impressed by the evidence of Puran Mal who, he says, "hesitated, took time and did not tell us the whole truth." Puran Mal's evidence in the main supported that of Raghubans but differed from it in some important details. He confirms the latter in so far as he says that Misri Lal agreed that he should accept payment from Syed Abbas of the whole of the zarpeshgi money save the deductions already mentioned and that Misri Lal was quite agreeable that these deductions should be made. He differs from Raghubans as to what took place when he and Misri Lal went together to the house of Syed Abbas a few days before payment became due. Puran Mal says that Syed Abbas sent for him and when he went to the latter's house, he found Misri Lal sitting there but did not know for what business he had come. Syed Abbas did not say to Misri Lal that he would pay the zarpeshgi money, and there was no talk at the time as to whether the rent due to Misri Lal would be deducted. No details were discussed. All that Syed Abbas said was that he would pay the money, but when or where was not mentioned and he did not meet Syed Abbas again after that until the money was actually paid on the 2nd Assarh. These stories are, therefore, not in themselves consistent and it is highly improbable if the whole sum was due to Puran Mal and Misri Lal also owed him a sum of over Rs. 57,000, as he alleges in his plaint in Suit No. 82 in respect to these Mauzas that Puran Mal would readily agree to consent to a deduction of over Rs. 1,800 due from Misri Lal to the mortgagor on an entirely different transaction and take the chance of recovering it back from Misri Lal in addition to his existing liabilities, and I see no reason for disturbing the conclusions of fact arrived at by the learned Judge on this part of the case.

If, however, the whole of the loan was advanced by Puran Mal when the mortgage was executed, then payment to him would be a complete discharge of the debt. It remains therefore, to consider the evidence on this part of the case and to determine whether the learned Judge was justified in arriving at the conclusion that Sandagar himself advanced half the loan. I have already stated shortly the case put forward by Misri Lal as to how the advance came to be made, and up to a point there is no dispute between the parties. The case of Puran Mal, however, is that he advanced the whole of the money and allowed Sandagar and afterwards Misri Lal to remain in possession of the property as his agents to collect the rents on his behalf, taking as commission half the net profits after paying the interest due to Puran Mal and the Government revenue and other necessary outgoings. It is admitted that no written agreement was entered into between the parties at any time as evidence of this arrangement, although the zarpeshgi lease itself clearly indicates that the money was advanced by both the lessees and was repayable to them both. Puran Mal gives two reasons for allowing Sandagar's name to appear in the document as one of the lessees, first, that he had complete confidence in him, and, secondly, that there was a fear that the tenants might turn refractory if it were known that Puran Mal alone was the ticcadar. It appears, however, from Puran Mal's own evidence that his first acquaintance with Sandagar dated from 12 months before the transaction was entered into. It also appears that from the beginning the tenants knew that Puran Mal was one of the ticcadars and there is no suggestion that any trouble arose in consequence of this. It is almost inconceivable that a Marwari in the position of Puran Mal, who in addition had considerable Zamindari interests, would conduct his affairs in such an unbusiness-like manner and allow a comparative stranger, as Sandagar then was, to be joined with him as lessee and remain in possession of the property without some document in writting defining their relative positions. The only evidence which at all supports Puran Mal's story is the fact that the advance made to Syed Abbas in consideration of the zarpeshgi lease was made by a cheque drawn by Puran Mal on the Bank of Bengal on the 15th September 1900, about a month after the lease was executed. Puran Mal had previously had dealings with the Bank of Bengal and on the 5th September 1900 a new account was opened in his name with that Bank, and between that date and the 13th September deposits amounting in all to over Rs. 59,000 were made to the credit of that account. It is Misri Lal's case that this account was opened for the express purpose of collecting the money to be advanced to Syed Abbas and that a deposit of Rs. 24,075 made on the 11th September included Rs 21,800 of Saudagar Mahton's money. Misri Lal's case is that this money was brought from Kalyan Bigha where Saudagar lived to Patna where Puran Mal lived on the back of an elephant and was taken to Puran Mal's dukhan on the 10th September, and on the following day deposited in the Bank together with a further sum of Puran Mal's own money making together the sum of Rs. 24,075. This story is corroborated by a number of witnesses, some of whom accompanied the elephant whilst others went by train from Kalyan Bigha to Patna City station where they transferred the money from the elephant to a ticca gharry and took it to Puran Mal's house. A further sum of Rs. 11,000 appears from the account to have been deposited by Puran Mal on the 13th September. There was then an amount of something over Rs. 59,000 to the credit of this account, and it is admitted that on the 15th of the same month Puran Mal drew a cheque for Rs. 59,000 in favour of Baijnath Singh, Syed Abbas's creditor. It is not disputed that this cheque included the Rs. 43,600 zarpeshgi money for the lease in question in this suit and a further sum payable by Syed Abbas to Baijnath in respect to another transaction in which Puran Mal was financing him. Puran Mal contended that the whole of this money was his own and that the account had been opened with the Bank of Bengal before the zarpeshgi was executed and that the deposits were not made for the purpose of collecting the zarpeshgi money and paying it by cheque. This story, however, is not borne out by Gobind Ram, the brother of Puran Mal and one of his witnesses, who says that the account was opened with the Bank of Bengal after the lease was executed for the express purpose of collecting the money, and the account itself appearing from the Bank books shews that the first deposit was made on the 5th November. Puran Mal was cross examined as to the source from which these deposits came, but was unable to give any account except that he said he got the money from Calcutta. He said, however, that he had a jama kharach book which would shew from what source the money was obtained at the time of depositing in the Bank, and unfortunately he was not cross-examined further as to the specific item of Rs. 24,075 deposited on the 11th September, which the plaintiff claims included his money, and the evidence of Misri Lal's witnesses was not taken until after Puran Mal had been examined. It was strongly urged before us that this lack of cross-examination upon a vital point in the case went a long way to support Puran Mal's case and that the story as to money being brought to Patna and handed over to Puran Mal on the 10th September ought not to be accepted. There is no doubt considerable force in this argument, and it would certainly have assisted Misri Lal's case had the learned Vakil appearing on his behalf put the whole story with regard to the payment of this money by his client and the subsequent deposit in the Bank to Puran Mal in cross-examination instead of confining himself to a few questions as to the source from which the deposits came. There are, however, so many improbabilities in the story presented by Puran Mal that I am not prepared to say that the learned Judge who saw the witnesses was not justified in disbelieving his evidence and accepting that of Misri Lal. No documents were produced by Puran Mal in support of this part of his story, nor had he the jama kharach book with him upon which he relied. This book he stated was in the possession of an arbitrator at Calcutta who at that time was sitting upon an arbitration in a partition case between Puran Mal and other members of his family, and the Court ordered a telegram to be sent to the arbitrator asking for the book to be sent. The telegram was sent the same day that Puran Mal gave his evidence, and a reply was received from the arbitrator that there must be some misconception as the account books had been taken away by Puran Mal and his brother some time in the previous year and were not in his possession About a week later a letter was addressed to the Peshkar of the Subordinate Judge's

Court from the arbitrator, stating that although none of the account books of Puran Mal were in his possession, some of them were with Babu Kanhai Lal Mahsuddi, who was apparently another arbitrator engaged in the same case, and that he had asked the latter to forward them. The railway receipt for these books, when they were sent by Kanhai Lal, was received by the Peshkar but returned presumably with the consent of the Judge as there had been no order of the Court requesting Kanhai Lal to send them. On the 2nd March when the evidence of both parties was closed, Puran Mal petitioned the Court to appoint a Commissioner to examine these account books, but the Judge rejected the petition on the ground that he did not consider it a bona fide one and that every possible opportunity had been given to the petitioners to produce their documents at an earlier period. It was urged before us that Puran Mal had been unfairly treated in this matter, first, because after he had agreed to the two cases being tried together his evidence was taken first by the order of the Judge and that he did not think at that time that these documents would be necessary, and that he ought to have been given an opportunity after Misri Lal's witnesses were examined of calling rebutting evidence. I do not think that he has any grievance from the fact that he was ordered to begin and call his witnesses first. He was the plaintiff in Suit No. 82 and the trial had originally been fixed for hearing on the 9th May 1916 in that suit, by which date he was ordered to be ready with his witnesses and evidence. The case did not in fact come on for hearing until many months later. According to the procedure by which the trial of actions is governed, the parties must produce at the first hearing of the suit all the documentary evidence of every description in their possession or power on which they intend to rely and which has not already been filed in Court, and no other documentary evidence shall be received at any subsequent stage of the proceedings unless good cause be shown to the satisfaction of the Court for the non-production thereof. These rules have the salutary effect in many cases of preventing documentary evidence from being fabricated for the purposes of the case. In the present case some documents had been produced on behalf of Puran Mal which the learned Judge rejected on the ground that they were not genuine, and I see no reason for interfering with his discretion in refusing the application to have these account books examined by a Commissioner in the circumstances. Throughout the record there is no documentary evidence apart from that already mentioned to suggest that Puran Mal alone advanced the zarpeshgi money, and such oral evidence as there was on this point was by no means convincing and was dismissed by the learned Judge as unworthy of credence. It is also very significant that if he alone was entitled to the whole of the interest on the sum advanced, he never in fact received, it from Saudagar or after his death from Misri Lal and although his case is that they failed to pay him this money and a large debt was accumulating against them without any security for its payment, he appears to have taken no effective steps to obtain any account from them upto the moment that Misri Lal's suit was instituted. In fact although Misri Lal instituted his suit for possession on the 10th July, a few days after he was dispossessed, and made an alternative claim therein against Puran Mal for half the zarpeshgi money, it was not until the 2nd December that Puran Mal filed his suit for an account. Although Saudagar died in 1907 without rendering any account to Puran Mal, Misri Lal was allowed without protest to continue in possession of his half share including the interest on the zarpeshgi money as well as half the net profits, and still no accounts were obtained from him and in the Record of Rights finally framed and published on the 1st August 1910 the names of Puran Mal and Misri Lal were recorded in the Khewat relating to these Manzas as interested in equal shares without any protest on behalf of Puran Mal. The only reason given by the latter for allowing this state of affairs to continue was that he had confidence in Saudagar whom he had met for the first time about a year before the zarpeshgi lease was executed. This confidence one would have expected to have been seriously shaken when on his death no accounts were forthcoming, and yet we find that his son Misri Lal was allowed to continue in possession of his half share receiving half the interest and half the profits in the same way as his father had done before him It is alleged that Misri Lal rendered some accounts in the year 1909 which purported to be in the handwritting of Naurangi Lal the Patwari, but this would not explain why matters were allowed to go on some six years longer without any settlement of this account. Naurangi Lal denies that these papers are in his handwriting, and the learned Judge on comparing them with the admitted writing of Naurangi Lal rejected them as spurious, It was said that Naurangi Lal would be sent to explain these papers but it is admitted that he never came. Moreover, the papers relied on shew an entirely different state of affairs from that actually existing. These papers shew Danabandi, although admittedly the Manzas were Batai, and they further in other cases shew a higher rate of rent than that admittedly existing and differ in other respects from the existing facts, as pointed out by the learned Judge. I can see no reason whatever, after reviewing the whole of the evidence, to differ from the conclusions of fact arrived at in the trial Court.

The only question which remains is whether payment to one of two mortgagees is a discharge of the mortgagor's liability to the other. The common law rule that payment to one of two joint creditors discharges the debt due to both is subject to the equitable rule that mortgagees must, unless the contrary is shewn, be regarded as having a separate interest in the money advanced, although they take a joint security, and must be treated as in the position of tenants-in common and not joint tenants [see Steeds v. Steeds (1) and Powell v. Brodhurst (2)]. It was contended before us that this doctrine was not the law of this country and the case of Barber Maran v. Ramana Goundan (3) was relied on. It was held by the Madras High Court in that case that payment to one of two joint mortgagees was a good discharge of the debt to both, and this was followed by the majority of the Full Bench of that Court in the case of Mannava Annopurnamma v. Uppala Akkayya (4) where the question was whether one of several payees of a negotiable instrument can give a valid discharge of the entire debt without the concurrence of the others. Of the three learned Judges who decided that case one of them, the Chief Justice, dissented. So far as mortgagees are concerned, the view of the Madras High Court has been repeatedly dissented from by the High Court of Calcutta [see Husainara Begum v. Rahmannessa Begum 5) and Umes Chandra Banerjee v. Dinabandhu Mahanti (6) and other cases. The Madras decision in Barber Maran v. Ramana Goundan (3) (ubi sup.) may be justified on the ground that the mortgagees in that case were in fact joint and took as joint tenants, but in my opinion the rulings in Seeds v. Steeds (1) and Powell v. Broadhurst (2) (ubi sup) are good law in this country and mortgagees will be regarded as having several interests unless the contrary be shewn, and the decisions of the Calcutta High Court correctly lay down the law on this matter. It was contended that an offer of performance had been made to Misri Lal on the 30th Jeth, but as already stated the evidence of this tender to Misri Lal cannot be accepted. Section 38 (3) of the Indian Contract Act was relied on as shewing that the legal consequence of the offer subsequently made to Puran Mal and the acceptance by him was to put an end to the debt. It will be observed, however, that this part of the section relates to joint promisees and the presumption is that co-mortgagees are not joint. It is unnecessary, therefore, to consider further the effect of this section. I may mention that the Allahabad High Court has taken the same view as that of Calcutta, that one of two mortgagees who have advanced the mortgage

(1) (1879) 22 Q. B. D. 537 at p. 540; 58 L. J. Q. B. 302; 60 L. T. 318; 37 W. R. 378.

(2) (1901) 2 Ch. 160; 70 L. J. Ch. 587; 84 L. T. 620; 49 W. R. 532; 17 T. L. R. 501.

(3) 20 M. 461; 7 M. L. J. 269; 7 Ind Dec. (N. S.) 327.

(4) 19 Ind Cas. 12; 36 M. 544; 13 M. L. T. 268 (1913 M. W. N. 3-8; 24 M. L. T. 433.

(5) 8 Ind Cas. 837; 38 C. 44; 13 C. L. J. 8.

(6) 29 Ind. Cas. 956; 21 C. L. J. 570.

money equally cannot give a good discharge of the entire mortgage debt without the consent of the other.

In my opinion these appeals should be dismissed with costs.

COUTTS, J.—I agree.

Appeals dismissed.

BOMBAY HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 830 OF 1917.

September 9, 1919.

Present:—Mr. Justice Shah and Mr. Justice Hayward.

AMRIT VAMAN INAMDAR—PLAINTIFF—APPLLEANT

versus

HARI GOVIND KULKARNI—DEFENDANT—RESPONDENT.

Bombay Hereditary Offices Act (III of 1874), s 15—Settlement of village—Survey number, exclusion of—Burden of proof—Inams and saranjams, grant of—Presumption—Grant of royal share of revenue or of soil.

Where a sanad evidencing a settlement under section 1 of the Bombay Hereditary Offices Act mentions a whole village, a party who alleges that a particular survey number of that village is outside the scope of the settlement must prove his allegation. [p. 414, col.].]

In the case of inams and saranjams in the Bombay Presidency the ordinary presumption in respect of such a settlement as the foregoing is in favour of the grant being limited to the royal share of the revenue, in the absence of any words to indicate a grant of the soil, but the absence of such words would not necessarily establish that the grant is of the royal share of the revenue only [p 4 5, cols &]

Second appeal from the decision of the Assistant Judge, Belgaum, in Appeal No. 253 of 1914, reversing the decree passed by the First Class Subordinate Judge at Belgaum, in Suit No. 489 of 1913.

Messrs. Jayakar and K. H. Kelkar, for the Appellant.

Messrs. Dhurandhar, D. R. Manerikar and H. G. Kulkarni, for Respondent No. 1.

JUDGMENT.

SHAH, J.—The plaintiff in this case sued to recover possession of a part of Survey No. 45 in the village of Rajgoli Khurd with Rs. 101 as profits for one year from defendant No. 1 and his tenants. He alleged that the property was Watan property, and that the alienation thereof effected by his father in favour of defendant No. 1 was not valid beyond his lifetime under section 5 of the Bombay Hereditary Offices Act, that his father died in January 1912, and that he was entitled to the possession of the land.

The defendant No. 1 resisted the claim on the ground that under the decree on an award in Suit No. 253 of 1910 obtained by him against the plaintiff's father, he was entitled to retain possession of the land in suit until the Shake year 1842 (1930 31 A. D.), that it was not Watan property and that the plaintiff's father had authority to effect the alienation in his favour.

The trial Court found that the property was Watan property and that the plaintiff's father had no power to alienate it beyond the term of his natural life. It passed a decree in favour of the plaintiff for possession and mesne profits.

The defendant appealed to the District Court, and the learned Assistant Judge who heard the appeal found that the original grant was not a grant of the soil but merely of the royal share of the revenue of the village, and that there was nothing to show that the land in suit was not held by the original Inamdar at the time of his grant as his private property. Accordingly he allowed the appeal and dismissed the plaintiff's suit with costs.

The plaintiff has appealed to this Court, and it is urged in support of the appeal that the conclusions reached by the lower Appellate Court are erroneous. In order to appreciate the rival contentions of the parties in this appeal, it is necessary to state briefly the history of the grant of the village of Rajgoli Khurd, of which the land in suit forms a part.

The earliest document relating to the grant of this village is the order issued by the then Maratha ruler, Shambhu Chatrapati, to the Mukadam of Mouje Rajgoli Budruk and Mouje Rajgoli Khurd in the year 1734 A. D. The grant is in these terms:—

"The respected Virupakshara Yamaji of Gotra Gautama, who is the most devoted servant of the Swami (King), has been rendering service (to the Swami) with singleness of purpose and, therefore, it is necessary for the Swami to provide for his maintenance by the grant of an Inam to him. Therefore, the Swami is now graciously pleased to grant to him as new Inam the whole of the aforesaid two villages Koolbab and Koolkanoo (i. e., all taxes and assessments) but exclusive of the (Haks of)Hakdars and Inamdars. You should, therefore, acting in obedience to this order continue the said Inam to him, his sons, grandsons and so on from generation to generation."

The material words in Marathi are:—

"Nutan inam koolbab koolkanoo kherij hakdar wa inamdar karun sadarhu donhi gaon darobasta inam dilhe ast."

Some years later in a letter written by Balaji Bajirao Pradhan the grant is referred to in the same terms, and there is a command that the entire amal of the two villages should be continued as Inam hereditarily according to the King's letter, the Marathi word for 'entire' being darobasta. In 1858 the Inam Commissioner examined the history of this grant and decided under Act XI of 1852 as follows :—

'It seems proper and it is ordered that the village of Monje Rajgoli Khurd exclusive of the Hakdars and Inamdars must, under Appendix 2, section 2, of Act XI of 1852, be continued as long as the line represented by the sons, grandsons and so on born of the original acquirer Virupaksha Yamaji, the great-grandfather of the claimant Yamajipant, continues...This Faisalnama is only meant to show how long the village is to be continued as Mafi (free from the payment of revenue)."

In the reasons for the decision the village is referred to as standing at the time in the name of Yamajipant bin Virupakshapant Mutalik Desai as service Inam in the records of the Collector.

In 1884 the Inamdar accepted the settlement in respect of various lands including the village of Rajgoli Khurd in lieu of service on the conditions mentioned in the Sanad. The terms of the Sanad are these:—

Whereas in the Zilla of Belgaum certain lands and cash allowances are entered in the Government accounts of the year 1862-63 as held on service tenure as follows:—

Name of the Watan	Lands assessed at	Cash allowances	Total Emoluments (after deducting Mamool Joodee)
Mootalik Desai.	1,189-4-7	20-8-0	1,209-12-7

and whereas the holders thereof have agreed to pay to Government a fixed annual payment in lieu of service:—

It is hereby declared, that the said lands and cash allowances shall be continued hereditarily by the British Government, on the following conditions: that is to say, that the said holders and their heirs shall continue faithful subjects of the British Government, and shall render to the same the following fixed yearly dues:—

				Rs.	a.	p.
Mamool Joodee	...	...	...	0	0	0
in lieu of service	...	...	...	230	11	0
		Total	...	230	11	0

at 5 annas in the Rupee 9 13 0
at 8 annas in the Rupee 220 14 0
Two hundred and thirty and annas eleven only.

In consideration of fulfilment of which conditions—

1st—The said lands and cash allowances shall be continued without demand of service, and without increase of Land Tax over the above fixed amounts, and without objection or question on the part of Government as to the rights of any holders thereof, so long as any male heir to the Watan, lineal collateral, or adopted within the limits of the Watandar family, shall be in existence,

2nd—No Nuzzerana or other demand on the part of Government will be imposed on account of the succession of heirs, lineal, collateral, or adopted within limits of the Watandar family, and, permission to make such adoptions need not hereafter be obtained from Government.

3rd—When all the sharers of the Watan agree to request it, then the general privilege of adopting at any time any person (without restriction as to family) who can be legally adopted, will be granted by Government to the Watan, on the payment from that time forward in prepetuity of an annual Nuzzerana of one anna in each Rupee of the above total emoluments of the Watan.

DETAILS OF LANDS AND CASH ALLOWANCES.

Name of the Taluka	Name of the Village	Lands to continue (as Watan)			Cash allowances	Total Rupees	Mamool Joodee Rupees
		Nos. of the Fields	Acres	Revenue Assessment
			A. G.	Rs. a. p.	Rs. a. p.	Rs. a. p.	Rs. a. p.
Belgaum	Those about which there is a Tharao (Settlement) Inam Committee Resolution No. 3:01, dated the 30th of April 1858 A. D., in respect of the whole village Mouje Rajgoli Khurd.			738 0 7	0 0 0	738 0 7		On the gross income, watan settlement judi at 3 annas in the rupee amounting to Rs. 138-6-0.

This settlement is on the lines of the Gordon Settlement; and the lands including the village of Rajgoli Khurd are assigned on certain terms in lieu of service. There is no provision in the Sanad giving to the Watandar any right to alienate the Watan beyond his lifetime, and the Watan is mentioned as the Mutalik Desai Watan. There are other documents of minor importance, which need not be referred to.

In 1910 the defendant No. 1 obtained a decree on an award against the plaintiff's father for a certain claim and the possession of the land in suit, which is referred to in the decree as Watan land, was to be retained by the defendant for a certain number of years. The terms of this decree have not been referred to in detail in the argument before us. But the decree is accepted by both the parties as effecting an alienation by the plaintiff's father for a certain number of years. The land in suit forms part of the village lands.

It is clear from these facts that the settlement effected in 1884 is referable to section 5 of the Bombay Hereditary Offices Act, and is binding upon the parties. According to that settlement the village of Rajgoli Khurd is Watan property. Under section 5 of the Act no Watandar can mortgage, charge, alienate or lease for a period beyond the term of his natural life any Watan or any part thereof to any person who is not a Watandar of the same Watan without the sanction of Government: and this provision applies to any Watan in respect of which a service commutation settlement has been effected under section 15 of the Act, unless the right of alienating the Watan without the sanction of Government is conferred upon the Watandars by the terms of the settlement The defendant No. 1 is not a Watandar of the same Watan and no such right of alienation has been conferred by the terms of the settlement. The Sanad in this case is in the usual form adapted to the Gordon Settlement, and it is clear, on the terms of the section as also on the decisions of this Court relating to the Gordon Settlement in Arpati Bapuji v. Keshav Shamrav (1) and Bhau v. Ramchandrarao (2), that in the absence of a sanction of the Government any alienation of the Watan property beyond the term of the Watandar's natural life is inoperative. The village of Rajgoli Khurd is Watan property having regard to the definitions of 'Watan property' and 'hereditary office' in the Bombay Hereditary Offices Act. If the land in question forms part of the Watan property, the alienation thereof could not be valid after the death of the plaintiff's father.

For the plaintiff it is urged that the burden of showing that the land in suit is not a part of the Watan property is on the defendant, that he has failed to discharge that burden, that the distinction between a grant of the royal share of the revenue and a grant of the soil which is recognised in this Presidency with reference to Inams and Saranjams cannot be, and has never been, extended to Watans, and that the presumption in favour of a grant being limited to the royal share of the revenue even in the case of Inams and Saranjams cannot be made in view of the observations of their Lordships of the Privy Council in Suryanarayana v. Patanna (3). Further it is contended that on the terms of the grant in this case it ought to be held that the grant was of the soil and not merely of the royal share of the revenue of the village.

It is urged for the defendant that the plaintiff has failed to show that the land in suit forms part of the Watan property, that the Watan property here only means the royal share of the revenue and not the soil of the village of Rajgoli Khurd according to the terms of the Sanad, that even according to the terms of the original grant confirmed by the Inam Commissioner it is limited to the royal share of the revenue and does not extend to the soil, and that this distinction is well recognised in this Presidency and ought to be accepted in this case in spite of the decision in Suryanarayan's case (3).

In the absence of any clear proof that the occupancy right in the Survey Number in suit was vested in the plaintiff's ancestor independently of the grant and that the land in suit was outside the lands dealt with in the Settlement of 1884, I think that it must be held to be Watan property like the village itself. 'Watan property' according to the Act means moveable and immoveable property held, acquired or assigned for providing remuneration for the performance of the duty appertaining to an 'hereditary office,' which expression includes such office even where the services originally appertaining to it have ceased to be demanded. It is difficult to treat the village mentioned in the Sanad as referring to the royal share of the revenue only. The Sanad refers to the lands and where the whole village is referred to, the lands of the village are not referred to in detail by their Survey Numbers. Thus where the whole village is mentioned in a Sanad evidencing a settlement under section 15 of the Bombay Hereditary Offices Act, it is for the party alleging that a particular Survey Number of that village is outside the scope of the settlement to prove it. In the present case there is no such evidence. The lower Appellate Court observes that there is nothing on the record to show that the land in dispute was not held by the original Inamdar as his private property at the date of the first grant. But at the same time there is nothing to show that it was so held. No document is referred to before us as showing that the Survey Number in question was held at anytime otherwise than as part of the Watan property. This conclusion is strengthened by the fact that in the decree in the suit of 1910 it is described as Watan land. In the case of Watan property the distinction between grants of the royal share of the revenue and grants of the soil, which is admissible in the case of Inams and Saranjams, cannot be conveniently made without detriment to the statutory restriction on the Watandar's power of alienation and should not be made unless it is clearly justified by the terms of the settlement. The statutory restriction would be limited in its scope if such a distinction were made. The terms of the Sanad in the present case do not justify such a construction of the grant under the Settlement of 1884. I do not say that such a distinction can never be made in the case of Watans. It is sufficient for the purpose of this case to observe that no basis for such a distinction has been made out on the terms of the Settlement of 1884 with reference to the land in suit.

(1) 15 B. 13; 8 Ind Dec (N. s.) 9.
(2) 20 B 423; 10 Ind Dec (N. s.) 845.
(3) 48 Ind. Cas. 689; 45 I A. 209 at p. 218; 41 M. 1012; 25 M. L. T 50; (1918) M. W. N 859; 23 C. W. N. 27; 9 L. W. 126. 29 C. L. J. 153; 1 U. P L. R. (P.C.) 11; 36 M. L. J. 555; 21 Bom. L. R. 547 (P. C.).

So far my conclusion is based upon the terms of the Sanad of 1884, and is independent of the terms of the grant in 1734 as confirmed in 1858 by the Inam Commissioner. It is by no means clear on the terms of the original grant of 1734 that it is limited to the royal share of the revenue. It is quite true, as contended by the defendant, that in this Presidency in the case of Inams and Saranjams the ordinary presumption, in the absence of any indication to the contrary, is in favour of the grant being limited to the royal share of the revenue and that clear words are necessary to indicate a grant of the soil: see Krishnarav Ganesh v. Rangrav(4), Ramchandra v. Venkatarao (5), Rayya v. Balkrishna Gangadhar (6). It is also true that the words ordinarily used to indicate a grant of the soil are 'water, grass, wood (trees), stones, mines and hidden treasures', as pointed out in Ravinarayan v. Dadaji Bapuji (7), Collector of Ratnagiri v Antaji Lakshman (8) and Balvant Ramchandra v. Secretary of State (9). But the absence of these words cannot be treated as necessarily establishing that the grant is of the royal share of the revenue only. There is no decision which has gone so far as to lay down that no other expression can indicate a grant of the soil.

Assuming that the nature of the settlement in 1884 must be determined with reference to the terms of the original grant as confirmed by the Inam Commissioner, it is not a matter of presumption but a question of the construction of the words actually used. It is clear from the reference to section 2, Appendix 2 (Schedule B), of Act XI of 1852 in the decision of the Inam Commissioner that the Inam was then continued according to the terms of the old grant of 1734 A. D. Thus though the word darobasta is not used in the decision of the Inam Commissioner, it seems to me that by implication the grant is continued on the same terms as the old grant and that in effect the expression used by the Commissioner must be taken to be the expression used in the grant of 1734 A. D. That expression is by no means clear on the question as to whether the grant was only of the royal share of the revenue or of the soil also; and apart from authority I should have found it difficult to construe it as a grant of the soil. The difficulty is increased by the consideration that the usual words (mala, taru, truna, pashana, nidhi, nikshepa) indicating a grant of the soil are not used. I find it, however, difficult to distinguish the grant in the present case from the grant which was construed by this Court in Vasudev Pandit v. Collector of Puna (10). I think that we ought to follow this decision and hold that the grant in this case was a grant of the soil and not merely of the royal share of the revenue. The present case cannot be reasonably distinguished on the ground that the word darobasta is not used by the Inam Commissioner in his decision.

I do not say that the use of the word darobasta would necessarily indicate a grant of the soil. In the case of Vaman Janardan Joshi v. Collector of Thana (11) the grant was held to be limited to the royal share of the revenue. In that case, however, there was a clause to the effect that "the village should be continued to him as an Inam grant and the revenue of the said village,

(4) 4 B H. C. R. (A. C. J.) 1.
(5) 6 B. 598 at pp. 600, 603; 3 Ind. Dec. (N. s.) 864.
(6) 29 B. 415; 7 Bom. L. R. 439.
(7) 1 B 523; 1 Ind Dec N s 345.
(8) 12 B. 544 at p 544; 6 Ind Dec N. s.) 840.
(9) 29 B. 450 at p. 486; 7 Bom. L. R. 497.
(10) 10 B H. C. R. 471.
(11) 6 B. H. C. R. (A C. J.) 191.

including that of Kasba Chauk should be entered in the Taluka account to the debit of the Jcshi, on account of Inam." In the present case we have no such clause. It is not easy to reconcile all the observations in this case with the decision in Vasudev's case (10). But there is no necessary conflict between the two decisions. On the best consideration that I can give to the question, I think that on the terms used in the grant of 1734 and confirmed by the Inam Commissioner in 1858, the grant is of the soil as in Vasudev's case (10).

In this view of the matter, it is not necessary to consider the effect of the observations of their Lordships of the Privy Council in Suryanarayana's case (3), relied upon by the plaintiff as to the presumption made in this Presidency in favour of a grant being of the royal share of the revenue in the absence of any indication that the grant is of the soil, in the case of Inams and Saranjams. In a somewhat similar case their Lordships have referred to these observations and have pointed out that each case must be considered on its own facts and that in order to ascertain the effect of the grant resort must be had to the terms of the grant itself and to the whole circumstances so far as they could be ascertained: see Upadrashta Venkata Sastrulu v. Diri Seetharamudu (12). Both these cases were cases of ancient Agrahara grants: and the considerations applicable to Agrahara grants are naturally different from those applicable to secular grants for service. The question whether these decisions of the Privy Council require that no presumption that a grant is of the royal share of the revenue can be made where there is nothing to indicate that the grant is of the soil, is one of great practical importance: and it will have to be decided hereafter, when it arises. As the point is argued, I do not consider it inappropriate to point out the difficulties in the way of interpreting the observations of their Lordships of the Privy Council in the manner suggested by the plaintiff without expressing any opinion on the point. The presumption is made in this Presidency in favour of a limited grant of the royal share of the revenue in the absence of any words to indicate a grant of the soil, not because the Courts have felt any doubt as to the power of the rulers to make a complete grant of the land, but because the grants by the Crown must be construed strictly so that nothing more may be deemed to have been conveyed than what appears clearly from the words of the grant, and because suitable words are generally used when a complete grant of the soil is intended. This presumption may be only another form of stating the rule that the Crown grants should be construed according to their tenor as stated in section 2 of the Crown Grants Act XV of 1895. The history of the Inams in this Presidency and the words in the preamble of Act XI of 1852, showing that the Act was passed with a view to try and determine without delay the claims against Government on account of Inams and other estates wholly or partially exempt from the payment of land revenue, may go to indicate that the grant might be merely of the royal share of the revenue and of nothing more. The meaning of the word "resumption" under that Act, as explained by the Government in 1854 and accepted by this Court in Vishnu Trimbak v. Tatia (13) and in many other later decisions both as to Inams and Saranjams, may also show that there are many grants merely of the royal share of the revenue. The observations of their Lordships of the Privy Council in the above cases may not be irreconcilable with the decisions of this Court, in which it is pointed out that in the absence of any words indicating a grant of the soil, a grant by the Crown must be taken to be a grant of the royal share of the revenue only.

I would allow the appeal, reverse the decree of the lower Appellate Court and restore that of the trial Court with costs here and in the lower Appellate Court on the defendant No. 1.

I would make the same order in Second Appeal No. 929 of 1917.

HAYWARD, J.— I agree. It is simply a question of interpreting the deeds of grant, which include two from the time of the (12) 51 Ind. Cas. 304; 46 I. A. 123 at p. 128; 21 Bom. L. R. 925; 17 A. L. J. 725; 37 M. L. J. 42; 26 M. L. T. 175; 30 C. L. J. 441; 10 L. W. 633; 24 C. W. N. 129; 43 M. 166 (P. C.).

(13) 1 B. H. C. R. 22.

Maratha rulers and the Sanad under the Gordon Settlement from the British Government. There is, in my opinion, no sufficient ground for holding the grant to have been merely a grant of the royal share of the revenue and not a grant of the soil. It is similar to the case of Vasudev Pandit v. Collector of Puna (10). It is, of course, necessary in interpreting such grants to remember what words were in ordinary use at the time for distinguishing between grants of the royal share of the revenue only and for grants of the soil, but it has also to be remembered that this was a grant for service or a Watan grant and not an ordinary Inam or Saranjam grant. There is no authority excluding from consideration these matters. It was merely held that there was not a priori presumption that grants were limited to the royal share of the revenue and were not of the soil in the case of Suryanarayana v. Patanna (3) by their Lordships of the Privy Council.

Appeal allowed.

PATNA HIGH COURT.

APPEALS FROM APPELLATE DECREES NOS. 675 TO 680 AND 682 TO 687 AND 802 OF 1919.

March 22, 1920.

Present:—Mr. Justice Mullick and Mr. Justice Sultan Ahmed.

Maharani JANKI KUER OF BETTIAH THROUH HER MANAGER MR. J. T. WHITTY, I. C. S.—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

SAUDAGAR RAM AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS —RESPONDENTS.

Landlord and tenant—Occupancy tenant, whether entitled to cut and appropriate trees—Custom—Burden of proof—Record of Rights, entry in—Presumption of correctness—Evidence before Court—Duty of Court.

The general rule is that an occupancy tenant has the right to cut the trees standing on his holding but the landlord has the right to appropriate them. If the tenant claims any right to appropriate the trees, he must prove a custom or usage to that effect. [p. 418, col. 1.]

An entry in a Record of Rights is entitled to the benefit of the presumption attached to it, but where the Court has before it the evidence upon which the record was prepared and where the plaintiff denies the correctness of the record, the Court is bound to come to a finding whether that evidence is sufficient to justify the entry. [p 418, col. 2.]

Appeals from the decisions of the Special Judges, Mozaffarpur, dated the 5th February 1919 and 22nd April 1919.

Messrs. Kenndy, Fakhruddin and Jadubans Sahay, for the Appellant.

Mr. Bhagawan Prasad, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.

MULLICK, J.—These thirteen second appeals arise out of thirteen suits instituted before the Assistant Settlement Officer of Champaran under section 106, Bengal Tenancy Act. It appears that 27 such suits were originally instituted. Twelve were decided by one judgment and 15 by another judgment, dated the 5th of April 1918.

The suits out of which these present second appeals arise belong to this latter batch. The plaintiff in all these suits was the proprietress of the Bettiah estate.

An entry having been made in the Record of Rights published under section 103A, Bengal Tenancy Act, that the tenants were entitled to appropriate the trees standing upon their occupancy holdings, the proprietress instituted suits before the Assistant Settlement Officer for a declaration that the entry was incorrect.

The Assistant Settlement Officer and on appeal the Special Judge both held that the proprietress had no title in the trees and maintained the entry.

It appears that the plaints in the suits were amended some months after they were filed. In the original plaints the landlord seemed to have recognised a custom by which the defendants were entitled to appropriate half the trees, but in the amended plaints she appears to have withdrawn from that position and to have pleaded that she was entitled to appropriate all the trees but that as she had in fact for many years only realised half the value of the trees, the entry should be amended by limiting her right to that extent.

The Assistant Settlement Officer framed the following issues.—

1. Is the plaintiff entitled to half share of the timber and trees standing on the present survey plots ?

2. What relief, if any, is the plaintiff entitled to ?

The ordinary law is that the tenant has the right to cut but the landlord the right to appropriate. If the tenant claims any right of appropriation, he must prove a custom or usage to that effect and, therefore, it was open to the officer who prepared the Record of Rights to enquire whether the tenants had discharged the onus which the law had placed upon them. But as section 103B, Bengal Tenancy Act, provides that the Record of Rights is presumed to be correct until the contrary is proved by evidence, the Assistant Settlement Officer was in my opinion right in placing the onus upon the plaintiff to show that she had the right to a half share.

From his judgment, however, it is not clear whether he appreciated the real position of the parties. He seems to have been under the impression that before the Revenue Officer the onus of proving a custom was upon the plaintiff. He also seems to think that in the proceedings before him it was for the plaintiff to show that there was a custom entitling her to appropriate the half share. He had before him the evidence upon which the Record of Rights was based, but he comes to no finding that this evidence was sufficient to prove a valid custom or usage in law. He relies entirely upon the weakness of the plaintiff's evidence as to realisation, in coming to the finding that the Record of Rights has not been rebutted.

In Second Appeal No. 802, the Special Judge, Mr. Boyce, appears to have adopted the same procedure and to have thrown the burden of proving the custom upon the plaintiff. He concludes his judgment by the observation that isolated instances of the collection of the price of timber are not sufficient to prove the custom set up by her.

Mr. Adami, the learned Judge who heard the remaining cases, has stated the legal position correctly and has come to the conclusion that while the plaintiff has failed to show before the Assistant Settlement Officer that there was no custom which would justify the entry, the defendants have proved that there was a custom and that the plaintiff had abandoned her rights. The learned Judge, however, does not discuss the evidence which he considers sufficient to prove the custom set up by the defendants and in my opinion there has been no proper trial of that issue.

The Record of Rights no doubt was entitled to the benefit of the presumption attached to it, but where, as in these cases, the Court had before it the evidence upon which the record was prepared and where the plaintiff denied the correctness of the record, the Court was bound, in my opinion, to come to a finding whether that evidence was sufficient to justify the entry. This view is in accordance with the decisions of their Lordships of the Calcutta High Court in Sheonandan Persad Sukul v. Bacha Kaut (1) and Bagha Mowar v. Ram Lakhan Misser (2).

The learned Special Judge Mr. Adami has held that a decision in a case under section 103 and a judgment in a case under section 106, Bengal Tenancy Act, regarding certain other tenants in the same village were inadmissible in the present suits, but in my opinion that view is incorrect. This decision and judgment would be relevant under section 13 of the Indian Evidence Act.

As in my opinion there has not been an adequate and satisfactory treatment of the issue on custom in the judgments of either of the two learned Special Judges, I think their judgments and decrees should be set aside and the cases remanded for re-hearing. The Special Judge now exercising jurisdiction in the matter must come to a clear and definite finding whether the defendants have proved a valid custom entitling them to a half share in the trees. For this purpose they will be entitled to adduce before him such additional evidence as they think necessary, while the landlord will be entitled to adduce rebutting evidence in reply. If the defendants decline to adduce further evidence, the learned Judge will dispose of the case upon the evidence already on the record.

The decisions in Palakdhari Rai v. Manners (3), Dalglish v. Guzuffer Hussain (4), Sariatullah Sarkar v. Pran Nath

(1) 4 Ind. Cas. 54; 9 C. L. J. 284.
(2) 41 Ind. Cas. 804; 27 C. L. J. 107.
(3) 23 C. 179; 12 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 119.
(4) 23 C. 427; 12 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 284.

Nandi (5) may be of some assistance to the Court in coming to a proper finding.

